TMA Will Endorse 'Best Men' For Positions, Despite Party

The Town Mens' association at its regular meeting Tuesday adopted a resolution to endorse the best qualified men running for legislative posts "without regard to party affiliations," with the addition of the clause, "If the parties do not put up for election enough qualified men, the TMA will encourage men who have the necessary qualifications to run independently."

A membership drive was planned to run Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, and members were assigned to contact men residing in town to explain to them the purposes of the association. Interested men may sign with the TMA at its desk in the Y building from 8:30 to 1 o'clock on those two days.

President Nelson Taylor encouraged enlistment in the organization asserting, "All town men who sign with the club next week will be entitled to all privileges of the club, starting right then. That includes an invitation to the Terrace View party." Membership fees amount to $1 per quarter.

A motion was made by John Van Hecke that the association compile an index of rooms available to incoming students next September and thereafter keep the index up-to-date. This proposed index would list rent of the rooms, accommodation and convenience to the campus.

Snow Strands Livestock

Air Force Agrees Tentatively To Set Up 'Feedlift' for Plains

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21—(UP)—The Air Force announced tonight that it has agreed tentatively to set up a "feedlift" to rush food to starving livestock stranded by drifting snows over a large part of the western plains.

An Air Force spkesman said Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad, deputy chief of operations for the Air Force, had assured Sen. Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) that the service will carry out the plan "to the extent that it is within our means."

McCarran said top officers on Norstad's staff are considering the problem now and will decide tomorrow what, if anything, the Air Force can do. If they decide the plan is practicable, they will name an Air Force command to carry it out.

McCarran is one of several western senators and state governors who have been working frantically to find some way of easing the livestock crisis which has gripped the blizzard-swept western plains.

Thousands of beef cattle and sheep are reported to have been stranded by drifting snows which, in some cases, piled up so high the animals were able to walk right over their pens.

The snow also has covered grazing lands, cutting the animals off from their normal sources of food. The heavy drifts in many instances have made it impossible for ranchers to truck feed to herds.

Hotel, Five Other Structures Burn In Wilmington as Wind Fans Flames

WILMINGTON, Jan. 21—(UP)—Fire fanned by a cold northeast wind destroyed a five-story hotel and five other buildings in the center of this coastal town early today before more than 100 firemen, policemen and marines could bring it under control.

Some 30 guests of the Orton hotel got out safely before the building became a cauldron of flame. But firemen said J. R. Mallard, 70, of Charlotte, was still missing.

"We don't know about the old man," said Fire Chief Ludie Croom. "One of the men notified him, but he still can't be accounted for."

The fire was discovered shortly after midnight. A wartime air raid siren summoned all available firemen and police to the scene. Three alarms were sounded within seven minutes.

Croom said four firemen were injured when the second floor of a store, piled with fallen brick, timbers and rubbish, collapsed on top of them.

Next Playmaker Experimental Is Entitled 'Inherit The Wind'

"Inherit The Wind," a new experimental play written by Gene McClain and directed by Sam Hirsch has been selected as the second student production of this season by the Carolina Playmakers. Tryouts for the play have been completed and rehearsals are now underway.

"Inherit the Wind" is Gene McClain's second play which has been selected for presentation by the Playmakers. Last year his play, "Call Back Yesterday," was one of their major productions. Working on the premise that "selfishness leads to unhappiness" McClain has produced a psychological drama with unusual emotional appeal. The play centers around a neurotic mother who creates in her three daughters a false notion about family ties. So strongly are they bound to one another that when one of them finally breaks the ties tragedy results.

Sam Hirsch, the director, has written a number of plays which have been produced by the Playmakers. He appeared with the cast of "The Lost Colony" at Manteo for the first four seasons.

The play will be given Feb. 2 and 3 in the Playmakers theater.

Quonset Area Neglected

OPEN LETTER TO THE BUILDINGS DEPARTMENT
GENTLEMEN:

The recent fire in the Quonset hut area brought to light the fact that the fire extinguishers for the area are stored, empty, in the manager's hut. There is no reason why chemical extinguishers cannot be placed in every hut, except for the fact that someone lacks initiative. That the page of the telephone book which lists the fire department's number was torn off is plainly the fault of the residents of the area, but it seems common sense to place a poster or notice giving the fire and police numbers near the phone.

The operator's failure to answer when a student tried to report the fire is only another example of the poor service offered by the University-owned telephone system.

Sincerely,
RAMESES

PS. Now that there are only a few more than a hundred students in the Quonset huts, is it necessary to crowd them fifteen into a hut? Ten people per hut is comfortable and reasonable, but fifteen is too much of a good thing. The department could open three more huts without adding a crushing burden to the University's fuel bill, and the students would certainly be more comfortable. Why not do it?

No Cars at Carolina?

The University traffic committee is butting its head against a stone wall. For a year or more now it has been discussing, surveying, and tearing its collective hair over the problem of how to get too many cars into too little parking space. It has come up with several systems of restricting campus areas and giving parking priority to off-campus students, faculty and administrative workers. This, however, has been only a delaying action. There are only two real solutions; more parking space or fewer cars—and the way the decreeing authorities have been sugar coating the pill by gradually increasing the restrictions against students, it looks as if fewer cars is the answer now in mind.

Early this week the traffic committee issued a statement that car owners in Steele and Carr may not use the parking lots next to their dormitories after this quarter. The committee recommended that the area behind Hill hall be restricted and that no parking be allowed on the west side of Raleigh street. With previous restrictions, this action would leave only the small lot behind the library open to student drivers. Faculty members are screaming bloody murder to the committee that they can find no place to park. Soon they will be taking their complaints to the trustees. Students, too, are unhappy about the present arrangement, but are less vociferous in making themselves heard.

Something must be done and done quickly. But what? Should the baseball field be moved to the football practice area behind Fetzer field and Emerson field turned into a parking area? Could a smaller parking lot be re-established between the planetarium and Franklin street? Should only students without cars be allowed to live in the central dormitories? Should students in all dormitories be prohibited from keeping cars in Chapel Hill.

Unless students put their brains to work and come up with a workable solution they will wake up some morning to find that the trustees have solved the problem for them by saying that students who come to the University will have to leave their cars at home. The Daily Tar Heel will be happy to receive all suggestions on this problem.

A Dangerous Stand

We understand that several campus political leaders have expressed strong feeling against having their parties endorse other party nominees for political offices in the spring elections. We feel that this is both a narrow-minded and dangerous stand to take.

So we say to you, gentlemen, if the other party happens to beat you to the punch in nominating the best man available for a certain post, think not of yourselves but of your student government. If your conscience says double-endorse, then double-endorse.

Not 'Liberal'?

Surprising Denunciation

By "Wink" Locklair

Chapel Hill and The University have been attacked by a surprising and completely unexpected malefactor. A week before Fulton Lewis, Junior, began his ill-fated radio reconnaissance of Dr. Frank Graham and the Atomic Energy Commission, a full-page story entitled, "How Liberal is Chapel Hill, N. C.?" turned up in the magazine section of the widely-read Baltimore Negro newspaper, The Afro-American.

Many of the quotes in the article, which included six photos taken in and around the Negro section of town, were attributed to Hubert S. Robinson, Dr. Graham's quiet, easy-going chauffeur. Mr. Robinson was an excellent subject to interview for the story because he is an outstanding citizen in the community. He is president of the Chapel Hill Investment Co-Op; a member of the research committee of the County Board of Education to report on the needs of schools and roads; treasurer of the P.-T.A., and chairman of the board of trustees of the Masons.

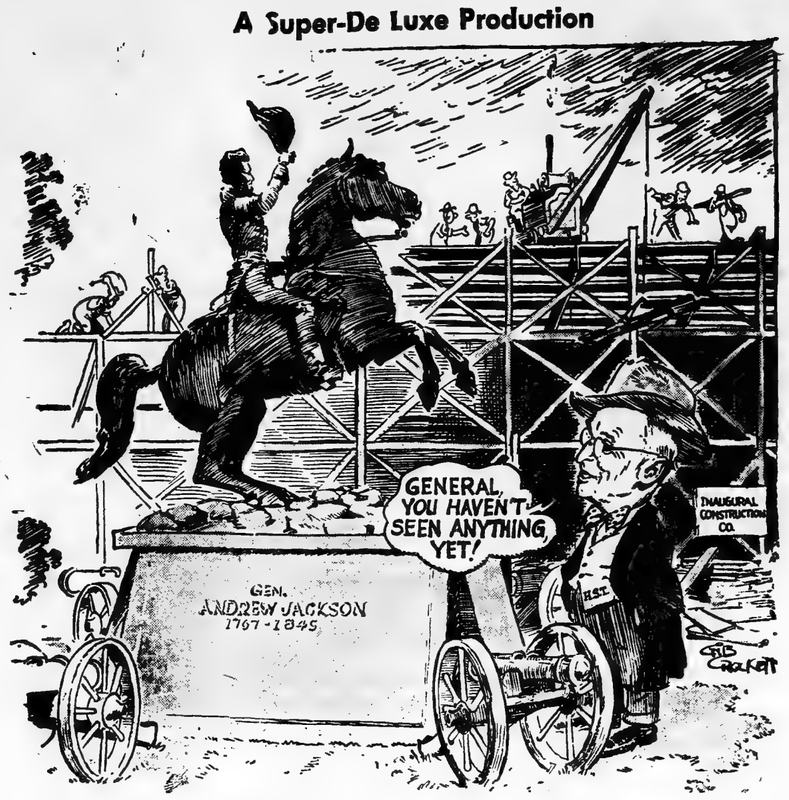
Mr. Robinson was delighted to cooperate with writer Hall in preparing material for the Afro-American. But the published draft turned out to be a complete distortion of the original facts and statements. Here are a few quotes from the published feature:

"Only a few houses in the colored community have modern toilet facilities, and they were installed within the past few months."

"No colored person has a telephone. They say that the 'white folks say there are just not enough to go around.' Even Hubert S. Robinson, chauffeur for Dr. Graham and acknowledged 'leader,' has been unable to get a phone or running water."

"Mr. Robinson added that the community (Negro) 'profited little' from the white college, 'that is if you compare what we get to what the white folks get.'"

Mr. Hall also stated in his piece that there is no high school in the city limits for colored children, that streets in the colored section are muddy and that Chapel Hill confines its 3,200 colored citizens to a colored section "much like those in other Dixie towns which don't have a reputation for liberalism."



Very much surprised that many of the remarks attributed to him were not made and to see so few that had been made, Mr. Robinson sent a detailed letter to Hall and the editor of his paper. Parts of the letter are printed here:

"You state that I have no running water in my house. The truth is I have had running water in my house for 18 years. You state that 'no colored person has a telephone,' and that I 'have been unable to get a telephone.' The truth is that there are at least 50 Negroes here who have telephones in their homes. It is entirely my fault that I do not have a phone myself. I could have obtained one before the war, but during the war and since then, it has been extremely difficult for any citizen to get a telephone due to the lack of equipment."

"You state that 'the streets in the colored section are muddy,' and that "only a few homes in the colored community have modern toilet facilities.' A number of streets in this section are paved and others are being paved as a result of a bond election last spring. Between 90% and 95% of the Negro homes have modern toilet facilities and such facilities are now being made available to practically all Negro citizens as a result of last year's bond election."

Mr. Robinson also pointed out that the high school is within several hundred yards of the town limits and is located there because it is the most desirable site. The letter ended with a mandatory statement that it be printed and that it be given prominent space "with a headline large enough to call attention to it." Whether or not the paper is interested remains to be seen.

Letters Still Pouring In

Gates Raised Basic Questions

Editor:

The local chapter of Students for Democratic Action has sent the following open letter to Chancellor House:

We realize as fully as the next man that the state legislature is in session. We realize, too, that a speech on this campus by John Gates, editor of the Communist Daily Worker, might have prejudiced some members of the legislature when they came to write down the University's share of the budget.

But we are even more concerned about the matter of free speech. . The state law, as we understand it, prevents the use of University buildings for the purpose of advocating the overthrow of our government by violence. We think that no one could have known beforehand what Mr. Gates would advocate, or that he would advocate anything at all. Thus, we feel that you had little justification for calling off his appearance.

With all respect, we would like to ask two questions. Did you ask the Attorney-General if you would be held responsible for Gates' appearance? Or did you ask him if he knew of any way to prevent Gates from speaking here?

We're concerned about this episode not only for itself, but for the precedent it seems to set. We fear that it will lead to the establishment of some sort of clearance board for campus speakers. We feel such a move would be met on the campus with determined resistance. Such a clearance board would take the initiative from students and place it in the hands of a body inclined to lean over backward to see that the campus got only "safe" speakers. This would mean gaps in our education. We would no longer a free forum, but, instead a selected panel which would not and could not present all sides to a question.

The consistent anti-Communist position of Students for Democratic Action should assure you that our protest does not arise from any sympathy with what Mr. Gates might have said. We don't care two snaps for Communism. But the UNC chapter of SDA at its meeting Tuesday night instructed me to voice to you its concern over this episode. Freedom, it seems to us, is as important on the campus as it is in the larger community. The action of the University in the Gates episode is, we feel, not the way to preserve that freedom.

Editor:

I read your editorial this morning and it wasn't bad. What is too bad is that such an editorial was so unnecessary. And it seemed to me that you might have picked a little deeper into the causes that resulted in "chalking one up for Joe."

Maybe Chancellor House was remembering that this the University of North Carolina. . . with the emphasis on North Carolina. Maybe he was thinking that this a state supported institution. . . and that the people make up this state.

And what about the Carolina Forum? It would seem they believe in freedom of speech. Swell. So do I. So does Chancellor House. I'll bet you do too. But the Forum is obviously not content. Damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead. Free speech is all that matters.

Are there any other considerations? Is it compromising freedom of speech to recognize the emotions, prejudices, beliefs of others? Is it compromising freedom to avoid the sensational, to encourage the rational? The Forum obviously believes that it is. And what is the result?

Yep. Maybe you're right. But the situation should never have come up to give you a chance for a column like that one. Give the Forum the word, will you? It takes more than vigilance, you know. It takes judgment.

. . .How proud it makes me to hear the University of North Carolina, the school of my choice, referred to as the stronghold of liberals and progressives in the South! It was these very liberals who long ago proved that the law of supply and demand was subject to revision and repeal the same as legislation. Did not these same progressives point out that governmental business, unlike all other forms of business, is not subject to diminishing returns and the old concept of marginal utility did not apply to it? These are the same people who pointed out that monopolies in government and labor combined are highly beneficial and the only way to combat the insidicus monopoly of capital. Yes! It stirs me deeply to hear the University of North Carolina referred to as a "liberal" and progressive institution. . .

"Once" and "Congratulations" are the only two of this bunch that are worth listening to. On these two, Frank is at his best and the orchestral backing is fine. They are dreamy and danceable, but the others are disappointing. "Sunflower" is especially poor. On this one, Frank tries to prove that he can sing a western, and he does, but it still has an unpleasant aroma.

It is too bad that two such fine performers as these had to pick two absolutely worthless tunes. The rendition isn't bad at all, but nothing could prevent this platter from being a flop. "You" is only half worth listening to. After a while, it would get boring.

Gene Krupa

These are really fine. "Doctor" is a smooth jump which features fine section work. There are fine sax rides on both sides, and trombone on "Doc" with terrific trumpet on "Atom." "Atom" is a be-bop tune with the soloist showing great imagination without loosing sight of the ideal of excellent mechanics. Every note is hit solidily on the nose.

What happened here! A man who hasn't put out an even fairly listenable record in months suddenly comes up with one right off of the fire. "Jump" has all of the fire of the old Harry James unit, and in places resembles the terrific Herman Herd of yesterday. The rhythm that comes in the middle of this piece is something to hear, and the sections rock it to perfection. Lets hope that James is on the way back up. "Love" is a stepped up version of this tune. It features Harry on trumpet and he shines like he hasn't in many a day. Marion Morgan takes the vocal and does it up brown. The sax backing to this vocal is solid and gives a lift. Don't miss this release.

Protest from the 'Slums'

Editor:

This is a protest. A meritorious protest is worthy of careful consideration. I address it to the Housing Office, the Chancellor, the President, Dean of the General College, the Daily Tar Heel and the student body. Though not in an appointed capacity, I believe I speak the feelings of the great majority of students now living in the quonset hut area, commonly referred to as the "slums" of U. N. C.

I protest:

(1) An order of January 18th that all huts but seven be vacated, and their occupants be jammed into those seven remaining where each man has, if he is fortunate, one and one-half bunk drawers for his belongings. The University, must be too deep in financial difficulties to pay for an occasional drum of oil for heating the huts ordered closed.

(2) The constant fire hazards we are exposed to. There are no fire extinguishers in any of the huts; many explosions have occurred; a previous protest on this matter was ignored.

(3) The dilapidated condition of shower facilities in each of the latrine huts. Out of ten showers in Hut 12, only one is in serviceable condition. There is no heat in Hut 12—the stove has a bad habit of exploding if it is lighted.

(4) Unfair distribution of available rooms. The Housing Office sees itself as a knight in shining armor if it unconcernedly arrations out a room to one of us. To avoid hard feelings, examples of such unfair assignments will not be set forth in this letter. Nevertheless, they exist.

(5) Lack of proper janitorial services. The huts may be swept once every two days; it is impossible to keep clother etc. free of dust; we wake up in the mornings with soot streaked on our faces.

These few will suffice for the present. I earnestly request that the Administration give each of these consideration, especially the first.

In regard to your column of Wednesday, Jan. 19th:

There must be some explanation for the columnist. Mr. Dugan, of the Technician making such implication as you quote. I wonder if it could be true the Chancellor of State College, Harelson, made the statement before a group of State students which a cousin of mine told me of. This cousin is senior at State and has had no cause to tell me this if it is true:

That the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill receives more money (per in-state student) from the N. C. Legislature than does State College.

Whether or not this is true, I donn't now, nor will I trouble myself to investigate the matter. My question is: Does the Chancellor of any part of the University have a right to make a statement that would antagonize that part against any other part? If there is somehing wrong or unfair, why does he not find out the whys and wherefores and present it to the legislature instead of a group of students who claim to be trying to build up friendly relation with the school that he has made the aggressor. I trusut that we will either get an answer to my question or a denial.

Mr. Sidney Shanker has hit the nail on the head regarding the nature and direction our economy is headed. Comrade Lenin told the world in 1923—"We will force the U. S. to spend itself to destruction."

The 1949 national budget of the New Deal socialists, largest in history, has brought the realization of that aim a step closer to fulfillment. There are too many millions yet who labor under the fallacy that our national wealth is indestructible and inexhaustable.

Tar Heel Cagers Tackle State Tonight

With The TAR HEELS

By Dick Jenrette

The biggest question mark in the minds of Carolina basketball enthusiasts this morning is whether the Tar Heel cagers will be able to retain their shooting accuracy in tonight's crucial battle with N. C. State in Raleigh. In their last outing, the Tar Heels were no less than sensational in connecting on long set shots in the 69-61 victory over William and Mary here. Something of a repeat performance is needed tonight if Carolina is to beat State.

For Carolina, it's been a long time between victories in recent basketball games with State college. Since Everett Case took over the coaching reins at the West Raleigh school, the Wolfpack has managed five victories without loss against the Tar Heels. Not since the great 1946 Carolina team thumped State twice have the locals been able to stop the Pack. Last season was the low point as far as Carolina basketball rivalry with State is concerned, as Case's team dropped the Tar Heels by overwhelming margins twice during the regular season and a third time in the conference tournament.

State Unimpressive Thus Far

This State domination can't go on forever, and many Tar Heel fans believe tonight is the night to end it. They point out that State, the defending Southern conference champion, has already lost seven games this year, when all last season they were beaten but three times. And rumors of dissension and bad morale on the State team also have served to spur the Tar Heel hopes.

Another potent factor in Carolina's favor is the convincing manner in which the team handled William and Mary in Woollen gymnasium this week. Employing a sliding zone defense, designed to halt the hook shots of high-scoring Chet Giermak, the Tar Heels waltzed into a 13-0 lead before the visitors could even score. During this period, the local cagers played what perhaps was the best ten minutes of basketball ever turned in by a Carolina team.

Coy Carson, Mr. Twenty-nine Points himself, was superb on his set shots, with Hugo Kappler and Dan Nyimicz also helping on shots from far out. And Nemo Nearman turned in one of his best night's of basketball in his three seasons at Carolina. Nearman, who usually elects to pass off to his team-mates when he gets the ball, took a turn at shooting himself. On several occasions he pivoted and broke in for neat hook shots. This perf -mance should give Nemo more confidence in his shooting ability. Rip Ryan's fancy passing also was invaluable.

Found Weakness Too Late

The Tar Heels definitely were hot against William and Mary. And what's more they were primed for the game. Their play from the start was spirited and their aggressiveness enabled them to control the backboards over the taller William and Mary players.

The zone defense which Coach Tom Scott devised to halt Giermak was highly effective, at least to the extent of stopping the big William and Mary center. It did, however, leave the way clear for the Indians to pop up innumerable set shots from fairly close range. However, the Indians didn't detect the weakness of the Carolina defense until it was too late—with the Tar Heels in the van by a 13-0 score. Coach Case, incidentally, was on hand to scout the game.

Regardless of the rumors about State dissension or optimistic comments on Carolina's play recently, the locals will have to come through with their best game to win tonight. Aside from the fact that Coach Case can call on the most lustrous array of talent in the conference, the Tar Heels will have one strike against them in that the game is being played in Raleigh's Memorial auditorium.

Disasters on Raleigh Court

Previous visits by Tar Heel teams to the Raleigh arena have been disastrous. Back in 1946, Carolina's great NCAA quint was eliminated in the semi-finals of the conference tourney by a weak Wake-Forest team, 31-29. The Tar Heels didn't play in Memorial auditorium again until last year, and this time State routed them, 81-42. State had the best team in the 1948 meeting, but the fact that the game was played in Raleigh doubtless had something to do with the big victory margin for the Wolfpack.

Just why is it hard to beat State in Memorial auditorium? For one thing the stands on the north side of the court literally extend straight up to the ceiling. And these stands are always jammed with vociferous State students yelling almost on top of the playing court. The noise is deafening, and much more noticeable than in either Woollen gym or Duke Indoor stadium. The general psychological effect is one of confusion, a situation which just plays into the hands of the State team, which likes a racehorse brand of ball.

The result: State has lost but one of its last 27 starts in Raleigh.

But the Tar Heels are determined to have a measure of revenge tonight. Carolina's reputation of having good basketball teams has been challenged, and perhaps taken, by the brother institution from Raleigh. The Wolfpack has been shaky this season, and Carolina could easily be the team to knock out the props tonight.

Frosh Matmen to Gate City

Carolina's freshman wrestling squad, fresh from last Thursday night's triumph over N. C. State, will journey to Greensboro high school tonight where they will seek for win number two. The match is scheduled for eight o'clock in the high school gym.

The freshman squad will open the meet with a five-point default due to the lack of a 121-pound candidate. The forfeit as a result of no Carolina competitor in that class will give the Whirlwinds a five-point margin to start.

Bob McGimsey, who won a decision in the opener last week, will open in the 128-class. Following McGimsey will probably be Buddy Dotson in the 136-pound class.

Barry Farber and Bill Qualls will open in the middle weights, while Tom Coxe, who won a fall in the 175-pound class, will drop down to 165. Bob Lovick will fill in at 175 and Dave Wiley, freshman football star, will start in the unlimited class.

Joe Aaron, who will also wrestle in the 136 class, and Wiley will be starting for the first time.

Mighty Terrors Are Favorites In Raleigh Tilt

By Zane Robbins

A fighting band of Tar Heels will pack their gear and head for Raleigh tonight to meet N.C. State's highly-regarded quintet at 8 o'clock in Memorial auditorium.

The Carolinians, who have been tabbed as the "hustlingest" gang of cagers to grace a Southern conference court in a number of years, are the surprise of the loop. They pushed a top-notch William and Mary crew all over Woollen gym on Thursday night before giving way to the reserves in the final minutes, and won going way, 69-61.

Stout Defense

Coach Tom Scott has instituted a tight defensive game as the Tar Heels' main weapon, and forward Coy Carson can always be counted upon to supply the offensive punch. Carson displaced Chet Giermak as the Southern conference high scorer earlier in the week when he racked up 29 points to move his total to 112 for the season. Giermak has tallied 95 markers against conference competition.

The Carolina record now stands at 11-2 for the season. State's record, although less impressive, belies the ability of the "Hoosier Hotshots," who have been up against grade-A opponents all year.

The early loss of All-Southern Eddie Bartels was a severe blow to the Statemen, but the slack has been taken up in part by All-America Dick Dickey who has shown his scoring form of old in the last few outings.

McComas Key Man

Paul Horvath, Jack McComas, Sam Ranzino, and Vic Bubas will also be counted heavily upon by Coach Everett Case in tonight's battle. McComas is perhaps the best of the lot.

Shouldering the brunt of the Carolina burden along with Carson will be Captain Dan Nyimicz. Nemo Nearman, who played brilliantly in the William and Mary tilt, Rip Ryan, Hugo Kappler, John Tsantes, Charlie Thorne, and Howard Deasy.

Should the Scottmen succeed in blanketing the Red Terrors with the same type defense that they threw against the Williamsburg Warriors, they might come up with another surprise victory and boost their title stock.

After tonight's match with State, the sixth Conference game for the Tar Heels, tabbed "the Fantastic Fantoms" by slightly amazed sportswriters throughout the State, will return to Chapel Hill for games with Davidson, Virginia Military, and Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Another Rumor

An article in Thursday's Richmond Times-Dispatch quoted Jim Tatum, University of Maryland grid mentor, as saying that the new Maryland football stadium at College Park will be formally dedicated at the Maryland-Carolina game next December 3 if the stadium is completed by that date.

The Times-Dispatch quoted Tatum as saying that the game would be played in Chapel Hill if the new Terp arena is not finished.

Wrestling Mentor Has Great Record As Coach, Trainer

There's an old adage stating that good things come in small packages. If anyone has any doubts as to the veracity of the statement, all they need do is drop down to Woollen gym some time and look up the impressive record of Carolina's diminutive veteran head trainer and wrestling coach, Percy H. "Chuck" Quinlan.

Versatility has always been a byword where the ever-busy Quinnie is concerned. Back in his undergrad days at Springfield (Massachusetts College, where he graduated with a Bachelor of Physical Education degree, Quinnie won varsity monograms in four sports, lettering in football, wrestling, swimming, and soccer.

Serves in Navy

However, his active athletic career was, like that of so many present day athletes, interrupted by war. Entering Springfield in 1916, he joined the navy after the United States entered the war and served seven months overseas, being aboard ship off the coast of Spain when the war ended.

It was not a case of all work and no play for Quinlan while in service, though, for he found time to win the Navy championship in the 145-pound class.

After his discharge, Quinnie returned to Springfield where he continued his illustrious career, captaining the wrestling team his senior year and graduating in 1922.

Is Olympic Coach

From Springfield he moved on to the University of Pennsylvania where he served as assistant coach for two seasons. Here he took a fling at professional wrestling. In 1924 he was selected as wrestling coach for the United States Olympic team, after refereeing the Olympic tryouts in Madison Square Garden.

The next three years saw Quinlan really make a name for himself in the grunt and groan coaching profession for he became head coach at Virginia Military institution of Lexington, Virginia, where he tutored his teams to three Southern Conference titles in a row.

The 1926 season found him at Carolina where he was now head wrestling coach and head trainer, the two previously mentioned positions which he has capably filled ever since.

Mermen Meet Strong LaSalle In Bowman Gray Pool Today

Carolina's swimmers will face one of their toughest assignments of the still young season this afternoon when they entertain the LaSalle college Explorers at 3 o'clock in Bowman Gray pool.

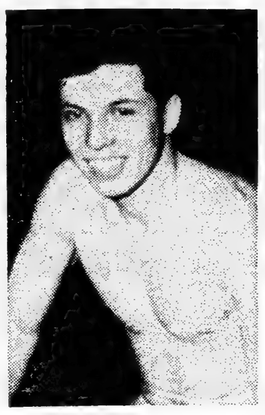
Coach Ralph Casey's defending Southern conference champs, riding the crest of a 38-meet wave of victories, were declared ready after yesterday's brief practice session. All indications point to a close and exciting meet with plenty of action in every event.

The Explorers are generally a power in collegiate swim circles annually and their '49 squad represents a well balanced group of swimmers. The Philadelphians are especially noted for their distance men.

Olympic Champ

Probably the man who will command the most attention in today's meet will be LaSalle's Joe Verdeur. Verdeur, holder of world records in several distance breaststroke events, set a new Olympic record at London this past summer in the breaststroke event.

Carolina's Norm Sper, a diver who missed joining Verdeur on the trip to London by the narrow margin of .29 points, will compete in the backstroke today. Coach Casey, well stocked with divers when the opening practices rolled around and short on backstroke men, switched Sper, a fine all 'round performer, to that event.



Sprinter Dick Twinning, a member of last year's All-America team, will lead the Tar Heels in the sprints and he will join Sper and Jesse Greenbaum in the 300-yard medley relay. Twinning won the 100-yard freestyle event in 4:53.9 in Carolina's opening meet with Virginia Military institute. The relay team took their event in 2:50.7 to set a new Southern conference record.

Thomas Record Holder

Swimming the 440-yard freestyle event for Carolina will be Jim Thomas, who set a new Southern conference of 4:57.6 in the VMI meet. Thomas holds the South Atlantic AAU 220-yard freestyle record.

The number one diver for Carolina in today's meet will probably be Buddy Crone. Crone compiled 84.7 out of 100 possible points to win the diving event in the meet with VMI.

Carson Splurges, Leads Conference With 112 Points

With exactly half of the schedule completed, Coach Tom Scott's amazing Tar Heels, with a record of 11 victories and two defeats, have tallied 760 points, for an average of 58.4 per game. Tar Heel opponents have amassed 665 markers for a 13 game average of 51.1.

Coy Carson, who unseated Chet Giermak for Conference high scoring honors as a result of his 29-point scoring spree Thursday night leads the Carolina contingent with 221 points, an average of 17 points per game. Carson scored on 12 out of 23 attempts from the floor to give him 112 points in the six Conference games played to date, putting him 17 points ahead of Giermak. However, Giermak, who in the latest NCAB tally was sixth in the country in scoring, has a 323 point total for all games played.

Louis Tags Elmer Ray As Possible Contender

CHICAGO, Jan. 21—(UP)—Joe Louis said today that Elmer Ray, whom he will meet in an exhibition bout next week, may be his next opponent for a heavyweight title fight "if the public thinks he's a good contender."

Louis will box Ray at Miami next Tuesday. He said he would talk with promoter Mike Jacobs on whether he will fight this summer, and, if so, whom he will meet.

"If Ray shows enough against me in Miami, and if the public thinks he's a good contender, I'll be satisfied to have him as a contender for the title," Louis said.

Leahy Refuses Job With Pro Redskins To Stay With Irish

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 21—(UP)—Football Coach Frank Leahy of Notre Dame indicated today that he was not interested in an offer to coach the professional Washington Redskins for a reported salary of $50,000.

"If I could not coach at Notre Dame, I would not want to coach anywhere else," said Leahy. "I hope sincerely that I can stay at Notre Dame for a long period of time."

The offer, made to Leahy in a conference in Washington on Wednesday was revealed by Leo Deorsey, a member of the Redskins' board of directors and a long-time friend of Leahy. Deorsey to say what salary was mentioned, but club owner George Preston Marshall has been reported ready to offer as much as $50,000 for a first-class coach.

The Redskins' coaching job became vacant when Albert (Turk) Edwards was promoted to executive vice-president.

Chapel Hill Wildcats Edge Roxboro, 43-42

Chapel Hill high school's Wildcats pulled one out of the fire last night when Bob Phillips sank a charity toss with ten seconds left in the first overtime period to defeat Roxboro high, 43-42.

At the end of the regular game it was tied up at 40-all. Early in the overtime Hilbert Williams sank a hook shot to put the locals ahead, 42-40. But Roxboro came right back with a field goal to knot the count again. Then, with ten seconds remaining, Phillips dropped the game-winning shot through the nets.

In preliminary games the Roxboro junior varsity edged Chapel Hill's juniors, 33-28 and the Roxboro girls' team defeated a like quintet from Chapel Hill, 22-15.

Dot Durham was high scorer for the local lassies, with a total of eight points. However, high scoring honors went to Mitzie Saunders, who tallied 12 points.

Irish Pick Captains

SOUTH BEND— Ind., Jan. 21—(UP)—Ends Leon Hart and James Martin tonight were named co-captains of the 1949 Notre Dame football team.

Hart, who hails from Turtle Creek, Pa., and Martin, from Cleveland, are both juniors who have held down first-string berths for two seasons.

They were chosen by teammates earlier in the week but the announcement was withheld until the annual team banquet given by the St. Joseph Valley Notre Dame club.

Question Privilege Is New To Koreans

By Laura Hearne

Six-hundred Koreans recently had the opportunity to attend a school in which they could ask, "Why?" or, in face, any question they wished to ask.

"After the complete centralization and total control of the Japanese system, the right to ask questions and to be governed by democratic principles was entirely new to them," said Dorothy McCuskey of the University education department yesterday.

Miss McCuskey taught in a school conducted in two eight-week terms at Seoul university as a project of the Reorientation branch of civil affairs of the military government in Seoul, Korea.

As one of the 20 Americans at the school, Miss McCuskey said, "The course was offered in order to give Korean teachers the experience of working in a school with democratic principles.

"We all had a great respect for the ability of the Korean teachers. They are intelligent and capable although they don't have a long string of degrees and were trained by inadequate methods according to our standards.

"Also, they have a great affection for children. While visiting Korean classrooms, I saw only evidences of the teachers' kindliness to the children in spite of severely overcrowded conditions in the schools. Incidentally, most Korean teachers are men."

In continuing her comments on the school, Miss McCuskey said, "Since Koreans have been an oppressed people during a long span of history, and for the past 40-odd years have been under Japanese domination, those who attended our school were completely fascinated by some of the courses they took. For instance, the one that seemed to be most valuable and was certainly the best liked was the required course on human growth and development."

According to Miss McCuskey, the three big jobs in Korean education are: (1) To eradicate illiteracy, (2) To develop a technical education so that Koreans can qualify for administrative and managerial positions in industry, and (3) To develop a pattern of general education that will lead to an understanding of the workings of government.

Miss McCuskey went to Seoul as a specialist in the language arts but while she worked not only in that field but in teacher education as well. Before coming to the University she was curriculum coordinator in the Wisconsin state Department of Public Instruction. She has taught in Ohio, her home state, and in Connecticutt and Texas.

While in Korea, each American had an interpreter. Miss McCuskey said hers was "a brilliant 19-year-old political science student." The interpreters learned to know the Americans so well that one of the faculty insisted his interpreter "knew what he was thinking before he had thought of it."

The Seoul school was an attempt "to transfer an American teachers' college to Korea." However, in one respect it failed, for little written work was required of the students, now their teachers could not read the papers!

About the size of Kansas, strategically-located Korea with its 30,000,000 people is considered by many to be a major friction point between the United States and the USSR.

For the 600 Koreans who could attend the American school, the taste of democratic education given them may stimulate a hunger for it. However, since the American military government there ended on Sept. 15, 1948, Miss McCuskey thinks future cooperative educational work in Korea will be curtailed.

J. Edward Allen Begins Jail Term For Embezzlement

RALEIGH, Jan. 21—(UP)—Sixty-one-year-old J. Edward Allen, former Warren county school superintendent, gave up his identity within the grim battlements of Central prison here today as he began five-to-seven years in jail for embezzlement, forgery and false pretense.

Allen was brought to the prison late yesterday after the end of his four-day trial at his own request, prison officials said.

His trial judge, Walter J. Bone, had given him until noon today to settle his affairs before beginning concurrent sentences on four convictions.

aided in cementing closer relations between the various countries and American students. With an Icelander, an Englishman, an Indian and two Americans as an executive committee, weekly teas were held and trips taken to nearby industrial centers. During the Thanksgiving holidays, arrangements were made through the club for foreign and American students remaining at the University to visit Chapel Hill homes and churches.

To provide an opportunity for freshmen to know each other better, a Freshman council was formed this fall. The council plans its own programs, stressing social functions, such as those held with YW members of the Woman's college in Greensboro.

Previous to the beginning of the fall quarter, 30 freshmen attended a two-day camp sponsored by the Y. The project, held at Camp Nawakwa, near Asheboro, was designed to help the new students get off to a good start in their college careers. Personal contact with faculty and upper class members was made possible, under the supervision of sophomores.

Boys of Chapel Hill high school have been taking part in the activities of three Hi-Y clubs under the guidance of members of the University Y. More than 45 boys are in this program, learning creative group work under the supervision of Y members advised by the education department of the University.

Baker, III, who denied Alicia had separated from the New York banking fortune heir, who was found to have been shot to death after his jeep was wrecked.

Baker's Strange Death Still Unsolved Mystery

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Jan., 21—(UP)—The strange death of Grenville Baker, New York multi-millionaire and one-time gay blade of Park avenue society, was marked down in Leon county police records today as an unsolved mystery.

Sheriff Frank Stoutamire said as far as he is concerned "the case is closed." State Attorney William D. Hopkins, who directed the investigation, left town on other business.

Baker, 27, was killed early last Monday morning, presumably by a bullet wound in the head, after his jeep crashed into a ditch on the family plantation near here.

Officers could never figure out how or by whom he was shot. There was even some question that his wound was caused by a bullet although two shots had been fired from his pistol.

Investigators questioned and examined Mrs. Theda Griffin and Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Whiddon, Baker's companions of the evening, at length, finally admitting that they really don't know anything except that the man is dead."

Convocation Set Tomorrow

Religious Emphasis Week to Be Keynoted With Speech by Dr. John A. Redhead, Jr.

By Caroline Bruner

Religious Emphasis week will begin tomorrow morning with a convocation address at 11 o'clock in Memorial hall by Dr. John A. Redhead, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Greensboro, the main speaker of the religious week. Students will be excused from classes in order to attend the services.

Speaking on "What is the Use of Religion, Anyway?", Dr. Redhead will begin a series of talks which will be continued in evening addresses Monday through Thursday at 8 o'clock. Topics of these addresses, which will be given in Gerrard hall, will be "Variety in Religious Experience," "This Thing Called Freedom," "The Will of God in Your Life Work," and "The Kingdom of God is at Hand."

Continuing the emphasis of religion on campus, nine visiting clergymen and religious leaders will meet classes each morning by invitations from the professors. These men, who will visit organized houses and clubs from 6 o'clock to 7:30 each evening and dormitories and fraternity houses from 9:45 to 11 o'clock, will also lead seminars from 4 to 5 o'clock in the afternoons.

Dr. Marvin Vick, a delegate to the 1948 White House Conference on the Family, will lead the seminars on Marriage in Roland Parker lounge 1 of Graham Memorial. The group interested in Human Relations will meet in the Grail room of Graham Memorial for seminars on that topic by Dr. Joseph Rauch.

Following these afternoon seminars, student planned and directed vesper programs will be held in the Episcopal chapel at 5:15. Breakfast and worship services will be presented for the leaders of the religious week, student chairmen heads, and other interested students, in the Methodist church each morning at 7 o'clock.

Student chairman of the Religious Emphasis week are Don Shropshire, general chairman; Betsy Huggins, program committee; Ray Mills, publicity committee; Francis Greene, hospitality committee; George Worth, organized houses committee; Sam Magill, classroom appointment committee, and Ann Chandler, worship committee.

State Student Wins Architectural Prize

RALEIGH, Jan. 22—(UP)—A fifth-year architecture student at North Carolina State college won second prize and $750 in a "hidden talent" nationwide architectural competition, college officials said today.

NSA Announces Tentative Plans Regarding Tours

Tentative plans for a series of tours to Mexico and Guatamala this summer, sponsored by the National Student association, were announced yesterday by Don Shropshire, chairman of the University NSA committee.

Tour 1 leaves San Antonio, Tex., for Mexico City by airplane. The tour will last nine weeks and summer sessions at the national University of Mexico will be attended and trips to local points of interest will be made.

Tour 2 departs from San Antonio, and Los Angeles, Cal., by air for Mexico City. Extensive trips to all major points of interest in Mexico and Guatamala will be made and a possible week-long trip to Guatamala will be taken.

Tour 3 leaves from San Antonio and Los Angeles for Guatamala, and summer sessions at San Carlos university will be attended. Side trips to interesting local places will be made during the summer.

Travel plans may be changed by transportation and accomodation difficulties, or by the students themselves. Interested students may secure application blanks from the University NSA committee.

Agents Are Arrested In Czechoslovakia

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 22—(UP)—Slovak security officers today announced the arrest of 60 persons charged with espionage for the United States Intelligence service.

This disclosure followed reliable reports from inside Pankrac prison that an estimated 200 to 300 Army officers, including some generals, had been locked up within the last 30 days.

Well informed but unofficial sources said the army arrests crushed in the bud a rightist military plot to seize power in Bohemia.

Blizzard Gathering Momentum in West

CHICAGO, Jan. 22—(UP)—A new blizzard gathered force tonight on the western plains where nearly 1,000,000 cattle and sheep were faced with starvation in the area battered by arctic storms since the new year opened.

The new storm developing on the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains blocked an "operation airlift" scheduled by the Air Force for the stranded livestock and slowed the delivery of snowplows and heavy equipment promised by the Army.

President Truman made $50,000 available from his emergency funds to help fight the snow in Utah.

Passes Exceed Seats

Woollen Seat Shortage Causes Admission Limit

The University athletic department announced yesterday that lack of seating facilities in Woollen gymnasium has necessitated the limitation of admissions to the Carolina-Duke tilt scheduled for Feb. 5, and the Carolina-State battle for Feb. 19.

Athletic department officials pointed out that there are "more students and University employees holding athletic passbooks than there are seats in Woollen gymnasium." The maximum seating capacity of the gym for a basketball game is approximately 5,000. Therefore a two-shift system will be employed for the two top games of the season.

All seats will be reserved for the aforementioned events and the following procedure will be adhered to:

1. Holders of passbooks bearing odd serial numbers, that is 1, 3, 5, etc., will have a priority on seats for the game with Duke on Feb. 5.

2. Individuals who wish to see this game and who have odd numbered books must exchange coupons at the ticket office window in Woollen gymnasium on Monday-Wednesday, Jan. 31-Feb. 1. between 9 and 5 o'clock.

3. On Thursday and Friday, Feb. 3 and 4, if there are any tickets left after the above priority period, they will be issued on a first come, first serve basis to holders of passbooks bearing even serial numbers—or to any one with a passbook.

4. Any space which is not called for by Saturday morning, Feb. 5, cannot be claimed by holders of passbooks and will be sold to the general public.

5. When two members of the same family have passbooks and one carries an even serial number and the other an odd number these individuals will be permitted to secure seats for the same game, but the serial number of the book issued to the head of the family will determine the game to which they can be admitted.

A similar procedure will be in effect for the State game on Feb. 19, but the priority on this game will be offered to book holders who have even serial numbers.

Eaton to Give Public Speech In GM Lounge

Talk Is Sponsored By Chi Delta Phi

Walter Pritchard Eaton, former professor of playwriting at Yale university, will present a "talk to people who want to write" tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Main lounge of Graham Memorial.

Sponsored by Chi Delta Phi, literary sorority, the lecture is the first of the group's open meetings for the winter quarter. Students, faculty and townspeople are invited to both the lecture and the reception following.

Reactivated here in 1941, Chi Delta Phi has initiated this year a series of open meetings at which writers in the community are presented to the public. Previous meetings have featured Charles Eaton of the English department and Robert Shenkkhan of the Communications center.

Known as the dean of American playwriting professors, tomorrow night's speaker is serving as guest lecturer in the department of dramatic art at the University this year. He is co-author with David Carb of "Queen Victoria," and has written several books on the theater.

One of his especial interests is the college theater, and his views on the subject will be expressed in an article in the March issue of the Carolina Quarterly. He has said, "The better the college theaters are, the sooner drama will reach the peak that we all hope for."

Polecats' Paradise

Big Smell-for-Smell Warfare May End in Favor of Skunk

CLIVE, Ia., Jan. 22—(UP)—A family of skunks won the first round of their smell-for-smell battle against eviction from the basement of Mrs. Scennia Swanson's home today.

But undaunted authorities were preparing a new attack against the besieged polecats. Even a representative of the Iowa Sheriff's association was in on the fight.

The first skirmish yesterday settled a long-standing question of which was worse—a skunk's odor or tear gas. The skunks won easily. They weren't even trying.

J. E. Steinel, business manager of the Iowa Sheriff's association, joined forces with P. V. Akey, town marshall of nearby Windsor Heights, in an attempt to drive the white-stripers from their position.

The polecats met the attack with the best weapons at their command. The basement stureeked from the combined odors. But the skunks did not budge.

Akey told her not to despair. "You're a neighbor," he said. "We'll do all we can. We've got to prove that people are smarter than skunks."

'From the Riggin'

'H.M.S. Pinafore' Almost Scuttled

By Sam Hirsch

"All my work trying to turn the Memorial hall stage into the good ship Pinafore was almost scuttled last week," yesterday said Gordon Bennett, designer of the unique set for the Playmaker-music department operetta to open this Friday night for a three-day run.

"We discovered the Trapp family kids back stage swinging from the riggings, while their parents were out front performing. "Swingin' from the riggin'—not like their daddy used to do!" he add, grinning.

"I've had a lot of fun with this show," Bennett continued. "When Foster Fitz-Simmons, the director, handed me his floor plan, I studied it and sat down with some cardboard and my three-year-old daughter's scissors—while she was asleep, of course—and then let my imagination take hold of my fingers. I ended up with this model." He pointed to the miniature ship on the worktable at the Playmakers scene shop, while the buzz saw cut through plywood, and students with paint brushes covered the canvas frames all around it to duplicate it for the stage.

He poked at the two rope ladders hanging from the mainmast. "When the director saw this rigging he got an idea and asked me to make one of them practical. So now you'll see the sailors swarming up and down the left stage ladder. It'll give you the feeling the ship is real. I hope the Playmakers have taken out insurance for the actors." he laughed, "but since the Trapp kids did us a favor and tested them last week I don't suppose we have to worry!"

Bennett's model and his detailed working drawings will be on exhibit in the library starting tomorrow, and may be examined by anyone interested in seeing at close range the progress of a stage set from the working model to the final product scheduled to float in Memorial hall Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings at 8:30.

Campus Dimes Campaign Gets Underway Tomorrow

THE MARCH OF DIMES helped set up this emergency polio treatment center at Camp Sutton near Monroe. The center was used to alleviate overcrowded hospital conditions during the record polio epidemic in North Carolina this summer. Two young polio patients are shown being admitted to the center.

Drive Will Aim At $7,500 Goal; DTH Is Sponsor

By Don Maynard

The $7,500 campus March the auspices of the Daily Tar of Dimes campaign, under Heel, will open tomorrow, working toward a goal of a $1 donation from each student.

Colorful red, white and blue dime collection containers bearing the slogan "Fight Infantile Paralysis, Join the March of Dimes—You may Save a Child," have been placed at strategic points throughout the campus.

Chairmen Ed Joyner, Jr., and Dougald MacMillan voiced high expectations for student body support of the drive. "Certainly every student realizes how serious infantile paralysis is, and that none of us are immune to it," MacMillan said yesterday.

"In view of the immediacy of the problem in North Carolina, we feel confident that the campus goal of $7,500 will be attained. It is expected that campus organizations will back the drive 100 per cent. Already reports of fraternities who jumped the gun and took initial collections have come in. The poker club of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity is one of them. They are donating a dime for every pot played."

Friday night in the Rendezvous room was "Polio Night." Couples seeking entrance were requested to donate 50 cents apiece. Approximately $35 was collected.

In expressing the extreme need for whole-hearted cooperation from everyone, E. Carrington Smith, chairman of the Orange county chapter, pointed out the depleted treasuries of both state and national chapters.

At present there are 2,509 hospital cases in the state, Smith said, costing $7,000 a week to support. The epidemic last summer was responsible for the depleted treasuries.

First contribution received in the Daily Tar Heel office for the current March of Dimes drive came, not from a loyal DTH reporter, but from Jimmy Campbell of Carrboro, newsboy for the Durham Sun.

Students Are Exempted By Enlistment In Guard

By J. L. Merritt

University students between 17 and 18 and one half years of age may be exempted from selective service by joining the North Carolina National Guard, Master Sgt. John Jones of the Durham National Guard headquarters announced today.

According to Jones, the Selective Service act of 1949 gives the governors of each state the power to issue a proclamation stating when the authorized strength of a national guard unit cannot be maintained. Then, men enlisted in the National Guard before becoming 18 and one half years old may be deferred from selective service duty.

Former Gov. R. Gregg Cherry issued the national guard proclamation during his term of office, and the Durham national guard unit has openings for 102 enlisted men. National guard training will not interrupt training or careers of enlisted men, Jones emphasized.

Students interested in joining the Durham headquarters unit should contact Master Sgt. Jones at the Durham city armory any day from 8 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. National guard applicants may also report at the weekly guard meeting on each Tuesday evening from 7:30 to 9:30.

Armistice Talks Are Deadlocked

RHODES, Jan. 22—(UP)—Israeli-Egyptian armistice negotiations were deadlocked today and United Nations officials feared they might break down altogether.

CPU to Discuss Health Insurance As Topic Tonight

Compulsory federal health insurance will be the topic of discussion by the Carolina Political union this evening at 8 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Robert E. Giles, junior in economics, will present the main details of the report by Oscar E. Ewing, federal security administrator, on the nation's health including proposal for a 10-year health program.

Dr. E. G. McGavran, dean of the School of Public Health, will be present to participate in the roundtable discussion. Special invitations have been extended to local physicians and dentists as well as to faculty members and students in the medical school and the public health school.

Officials of the Hospital Savings association also received special invitations to attend. All students are invited to attend and participate in the discussion.

NAACP Meeting Will Hear Bond

Nat Bond will be the feature speaker at the organizational meeting of the Youth council of the Chapel Hill chapter of the NAACP today at 3:30 in the Community center. Refreshments will be served at the close of the meeting.

As president of the State Conference of Youth Councils and College Chapters and president of the North Carolina college chapter of the NAACP Youth council, Bond will speak on the purpose and meaning of the youth councils.

What Can We Believe?

Religion is something that many young people, especially college students, push into the background of their lives. Questions of science, philosophy, human relations, they will delve into eagerly, but from religion they shy away. Only a minority of students have a sincere faith in their religion; the others either go to church and say grace at meals from force of habit, or ignore religion completely.

Why is this? Partly, we think, because in the course of other studies the student encounters facts which seem to challenge his religion—facts which raise questions he cannot answer and which he is afraid his religion cannot answer. Man recognizes the need to believe in a Being greater than himself, to whom he can look for help when he is not strong enough to stand alone. Because he feels this need for a God he instinctively avoids questions which might take that God from him. Yet these questions, simply because they are unanswered, undermine and destroy his faith more surely than any answer could.

Religion is not something to be avoided. Rather, because of the vital part it plays in man's existence, it should be inquired into more carefully than any mere academic subject. Any god worth having can stand up under questioning. Most of the greatest and happiest men in the world are those who have questioned their beliefs and found answers which gave them a faith in which they can rely.

Tomorrow is the beginning of religious emphasis week at the University. It is as good a time as any to try to find out what we can believe in, and why.

Yackety Yack Is Finished

For the first time in four years the Yackety Yack will be out on time this spring. For the first time since 1945 the Yack staff has kept abreast of its deadline for sending pictures and copy to the engravers and printers and has finished the yearbook on the date set for its completion.

This, as most undergraduates have cause to realize, is something unusual. Last year the book did not arrive for distribution at the University until the summer term was under way. The year before, it got here on the last day of the spring term and had to be distributed during the examination period. This tardiness meant that many students who paid for their books graduated and left school without receiving them. It meant more money spent in mailing hundreds of the heavy volumes to purchasers who had gone home for the summer. It meant almost a thousand Yacks stacked up and wasted because their owners never called for them and left no mailing address. Seldom did it mean a better annual in spite of the delay to get last minute pictures in.

Editor Bill Duncan and his staff have done a Herculean job in getting their huge task done this year, and their initiative and industry will show up in the quality of the book. Built around the theme of comparison between "yesterday and today" at the University, the 1949 Yack will probably be one of the best editions in the history of the annual.

Honor System Scrutinized

It's not particularly hard for most persons of such intelligence as presumably are students of the University to realize not only the immorality but as well the simple impracticability of a society in which there is lying, cheating or stealing. What is of less widespread realization, unfortunately—although equally as serious a crime—is neglecting to report immediately any such act, in the University sphere a breach of the Honor Code.

The Honor Code states that any student who witnesses what he suspects to be a breach should ascertain the facts, accuse the offender and report the matter to the Honor Committee. Failure to do that is in itself a breach of the Honor Code. It's consequently a matter of helping to destroy one of the finest honor systems at any institution anywhere. Every student at the University of Virginia, as a member of the System, is charged with the responsibility of enforcing it.

The Honor Committee has expressed its official alarm at recent stealing in Memorial Gymnasium. The Committee's alarm should be only a small fraction of that of the whole student body, if it's permissible to multiply alarm by people. Every member of the student body here has a big stake in the Honor System, the success of which at this point depends on the cooperation of that whole student body. The Committee serves in a judiciary capacity, not in a detective one.

Perhaps only by being alarmed and hence by being alerted can the student body fulfill its responsibility. The Honor Committee was wise in deciding last week to publicize the Gym thefts. Heretofore such publicity, for the most part, has come from other sources, with wrath of the Committee subsequent. We agree it's conceivable that University crime news could be overplayed to the point of doing damage. Undoubtedly our opinion differs somewhat from that of members of the Committee is what should be considered "scandal" treatment of such a story, they being a bit over-liberal with the use of that brand.

It appears now, however, the two extremes of opinion are coming closer together. We are sure that's for the ultimate good of the Honor System and of the University of Virginia.

Health Insurance?

By R. E. Giles

The Carolina Political Union has as topic for discussion tonight "Should We Have Government Health Insurance?", one of the most controversial questions that will face Congress this session.

Briefly, proponents of government health insurance cite key health problems which face our nation at the present time: 1) there is a great shortage in medical personnel; we need 20 percent more physicians immediately, as well as greater numbers of dentists and nurses; 2) hospital capacity should be doubled; 3) although over one billion is spent annually on all types of research, the bulk is for industrial and military and only 10 percent for medical and related sciences—more is needed for medicine; 4) perhaps the basic problem in the entire health effort is that only about 20 percent of the nation's population can financially afford all the medical care they need. The point is further made that during World War II, 5,000,000 men were declared unfit for military service for physical or mental reasons, both of which categories comprise health and medical care problems. In 1947, something like $27,000,000 in potential production and wages was lost on account of sickness, partial and total disability, much of which could have been avoided had the nation possessed the medical facilities and the proper distribution of medical care.

With these facts and problems in mind, many people inside government and out conclude that the only way to insure that the average citizen will be able to pay for proper medical services, and thus support the hospitals, clinics, doctors, dentists and nurses to supply these services, is to have an all-inclusive health insurance program. On this idea of insurance, there is, strangely enough, general agreement among everyone, including the American Medical Association and other professional associations representing medicine. The disagreement arises as to the form of such an insurance program.

Organized medicine, through the American Medical Association, has adopted the position that a government health insurance program is unthinkable, and that the Nation's needs can be met very satisfactorily through voluntary insurance plans sponsored by private insurance companies and corporations. Charles A. Togut, Associate Director, Manhattan General Hospital, New York, has expressed the matter thusly: "The government proposes to become the shepherd of our ills and of our souls; the custodian of every stomach ache, ear irritation, appendix, gall bladder, pregnancy, and a thousand and one other diseases and maladies. . .the government's first attempt as the Lord's substitute." . . ."Foundations of our nation's security-civil, religious and economic liberty—will perish from the continent with the inception of socialized or federalized medicine; for democracy and freedom are the indispensable conditions of human progress."

Mr. Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator has very ably presented the case for government health insurance in his recent report to the President, entitled, "The Nation's Health, a Ten-year Program."

The plan which has been proposed, and which President Truman recommended as a guide for legislation in his State of the Union address, will be given in detail at tonight's roundtable discussion, with the main arguments for and against.

Oscar Time

'Get Other Awards First'

By Aline Mosby

Hollywood, Jan. 23—(UP)—With Oscar-time breathing hot down Hollywood's neck, every movie maker is plotting feverishly to get his picture an Academy nomination. Including Leonard Levinson, President of Impossible Pictures, Inc., which makes cartoons.

Each year movie moguls draw up the same old campaign behind curtains of cigar smoke in somebody's plush office. Mr. Levinson, it happens, arranged his while buying a $3.49 bottle of vitamin pills at Schwab's drugstore. This, however, should not detract from the dignity of his plan.

He hopes to win an Oscar for "Three Minnies, Tonka, Ha-ha and Sota," a cartoon concerning an old Indian legend which Levinson made up for the occasion.

"The first thing an Oscar hopeful must do," begins apple-cheeked Levinson, "Is get a couple of other awards first."

Jane Wyman already has been honored by the London Daily Express. Olivia de Havilland and "Treasure of the Sierra Madre" by the New York film critics. And now the Society for the Preservation of Cigar Store Indians in Bellevue, Wash., has honored "The Three Minnies" as the best picture about cigar store Indians made in 1948.

Another derby race rule is a suitable billboard. Those for "Command Decision" read, "Eligible To Be the Most Honored Picture of the Year," and you have to read "Eligible To Be" with a magnifying glass. "The Snake Pit" and "Enchantment" billboards shout, "Made by Academy-Award Winning Producers," with "Academy-Award Winning" in mile-high type.

"I will take out an ad which reads, 'Impossible Academy Nomination,' with the 'im' in small print," says Mr. Levinson.

He also plans to have celebrities endorse his film, an old Hollywood Oscar custom.

"There's a waiter at the Brown Derby who looks like Truman," adds Mr. L. "I'll take a picture of him by a piano and have him endorse the cartoon."

"I have been in Hollywood since 1921, and I'll announce I'm writing my memories," concluded Levinson. "Sixty per cent of the Academy members are my friends.

"Each will phone begging me not to write my memories, and then I will beg them to vote for 'The Three Minnies."

Artist Series Revival Needed

From the size of the crowds that packed Memorial Hall recently to see Hamlet and Macbeth one might judge that t... people of Chapel Hill want a good theater. The same may b... said after looking at the line of people stretching down ... Eubanks Drug Store waiting to get into Henry V on Friday n...

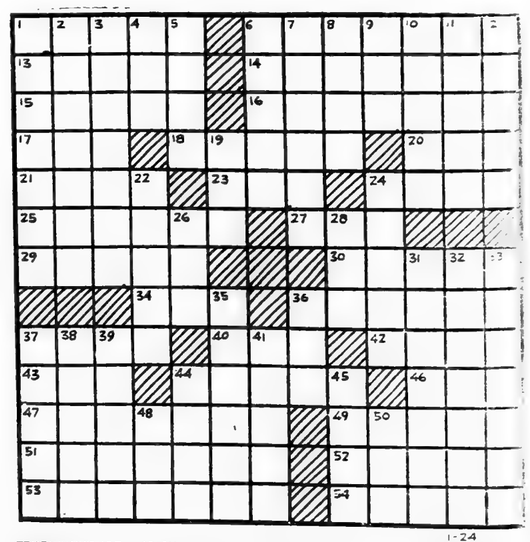
Even on the third night of Henry V there wasn't a vacant seat in the house. It is not too illogical to assume from this that other forms of good art would be equally well supported here—after all, "Chapel Hill is the cultural center of the South."

Unless this columnist's information is wrong, there was an artist series here before the war. Why hasn't this been revived? There is certainly demand.

The Duke University All-Star Concert Series for this year is presenting: the opera Romeo and Juliet, the Budapest String Quartet, Leonard Warren of the Metropolitan Opera, The Fine Piano Quartet, and the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. Duke has three extra attractions to add to these: Lily Pons, the Ballet Russe De Monte Carlo, and the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

Even if we "Don't give a damn for Duke University," it looks as if perhaps Duke is the cultural center of the South.

Almost all large universities throughout the country have an artist series. Certainly we have enough interest on campus and in town to warrant one, and it would undoubtedly be a financial success. Without the opportunity of partaking of the best culture at first hand, we only receive half an education. Text books are good, but at best they are a poor excuse for first hand experience.



* * * * *

The other day, Monday, January 17 to be precise, this columnist saw something which should be made public.

Just before a ten o'clock class a car pulled into the parking lot behind Phillips, and while parking bumped another car. Several boys got out, and as the driver started to look at the other car, a fairly new Oldsmobile, one of his companions said something. They all laughed and walked away.

On inspection it turned out that there was no serious damage, but the driver could not have known that. He was driving a Chrysler with North Carolina plate number 256-146.

Drivers in Chapel Hill continue to forget that other people have rights also. The last time this column mentioned poor driving, no mention was made of taxicabs, but they are as bad as students.

Still Another Viewpoint Submitted

Arab Claims to Palestine Based on Uninterrupted Possession

In your issue of January 14, was an article entitled, "British Policy In Palestine Shortsighted," and in your issue of January 19, were two articles about the Palestine situation, one pro-British by Mrs. S. K. Lawry and the other pro-Jewish by Miss Francine Mellon. Thus far the Arab viewpoint of this critical world problem has not been published in the DTH.

As Mr. Lawry wrote, "There is another side to the question which your readers may like to consider," and that is the Arab side. Because I am pro-Arab, and also because I have studied the situation in Palestime, I feel compiled and qualified to express the Arab views of this problem.

In his fine article Mr. Lawry stated, "The Arabs feel their claims to be at least as justified as those of the Jews." On the contrary the Arabs have proved that they alone are justified in their rights towards Palestine.

This is an old argument and need not be rehashed, but I should like to point out that the only title to ownership recognized in public, private, international, and local law is long uninterrupted possession. The Arabs have occupied Palestine without contest for at least 1,300 years. Hence, their title to the land is unimpeachable.

In her article Miss Mellon stated, "The historical orientation of Israel has always been towards the larger hopes of mankind; towards the realization of human dignity, national freedom, social justice, and the conception of one world." These are, indeed, pretty words and an ideal philosophy; but this is the true picture of the so called state of Israel, as expressed by the following:

Archbishop Arthur Hughes, Papal Internuncio in Cairo, Egypt in a strongly worded statement to a London Newspaper on November 5, 1948 charged the Zionist movement in the Holy Land as, "A deliberate Jewish effort to decimate the Arabs and destroy Christianity in Palestine."

On November 28, 1948 three nationally famous clergymen, Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin of Lakeville, Conn., former president of Union Theological seminary and former moderator of the Presbyterian church in the U. S.; Rev. Father John La Farge of New York, well known Catholic editor, and Rabbi Morris Lazaron of Baltimore, member of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, stated: "Do you know that the Irgun Zvai Leumi terrorists (part of the Israeli army) were responsible for the bombing of the King David Hotel? Do you know that Irgun forces, in an act of calculated terrorism massacred 250 Arab inhabitants, women and children included, of the village of Deir Yassin? Do you know that as a result of this and similar horrors there are now almost a half a million Arab refugees from the fighting in Palestine, scores of whom die daily from exposure and hunger? Finally, do you know that the Irgum, masquerading under the front of 'democracy,' is in fact a totalitarian-minded group?"

Zionism has shown itself to be an expansionist, terroristic, racialist, pagan, aggressive totalitarian movement different only in a slight degree from naziism, and to allow this movement territorial sovereignty in a part of Palestine would constitute an intolerable menace to the rest of the country.

Palestine is an Arab county, belonging of right to the Arabs who are its indigenous population and its vast majority of people. It is the heart and center of the Arab world, and the Arabs have the right and some day will secure the power to determine their own destiny. Before the end of the present century there will be a United States of the Arabs with over forty million Arabs in their stategic lands on the crossroads of three continents.

British and American treatment of the Arabs today will influence the attitude of the Arabs in the future. It would be an advantage to the democracies of the world to win the friendship of so great a people, and a mockery towards them to drive the Arabs to seek the guarantors of their destiny elsewhere.

State Cagers Wallop Tar Heels, 67-36

Strictly Ad Lib

By Zane Robbins

Portrait of a Kentucky Gentleman

THE STATE OF KENTUCKY in general, and the University of Kentucky in particular has, in recent years, been generally acknowledged as the "Basketball Capital of the Nation." And last summer's Olympic performances by the Kentucky cage masters, with the very able assistance of the semi-professional Phillip's Oilers, did much to establish the Blue Grass hardwood magicians as the top basketballers in the world.

St. Louis university's narrow win over the Wildcats in the recent Sugar bowl shindig lessened the lustre of the oh-so-enviable Kentucky record somewhat, but the Ruppmen came off the floor fighting and have pinned losses on a number of high-and-mighty foes in recent outings.

The continued success and frequent elongated win streaks of the Blue and White cagers is due in no small measure to the tutoring of Adolph Rupp, the amiable Kansas gentleman who migrated to the Blue Grass state back in the autumn of '31. Rupt came, saw, and has since conquered the hearts and fancy of all basketball-loving America.

A Bit About the Master

RUPP HAILS FROM HALSTEAD, Kansas, a tiny Mid-Western village that many would call a jerk-water stop. He captained his high school cage team back in the early 20's and then packed his sweat shirt, knee-guards, and what-have-you, to high-tail it to the University of Kansas where he starred under the veteran cage mentor Phog Allen, a very apt tutor.

The Baron's first coaching opportunity came in 1923 when he accepted a position at Marshalltown, Iowa, under the allusion that he was to be basketball coach. However, it developed, to his complete dismay, that he had been hired as wrestling coach. Rupp, mortified but resolute, grimly tackled the task of teaching his charges the manly art of tying their fellow human beings into knots. Result—he piloted his grapplers to a state title his first year.

The success of "Ol' Rupp and Ready" stands unparalleled in college coaching annals. In his 18 successful seasons at Kentucky the Baron has earned his title of mythical nobility by directing his team to 353 wins in 423 games for a .834 winning percentage. During his reign he has never lost more than eight games in a single year.

It seems that Rupp is such a colorful guy he ends up on the conversational end of proceedings every time the gang gathers down at the village store, around this time of the year, to swap a few tall tales. The amiable coach is a "character" to some, a "mouthy individual" to others, but a basketball genius to all.

The Humor of Rupp

UNLIKE MANY OF HIS coaching brethren, he has a keen sense of humor to match his brilliant cage wisdom. The Baron is a "good humor" man and some of his sayings have become classical—especially his Biblical quotations. So pull up a chair, rest your feet on the edge of the pot-belly stove and take note of a few of the more popular Rupp anecdotes.

A typical example of Rupp's Biblical colloquisms is contained in the following fable that has been kicked around quite a bit by the nation's sports writers during the past few years.

Once when drilling a batch of freshmen in the art of fighting for the ball under the basket, he exhorted them: "Beat the other fellow to the charge. Hit hard. Remember, the Bible says, 'It is better to give than to receive'."

"But coach," countered one of the youthful cage aspirants, "I always thought the Bible said, 'Love thine enemies'."

"That's the old version of it," Rupp snapped back. "But the rules committee changed it."

The Baron's method of player selection remains a mystery to everyone but himself. When quizzed about the subject Rupp simply points to the top of his office door—six feet, two inches high—and explains. "If they don't bump their heads when they come in, I don't even bother to shake their hands."

No Love For Big Nine

THE KENTUCKY GENTLEMAN wastes no love on the notorious-vain "Big Whine." Not so long ago he was accused by a Big Nine coach of raiding the North for basketball talent. The Mid-Western editor made the fatal mistake of employing the Southern term "carpetbagging" in his denunciation of Rupp.

Soon after receiving this blasting, the Baron was invited to speak at a banquet in Ohio, deep in the heart of the Big Nine territory, and the banquet chairman, eager to have Rupp's name on the program, asked what his subject would be.

"My text," the Wildcat coach replied, "will be, 'A Carpetbagger in the Holy Land'."

Although some think he's an "egotistical brain-child," Rupp considers himself a pretty good coach. In a game several years ago he got excited and began yelling information to his players. Finally the referee tacked a technical foul on him for coaching from the bench. After the game he was cornered by a rabid fan and asked what he thought of the foul.

"Well," said Rupp, "my coaching is worth a technical foul anytime!"

Vic Bubas Leads Hoosier Hotshots To Lop-Sided Win

By Buddy Vaden

RALEIGH, Jan. 22—Everything came off as expected here in Memorial auditorium tonight before some 3,000 partisan fans, as Vic Bubas and the rest of the Hoosier Hotshots, who acted like the Auditorium was their crystal palace, gave the Tar Heel basketballers a lesson in the rudiments of rugged basketball to the tune of a 67-36 thumping, their 27th straight win in this arena.

Nemo Nearman, who maintained his free throw accuracy throughout the rough and tumble affair, led the Tar Heels in a fading cause as he collected eight points, high for the Carolina squad.

Little Charlie Thorne, who refused to be pushed around by the towering State cagers, was the shining light for Carolina in the second period as he continually fed the ball into Tar Heels breaking under the basket. But his work was in vain, as the Wolfpack pushed their devastating attack and managed to gain control of the backboards.

Bubas was grabbing the rebounds for State all evening, and with the help of towering Bob Hahn, managed to keep the ball away from Tom Scott's charges for the better part of the evening.

State's Bob Garrison opened the scoring when he connected with a field goal in the first minute of play, but Carolina came back to deadlock the count at 2-all on Nearman's two-pointer. Horvath added a free throw for the West Raleigh club, but Kappler hit on a set shot to put the Tar Heels on top, 4-3.

Carolina forged ahead three times, and it was anybody's ball game for the first eight minutes; however, Dick Dickey made good on two charity tosses and Paul Horvath scored on a jump shot to put the Red Terriors out in front to stay, 13-11 at that point. At the eleven minute mark the Acadamoo had a 10-14 advantage.

For the remainder of the first half the Scottmen were able to garner only two field goals and one foul shot, and they left the floor at intermission on the short end of a 31-19 count.

The worst was yet to come for the Tar Heels, however, with State opening the last stanza like a house afire and rolling up a 42-22 lead before Charlie Thorne found the range from the floor after six minutes had elapsed for the visitor's first field goal.

Undefeated Mermen Clip LaSalle As Six Pool Records Are Smashed

By Frank Allston, Jr.

Carolina's undefeated swimmers extended their unbroken chain of victories to 39 yesterday afternoon as they whipped the LaSalle college mermen, 45-30 in Bowman Gray pool.

A full house, estimated at 1,200, the largest ever to see a meet in the South, witnessed six pool records smashed by the torrid action. In addition to LaSalle's Joe Verdeur, NCAA and Olympic breaststroke champ, came within 1.4 seconds of setting a new world record in that event. Five of the records also bettered previous top performances anywhere in the South.

The action was fast and exciting all the way from the first gun right down to the final close finish. The two squads were so evenly balanced it was not until the eighth event of the afternoon that the final pattern was established.

LaSalle Takes Lead

The visiting Explorers from Philadelphia jumped into an early lead, taking the 300-yard medley relay event in 2:57.1. The LaSalle trio of Richards, Verdeur and Wahl accomplished the first record breaking of the day, clipping 3.3 seconds off the old record held by Carolina's 1948 team.

Carolina closed the gap slightly in the next event, the 220-yard free style, as Tar Heel Jim Thomas raced LaSalle's Farrel Devlin to a record-smashing 2:13.2 tie in that event.

The 50-yard freestyle, one of two events in which there was no record broken, saw LaSalle capture their second of three first places as Bob Reagan sprinted the two laps in 23.7 seconds.

Crone Captures Diving

Buddy Crone, Tar Heel diving ace, compiled 118.3 points to win the diving competition for the afternoon. Crone, with outstanding performances on several difficult dives, finished far ahead of second-place Johnny Whichard, also of Carolina.

Shortly afterwards Norm Sper, a diver in his own right, splashed to a 1:39.2 performance in the 150-yard backstroke event. Sper finished ten yards ahead of LaSalle's Richards.

The next event found Verdeur, holder of many records for the breaststroke competition brought the house to its feet and the Philadelphian turned in one of the best performances of his star-studded career, racing to a 2:16.1 victory. Verdeur completely lapped the remainder of the field in his specialty.

Misses World Record

Verdeur lacked only 1.4 seconds of setting a new world record. The present record for the event is 2:14.7 and the husky champion was ahead of that time at the half-way mark, only to slow down on the last laps. Both teams, the judges and all the assembled spectators cheered Joe on when it was realized that he had a chance at the record and he received a thunderous ovation at the conclusion of the event.

Carolina, however, swam back into the limelight on the next event when they clinched the meet with a record 4:56.2 performance by Jim Thomas in the 440-yard freestyle. Thomas pushed by LaSalle's Devlin most of the way, knocked nine seconds off the old record set by Dick Twining last year.

In the anti-climactic 400-yard relay, the Carolina quartet of Jesse Greenbaum, Dick Twining, Lloyd Drew and Steve Osborne raced to a record 3:34.9 victory. Osborne beat out Verdeur by inches on the anchor lap as the crowd again rose to witness the sensational finish. Twining had given Drew a lead of several yards at the beginning of the third lap and although he kept up a fast pace, Drew gave ground. Verdeur, obviously tired by his breaststroke win, could not quite catch Osborne.

The next home meet for the rampaging Tar Heels is with Georgia Tech's defending Southeastern conference champs in the Bowman Gray pool next Saturday afternoon.

Scrappy Kessing Is Commissioner Of Grid League

CHICAGO, Jan. 22—(UP)—Commodore Oliver O. (Scrappy) Kessing, veteran of 38 years of Navy Sehvice and organizer of the North Carolina Pre-Flight school, was named commissioner of the All America football conference today with full authority to guide the circuit in its continuing war with the National league.

Kessing, 58, was named to succeed Admiral Jonas Ingram, another sea veteran who retired to his Coronado, Cal., home after two years with the grid league.

The new commissioner's athletic background was participation in four sports, football, baseball, boxing and wrestling, at the Naval academy, as well as organization of the North Carolina preflight school for training pilots in world war II.

The league decided to operate without any eastern and western divisions next year. Instead, each team will play 12 games, facing each of its seven rivals twice on a home and home basis. At the end of the season a playoff will be held between the first four teams with the 1st and 4th place teams and 2nd and 3rd place teams playing. The winners will play for the league crown.

What Next?

DAVIDSON, Jan. 22—(UP)—Davidson college, which last played Army in 1934 and absorbed a 41-0 shellacking, returned to the Cadets' 1949 schedule today.

The teams will meet in the season's opener for both at West Point, N. Y., Sept. 24, Athletic Director Norm Shepard announced.

Davidson won three, lost five and tied one last season to finish in the lower brackets of the Southern conference. In 1929 and 1934 the small denominational school previously invaded West Point but lost both tries.

Shepard said Davidson replaces Hawaii on the Army schedule. Iwao Miyake, Athletic director of Hawaii, cancelled the game because of the team's "poor showing" against mainland schools last year.

Davidson shifted Wofford college from Sept. 24 to Oct. 15 and postponed a previously-scheduled game with Guilford college until next year.

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 22—(UP)—Athletic director Dana X. Bible announced tonight that the University of Texas football team will meet Notre Dame in a two-game, home and home series beginning in 1952.

The first game will be played here on Oct. 4, 1952 and the second at South Bend, Ind., on Sept. 25, 1954.

The teams have met three times in the past, with Notre Dame winning two of the games.

Blue Devils Down VPI As Youmand Scores 21

DURHAM, Jan. 22—Duke's Blue Devils avenged an earlier defeat at the hands of Virginia Tech by trouncing the Gobblers, 65-52, tonight in the Devil's indoor stadium.

The Duke quint started slowly, but Ceep Yeomans got hot and racked up twelve straight points to put the winners ahead to stay, 12-8. The sharpshooting forward had a total of 21 points for the game, 17 of them in the first half.

The Blue Devils, playing without the services of Ben Collins, were ahead, 41-21, at halftime.

Sorority's Pledges Introduced At Tri Delt Heaven Presentation

Delta Delta Delta sorority members, in a "Tri Delt heaven" of star and crescent decorations, presented their annual pledge dance in the Carolina inn Friday night.

Dancing below the star-studded ceiling to the music of Johnny Satterfield's orchestra, Tri Delts and their dates faced a mirrored wall on which were placed three large deltas of silver, gold, and blue. Carrying the traditional theme further, a large replica of the star and crescent seal was placed behind the bandstand. In front of the bandstand was a white fence covered with ivy and other greenery.

The pledges were introduced through a rose and ivy-covered arch, where they were announced by Harold Bursley, junior from Charlotte. After passing through the arch, pledge members, carrying large bouquets of roses, were presented bracelets bearing the Tri Delt seal.

The newly introduced Tri Delt pledges are: Patricia Bailey, Asheville; Clara Jane Burroughs, Jacksonville, Fla., Mac Copenhaver, Bristol, Va.; Madge Crawford, Chapel Hill; June Crockett, Bluefield, Va.; Jo Anne Darden, Franklin, Va.; Betty Dixon, Suffolk, Va.; and Muriel Fisher, Miami.

Others are Patty Ann Fizzell, Bristol, Tenn.; Ann Gamble, High Point; Sarah Gobble, Suffolk, Va.; Gene Hines, Greenwood, S. C.; Louise Horner, Sanford; Lorraine Howard, Miami; Mary Angelyn McNease, Fayette, Ala.; Mary Willis Matthews, Norfolk, Va.; Virginia Monfort, Atlanta, Ga.; Nancy Norton, Durham.

Barbara Payne, Beckley, West Va.; Constance Penn, Exeter, N. H.; Jean Rankin, Mount Holly; Jean Serpell, Daytona Beach, Fla.; Betty Smith, Charleston, West Va.; Frances Sowers, Sanford; Susan Trumbo, Norfolk, Va.; and Margean Whitehurst, Fort Myers, Fla.

KA Chapter Plans Ball; Officers Are Elected

The campus' most conspicuous party plans are now being made by Kappa Alpha fraternity. The members are bustling around in sideburns and mustaches in anticipation of their annual "Old South Ball" to be held in Raleigh Feb. 5. Also attending the festivities will be KA members from State, Wake Forest, and Duke. Prior to the ball there will be a parade up Fayetteville street and a banquet at the Bon Air night club near Raleigh.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity was host to the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority at a dinner dance Tuesday night. The fraternity living room was decorated in the fraternity and sorority colors, and music was furnished by phonograph. A buffet dinner was served during the dance.

Jack Brantley, junior from Greensboro, was elected SAE president at the meeting held last Wednesday night. Other members elected to office were Bill Miller, vice-president; Stan Travis, secretary; and Page Harris, treasure.

The Alpha Mu chapter of Kappa Sigma also elected its officers this week. Phillip McKinne, Louisburg, was elected president; Ivan Armstrong, Raleigh, vice-president; Walter Montgomery, Spartanburg, S. C., treasurer; Lindsay Ferguson, Durham, secretary; Robert Ensslin, Washington, D. C., grand master of ceremony; Walter Johnson, Concord, pledge master; James Hardison, Wadesboro, and Oliver Smith, Raleigh, guards; Thomas Larkin, Greenville, German club representative; Joe Kumpe, Charlotte, IFC representative; John Mosley, Kinston, intramural manager; Fitz Caudle, Raleigh, Caduceus correspondent; and Calvin Koonce, Raleigh, and Richard Palmen, Shelby, co-chairmen of rushing.

The Chi Phi's chose Charlie Loudermilk as their new president in their chapter meeting this week. Ike Rholader was elected vice-president, Herb Mitchell, secretary, Ray Shiplett, treasurer, and Dave Willis, historian.

Saturday evening Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity began its social season for the new year with an informal party at the house. A barbecue supper was served to the members and their dates, after which everyone adjourned to the Terrace View supper club for a private dance.

Triple Grade Supper Presented By Pi Phi's

With a combination of satins, sweaters, and blue jeans, Pi Beta Phi sorority girls, divided into three groups of grade markers, entertained their dates Thursday night with suppers of steaks, hamburgers, and mush, respectively.

The intellectually elite, with the highest grades in the sorority, entered the "Pi Phi Variety Club" and were shown into the Plutocrats' Parlor. There, dressed in Sunday best, they were served steak dinners.

The middle group of grade makers and their dates entered the Hamburger Heaven of the living room. Dressed in class-going clothing, members of this group sat in chairs and propped plates of hamburgers on their laps.

Those in the sorority with the lowest averages ate mush in the morgue, a small parlor, hill-billy style. All chairs and tables were removed from the Mush Room, and the blue jean-donned couples ate from the floor.

To assure the intellectuals that this group would be denied all modern conveniences, wet paint signs were posted on all walls to prevent lazy backs from relaxing.

One chair remained in this room for a guest, Dr. J. P. Harland of the archaelogy department. Mrs. Harland, also a guest, was entertained in the steak group, while her husband was made at home with the mush eaters.

Music furnished for the entertainment varied from the "Cow-Cow Boogie" of the elite groups to "One Meatball" of the sweater people.

GREENWOOD, S. C., Jan. 22—(UP)—An 18-year-old Lander college freshman, Eleanor Hudgens Simmons, was killed late yesterday in a bus wreck as she went home to Cross Hill after registering for her second semester.

The Carolina Scenic Trailways bus and a Shell Oil Tank truck side-swiped on Cane Creek bridge on the Greenwood-Laurens highway. Five other persons were hospitalized, none hurt seriously.

Worker Collects $750 for Polio

HIGH POINT, Jan. 22—(UP)—John Finger, a slightly-built textile worker, hauled his little red wagon 18 miles from High Point to Greensboro today and started back again, his wagon heavier by some $750 for the March of Dimes.

Finger walked through the heart of Guilford county, North Carolina's most populous area and the hardest hit last summer in the state's record polio epidemic.

Four Initiated In Lambda Chi

Three students and one faculty member were formally initiated into the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity Friday night. This brings the total chapter strength to 38 actives.

The men initiated were William Adkins, Charlotte; George Daughtry, Wilmington; and Robert Edwards, Raleigh. Dr. Clyde C. Carter of the Commerce school was initiated as an honorary faculty member.

Coeds Continue Entertainment With Parties

The seasonal sorority-fraternity entertainments continued Thursday night when the Chi Omega sorority gave a frontier party for the Alpha Tau Omegas.

Dressed in blue jeans and loud shirts, the partying sorority and fraternity members entered the house, decorated to resemble a frontier saloon. They then proceeded to the gambling "bingo" room, the card room, or the ball hall, to suit their taste.

Other sorority entertainment this week-end are the usual Sunday night open houses. The Pi Beta Phi's will begin serving supper at 5:30, and the Alpha Gamma Delta's will have "Open Coffee" beginning at 6 o'clock. The Alpha Delta Pi's will continue open house from 7 until 8 o'clock, while the Chi Omega's will not hold their open house this week-end.

New pin-ups on campus are ADPi Ann Keen to Kappa Sig Gordon Heath, and Chi O Barbara Dalton to Tinsley Campbell, a DKE. The Pi Phi's lost Kit Finney, who is marrying Howard Baitjer in May, after the fall quarter.

Marriage Is Discussed In Churches This Week

Among the varied subjects being discussed by student church groups at the Chapel Hill churches, the prevalent one now seems to be "Christian Marriage." The Episcopalians and Methodists are having a series of group discussions on the topic, whereas the Presbyterians enjoyed a discussion last Sunday on "Boy-girl relationships," definitely a pre-requisite to marriage.

Other young peoples' discussion programs on the agenda for fellowship meetings tonight are a study of the Ten Commandments; personality integration and adjustment to society; Is the church failing?; and talks by Dr. George Kelsey and Rabbi Joseph Rauch, both at Carolina for religious emphasis week.

LUTHERAN: Continuing a series of sermons on "Christian Grace," the Rev. Mr. E. C. Cooper will discuss "Christian Grace as a Healing Act" this morning. Tonight the L. S. A., which meets at 6:15 upstairs in the Y, will study the Ten Commandments.

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN: The Rev. Mr. Bernard Munger will preach today on "Christ's Claim on Your Mind."

PRESBYTERIAN: "Preacher" Jones will conduct two services this morning at 9:45 and 11:00. Rabbi Joseph Rauch will speak to Westminster Fellowship tonight on "The Sabbath and Labor." After a pot-luck supper married students will discuss the book of "Ruth" (the world's oldest love-story). Newly elected members of the Westminster steering committee are Iris Bost, chairman; Sara Oliver, Grace Sneed, Dick Murphey, Fred Thompson, Kent Erickson, Tom Donnelly, and Henry Bowers.

EPISCOPAL: Holy Communion will be this morning at 8:00, and the college Sunday school class, taught by Dr. Clairborne Jones, at 9:30. "The Highest Calling" will be the topic of the Rev. Mr. David Yates' sermon at the regular morning service. During the service there is a nursery for children of pre-school age. People interested in Confirmation will meet this afternoon at 4:00 and Tuesday night at 8:00 in the Parish house. After a short evening service tonight, the congregation will divide into groups and discuss "Successful Marriage and the Christian Family." Continuing the discussion of that topic the Rev. Mr. Marvin Vick will speak at Canterbury club Tuesday night.

METHODIST: Rabbi Rauch will speak at the regular service this morning. Tonight Wesley Foundation will continue its discussion groups on marriage, personality integration, and the success of the church today.

BAPTIST: "The Difference that Matters" is the topic of Dr. S. T. Habel's sermon today. After the sermon a special Baptismal service will be held, at which two Carolina students, Richard Stamey and Harold T. Conner, will be baptised. Dr. George Kelsey, field secretary of the Council of Churches, will speak to B. S. U. tonight at 6:00. The newly formed "Mr. and Mrs." class will have an informal social tonight at 7:30 in the student lounge. All young married couples are invited.

Delta Phi Alpha Holds Gesangfest

The Beta Rho chapter of Delta Phi Alpha, national honorary German fraternity, held a "Gesangfest" Wednesday afternoon in the Ramshead Rathskeller. Chapter members and their friends sang "lieder," with Dr. Herbert Reichert, faculty adviser to the group, accompanying them with his accordion.

The chapter was reactivated last spring after a wartime dormancy. Their purpose is to emphasize the qualities in German thought and literature.

Cagers to Virginia

Carolina's surprising cagers will play host to the Gobblers of Virginia Tech in Woollen gym Monday night in a Southern conference tussle.

Professors Fired For Red Activity To Ask AAUP Aid

SEATTLE, Jan. 24—(UP)—Three University of Washington professors fired after being accused of Communist activity said today they would appeal to the American Association of University Professors to intervene in their behalf.

The university's seven-man board of regents fired Ralph H. Gundlach, 46, associate professor of psychology; Herbert J. Phillips, 57, assistant professor of philosophy, and Joseph Butterworth, 51, an associate in the English department.

Board Chairman Joseph Drumheller, Spokane, said the regents' action "serves notice everywhere throughout the country that the University of Washington is notifying Communists to stay away from this campus."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—(UP)—Ralph Himstead, executive secretary of the American association of University Professors refused to comment today on the dismissal of three University of Washington professors accused of Communist activity.

He said the case would be investigated by the association's standing committee on academic freedom of tenure and that there would be "no pronouncement" until the inquiry is completed.

Three other professors were retained under two-year probation on the condition that they sign affidavits that they are not now members of the Communist party.

They are E. Harold Eby, 48, professor of English; Garland Ethel, 50, assistant professor of English, and Melville Jacobs, 46, associate professor of anthropology.

In his report to the board of regents, university president Dr. Raymond B. Allen said he recommended the dismissals because he believes that "a Communist is incompetent to teach the truth."

"Clandestine activity such as Joseph Butterworth's and Herbert Phillips' in the Communist party means that they have forsaken their duty to protect the university's integrity and pursue an objective quest of truth in favor of a propagandistic mission entirely unrelated to real educational and scholarly effort," he said.

"An important function of the university is to teach citizenship. For this teaching to be in the hands of men who secretly belong to an organization advocating the complete overthrow of the American system should not be tolerated."

Eby, Ethel and Jacobs admitted long-time membership in the Communist party but said they had resigned in 1941, 1945 and 1946 respectively.

All three said they would sign the non-Communist affidavits. Eby said he did not understand the meaning and conditions of the two-year probation and would ask Allen for a fuller explanation.

All six had been faculty members for 20 years or more.

Former Chief Dies

Funeral services for Charles Hubert Wright, former Chapel Hill police chief whose decomposed body was found near New Hope creek Sunday, were held at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in Brown's Chapel Methodist church, five miles northwest of Pittsboro on the Graham road.

Officials yesterday listed carbon monoxide, piped into the cab of Wright's truck from the exhaust, as the cause of his death. Wright was a member of the Chapel Hill police force for 16 years and served as chief of police here in 1933-34.

The Rev. W. T. Phipps and the Rev. H. G. Hammett officiated at yesterday's service. Interment was in the church cemetery.

Convocation Touches Off Religion Week

Use of Religion Subject of Talk

Speaking on "What is the Use of Religion, Anyway?," Dr. John A. Redhead, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Greensboro, opened Religious Emphasis week yesterday with a convocation address in Memorial hall.

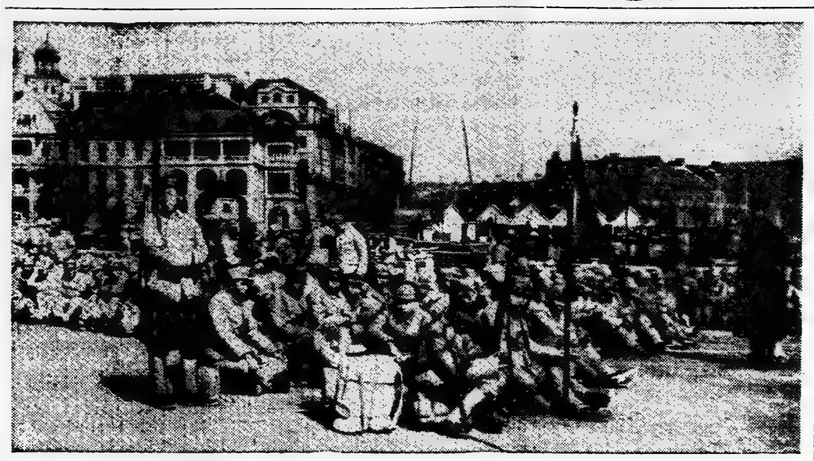
Dr. Redhead, main speaker of the University's religious program, said the three-fold purpose of religion is it gives "an interpretation of facts, which puts meaning into life; a platform of conduct, which puts morals into life; and an interior resource of spiritual power that puts morale into life."

Continuing his religious addresses, Dr. Redhead will speak each evening at 8 o'clock at Hill hall. Topics will be "Variety in Religious Experience," "This Thing Called Freedom," "The Will of God in Your Life," and "The Kingdom of God is at Hand."

Other features of the religious week are afternoon seminars from 4 to 5 o'clock led by nine visiting clergymen and religious leaders. These men will visit classrooms during the mornings by appointment of the individual professors. They will also visit the dormitories, sorority and fraternity houses.

The convocation leader said he believes that religion, by interpreting facts, gives stability. Men now-a-days have a meaning of life which is not flattering. However, a high opinion of life can come only from religion.

With this religious interpretation of life, Dr. Redhead said men can believe "history is a gradual unfolding of the divine purpose."



The religious leader, who is on the Southern hook-up of the Presbyterian Radio hour, said men must have something to stand for. Religion furnishes a "blueprint of behavior" upon which to stand.

Men need something to stand by them, "Some interior force of power, he said. And this is one kind of power, which it is not the business of science to provide. He added that it comes from religious faith.

TMA Opens Drive For New Members

Representatives of the Town Men's association will be at the Y building today and Wednesday, from 8:30 to 1 o'clock to sign new members. "Town men are urged to sign now and become eligible for the TMA party to be held at the Terrace View inn, Feb. 4," said President Nelson Taylor.

AS CHINESE COMMUNIST forces continue to close in on Nanking from the north, Nationalist forces of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek hurriedly prepare Shanghai defense against the Red juggernaught. Here, some 2,000 Nationalist troops rest in front of the Russian Consulate (left background) in Shanghai, set to defend the city. Meanwhile, reports indicate that the Generalissimo is preparing to quit Nanking and smooth the way for peace talks between the Government forces and the Communists.

Joe L. Blythe To Be Buried In Charlotte

By William Sexton

CHARLOTTE, Jan. 24—(UP)—Joe L. Blythe, who shaped a fortune with his hands only to seek at middle age a new career in public life, returned home today from the rigors of political leadership.

Blythe, treasurer of the Democratic National committee, died in his hotel suite in Washingon yesterday morning. His body arrived in Charlotte by train at 9:37 a.m. today.

It was accompanied by Mrs. Blythe and by two daughters and a son-in-law.

The trip was on schedule. The 58-year-old Blythe had intended to return to North Carolina today to attend the night session of the State Senate. He was Mecklenburg county's senator for ten years.

But that he would return in death was totally unexpected. His usual hearty smile and eager voice were silenced apparently by the strain of inaugural week in Washington.

Long troubled by high blood pressure, Blythe was stricken suddenly while talking to friends in his hotel suite. He died almost immediately before doctors could aid him.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. tomorrow at the First Associated Reformed Presbyterian church here.

The State Senate and House of Representatives were both expected to attend the funeral in a body. Gov. Kerr Scott and a host of friends also said they would be on hand.

Political leaders in Washington and around the Tar Heel state mourned the loss of the jovial, smiling businessman who decided in 1939 he'd like to try his hand at politics.

His business success had been almost fabulous. It started with a modest road contracting venture after he left the armies of World War I. It carried him to fame as one of the state's top industrialists.

Conversation Interview Is Blasted By Saunders

By Zane Robbins

J. Maryon (Spike) Saunders, University alumni secretary yesterday labelled previous reports that he had "blasted" bowl games as nothing more than "sensational reporting of general conversation."

Saunders, in referring to stories carried in Sunday papers said that he had not been "interviewed" in the general sense of the word.

The "general conversation" took place following a dinner meeting of the Dunn Rotary club at which Saunders was guest speaker. None of the reported statements were made during the meeting.

"The statements as quoted were lifted out of general conversation engaged in by a half-dozen persons after the meeting," declared Saunders. "As a matter of fact several of the views as quoted and the general effect they were given by the reporter were out of context to say the least," the Alumni secretary continued. "I do feel personally that the University ought not to participate in any more post-season football games. I was asked the

Seats Available For Playmakers

"There are plenty of good seats available for Pinafore," John W. Parker, business manager of the Playmakers announced today. "We added a third night to take care of increased demand for tickets on the campus this year.

"So far," he continued, "we have had to add an extra night to every one of our major productions, and this is no exception. We expect capacity houses, so everyone planning to come to the opera this weekend should get tickets soon at Swain hall or at Ledbetter-Pickard's."

Final rehearsals for Gilbert and Sullivan's musical satire on the British "navy" are under way, with the Playmakers and the Music department cooperating.

This Might Have Been You

He had been playing baseball that hot July afternoon. He played second base, and he was good at it. He had a knack for getting hits when they counted, and he was fast on the base paths. His American Legion Junior team was gunning for the state championship.

After practice was over he took a cold shower before going home. That night he felt unusually tired and had a headache. Next day he seemed to be developing a cold and there was an aching pain in his left leg. Finally his mother called a doctor. He had infantile paralysis.

That was seven years ago. Today his limp is hardly noticeable. He was lucky. He dances and swims and does almost anything else that his friends do. But he never played any more baseball. He spent a year and a half in bed and longer in a wheel chair and walking with crutches and a cane. His high school class graduated without him. When all his buddies were in uniform he had to stay at home in civies, and he hated it. His family and the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis spent $14,000 sending him to the best hospitals to be treated by the best specialists, so that he could walk again.

You knew that boy. Last summer you knew many others like him, and most of them were not so fortunate. He might have been you, or your brother or your friend. You may know him again in a few years when your son is old enough to play baseball—and if you know him then you will also know the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, for wherever polio strikes, the foundation comes in to aid with funds and medical care.

Because we at the University are in the age group susceptible to polio and because we are in the age group which has, or soon will have, children susceptible to polio, campus campaign directors are asking that each of us contribute $1 to the polio drive now in progress. One dollar is not much to give; it is even less to pay as insurance against what may lie in the future.

CPU Roundtable Group Is in Favor Of Compulsory Health Insurance

Compulsory federal health insurance was approved Sunday night by a vote of 15 to 7 following a roundtable discussion conducted by the Carolina Political union in the Grail room of Graham Memorial. Of the 31 people present, nine abstained from voting.

The basis for the discussion was presented by Robert E. Giles from the executive report." The Nation's Health, a Ten-Year Program," prepared by Oscar E. Ewing, federal security administrator, in cooperation with the National Health assembly.

E. B. Crawford, executive vice-president of the Hospital Savings association, inc., presented details of the voluntary health insurance offered under the Blue Cross plan. Crawford opposed the compulsory program and pointed out traditional American opposition to compulsion.

Mogens Blegvad, graduate student in philosophy, gave some of the details of the compulsory health insurance program in operation in Denmark. Blegvad, a CPU member, is a foreign student from Denmark.

A number of those present at the discussion were students in the School of Public Health.

55 Solicitors Are Released For Campaign

Groups to Receive Letters From DTH

Chairmen Ed Joyner, Jr., and Dougald MacMillan yesterday released the names of 55 campus representatives of the Daily Tar Heel-sponsored $7,500 March of Dimes campaign.

A letter from the chairmen to each of the representatives stationed in 23 fraternities, 20 men's dormitories, five sororities and seven women's dormitories, charging them with their responsibility toward polio victims read in part:

"The committee has set a quota of $1 per student as its goal for the drive. We do not feel that this quota places an undue burden on any member of the student body. There is no phase of the situation which can be left to opinion as to its seriousness, no function of the foundation open to conjecture as to its worth.

House Approves Council Rulings

Chancellor R. B. House yesterday approved a recommendation of the Safety council that would almost eliminate campus parking areas for students living on campus and students who live within the walking "blue sticker" zone.

The recommendations will not become effective until approved by the board of trustees. Steve Millikin, chairman of the Safety council, said.

The council's report revealed that the recommendations also would limit some of the restricted areas to members of the faculty and staff and to physically-handicapped students.

The committee recommended that restrictions on all parking lots be effective between 7 o'clock in the morning and 2 o'clock in the afternoon, Monday through Friday.

If the board of trustees approves the recommendations, parking areas for red sticker-holders will be boosted to 671 spaces. The new restricted areas would provide 303 additional parking spaces. Millikin reported that approximately 1,550 red stickers have been issued to students, faculty and staff.

At last Wednesday's meeting the council recommended that in addition to those lots already restricted to red sticker parking, the following additional lots be restricted: (1) The road leading from Cameron avenue to Emerson stadium, west side; (2) The road leading from Cameron avenue to Alumni building; (3) The small parking areas adjacent to and south of Lenoir hall and Venable hall; (4) The parking area around Swain hall, Smith dormitory and Hill hall; (5) All developed parking lots behind the Library.

The committee recommended that the following restricted parking areas be reserved for faculty and staff parking and for physically-handicapped students: (1) The parking area adjacent to Steele dormitory, Carr dormitory, Bynum and Caldwell halls; (2) The parking area on the road leading from Cameron avenue to Alumni building; (3) The parking area between Phillips hall and the Buildings department.

The report from the Safety council listed 13 parking areas that are not restricted. They are (1) Raleigh road from Wilson hall to Woollen gymnasium, both sides; (2) East side of Raleigh

Phi to Debate Parking Issue This Evening

Campus Leaders Will Be Present

Campus parking regulations was announced yesterday as the topic for discussion by the Philanthropic assembly meeting in Phi hall, New East at 7:30 tonight.

Peter Gerns, chairman of the Ways and Means committee reported that a number of campus leaders acquainted with parking problems have been invited to participate in tonight's meeting.

Chairman Steve Millikin and student representative Joe Bock of the Safety committee, Dean D. D. Carroll, Dean Fred Weaver, City Manager Gilbert Ray, Mr. Burch of the building and grounds committee, Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, David Monroe, of the Institute of Government, Dr. C. P. Lyons of the English department, Phillips Russell, and Dr. B. J. Linker of the math department have been contacted for appearance on the program.

The recent action of the Safety committee to further restrict parking privileges of students living in Carr and Steele will receive special consideration and those dormitories have been requested to send representatives.

The bill of the evening reads: "Resolved; that the Phi assembly go on record as favoring the action of the Safety committee to further restrict parking regulations on campus.

Alpha Phi Omega Pledges 25 Men

Local chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, national Boy Scout service fraternity, recently pledged 25 new men and will hold an informal meeting at 7 o'clock tonight in Roland Parker lounge No. 3.

Projects to be undertaken by the group include swimming and life saving courses, assisting handicapped students, assisting local scouts, scout week display in Chapel Hill and aiding the local Red Cross chapter.

New pledges of the chapter are: Charles Bartlett, Joe Beasley, Nathan Booe, Ray Bond, Thomas Bradshaw, Robert Collins, Bill Furches, Bill Hogshead, John Hough, Jake Froelich, Louis Lineberry, Thornton Long, Gray Mattox, Bill Mattox, Bill Prince, John Charles Rush, Scala, Jerry Shuping, Vernon Stroupe, Bill Sheen and Ben Jones.

Mumford Addresses N.C. Architects Regarding South's Building Problem

The South's building problem is not how to decentralize but how to remain decentralized, Lewis Mumford, visiting professor in the school of design at State college, said yesterday in an address at the opening session of the North Carolina chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

Explaining that extreme centralization usually leads to congestion and slums, Mumford expressed the view that today's architects must be interested in city planning because their concern is not with isolated building but with neighborhood groups.

Buildings today must take into consideration the design of the whole community group, Mumford said. They should blend with the landscape and reflect the life that takes place in and around them, he added.

Declaring that the South has a great future, Mumford pointed out that the various industries developing here would supply wealth and incentive for the creation of an architecture especially adapted to the new Southern way of life.

He urged architects to collaborate with their fellows so as to design buildings that would help the community as a whole.

Aurora Borealis

The aurora borealis came to Chapel Hill last night and it had students and townspeople wondering. Wondering if the city of Durham was on fire or if the moon had changed in its phases.

But the reports were cleared up by Dr. Roy K. Marshall, director of the Fel's planetarium in Philadelphia who is here working with the Morehead planetarium.

Marshall said the high color of pink in the display was the brightest he had ever seen. "The patch of pink in the northwest was especially strong, although the display was not too active as a whole," he said.

Explaining the phenomena, Dr. Marshall commented, "We should be seeing more and better displays now for the next year and a half since we passed a maximum of sunspots about a year ago. This occurs about every 11 years. The last display, in 1939, was magnificent."

He pointed out that actually, the so called "Northern Lights" result from electrons causing the oxygen and nitrogen high in the atmosphere glow. These electrons come from sunspots, and through them, the appearances may be predicted. "Displays are also predicted by short wave radio fadeouts, usually 24 hours beforehand," he said.

Time to Wake Up

Chancellor House yesterday approved the safety committee's recommendation adding to the number of areas where there is parking by appointment only. Final approval of the measure will be only a formality when the trustees meet next month. For red sticker-ites this increased restriction of parking areas will prove a temporary boon. It will mean 303 more reserved parking spaces, making a total of 671 spaces into which the 1,550 reserved ticket holders may try to crowd their automobiles. The ruling will be especially pleasing to faculty members and the administrative staff, since it provides three centrally located parking areas for their exclusive use.

But the boon will be only temporary. No new parking space has been added, and already a new commerce building is projected on the site of one of the existing parking lots. Students without parking permits are having their cars pushed farther from the campus and those living in central dormitories will have to leave their automobiles a good distance from their rooms.

Admittedly the exigencies of the situation forced the safety committee to make its recommendation. It is only right that faculty, staff, and students living fartherest from the campus should have the privilege of using their cars and that those living close in should lose that privilege if anyone must.

Even members of the safety committee admit, however, that the recommendation was made to forestall possible more drastic action by the trustees. It provides no solution to the problem of too little space for too many cars, and it will not long forestall complete curtailment of students' car privileges unless some plan is devised to increase parking facilities at the University.

Members of the safety committee will be present tonight at a discussion of the problem before the Phi assembly, fourth floor New East. Students who want to see cars remain as a permanent fixture in student life would do well to attend, acquaint themselves with the difficulties of the problem and offer suggestions which may alleviate it.

How Come High Prices?

The restaurant in the Monogram club is now open to all comers, whether students or not. Prices are advanced and the obvious idea is to attract trade from Durham and other surrounding areas where the citizens have cash.

Of course the Monogram club may do as it wishes, but a suggestion seems in order. The many students who live around the club will have to walk several blocks to Lenoir, where they have to wait in line before eating. Now that winter is here the walk is often uncomfortable, especially at night.

Couldn't the club make as much, or more, by charging the same as Lenoir and depending upon volume of business to equal the higher prices now asked? Hundreds of students would like to eat there as it is more convenient. Consideration of this would certainly be appreciated.

Passing Sentence

A Permanent Solution Near?

By Jonathan Marshall

From the time that the atomic bomb was first dropped until very recently, this columnist was extremely pessimistic about the future of mankind and the world.

It seemed that man had created weapons capable of completely destroying all life, if not the planet itself, and yet he continued to follow blindly the same selfish policies that had formerly led to depressions, hatred, and war.

Our leaders did not seem to have learned anything, and the public did not act as if it were aware of the world's danger, or as if it cared. This did not apply solely to the United States, but to all nations.

Last spring, when a very mediocre-appearing Harry Truman was nominated, and a politically-minded Thomas Dewey and a Communist-dominated Henry Wallace were put up in opposition, the future looked hopeless.

Something has happened since then. What it is would be difficult to say; however, we seem to be on the brink of working out a permanent solution to the world's problems.

America has finally come out of its state of lethargy, and is asserting itself as a positive force for the first time. Our government has at last come to the realization, apparently, that the best method of stopping the spread of Communism is to show the people of the world that there is something far better.

As long as men are hungry, do not have decent housing, lack educational and medical facilities, and have little security, the field is ripe for the spread of Communism. President Truman and his advisors have recently indicated great concern over this problem.

If people are suffering, Russia can say that Communism can supply more, and men will listen and wonder. When mankind's basic wants are being satisfied, people will not listen to the Russian propaganda.

In realizing this fact, President Truman has shown that he is a far bigger man than many of us believed; in fact, he stands on the threshold of becoming one of our greatest presidents.

In his inaugural address, President Truman said, "Our aim should be to help the free peoples of world . . . to produce more food, more clothing, more materials for housing, and more mechanical power to lighten their burdens." He further said, "The old imperialism . . . has no place in our plans."

Both the President and Congress have shown in recent weeks that they intend to follow a vigorous policy toward the attainment of a real economic democracy.

Inaugural Over

By George Dixon

WASHINGTON,—My social secretary, Mrs. Tabitha Talcott Pratt, came waddling in today and planted herself daintily in a couple of chairs. She wheezed that everything seemed to be returning to normal.

"Such a relief" she sighed, causing the door to slam from the gust. "I am glad it's all over!"

"What?" I asked, "your gastritis?"

"I am referring," snapped the touchy Tabby, "to the inaugural festivities. It was such a responsibility to we Washington social arbiters."

"It must have been," agreed Miss Reid, sweetly. "It must have been a terrible responsibility protecting your big nose when you kept shoving it into places you weren't wanted."

"I had invitations for everything," retorted Tabby. "I was one of the patronesses of the inaugural ball. That reminds me, I didn't see you there!"

"No," murmured Miss Reid. "The President kept pestering me to go, but I had to turn him down. The only dance I can do is the 'Republican glide' and I thought he'd have difficulty keeping in step with me."

"Say!" cut in my senior naval aide, Machinists Mate Michelangelo Rembrandt Kelly, "talking about that ball. There must have been some very peculiar people there!"

"The very best people were there," said Tabby. "What do you mean they were "peculiar?"

"Well," replied Machinists' Mate Kelly, "I read in the papers that tails were preferred."

Mrs. Pratt glared. She snapped that she had never heard such ignorance in her life.

"It meant," she explained, "that full evening attire was preferred."

"Oh," said Mr. Kelly, looking relieved, "I thought it would be strange having guests who swung from the clandeliers."

* * *

Mr. Clarence W. (Slats) Rafferty, the retired safecracker, said he had loved looking at the "pitchers" of the women in the papers. He said the gowns were hotter than anything he used to see when the old Columbia wheel was flourishing.

"They wouldn't allow nothin' like that in burleycue," he added. "The coppers would always bust in and take the ladies away in the pie-wagon."

Mrs. Pratt retorted that the gowns were lovely and in keeping with the importance of the occasion.

"Most of the ladies had them specially made for the ball," she said. "They wanted to show their Democratic affiliations."

* * *

Machinists' Mate Kelly asked if there were any good-looking young dolls at the thing. He said he wouldn't have minded treading the light fantastic with a few of them.

"The likes of you wouldn't have a chance," retorted Tabby. "Martin Braverman, who may be seen frequently as the escort of Margaret Truman, organized a stag line of the 'hundred most eligible' bachelors, so the young ladies would be assured of dancing partners."

"He didn't call on me," complained Slats Rafferty, "and I'm an eligible bachelor. I been one ever since I croaked my old lady."

* * *

I asked Mrs. Pratt if there had been any manifestations of the rumored romance between Vice-President Barkley and the ball chairman, Mrs. Perle Mesta. Tabby thought this over for a moment, then said:

"I don't know whether you would consider it significant. But, when Mr. Barkley arrived, Mrs. Mesta stood up."

Machinists' Mate Kelly asked whether she had given him her seat.

"What do you think this was—a trolley car?" demanded Miss Reid.

We sat in silence for a minute, dreaming thoughts of romance. Then Tabby shattered our idyllic reverie by asking:

"But do you think Perle has sufficient humility? She might resent being referred to as second lady!"

Do you suppose the radio could be guilty of such a thing as a typographical error?

I suppose not—but this is what I thought I heard President Truman say on the air the other day:

"The Taft we face is a difficult one."

Grounds for Appeals Listed

Student Council Procedure

The Student Constitution, ratified in the spring of 1946, stipulates that the Student Council shall "make and publish" its rules of procedure. Since the Constitution was ratified, student councils have come and gone, but the rules of procedure set forth below are the first to be published in accord with the Constitutional directive. They set forth Council rules pertaining to the much-discussed student appellate rights.

* * * *

In hearing a case on appeal, the Student Council has two functions; the first and most important is to see that, to the best of our knowledge, no innocent person is found guilty; the second is to see that all trials, both in the courts of original jurisdiction and in this court, are conducted fairly and in accord with the Constitutional guarantees which each student possesses.

The procedure to be followed in performing these functions shall be as follows:

I. A student who has been convicted by any of the courts from which there is an appeal to the Student Council and who maintains his innocence may appeal on any one or more of the following grounds:

1. The participation in the original case of any council member who was biased against the defendant, where this is shown to have affected his case adversely.

2. The denial in the original court of any basic, Constitutional right of the defendant.

3. Where accused and accuser have not faced each other in the original court, an indication that the right to face accuser will have bearing on the outcome of the case.

4. The insufficiency of the evidence to convict.

* * * *

II. Where the grounds stated are found by the Student Council to be valid, the following action shall be taken by the Student Council:

1. Where the first ground above stated is appealed on and found valid, the Student Council shall conduct a retrial of the case.

2. Where the second ground above stated is appealed on and found valid, the Student Council shall remand the case to the original court for retrial.

3. Where the third ground above stated is appealed on and found valid, the Student Council shall hear the case insofar as the meeting of the accused and the accuser in front of the Council shall affect it, employing all evidence found in the original court and reaching a verdict.

4. Where the fourth ground above stated is appealed on and found valid, the Student Council shall consider the evidence found in the original court, and determine the verdict to be properly deduced therefrom.

* * * *

III. A student who has been convicted by any of the courts from which there is any appeal to the Student Council and who admits his guilt as charged may appeal on any one or more of the following grounds:

1. The imposition of an unjust or unusual penalty.

2. The denial in the original court of any basic, Constitutional right of the defendant.

IV. Where the grounds stated are found by the Student Council to be valid, the following action shall be taken by the Student Council:

1. Where the first ground above stated is appealed on and found valid, the Student Council shall determine by a study of previous cases and any pertinent acts of the Legislature what the proper penalty for such case may be, and shall then place this penalty on the appellant.

2. Where the second ground above stated is appealed on and found valid, the Student Council shall consider any effects which the said denial may have had on the trial of the appellant, and shall then take whatever action it deems appropriate.

* * * *

V. After an appeal form has been filed with the Student Council, a preliminary hearing shall be held at which the validity of the stated grounds shall be determined. The appellant and one member of the original court may be present, at the desire of the Student Council in order to clarify the grounds. The minutes of the original case shall be available at this time.

* * * *

VI. If the appeal be granted, the council shall proceed to such consideration of the case as shall be required by the grounds, as stated in (II) and (IV) above.

* * * *

VII. In a given case involving two or more persons or organizations in which one or more of the parties appeals to the Student Council the Student Council has the right to investigate the entire case and to take such action as it deems necessary to achieve a fair decision, provided that all parties whose sentences may be concerned shall be granted the same rights during the hearing and investigation.

* * * *

VIII. Any person suspended by any of the student courts who appeals and has his or her sentence affirmed by the Student Council shall apply to the court in which the original action was taken for readmission. Any person who so appeals and who has his or her sentence charged by the Student Council, shall apply to the Student Council for readmission, or removal of probation or any other incumbrance placed upon the said person.

'Mystery' Voice

Not a Sound To Be Heard

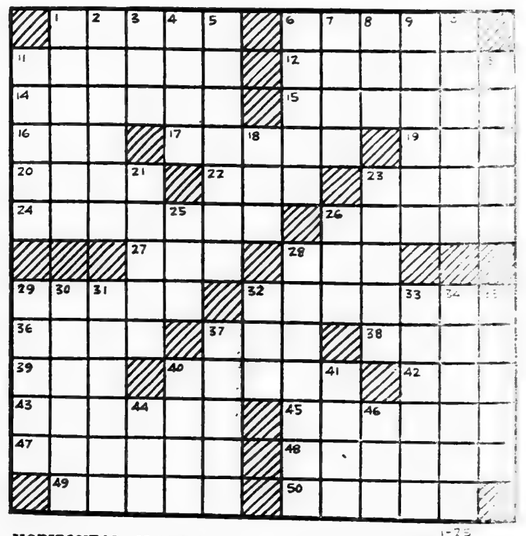
WASHINGTON — (UP) — Now it can be told—the "Mystery Voice" inaugural parade watchers did not hear last Thursday belonged to Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas.

What the watchers did not hear the lovely Democratic congresswoman from California say was:

"I predict the people of the District of Columbia will have the vote again."

And what those who did not correctly identify the voice as Mrs. Dogulas' (because they did not hear it) did not receive in prizes included:

Five "merchant gifts," including some radios, and 95 free theater tickets.



The "Mystery Voice" was supposed to have emanated from a statue of Miss Columbia aboard the voteless District's parade float.

The people who made the float and planned the prize contest persuaded Rep. Douglas to lend her stage-trained voice for the purpose.

She obligingly made a record for them. Sound engineers ruled it out, however, because it wasn't usable with the equipment they had for the float.

So Mrs. Douglas made a tape recording. That didn't work either. The engineers tried everything they could think of to make it work, since the contest had been well advertised.

They were still trying when the parade got under way with the District's float still as mute as a clam.

Golden Opportunity Presented to U.S. By Yugoslav Rift With Russia

By Charlie Kauffman

A behind-the-scenes battle is fast shaping up between the Soviet-bloc and the Western Powers in what may well prove to be the acid test of the effectiveness of the "Iron Curtain." Last fall, following the split between the Cominform and Marshal Tito's "Communist" Government in Yugoslavia, Soviet Russia and her numerous satellites proceeded to all-but-sever trade with Yugoslavia in a desperate effort to foment a revolution which would unseat the firmly-entrenched Tito regime.

Four months later, faced with isolation by her neighbors and a Soviet-sponsored propaganda campaign raging within the country, Yugoslavia is faced with this problem: her trade must be reoriented from the Soviet-bloc to the Western Powers quickly and effectively, or a Moscow-inspired revolution will follow just as surely as night follows day. Although Yugoslav exports to the U.S. have increased markedly during the past two months, especially in such strategic raw materials as copper and lead, the U. S. Government has as yet given no indication that it is aware either of what is at stake in Yugoslavia or that the iron is hot—now.

Although Tito's Government has made an open bid for American assistance, several Yugoslav trading companies have been flirting frantically with American importing firms looking toward trade agreements which will allow Yugoslavia to dispose of her mineral production on the U.S. markets in return for machinery and raw materials formerly imported from the Soviet-bloc countries. Such an arrangement is desperately needed by Tito in his fight against the Cominform.

It is not clear why the U.S. is not hitting hard at this opportunity to split the "Iron Curtain" wide open. Of course, it may be said that Tito is a despot—of the first order and vilest odor, but since when has the U.S. Government been above underwriting dictatorships if it would work to our advantage? Of course, it is also true that Yugoslavia is definitely within the Soviet sphere of influence. So are Greece and Turkey. Unless our government swallows its non-existent scruples and goes to the aid of Tito's dictatorship without further delay, arranging a trade agreement whereby Yugoslavia can obtain those essential materials and the industrial products formerly covered by trade pacts with Russia, the country will be forced to install, with Soviet help, a government in power which can get along with the Cominform.

There will be lost the opportunity to create a disastrous split within the inner core of the Soviet sphere. And while we are being quite frank about the U.S. interests in the Yugoslav crisis, let's don't underestimate what Stalin would be and is willing to give to have France or Italy in the same position that the U.S. has Yugoslavia today. He wouldn't negotiate with Di Gasperi's Government long.

What we may look forward to if our policy toward Yugoslavia is to be directed toward keeping out the heel of the Soviet Army, now so well known in Czechoslovakia, is the negotiation of a series of trade pacts with Tito's Government which will allow a favorable balance of trade with the United States. But if the silence of our government on the Yugoslav crisis continues, the heel will surely fall.

The International Relations club will meet tonight in Roland Parker Lounge 3 of Graham Memorial at 9:00 at which time a forum-discussion will be held on the current problems in Indonesia, and taking into special consideration the U.S. proposal as submitted to the U.N. last Friday and the all-Asian conference which closed in New Delhi yesterday.

Carolina Thumps Virginia Tech, 78-59

With The TAR HEELS

By Dick Jenrette

For the sixth straight time in three years, Coach Everett Case's N. C. State Wolfpack came through with a victory over Carolina's hot and cold basketball forces in the biggest game of a full weekend of sports activities in this state. The fact that the Wolfpack won actually wasn't surprising, but the 67-36 score provided no end of disappointment for the few loyal Tar Heel partisans who managed to squeeze their way into Memorial auditorium, Raleigh.

The question which has been making the rounds of the campus this week is just what happened to the team against State. Those who saw the Tar Heels in action against William and Mary last week find it hard to believe that this same club was limited to 36 points by State.

Carolina's crushing defeat cannot be attributed to one single factor. First Coach Case can call on better material than can Carolina's coach, Tom Scott. Moreover, the State squad possesses a depth in playing talent which Carolina cannot match. Four Tar Heel performers fouled out of the game, and this in itself was enough to wreck the team. Of the reserves, only Charlie Thorne seemed able to match the fast-breaking and more experienced State players.

Only one State player left the game on five personal fouls. This total doubtless would have been higher had not Coach Case been able to call on a capable set of reserves.

Set-Shot Offense Antiquated

The game proved one thing rather conclusively to the 3,600 fans present: that the one-hand push shot and fast-break style offense has antiquated the set-shot offense. The most potent weapon of the current Carolina team is the set shot, and there are some good long shot artists on the team. When boys like Coy Carson, Hugo Kappler, and Dan Nyimicz are given an extra second to get set, they are likely to send the ball swishing through the nets. But against a polished team like State, it's nearly impossible to get in that extra second it takes to shoot a set shot.

Coach Case realized this, and he also was aware that Carolina was predominantly a set shot team. So his defensive strategy for the game was to have his players guard the Tar Heels a little closer than usual, even at the risk of having the Carolina players break around the sides occasionally for layup shots. The plan worked perfectly. The Carolina players persisted in passing the ball about near mid-court, in a vain attempt to shake loose for a set shot. Had they broken for the basket on more occasions, State possibly would have had to draw its defense in closer to the basket.

State Booing Irritated Players

Much of the credit for bottling up the Carolina offense goes to Vic Bubas, State guard. Bubas was assigned the very difficult task of guarding Carson, high scorer for the Tar Heels. He did his work so well that the Carolina forward was able to take only two shots at the basket all evening, and two of these were blocked. Bubas was particularly effective in preventing Carson from shooting his dangerous set shots.

The night was one of confusion for the Tar Heels. Nothing they tried seemed to work out right. State was ready for most of their plays, and the booing of the partisan crowd also was a source of irritation. Although their team held a commanding lead and there was no question of the final outcome, the State fans kept up their booing tactics, and each time a foul was called on a State player they literally "raised the roof" of the auditorium, regardless of how obvious the foul was. Considering how bad State was beating the Tar Heels, it would seem that the fans would have sat back and let their team do the work, without booing. But they never stopped their heckling of the Carolina players. Perhaps they were thinking of the football season.

Scott Questioned Officials Too

Speaking of the booing of the two officials—Bello and Husser, Coach Scott was one of those who frequently was on his feet objecting to some of their decisions. The usually calm Tar Heel mentor was particularly upset over several of the calls. On one occasion, a State player drove in for a layup shot. Husser, the official nearest the play, called a foul on Carolina and ruled the basket no good. Bello, however, reversed the decision, ruled the goal good, and gave State a foul shot too. And where was Bello standing? At mid-court, nowhere near the play.

The two officials also disagreed on one instance as to whether Carolina had fouled State or whether it was merely a jump ball. Also there was considerable disagreement when Bello gave a State player two foul shots when he obviously had made no attempt to shoot at the basket.

But in the final analysis, State just had the better team. Perhaps playing in Woollen gym the locals will do better. It's certainly high time for Carolina to beat State. Six losses in a row to our brother institution are rather humiliating, even if they do have a good team.

Carson, Kappler Lead Cagemen To Loop Victory

By Frank Allston, Jr.

Running up their highest point total of the year, Carolina's five registered a 78-59 Southern conference win over Virginia Tech in Woollen gymnasium before 4,000 fans last night.

Last night's contest was one of the roughest seen in the local gym this year. Officials Gerry Husser and Paul Dunham assesed the two teams for 54 personal fouls during the course of the wild game. Carolina was charged with 26 of these and the Gobblers received 28.

Carolina's Coy Carson, the conference's leading scorer added 21 points to his season total, edging out Tech's Bob Trombold, who had 17 for scoring honors for both teams. Last night's performance by the Asheville forward gave him a total of 247 points for the season. Hugo Kappler brought his total to 134 with a 19-point showing.

Early Tech Lead

Tech took the floor at the start of the game apparently set on revenging a previous 56-48 loss to the Tar Heels in Blacksburg. After a minute of play had elapsed, the Gobblers held a 4-1 lead and it looked as if the Virginians might be able to avenge that first encounter.

After three minutes of scoreless play, Carolina center Nemo Nearman tossed in a free throw at four minutes of the first half to make the score 4-2 in favor of the visitors. Hugo Kappler dropped in a set shot from the side at 4:52 to tie the game.

A layup and a charity toss by Carson increased the Tar Heel lead to 7-4 at the 5:12 mark. Tech forgeed back to tie the contest up at 12-all at the ten minute mark.

Deazy Provides Lead

Lanky Freshman Howard Deazy put the Tar Heels in a lead they relinquished with a free throw at 10:18. At the fifteen minute mark Carolina had increased their lead to 22-13. By halftime the quintet of Kappler, Tsantes, Deazy, Thorne and Nyimicz had upped the lead to 15 points, 32-17.

After the intermission the Tar Heels went back on the court and continued to run up the score. Deazy's "snowbird," Carson's push and two charity shots by Kappler gave the locals a 21-point lead, 38-17 at 1:05.

The Tar Heels enjoyed their biggest margin of the evening at 7:22 of the second half when they upped their lead to 28 points with the score standing at 55-27. At the halfway point Carolina was

Carson Tallies 115 Markers; Replaces Giermak as Leader

Carolina's ace forward Coy Carson, with 224 points, leads the Carolina scoring parade by a hundred points. Although hitting for only five points in the State game, Coy's total is still good enough to retain the conference leadership. He has 115 within the loop.

Following Carson, the scoring punch has been provided by Center Nemo Nearman, Guard Dan Nyimicz, and Carson's running mate, Hugo Kappler.

The team so far has averaged better than 56 points per game.

Boudreau to Sign

CLEVELAND, Jan. 24.—(UP)—Cleveland Indians' Manager Lou Boudreau, who tomorrow will sign a 1949 contract with a salary-bonus arrangement that will reportedly give him more than $80,000 this year, was expected to arrive here tonight.

Boudreau's official signing was originally scheduled for today, but had to be postponed 24 hours because Tribe President Bill Veeck was prevented by weather from flying here from New York and had to come by train instead.

Boudreau, who will come by train from his home at Harvey, Ill., will be one of the highest paid players in the game by his pact.

Relay Team 3rd, Taylor Is Fourth In Inquirer Test

Entered in three events, the best the six-man Carolina delegation to the Philadelphia Inquirer indoor track meet could manage was a third place finish in the mile relay event, a fourth in the 50-yard high hurdles, and a fifth in the high jump.

The Tar Heel quartet of Clarence McLaine, Stan White, Julian MacKenzie, and Laddie Terrell, running in that order, finished behind Manhatten and Maryland, with Penn State coming fourth. The winning time was 3:28.0.

According to Assistant Coach Joe Hilton, who accompanied the tracksters to Philadelphia, the best Tar Heel performance was turned in by Dick Taylor in the 50-yard high hurdles. Taylor drew Harrison Dillard in his trial heat and finished second to quailify as the Baldwin-Wallace Olympic sprint champion tied the meet record of 6.1 in both the semi-finals and finals of the event. Taylor finished fourth behind Dillard. Jim Gehrides of Penn State, and Bill Mitchell of Georgetown.

High Jumper Jack Moody was the final Tar Heel entrant in the Inquirer meet and he topped the bar at 6-2 before failing at the 6-4 mark. John Vislocky set a new meet standard when he cleared 6-8.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE

Members of the 1948 freshman football team, now varsity candidates, will report to the first winter practice sesions next Monday, January 31.

Harter Paces Freshman Five To 58-33 Win

By Lew Chapman

The Carolina freshmen squad improved its creditable record last night at Woollen gym when they subdued a quintet from Wingate junior college by the score of 58-33 in a preliminary to the varsity clash. With this victory the Tar Babies now show seven triumphs as against three setbacks.

Again competing against the easier foes of their schedule the yearlings showed their superiority in the early stages of the game by quickly assuming the lead and never being headed.

John Bowersox and Lenny Guyes teamed to give the Tar Babies an early six point working margin and slowly the gap widened as Frank Eckert and Dick Harter paced the frosh to a 25-15 intermission lead. Eckert, one of the ranking reserves of the squad starting the fray in place of Buddy Johnson and gave an excellent account of himself by tallying 10 markers and feeding numerous scoring passes.

Apparently freshened by the halftime respite, the Tar Babies really moved in the last 20 minutes as Harter put on a one man show of annoying the Wingate five. Harter scored 13 points in this half, mainly on twisting layups and graceful hook shots. Added to his six points of the first half, Harter again led the scorers with 19 points while Eckert and Bowersox both chipped in with 10 credits. Carolina's pair of centers, Guyes and Frank Redding, two centers who both tower at 6'5" enjoyed good nights by each scoring seven points.

The lineups:

Carolina (58)	Pos.	Wingate (33)
Eckert (10	F.	(5) Little
Harter (19)	F.	(10) Vestol
Guyes (7)	C.	(4) Luksusky
Bowersox (10)	G.	(1) McClindon
Cheek	G.	(7) Hudson

Substitutions: Carolina: Barr, Smith, Redding (7), Reuning (4), Slemp (1). Wingate: Taylor (3), Whittock, Gurley (2), Right (1), Boyle, Burris.

AROTC to Hold Military Ball Saturday Night

The Air ROTC unit will hold its first annual formal military ball on Saturday night, Jan. 29, from 8:30 until 12:30, in the main lounge of Graham Memorial, Lt. C. B. Mendenhall, social committee chairman and special services officer, announced yesterday.

In connection with the dance, a special program of entertainment is being planned for the cadets and their dates on Saturday afternoon. Part of the program will be the showing of a special film, the title of which was not announced.

Plans are being made for the selection of an honorary cadet colonel from among the coeds and wives attending the dance.

Members of the unit who are not meeting classes this quarter are eligible to receive invitations and should contact the social chairman of their respective classes. The social chairman of these classes are requested to contact the special service officer to pick up invitations for their groups.

Approximately 100 special guests have been invited to attend the dance.

Music will be furnished by Dwight Andrews and his orchestra and refreshments will be served at intermission.

Empties Bench

In the waning miuntes of the game coach Tom Scott emptied his Carolina bench and every man in uniform saw action. Several of the Tar Heel starters sat out almost the entire second half as the subs continued to pour on the steam.

Carolina's overwhelming victory was attributed mainly to the fact that the Tar Heels hit on 30 of 67 shots from the floor for an average of 44 per cent. The Gobblers scored on 20 of 89 floor tries, an average of 22.5 per cent.

The next home game for the Tar Heels will be on Friday night of this week when they are hosts to Davidson in a Southern conference and Big five game. Furman is here Saturday for another conference tilt.

Aquinas Meeting Will Hear Talk On Philippines

Mrs. Teodora E. Tiglao, graduate of the University of the Philippines, will speak before the Aquinas club on "Catholicism in the Philippine Islands" tomorrow night at 7:30 in the Y building.

A graduate student in the School of Public Health, Mrs. Tiglao studied in the School of Education in the Philippine Islands, taught at several high schools until 1946 and has instructed at Far Eastern university, Manila.

Dan McLaughlin, vice-president, gave the two-fold purpose of the Aquinas club and explained this year's program yesterday.

"We are working to bring social and religious organization to the students. The club has incorporated several of last year's successful ideas into this year's program.

"In keeping with last year's program of having such speakers as Dr. Clarence Finlayson of the philosophy department and Leon Bernard, graduate student in the history department, we are endeavoring to get other interesting speakers from the student body.

"This is an important meeting for all members to attend," McLaughlin continued. "In addition to Mrs. Tiglao's timely topic, the standing committee will discuss the year's forthcoming social events."

CP Asks Tri-Party System For All Council Candidates

The Campus party voted unanimously Monday afternoon to recommend that the tri-partisan selection board system be used this year for choosing candidates to the Student council and the Men's and Women's Honor councils.

Last year the system was installed to select candidates for the Men's council only. The purpose of the board was to try to take the election of council members out of politics. The board used one year ago was formed of the chairmen of each of the three political parties and one other representative from each party as voting members, and the chairmen of the Student and Men's councils as non-voting members.

The system was generally well-received as a firm step toward the goal of completely lifting council members out of the sphere of political influence.

The CP motion was introduced by party secretary Anies Daye. It provided for the voting membership of the board to be made up of three representatives from each party.

Banks Talley, chairman of the Campus party, said yesterday, "The Campus party wants to assure the election of capable men and women with as little party bias as possible. Judicial bodies interpreting the Campus and Honor codes as well as important constitutional questions should not be political footballs.

"The system of tri-partisan board selection of candidates was used for the Men's council last year," he continued, "and we want to see it expanded to include the Student council. The three-fourths majority rule used previously will prevent the selection of anyone not acceptable to all three parties."

Concerning the method of selection of candidates for the Women's Honor council, Talley said, "We voted for tri-partisan selection of Women's council candidates also, but we will gladly support the continuation of the system previously used if all three parties agree." Women's council candidates have been selected in the past by the coeds separately.

Renaissance Manuscripts On Exhibition

Display Includes Famous Documents

In connection with the Sixth Annual Southeastern Renaissance meeting to be held in Chapel Hill Jan. 29 a collection of books and manuscripts of the Renaissance has been placed on exhibit in the library.

This exhibit includes such books as Saint Bonaventura's "Liber de Arbore Vitae" as written on velum in Italy around the year 1300, Scarobosco's "Sphaericum Opusculum" in which the earliest experiment in printing of astronomical diagrams in colors is used, a copy of "Hebalarnum" as printed in Venice by Lenoadrer Asbates and Guliemue de Povia containing illustrations of 150 different plants printed from wood engravings.

Also on display are a copy of a will that was notarized in 1335, a parchment of 15th Century Church music, and many other books and manuscripts of this period.

In addition to this exhibit there is also on display a working model of the set to be used by the Playmakers for their production of the Gilbert and Sullivan opera "H.M.S. Pinafore."

GEORGE DEMAS

Student Gets Legion Award At Unit Meet

Demas Honored At Unit Review

Captain George Demas of the U.S. Air Force reserve and a veteran of 43 combat missions in the European theater, yesterday was awarded the Certificate of Valor of the American Legion after an impressive dress review of the Air ROTC unit at the University.

Demas was presented the award by Col. David L. Hardee, chairman of the ROTC committee of the American Legion, Department of North Carolina.

With Mrs. Demas by his side, Capt. Demas received the review in company with Cols. Hardee and B. R. Switzer, commanding officer of the Air ROTC unit here. Following the review, the presentation was made in the auditorium of Murphy hall by Col. Hardee on behalf of the adjutant general of this state.

The certificate, praising Demas for his "unfaltering courage," which "earned the praise and gratitude of his country," was handed to him by Col. Hardee as the Colonel said, "I take great pleasure in presenting this Certificate of Valor which you earned by hard fighting, valor and strict adherence to duty."

Capt. Demas smiled a modest, "Thank you, sir."

A navigator with the Army Air Force in Africa, Sicily and Italy from 1941 to 1945, the Captain is the holder of the Purple Heart and the Air Medal with a silver

$1,800,000 Attack

Polio Hit N.C. Hardest In '48, Says Randolph

By Sam McKeel

A record number of 2,509 poliomyelitis cases in North Carolina in 1948 cost the state and the National Foundation for the Prevention of Infantile Paralysis $1,847,395.89, Phillip S. Randolph, state representative for the foundation, said yesterday.

Randolph, who served as state epidemic coordinator for the foundation during the crucial months of the summer, was in the thick of the battle against polio during the worst epidemic in the history of North Carolina.

The total amount of expenditures runs to Jan. 1 and does not cover $42,000 recently received from the foundation or the requests for $91,226.03 that are in the hands of the N. C. Epidemic Fund committee.

This additional amount would put the total over two million dollars.

With 447 patients still in hospitals the total will grow still further. Each patient costs approximately $12 per day at a minimum. At this figure the epidemic is still costing $5,364 every day, or $37,548 every week. These figures neglect the unknown costs, at present, of the follow-up care of the remaining hundreds of cases who are not in hospitals but who continue to receive medical care through clinics and otherwise.

In the month of July alone 864 cases were reported. This is only a few less than the total number of cases reported in the year of 1944, North Carolina's previous worst year.

This dread disease knew no favorites. Only six counties went

All students, faculty members, and townspeople are invited to attend this premier showing in Chapel Hill.

To Seek Post As Candidate This Spring

Now Holding Office Of Managing Editor

By Sam Whitehall

Chuck Hauser, present managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel will run for the editorship of the DTH on the Student party ticket this spring, SP officials announced last night.

The SP nomination is the first one to be made for the many offices which must be filled in the general election scheduled for the first Tuesday in April. The Hauser nomination is the first shot in a barrage of candidates which will be thrown up by all three parties soon.

The candidate, a citizen of Newton, now residing in Georgia, has been a member of the Daily Tar Heel staff continuously since the fall of 1946 when he entered the University as a freshman. He was appointed to his present position as managing editor after elections last spring.

Hauser is also treasurer of the Publications board, a group which administers the finances of the Daily Tar Heel, Tarnation, and the Yackety Yack. He was elected as junior member to the board last April.

After serving as a reporter and night editor for his freshman year, Hauser was appointed DTH news editor during the fall quarter of 1947. He served in that capacity until his appointment as managing editor in the spring quarter of 1948.

The candidate spent almost three months last summer as a staff writer in the United Press bureau in Raleigh, and he is the United Press representative for the Chapel Hill area at the present time.

Before he entered the University, Hauser directed his publications talents towards magazine work. During his sophomore year in high school he was art editor of his school magazine in New Orleans, La.

The candidate is a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

Dr. Redhead Lectures On 'Religious Variety'

Dr. John A. Redhead, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Greensboro, continued his leadership of Religious Emphasis week last night with an address in Gerrard hall, called "Variety in Religious Experience." This was the first of four evening addresses in Gerrard hall at 8 o'clock.

In his first address, Dr. Redhead said, "If what you do doesn't conform to what seems to be the right way of finding religion, forget it. There are more ways than one of finding God."

He said "Religion is the response of man's personality to the personality of God." Since people differ in personality, he added, there is variety in religious experience. If man tries to conform to another's religious response, he finds himself insincere.

Dr. Redhead considers that the best way of finding God is through man's volitional nature. Thus, man responds to God not by feeling or thinking his religion, but by putting his religion to work.

One way of finding God, he continued, is through the heart and another is through the mind. "Conversion which is gradual and intellectual can be just as authentic as that which si emotional," he said.

NAACP Chapter Has Anniversary

The Chapel Hill chapter of the National Association for The Advancement of Colored People celebrated the first anniversary of the local chapter at an executive meeting here last Thursday night.

Celebrating also the 40th anniversary of the N.A.A.C.P., the local chapter has designated February as membership month, and is planning a Silver Tea for the group to celebrate the local chapter birthday on Feb. 13.

At an organizational meeting Sunday night in the Community center Leon Peace, student at North Carolina college in Durham was elected temporary president of the Youth Council of the N.A.A.C.P.

Features Favorites

Playmakers Announce Cast For Production of 'Pinafore'

This weekend's Playmaker-Music department production of "H.M.S. Pinafore," will feature many stage favorites in the leading roles.

Andrew Griffith (Sir Joseph Porter) played Ko-Ko in last year's "The Mikado," and was seen recently in the leading part of Mose Rivers in "Egypt Lan'," first full-length original of the season.

William Collins (Captain Corcoran) played Amiens and arranged the music for this summer's Forest theater showing of "As You Like It."

Carl Perry (Ralph Rackstraw) sang leading roles in "The Mikado" and "The Bartered Bride." Sam Greene (Bill Bobstay) has sung and acted major parts in "The Mikado," "The Bartered Bride," and "Egypt Lan'."

Lucille Arnott (Josephine) was in "The Mikado" and has sung with the Glee club and the Choral club. Barbara Young (Cousin Hebe) appeared in "The Mikado" and "The Atom Cantale." Richard Smith (Dick Deadeye) was in "The Mikado" and "The Atom Cantata."

Milton Bliss (Bob Becket) also appeared in "The Mikado" and "The Atom Cantata," and Mary Helen zum Brunnen (Little Buttercup) sang for two years with the San Francisco Opera company and has worked with many church groups.

The First Lord's Sisters, Cousins and Aunts are: Betsy Brunk, Virginia Lee Hamilton, Francine Mellon, Ethel Perry, Patricia B. Governors Named By Faculty Club

The faculty club elected three new governors at the weekly meeting in the Carolina Inn yesterday. Chosen for two-year terms by faculty members were Dr. Clifford Lyons, head of the English department; Dr. W. P. Richardson, director of the field training school of public health; and Dr. Robert H. Wettach, Dean of the Law School.

Principle speaker at the faculty luncheon was David Burgess, head of the CIO textile union at Rock Hill, S. C. Speaking on labor's next step in preparing for a forthcoming recession, Burgess said that an effort should be made now to spread more purchasing power among working peoples instead of allowing it to concentrate in the hands of the wealthier class.

The speaker also attacked the "paternilism of ownership" whereby factories owned the entire community including the churches.

'Liquor Question' to Be Debate Subject Of Dialectic Senate Meeting Tonight

The liquor question will be the topic for discussion by the Dialectic senate tonight at 9 o'clock in the Di hall on the third floor of New West building.

The resolution to be introduced by Banks Talley, chairman of the Di Ways and Means committee, reads:

"Whereas, there has been considerable expression of public sentiment both for and against a statewide referendum on the question of whether or not there shall be legalized production, distribution, and sale of alcoholic beverages in this state, and

"Whereas, there has been introduced in the legislature of the State of North Carolina, now in session, a bill which, if passed, would require that the "Liquor Question" be submitted to the voters of the state for their decision,

"Therefore be it resolved, that the Dialectic Literary society go on record as being in favor of the immediate passage by the Legislature of North Carolina such legislation as may be necessary to require the submitting to the electorate, at the next general elections, a constitutional amendment which would, if passed, prohibit the production, distribution, and sale of all forms of alcoholic beverages in the state of North Carolina."

Institute Begins

Historical Manuscript Meet Gets Underway Here Today

The first session of the "Institute on the Location, Reproduction, and Scholarly Use of Literary and Historical Materials in Manuscript" will begin this afternoon at 3 o'clock in Gerrard hall with a lecture by Charles J. Sisson of the University of London.

Dr. Richmond P. Bond of the English department, who is chairman of the committee in charge, announced that the institute will meet at 3 o'clock in Gerrard hall every day, with the exception of Saturday and Sunday, through Tuesday, and will be open to the public.

The sixth annual Southeastern Renaissance meeting, which is being held in conjunction with the institute, will meet in Gerrard hall at 9:30 Saturday morning with discussions on topics of various fields in world literature, led by scholars and teachers from all over the southeast. Fredson C. Bowers of the University of Virginia will preside.

There will be a second session of the Renaissance meeting at 2:30 Saturday afternoon, with R. Florence Brinkley of Duke university presiding. At 8:30 Saturday night, Dr. C. J. Sisson will deliver an address entitled "Elizabethans in Intimacy," and the Playmakers will perform portions of the rarely revived Elizabethan play, "Gorboduc."

The play, under the direction of W. P. Covington, will be presented with a minimum of scenery and costumes, as if it were being given to an audience in the year 1562.

Each session of the Manuscript institute will consist of a lecture by Dr. Sisson, a question-and-answer period, and a discussion and demonstration of the processes of photographic reproduction by W. P. Kellam of the University library.

Dr. Bond reports that Sisson's lectures will be of great interest to all students in the fields of English and history. He especially recommends "The Road to Discovery" this afternoon, "Paleography and the Text of Shakespeare" on Friday, "New Light on the Stage and Drama" on Monday, and "Founders of America in Chancery" on Tuesday.

Step Toward Destruction

Within the next few weeks a period in the history of man may have its inception, a new age may come into feeble birth that will make the Dark Ages seem literate and cosmopolitan by comparison. The birth will not take place in a laboratory, in the work of an author, or in the boudoir of a king, but in a courtroom.

No mighty roar will usher in this era, if it comes, for it will be announced in calm, considered, judicial tones, which shall have effects that may even dwarf the unleashed destruction of the Bomb. Today a political party is on trial for its life, as its leaders are being tried for conspiring to disseminate ideas that endorse the overthrow of the government. They have committed no overt act of force, according to the indictment, but have endorsed forcible overthrow, which they deny.

It is a delicate question, but our democratic precedent seems to point to toleration of anything short of incitement to revolt while the popular sentiment seems in favor of abolition of the organized party. If these men are found guilty and they have not cached their first rifle, suggested civil disobedience, preached beliefs that have resulted in anarchistic acts, then we are headed for the pit of oblivion.

Not immediately, but gradually, step by step, always downward. With a party outlawed, underground, unseen but still dangerous, perhaps more vicious and undoubtedly stronger, we would enact harsh laws in our attempt to stamp out an idea, keep it from expression. Other organizations which might be fronts, which might have related ideas, would find themselves abolished, prosecuted and forced to retire underground. Bigotry would be legal.

The fact that Americans could be prosecuted for possessing ideas would mean the end of liberty and democracy as we know it, would make every one of our many minorities apprehensive, and could end with a strong group holding the minorities under firm control. Germany was a democracy, similiar to ours, before the advent of Hitler, and there are those of his caliber ready to guide us down the same channels he employed.

The result would be inevitable. Intolerant, power-lusting and strong, we would strike, or others would strike, and the end of civilization could be accomplished very easily. It requires little knowledge to realize that a short period of modern warfare could reduce us to a stage of barbarism that would make the Dark Ages shine with the dignity of mankind.

It seems incredible that a court decision could reverse the trend of history, but the incredible has affected man during many a crisis; for the Red sea opened up, a young Greek conquered the known world, the English often staved off an enemy many times more powerful, and a theory in a physicist's mind came alive to kill tens of thousands.

Forbidding a man to teach and discuss an idea could be the end of what historians would call the Period of Liberalism in America. We damn the ideas of those who are now standing trial, but we also must damn those who would forbid the expression of those ideas.

What Is the Connection?

Do you want to go to hell?

Do you believe there actually is a hell? If so, what sort of place do you think it is?

This is one of the debatable questions tied up with religion, which itself is an interesting and debatable subject. In one form or another religion has been discussed, debated, denied, taught, preached, performed, suppressed, outlawed, interpreted, fought over, and enforced by laws since man first began to think. And it is still as live a question as ever.

Just what do you think about religion? And what connection is there between what you think and what you do? Just where does theoretical religion tie in with practical every day life? What does it have to do with getting married, with labor problems, with science, with picking a vocation? What are liberalism, fundamentalism, and neo-orthodoxy—or do words over three syllables scare you?

These last questions are some of those being discussed in the seminars and addresses during religious emphasis week. They sound interesting. They might even be important, at least as important as a bridge game or the current movie, possibly even as important as a basketball game. Yet the first day of these discussions did not draw as many students as any of the last mentioned attractions.

It is an interesting commentary on the modern mind that the "thirst for knowledge" drives students to spend four years or longer in college, yet outside classes they are content to slake that thirst merely with such information as how to make a little slam with two aces missing, what Hollywood is putting into its latest third-rate film, and which of two groups of five men can most often throw a ball through a hoop.

Not Some Faroff Plague to Read About

Tar Heels Know Polio Hits Close to Home--And Can Hit You

By Laura Hearne

Marjorie Nelson is the attractive wife of Frank Nelson, a graduate student in physical education at Carolina. She is 22, has an enviable smile; a pleasing personality, and, to borrow the psychologist's term, is well-adjusted. Other than the fact that she has to sit in a rolling chair, there is nothing to indicate that she had Orange county's first case of polio.

This description is no exaggeration as any witness would testify. I had a chance to meet Marge, Frank, and Susie, their winsome two year-old daughter, Saturday afternoon at their Victory Village apartment.

They had just returned from the swimming meet and Frank was opening a box from home There was a Schmoo ballon for Susie, which Marge blew up to proper size and Susie had a wonderful time playing with until that inevitable moment when it burst.

Marge was telling me about her experience in the hospital last summer as a polio patient. She was there twice, nine weeks the first time and eight weeks the second.

She became ill on June 20, she said. "My niece was visiting us and we went shopping in Durham on Thursday. When I got home I was so tired, I went to bed early. I didn't feel well the next day either, so Frank called the doctor. He gave me some medicine and told me to stay in bed a couple of days. But on Monday I felt so good I got up, cleaned house, did my laundry and we went to a softball game in the afternoon. After supper I had a splitting headache, so I took two aspirins and went to bed—Frank washed the dishes. I don't know how I slept all night, but I did. My legs ached terribly. Frank put hot towels on them while we waited for the doctor to come the next morning. It seemed forever before he came, but when he did he made a spinal test. The results showed I had poliomyelitis.

"They thought Susie had it too, so they took her to Duke and me to Rex since I couldn't get into a Durham hospital. Susie was out of the hospital in a week, completely recovered." (The hospital bill for Susie was $100.00.) "My mother and father had come down from Pennsylvania by then. Susie spent three months with them in the fall because we thought I would have to go back to the hospital."

The treatments given her in the hospital consisted of a daily visit to the pool (her improvised bathing garb the first day was " a folded towel halter and a G-string"); a "modified Sister Kenny treatment"—leg exercise given by the nurse to keep the back leg muscles from becoming drawn; and moist hot packs "which felt wonderful the first minute or two but soon became so heavy I wanted them off." As for the rest of the time, "I knitted a great deal while I was there, but the first three weeks I cried most of the time.

Although most of the patients were children, her two successive roommates were in their teens. The first was 13 years old and she said she was from the tobacco country, and though the nurse scrubbed her feet every day the tobacco stain was slow to come off the soles. Helen was unused to hospitals and thought nothing of throwing things on the floor for the nurses to pick up. "She gave them a time at first, but before she left, she was much easier to get along with.

"Betsy was my next roommate. She was 17, and was very nice. We got along fine.

"I never did have much appetite while I was there, but Betsy always ate everything on her tray."

Nor could she sleep very well; in fact, she never did have a full night's sleep. "The doctor told me I couldn't take anything to make me sleep, and I think that knowing I couldn't have anything made me even more restless. I sleep four or five hours a night now. I think if I had a pair of splints to keep my feet straight then I could sleep on my back and rest better.

"I have a pair of parallel bars in the bedroom to help me learn to walk. They have been helpful because I can take a few steps now." She was fitted with the braces and got her crutches during her second stay in the hospital. "When we wanted to practice walking at the hospital, we had to go down to the morgue because all the upstairs floors were too slick."

Back at home now she is chief cook again. "but Frank helps me," she said, and they have exchange suppers with their neighbors. Her spaghetti suppers are one of Frank's favorites, but he doesn't like the way she cooks black-eyed peas. When Marge's mother was visiting them she tried to cook peas too, but gave up in despair and offered them to the girl next door. But Marge shares Southerners' partiality for hot biscuits.

Marge's devoted day-time nurse is a four-year-old who lives across the hall. Her name is Susan too. She comes over to play with little Susie and keep Marge company while Frank is at school. Every once in a while she will go up to Marge, hug her affectionately and with serious brown eyes intent upon her, will declare, "I love you, Marge." Little Susie shows no jealousy but and seems to like having an older sister.

Marge likes the Village and Chapel Hill a great deal. She attended the football games last fall on a cot, but since she has a rolling chair now she will be able to sit up to see next year's games. (The rolling chair was a gift of the Orange County chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.) She would like to stay here for years, she said. Being among so many people her own age, she hasn't found the adjustment as difficult as she suspects it would be among strangers, because she thinks they would be hesitant in offering their friendship.

* * * * *

But why should there be a barrier? Of greatest importance with a physical handicap is that they be treated like everyone else. A great many people have physical defects, although oftentimes inconspicuous ones, which do not exclude them from their social group. As one girl who is encumbered with braces and crutches said, "Why should a visible defect make any difference to people? I don't want anybody to say I am brave. What's brave about being normal? It's true I get around much more slowly than other people—while I am going up one flight of stairs, another person can walk a block, and it is true too that I have to consider if the simplest activity is worth the effort involved, but why should that isolate me in people's thinking?"

These are questions that deserve serious consideration; because this disease that cripples so many affects not only them but their families, friends, and, in fact, the whole community.

Giving to the March of Dimes shows evidence of recognizing the problems of those stricken with polio by helping to finance their medical care—the hospitalization and treatments necessary. And too, by recognizing the problems those who give are helping polio sufferers in large measure to becoming "normal" again.

Some Political Murmurings

By Jim Southerland

The political pot is continuing to bubble and boil as the parties begin planning and plotting for the spring elections. With nominations only a few weeks away, the slates are beginning to take shape.

Chuck Hauser, managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel, is being pressured to accept Billy Carmichael, III, DTH sports editor, as his running mate for the DTH editorship in a co-editorship pie being cooked up in the University party. The DTH needs two editors like a bridal suite needs twin beds.

Al Lowenstein, new associate editor of the DTH, is also rumored to be after the DTH editorship. The DTH staff is groaning at the thought.

Tom Kerr, managing editor of Tarnation, will lose the UP nomination for the humor magazine editorship unless he switches over to the UP. In spite of the fact that Kerr has the backing of UP co-editors Wharton and Smith, the UP will probably dig up someone from their own ranks to oppose him.

On the judicial side, Bill Mackie, Student party-endorsed chairman of the Student council, is reportedly quietly fighting non-partisan nominations for the Student council. Candidates for the Men's council and the Women's council were selected by a non-partisan board last year.

Mackie may, however, change his mind on this matter just as he did on appellate power. After getting elected to the Student council by supporting the right of students to appeal decisions of the lower courts to the Student council, he has now thrown his support behind those forces trying to destroy the right of appeal.

The presidential situation is unusually hazy this year. There are no obvious choices for the job and each party is trying to decide which dark horse to put up for the position.

Wayne Brenegan has turned thumbs down on an unofficial SP offer of the presidential nomination. The UP is considering about six different unknowns for the top executive position.

Ed Best, new clerk of the Student legislature, turned up another case of inefficiency in student government last week. While struggling over the chaotic legislature files, he found 15 different student laws that appear to have been signed or vetoed by President Jess Dedmond. Best, a 21-year-old freshman, is amazing student government leaders by turning out the first red-hot clerk's job in years.

F.B.I.: Strange Characters

By George Dixon

Strange characters, including some of the leading malefactors of our Nation, may be found in the headquarters of the Federal Bureau of Investigation here. But the weirdest dis-assortment yet on record was assembled there Inauguration day.

None of them had been picked up on suspicion of crime, although a couple looked as if they had just come through the third degree. Their battered appearance, they explained, was due to standing in line for hours waiting to shake hands with Truman.

They were present as guests of director J. Edgar Hoover, whose list of acquaintances covers a bewildering range. I never thought about it before, but this may be the reason for his amazing success. He knows so many different kinds of people that no one kind mystify him for long.

The reason for the gathering was that Mr. Hoover has offices in the Department of Justice overlooking the parade route and he felt it would be nice to let a few ill-assorted persons utilize his window space. Naturally he chose the more delicate types who could not endure the rigors of standing outdoors.

Among the latter was Mr. Toots Shor, of New York, Many admirers have long predicted that Mr. Shor eventually would be on the carpet in the director's office, but not as a guest. I wish to say that Mr. Shor comported himself fairly well, considering, although the director caught him in possession of a very hot watch.

Associate director, Clyde Tolson was there too, as was assistant director Lou Nichols, but this was only natural. They had to keep an eye on the guests that Mr. Hoover was unable to keep under surveillance.

Mr. Joseph Nunan, the former commissioner of Internal Revenue, was another guest, along with his missus, Kathryn. The latter takes her politics so seriously that she is not speaking to anyone who did not vote for Truman. This leaves approximately 20,000,000 people she is not speaking to, but this was no inconvenience here as few—admittedly—were in Washington.

* * *

But to show you the wondrous versatility of our FBI boss when it comes to assembling guests, Shirley Temple was there too. It was the first time I had ever seen the young actress in the flesh, and, although she was grown up, she could never be confused with Shor.

Miss Temple, now a wife and mother, explained that she felt quite at home in the FBI.

"By brother, Jack Temple," she said, "Is a G-man."

The young lady caused Mr. Shor to beam all over his double-puss by saying she had been in his restaurant. But she added, cryptically: "Now that I am grown up I can go almost anywhere."

* * *

Ex-commissisoner Nunan persisted in asking why Gov. Dewey wasn't in the parade with the New York delegation. Incidentally, I am indebted to him for straightening me out on a matter. In my time I covered hundreds of Tammany rallies at which the band played that "Tammany" number. And the only words I knew were those employed by Singin' Sam the shaving cream man: "No brush, no lather, no rub in . . ."

In a dulcet voice that almost drowned out the parade calliope Mr. Nunan startled the beiabers out of the spectators below by rendering the original version, as follows:

"Ta-manny, Ta-manny.
"Big chief sits in his tepee.
"Cheering braves to victory.
"Ta-manny, Ta-manny
"Scalp 'em swamp 'em
"Get the wampum. . . .Ta-manny!"

More Reasons for Optimism

By Jonathan Marshall

In yesterday's column the opinion was given that President Truman's recent speeches indicate a new and forward-looking policy by the United States Government. Today's column will enlarge on the reasons that we may have for optimism.

Not only in his speeches has the President shown that he intends to pursue a dynamic policy in an effort to achieve a world economic democracy, he has also shown it in his recent appointments.

Newspapermen, politicians, and scholars alike were all impressed by the testimony of Secretary Acheson before the Senate. The new Secretary of State impressed many with a genuine desire for peace, and with the realization that the rights and integrity of all peoples must be recognized.

Washington was somewhat astonished in the appointment of career man Jesse Donaldson as Postmaster General. He is a man who has come up through the ranks—not a political appointment.

Perhaps the finest recent major appointment was that of Charles Brannan to the post of Secretary of Agriculture. Brannan is not an armchair agrarian; rather, he is a man who knows how to farm himself, and can still initiate a progressive agricultural policy based on abundance and security. There have been many other good appointments recently, and the list is far too long to mention all of them.

It will be argued by some people that much of what Harry Truman has said in his four major speeches this year is merely a repitition of what he said before. This is true; however, the President has won an election on the basis of those speeches, and they now take on increased meaning. He also has a Congress that is largely committed to the same policy.

We are living in a time of great change, and in the change lies the hope of the world. We have a President who has grown greatly in the last few months and who has become aware of the necessity for change. He is now backed by a Congress with new blood, one that can make a real contribution to the progress of mankind.

To achieve a world of peace and prosperity, Mr. Truman has outlined four major parts in his program, they are: "To give unfaltering support to the United Nations. . . . continue our programs for world economic recovery, . . . strengthen freedom-loving nations against aggression, and fourth, we must embark on a bold new program available for the improvement and growth of undeveloped areas."

It is only natural for people who do not have the necessities of life, or who have little economic security to be concerned with satisfying their basic wants. This often results in psychological tensions and political upheavals. Men cannot be interested in real democracy as long as they lack this economic security and abundance. And until all peoples have prosperity, peace is difficult to envisage.

The four basic points of President Truman's program are vital to world peace. It is a program not only for Americans, but for the whole world.

Call the program capitalistic or socialistic, whatever you want. The important fact remains, this new policy is the means of preserving democracy, providing economic security and abundance, and most important, the greatest hope for peace and the survival of mankind.

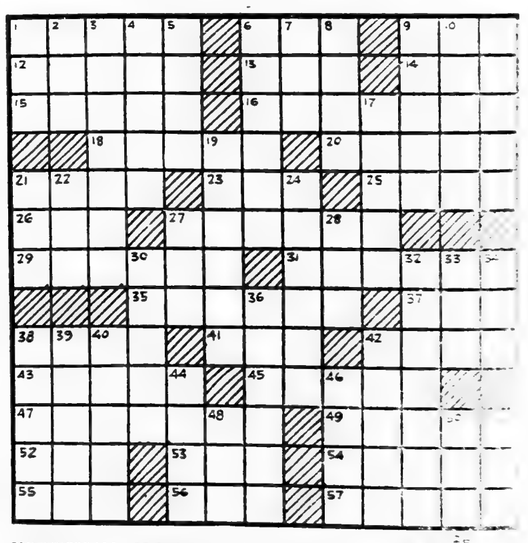
Republicans Like Him Too



By "Wink" Locklair

It took only 32 minutes at the opening session of the North Carolina General Assembly in Raleigh to unanimously elect Representative Kerr Craige Ramsay, a Carolina graduate, Speaker of the House. Arch Allen of Wake County attended the University with him in the early 30's and nominated Mr. Ramsay for his present position. After each representative had called out "Ramsay" in a roll call vote, Sam Eggers from Watauga declared, "We (Republicans) like him too." Then Mr. Ramsay appeared in a dark blue double-breasted suit with a red rosebud in his lapel to take over his new job and thank the House for its show of confidence.

Born in Salisbury in 1911, "Chief" Ramsay came to Chapel Hill in 1927 after graduation from high school where among other things, he played bass drum in the band. His participation in extra-curricular activities reached to almost every group on campus. He was, at one time or another during his four-year stay, President of the Publications Board, City Editor of the Daily Tar Heel and DI president. He was a member of the Grail, The Golden Fleece and the German Club. He pledged Sigma Nu and earned a Phi Beta Kappa key.

After receiving his A.B. degree in 1931, Speaker Ramsay studied law here for a year before going to Yale where he received his LLB in 1934. He then returned to Salisbury and practiced law with Craige and Craige, one of the oldest and most distinguished law firms in North Carolina. Then he became interested in politics.

During the last session of the Legislature in 1947, Mr. Ramsay was chairman of the House Finance Committee. He is now completing his fourth term in the House.

Hail the Unsung Heroes

LITTLE HAS BEEN WRITTEN about the Tar Heel swimmers this year, or in the past, but the Carolina mermen have been turning in all sorts of record-breaking performances. They have splashed their way to three consecutive wins this season which, added to the 36 straight wins compiled during the past two-and-one-half years, gives them an impressive victory skein of 39 straight. The Tar Heels, formerly called the Blue Dolphins, dropped their last meet to Georgia Tech in 1946.

Since then they have romped, or rather paddled, past all opposition with a minimum of effort. Last year the Carolina swimmers had an exceptionally easy time of it in winning their ten dual meets. In none of the encounters did they yield as many as 25 points to their foes. Virginia Military institute came closest to surpassing the quarter-century mark with 24 points.

The elongated win streak hasn't been compiled against second-rate opposition, either. VMI, Florida Navy, LaSalle, Virginia, Georgia Tech and other perennial pool powers have met and bowed to the Tar Heels in the course of their amazing accomplishment.

Galaxy of Stars

THE CURRENT TAR HEEL tank crew boasts enough aquatic stars to rival the astronomical "milky way." Norm Sper of Hollywood, California and Dick Twining of Charlotte are a pair of nationally-recognized swim stars. Jesse Greenbaum and Jim Thomas, both of Baltimore, Buddy Crone of Goldsboro, and Steve Osborne of Southern Pines have turned in stellar performances in supporting roles all season and have done much to keep the Carolina squad near the top of the national swimming heap.

Sper is the holder of the Southern conference diving championship, and was the conference backstroke champ in 1947. He won the National AAU diving championship in 1944 and 1945, and last summer missed the Olympic diving team by the narrowest of margins, .29 points. Norm has deserted the already-strong diving ranks this year to bolster the comparatively-weak backstroke crew.

Twining was named to the All-America swimming team in 1946 and 1948 and seems a sure bet for this year's AA squad. He is a 195-pound Senior and holds sprint records all over the country. Dick is captain of the present Tar Heel aggregation.

South Atlantic Title-Holders

Thomas and Greenbaum, aside from being home-town buddies have another thing in common. That being the fact that they both hold South Atlantic AAU records.

Greenbaum, former Tar Heel captain, holds South Atlantic records in both the 50 and 100-yard freestyle. He has received honorable mention in the All-America balloting in past seasons and is looking better than ever this year. Thomas is the holder of the South Atlantic 220-yard freestyle record, and the 100-yard National junior backstroke title. He has deserted the backstroke ranks, however, and now is used exclusively in the distance events by Coach Ralph Casey.

Other outstanding performers are John Bippart, South Orange, N. J., a junior backstroke artist; Ronald Basescue, Brooklyn, N.Y., sophomore distance man; Sam McCauley, a Chapel Hill lad who won his letter last year as a diver, and Robert Hutton, a senior distance man from Greensboro. Dan Breeden, Bennetsville, S. C., lettered in the breast-stroke division last year along with Jerry Cook of Chappaqua, N.Y. Tommy Drew of Raleigh, James Merika, Shaker Heights, Ohio, and Eston Norwood, Bennetsville, S. C.

In the Beginning

SWIMMING AT THE UNIVERSITY began back in 1939 when the first varsity crew was formed. Since that time the Tar Heel mermen have licked every Southern conference team in sight and branched out into other sections in order to schedule tougher opponents. The Carolina tankmen dropped their last dual meet to a conference foe back in the year of the sports inauguration here. They lost to the hated Blue Devils of Dook that year, but haven't been successfully dunked by a loop competitor since.

The Tar Heel record against non-conference teams is equally impressive, and the Carolinians hold an advantage over every team they have ever met. Few, if any, other schools can make that statement. Of the numerous opponents the locals have met the most outstanding foe of them all is the Naval academy. The Navy series has always been interesting and has provided more than its share of excitement down through the years. Carolina now holds an oh-so-slender edge over the Middies. The series stands at 4-3.

Although defeat has been almost an unknown thing to Carolina swimmers, they have enjoyed only four perfect seasons; those being 1942, 1944, 1945, and 1948. The Tar Heel tankers have turned excellent showings in national events. National college freshman records are held by former Carolinians Denny Hammond, Percy Allison, Jack Eshleman, and Bob Ousley. The latter ran out of ability last year and is now the frosh swimming coach.

Wildcats Wrestle Tar Heel Team Tonight

Davidson Here For Loop Meet In Woollen Gym

By Frank Allston, Jr.

The Carolina wrestling team will entertain the Davidson grapplers in Woollen gymnasium this evening in an attempt to gain their first win of the season.

Oscar Gupton and Carrol Fisher, holdovers from last year's squad were elected co-captains of the Tar Heel team in an election held yesterday afternoon preceeding the final pre-meet practice.

Freshman squads of the two schools will meet at 6:30 with varsity action scheduled immediately after the conclusion of the frosh meet. The meet is open to the public and pass books are not required.

Coach Chuck Quinlan's Tar Heels, losers to State in their only other competition this year, will go into tomorrow's meet as underdogs to the also winless Wildcats. Davidson's only other action was a defeat at the hands of Maryland. Several of Davidson's top men, however, did not wrestle in that meet.

Gupton's Status

Oscar Gupton, '48 holdover who was recently injured in an auto accident, is scheduled to compete in the 165-pound classification tonight. This will mark Gupton's first competition of the year.

Joe Augustine has been selected by Quinlan for the unlimited match. Augustine worked the unlimited in the State meet, losing to Musser.

Big John Stoioff will take the floor in the 175-pound match. Stoioff was victor by decision in the State meet.

Others grappling for Carolina tonight will be Paul Edmondson (121). Charlie Harless (128), Ed Turnley (136), Carrol Fisher (145), and Phil Kemp (155).

Freshman action will find the undefeated Tar Babies in a match against the yearling Davidson Wildcats. This match is rated as a toss-up.

The frosh matmen, coached by former varsity star Irv Zirpel, hold wins over the State freshmen and Greensboro high school. Both Tar Baby victories were by large margins.

Frosh lose Boardman

Barney Boardman, who had been a standout in previous meets in the 165 weight group, recently quit the freshman squad due to a conflict with his studies. The Tar Babies will doubtless feel the loss of Boardman, but Tommy Coxe, former 175-pounder, is down to the 165 class and will take Boardman's place tonight.

Zirpel has also found a man to grapple in the 121 class. In both of their previous meets, the Tar Babies were forced to forfeit that event due to the lack of a participant. Tom Williams, however, will do battle with Davidson's 121-pounder tonight.

Davidson Is Next For Local Cagers In Friday Battle

Carolina's Tar Heels will try to make it victory number 13 Friday night when they meet the Davidson Wildcats at 8 o'clock in Woollen gym.

The cagers seem to have awakened from their "State dream" and last night found their winning ways again as they made it two victories over their Virginia foes by swamping VPI, 78-59. The set shot seemed to be the thing and Carolina's quintet really poured them in.

Carolina has a six-two record in the conference now and a victory over the Wildcats would keep them within striking distance of the conference leaders.

The Carolina rooters seem to have come to life in the past few games and Woollen gym really rocks now with shouting and applause.

With three more games before the all-important scrap with Duke in Woollen gym on Feb. 5, Coach Tom Scott's charges will have time to iron out all the wrinkles and be ready to give the Blue Devils a rough night. With their minds on one Big Four defeat that was a hard pill to swallow, they should be just right to turn the tables on the Devils.

The team has come through fifteen games so far without any serious casualty and will be in tip-top shape for Davidson Friday night. The man to watch and the man Carolina will have to bottle up will be Davidson's all-conference center Buddy Cheek.

Two Big Four Players Dropped; Professional Grid War Rages

(From United Press wire reports)

Bob Duff, Duke basketball forward, has been dropped from school for academic reasons, Ted Mann, director of athletic publicity said today. Duff was one of Duke's best ball-handlers and was regarded as one of the most promising players in the Southern conference.

The Wake Forest basketball squad today mourned the untimely loss of star guard Willard Kaylor, the team's high-scorer. Kaylor scored 163 points in 15 games, but school officials said he was ineligible for further play.

Grid War Continues

The professional football battle between the All-America conference and the National league took on renewed vigor today as Anthony Morabito, president of the San Francisco Eorty-Niners of the AAC, warned the Nationals of a "battle to the end." Morabito warned all that the AAC would be stronger in 1949 as a seven-team league than at any time in its three-year history.

The selection of Ivan Williamson as head football coach at the University of Wisconsin to replace Harry Struldreher has ended a month-long search for a man to bolster the Badgers' sagging grid fortunes.

While contradictory statements flew back and forth regarding a June title fight offer made to Joe Louis, the heavyweight champion battled Elmer (Violent) Ray last night in an exhibition bout in the Orange bowl. Ray, a hard-hitting Negro from Hastings, Fla., had long waited the chance to prove his fitness for a championship bout.

Audrey Patterson Honored

Audrey Patterson, sprinter from Tennessee State college who raced in the Olympics, was singled out yesterday for the greatest number of honors on a 13-member feminine All-America track and field team picked by the National Amateur Athletic union. She was picked in the 100-meter and 200-meter runs and was also named to the 400-meter relay team for a total of three positions.

Manager Lou Boudreau of the champion Cleveland Indians, acknowledged as one of the top shortstops of all time, signed his 1949 contract yesterday and became one of the top-salaried players of all time.

The 31-year-old Boudreau signed a pact calling for more than $80.000 for the coming campaign.

Veeck is expected to have somewhat more difficulty in signing Southpaw Gene Bearden, who won 20 games as a rookie last year and added another triumph in the World series.

Bearden, who was guest of honor at Monday night's annual dinner given by the Cleveland baseball writers', said he would have to receive more money in 1949 than he had been offered. He suggested that a bonus clause based on attendance be inserted in his contract.

Wildcats Shift Game With Methodist Quint

Coach Bill Grice announced yesterday afternoon that the game scheduled last night between Chapel Hill high school and the Methodist Orphanage in Raleigh has been cancelled.

The game scheduled for the Orphanage gym was postponed because of exams. It has been re-scheduled for Saturday night in Raleigh.

The Wildcats play host to Oxford here on Friday night in a Class A encounter.

Complete Groups Are Appointed For Legislature

Complete committee appointments for the winter quarter session of the Student legislature were released yesterday by Speaker Jim Godwin.

Official announcement of the committees was made by Godwin during Thursday night's assembly of the legislature in Di hall.

Appointments were made after party heads submitted names of legislators, indicating the committee on which they wished to serve.

Ways and Means: Herb Mitchell (UP), chairman; Talley (CP), chairman; Talley (CP); Bowen (CP); Prince (SP); Lee (UP); Southerland (SP); James (UP); Alexander (SP); Foley (UP).

Finance: Andy Cornish (UP), chairman; Williams (UP); Yarborough (UP); Smith (CP); Carnes (CP); Lineberry (SP); Sewell (SP); Clewis (UP); Kimerling (SP).

Elections: Ted Leonard (CP) Duke (UP); Plager (UP); Mebane (UP); Lowenstein (SP); Horton (SP); Bowers (SP); Sharkey (UP); Trent (CP).

Rules: Jack Worsham (CP), chairman; O'Neal (CP); Schwartz (UP); Harris (UP); Benbow (UP); Lineberry (SP); Dees (SP); Kirby (UP).

Coed Affairs: Page Dees (SP), chairman; Sewell (SP); McNutt (SP); Duke (UP); Williams (UP); Roberts (UP). There is another post to be filled on this committee but Godwin said it could not be reached until the replacement for legislator Mary Anne Daniels (SP) had been decided upon.

Parliamentary: Jim Southerland (SP), chairman; Patterson (SP); Taylor (SP); Tenney (UP); Friend (UP); Sharkey (UP); Prince (SP).

Archives: Ed Best (SP), chairman; Kimerling (SP); Horton (SP); Clements (UP); Barnes (UP); Roberts (UP); O'Neal (CP).

Absentees at Thursday's session totaled eight legislators. Clerk Ed Best announced the following absent from the meeting: Loudermilk, Benbow, Foley, Sharkey, Clements, Clewis, Daniels, Taylor untouched. According to population Moore county was one of the hardest hit. With a population of only 30,969, it had 67 cases. Guilford county, with a population of 153,916, had 249 cases. A smaller number proportionally than Moore.

The epidemic reached its worst stages in July when the 864 cases were reported. With only 54 cases reported from January through April the epidemic seemed to gather momentum as it raced through the hot summer months, and decline as fall ran into winter. In May 75 cases were reported, 294 in June, 697 in August, 341 in September, 137 in October, 31 in November and 13 in December.

Patients are being discharged from hospitals on an average of about 3 per day, figured from 53 patients being released from the first through the 15th of January. According to Randolph this average will not keep up. "There should be around 250 to 300 cases in hospitals by the first of April," he said. "These will be the long run cases and will be slower in dropping out."

Randolph said that even though the epidemic is declared over, in the end it will cost more money for the follow-up, carry through job, than has been spent on taking care of the acute cases. "The organization and plans for the follow-up have been set up and put into effect by the Crippled Children's Service of the state Health department. We still are helping a number of cases from the 1944 epidemic."

Of the 2509 cases reported, 142 deaths have been listed. This goes a little over the usual 5 per cent in a polio epidemic.

Cost for hospitalization for the calendar year of 1945 amounted to more than $600 per patient. Which figured at the $400,000 that North Carolina had on hand when the epidemic started would have taken care of only about 666 cases.

Swain Addresses YWCA Cabinet; Is Awarded Gift

Continuing a series of talks based on C. S. Lewis' book, "Christian Behavior," Mrs. Cappie Swain, formerly assistant to the director of personnel, spoke to the YMCA cabinet Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Y office.

Mrs. Swain discussed the four cardinal virtues: prudence, temperance, fortitude, and justice.

The Y cabinet presented Mrs. Swain, former advisory board member, with a gift in appreciation for her cooperation with the group in the past.

Miss Rosalie Oakes, secretary of the southern region of the national student YWCA, outlined to the cabinet a set of four commissions recently formed jointly by the YW-YMCA of the Southern region.

"Understanding Christian Faith, Churchmanship, and the World Mission of the Church" is the first of these commissions [illegible] being set up in the Raleigh area.

Richmond, Va., is the center of the "USSR-USA" commission; Kentucky of that on "Political Effectiveness;" and Roanoke, Va. on "Economic Justice."

Miss Oakes and Mrs. Swain were honored by the Cabinet at a tea in Kenan dorm last Sunday afternoon.

Phi Assembly Votes Against Parking Rules

Ray, Russell Talk at Meet

The Philanthropic assembly Tuesday night unanimously defeated a resolution to approve the recent action taken by the Safety committee to further restrict parking on campus in its Tuesday night meeting in Phi hall.

Steve Millikin, chairman of the safety committee, declared that the proposals were made to protect student automobile owners. He stated that a few people may have to walk farther because of the restrictions but they will at least be able to keep their cars in Chapel Hill.

Millikin informed the assembly that any student actually suffering from the new restrictions will receive special consideration. Lack of funds, he explained, has been the cause for certain potential parking areas being left undeveloped.

Phillips Russell, chairman of the Parent-Teachers association safety committee, called for punishment for the "social enemy" who by reckless driving endangers the lives of Chapel Hill children. Russell said it may be necessary to ban the "purely sporting car" from Chapel Hill.

Town Manager Gilbert Ray saw the problem as one of pouring a quart of water into a pint bottle. He asked for cooperation which he said makes up more than 90 per cent of a democratic government.

Joe Bock supported the committee's recommendations. "We have got to decide if automobiles are here to stay," he said.

Jay Herrick, representing Carr, wanted the students in her dormitory to be allowed to keep their cars since automobiles are necessary for their occupations and since "some of the girls are 40 or 50 years old.

A substitute resolution by David Sharpe to prohibit able-bodied students living within one-half mile radius of South building from bringing cars to Chapel Hill was shouted down.

EXTREME COLD and snow brought death to this steer on the desert range of Robert Blair of Essex, Calif. Unaccustomed to the snow which covered their forage, thousands of head of cattle froze or starved to death. The U.S. Air Force is operating a hay airlift in an effort to save more than 1,000,000 sheep and cattle threatened with death on the snowbound western ranges.

Starving Cattle In Five States Get Haylift Aid

CHICAGO, Jan. 26—(UP)—The Air Force spread its livestock-saving haylift to five western range states today while floods menaced central sections of the nation.

Ice storms halted traffic in scattered sections from the Great Lakes to Texas and a whirlwind blizzard in Southern California threatened livestock in the Mojave desert area.

The Air Force, racing against time to save an estimated 2,000,000 cattle and sheep faced with starvation, extended its haylift from Nevada to sections of Utah, Colorado, South Dakota and Nebraska.

Bitter cold still gripped these blizzard-swept range states and ranchers feared their losses might total 50 per cent of their herds despite all aid.

In Washington, President Truman allocated another $200.000 from his disaster fund to the relief of the snow-bound states, bringing the total to $300,000.

The emergency haylift, which started Monday with 17 C-82 flying boxcars dropping feed to stranded Nevada livestock, now mustered 28 planes, including 20 C-82's and eight C-47's.

The Nevada lift was expanded to 18 C-82's and ranchers and towns-people at the hard-hit area at Ely, Nev., pitched in to help load the big ships with hay.

It was 27 degrees below zero at Ely this morning and ranchers said their stranded stock could not withstand the cold much longer in their weakened condition.

The Air Force base at Lowry Field, Denver, dispatched two C-47's to Kearney, Neb., to pick up hay and rancher-guides for hay "bombing" on the ranges.

Solons to Hear Bill on Tuition In Legislature

A resolution in opposition to any raise in tuition at the University will be introduced at the meeting of the Student Legislature tonight at 7:30 in Di hall of New West.

A proposal to increase tuition and fees in an effort to help meet increasing cost of operation has been made by the Advisory Budget commission.

Other bills expected to be introduced at tonight's session include a bill to provide the proper form for constitutional amendment on the Town Men's association; a bill to fix polling places; a bill to amend the by-laws of the legislature on constitutional amendments; amendment for by-laws of legislature on bills left in committee or tabled at the end of a quarter; election law to correct provisions of the redistricting bill.

Village Blaze Damages Heater

A small fire in Victory village yesterday afternoon caused slight damage to the water heater in the home of Thomas W. Aiken, 222 Jackson circle.

Aiken said he smelled smoke and rushed into the kitchen where he discovered flames in the flue of the gas heater.

When the fire department arrived, Aiken said, they went to the wrong side of the circle. "I ran across to direct them but by that time the fire was out," he said.

"I'm glad I wasn't here by myself and that fire wasn't serious," Mrs. Aiken remarked.

Registration Dips to 7,105 This Quarter

Only 820 Coeds Are Enrolled Now

University enrollment this quarter dropped to 7,105 students, a report from Chancellor R. B. House's office disclosed yesterday.

During the fall quarter the enrollment exceeded this quarter's by 498 students. The enrollment for the winter quarter includes 6,285 male students and 820 coeds. Compared with last quarter, this figure shows a loss of 64 coeds.

Fifty-nine per cent of the enrollment is made up of veterans, including 4,307 men and 80 women. Of the total enrollment, 5,498 students are North Carolina residents, and 1,558 students come from 42 other states. Forty-nine students represent 27 foreign countries.

All figures released by House are based on enrollment as of Jan. 20. Of the 7,376 students who registered for this quarter, 271 did not return.

Enrollment by schools is as follows:

General college, 2,544; Arts and Sciences, 1,612; Commerce, 1,244; graduates in Arts and Sciences, 876, which does not include graduate students in Public Health and Social Work; Law, 281; Library Science, 28; Medicine, 109; Pharmacy, 212; Public Health, 101; Social Work, 39; and Education, 59.

There are 1,178 first year students, 1,450 second year students, 1,562 third year students, 1,396 fourth year students, and 87 special students.

Board to Fill Council Post At Meet Today

Grad Candidates To Be Considered

Page Harris, chairman of the Men's Honor council, yesterday called a meeting today of the tri-partisan board to consider candidates to fill the graduate student vacancy on the council.

The meeting will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Harris said the board will interview all graduate students who are interested in being appointed to fill the vacancy. The tri-partisan selection board consists of three members from each of the campus political parties.

Official appointments to fill the seat must come from Jess Dedmond, president of the student body. The appointment must also be approved by the Student legislature.

Two weeks ago, the legislature approved Dedmond's appointment of Roy W. Holsten, junior from Glen Rock, N. J., to fill the other vacancy on the council for this quarter.

Holsten was one of the candidates recommended to Dedmond by the tri-partisan board.

The tri-partisan method of nominating candidates for the Men's council was adopted last year in the interest of assuring a non-partisan judicial branch in student government at the University.

Senior Class Rings Are on Sale Today

Senior clas rings will be on sale today in the YMCA building lobby from 1 to 4o'clock this afternoon. There are the only official class rings being sold.

NCPA Institute Will Open With Pearson Talk Tonight

Three featured speakers and the annual press award banquet will highlight the 24th annual North Carolina Press association midwinter newspaper institute opening here tonight. The three-day institute is sponsored jointly by NCPA, the University, and Duke university.

Drew Pearson, Washington columnist and radio commentator, will speak at the opening session tonight at 8 o'clock in Memorial hall. He will be introduced by President Frank Graham. Students are invited to the address but 500 seats are on reserve for those attending the institute.

DREW PEARSON AND FRANK DANIELS (left and right) are two participants in the 24th annual North Carolina Press association newspaper institute being held here and at Duke today, tomorrow and Saturday. Pearson, syndicated Washington columnist, will speak at 8 o'clock tonight in Memorial hall. Daniels, general manager of the Raleigh News and Observer, is the president of the NCPA.

Jenkin Lloyd Jones, editor of the Tulsa, Okla., Tribune, and H. Galt Braxton, editor of the Kinston Free Press will address tomorrow morning's general session in Gerrard hall. Miss Beatrice Cobb editor of the Morganton News-Herald and secretary of the association will address a luncheon meeting at the Carolina Inn. Both sessions will be presided over by NCPA President Frank Daniels, general manager of the Raleigh News and Observer.

George V. Allen, Assistant Secretary of State, will address tomorrow night's banquet session at Duke University. Allen is a former staff member of the Durham Herald. Governor Kerr Scott will make the annual press awards after Allen's talk.

A Saturday morning breakfast at the Carolina Inn will honor past presidents of the association. Henry Belk, Goldsboro News-Argus, will preside, and Roland F. Beasley, editor of the Monroe Journal, will be the principal speaker. A business meeting will follow.

Two daily groups will hold sessions today. Hal Boyle, former war correspondent and now a roving columnist for the Associated Press will address the state Associated Press club at 1 o'clock in the Carolina Inn. Club President Jonathan Daniels, executive editor of the News and Observer, will preside at the meeting. The state association of afternoon dailies will meet at 4 o'clock.

UVA To Sponsor Dance For Campus Dime Drive

The current Daily Tar Heel-sponsored March of Dimes fund drive is due for another boost Saturday night when the University Veterans association holds its admission-free polio benefit dance, UVA president Gene Newton announced yesterday.

On hand to provide entertainment, instead of the usual juke box, will be a four-piece combo. Three attractive coeds will meet couples at the door and solicit contributions. Even though there is no admission charge, it is expected all students will contribute generously, Newton said.

Dougald MacMillan, co-chairman of the campus drive, said yesterday he hoped those who hadn't given their dollar donation through other means would do so at the dance.

"Although it is not compulsory for students to give, we feel that they should donate at least $1. If some have already given to the drive, perhaps they could contribute once more. But to those who have not yet donated, we say, 'Give your share, you may save a child.'

"This year, more than ever before, whole-hearted cooperation on everyone's part is necessary to safeguard our children, our friends and ourselves against the ravages of polio," MacMillan said.

At present, officials announced after a survey, there are 2,509 hospital cases in the state, costing $7,000 a month to support. Funds are needed immediately to swell the empty national and state treasuries, depleted during the polio epidemic last summer.

New Students Must Sign Honor Pledges

All new students who have not yet signed Honor code pledge cards must do so as soon as possible in the Men's Honor council offices on the second floor of Graham Memorial. Chairman Page Harris said yesterday.

Marie Nussbaum Is New Secretary Of Coed Senate

Marie Nussbaum, junior from Louisville, Ky., was elected secretary of the coed senate Tuesday night, filling the vacancy left by Tandy Lacy.

A transfer from St. Mary's, Marie is a member of the YWCA, the Glee club, the Daily Tar Heel staff, and a pledge of Pi Beta Phi sorority.

It was announced that entries are now being received for the position of editor of the Woman's handbook. The position is open to all coed undergraduates, and applicants should send a list of qualifications including previous journalistic experience to Emily Baker, Alpha Gamma Delta house, before Tuesday.

Five amendments to the coed elections bill were passed. The amendments, introduced by Miss Baker, provided that nominating petitions be in the hands of the chairman of coed elections three days before the first mass election meeting.

Petitions must be accompanied by a typed list of qualifications of candidates which should be ready for distributed as the candidates are introduced.

Eaton Talks to Chi Delta Phi On Toil in Process of Writing

"Writing is a long and laborious process of toil and work, and this ultimately discourages lots of people," said Walter Pritchard Eaton Monday night before an open meeting of Chi Delta Phi, literary sorority, in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

"Many people want to go into writing because The Tree Grew in Brooklyn to the tune of three million copies. Some people have more urge than aptitude, and these borderline cases never get very far. The itch to write is not always an incurable disease. It can sometimes be cured by a series of rejection slips.

"But if you have the real disease nobody can teach you how to write," the speaker continued.

"Where you do learn is practice, practice, and more practice in writing yourself. Persistence sometimes is a higher attribute than early promise."

Eaton named two secrets of good writing: Clear thinking and the right words to follow a line of thought. "The first cannot be overemphasized," he said. "If you do clear thinking, you will do clear writing and clear speaking. The need of a good vocabulary to shade your thoughts is important.

"Here at Carolina you toss your speech around just as you toss the paper cups you use on the steps of South building. If we would only take more pains with our conversation, we would speak so much better."

Eaton advised prospective young writers to write every day, to keep a journal, and to never be dull. He said writing should become a habit and a writer should not wait for inspiration. He suggested recording briefly interesting things seen and heard every day.

Newspaper work, he said, has been the field which has supported more writers than any other field. The only danger, he warned, is to like newspaper work too much.

Following a short discussion period, Mr. Eaton was entertained at an informal reception.

Food Prices Drop To New Low Level

NEW YORK, Jan. 26—(UP)—Wholesale food prices dropped today to the lowest level since OPA price control ended.

Reail food merchants said the price cuts would be felt at the corner grocery within one week and cautiously predicted prices might drop even more.

Dun and Bradstreet, Inc., announced that its index of wholesale food prices fell 11 cents in the last week to $5.91, the lowest level since Oct. 8, 1946 when most foods still were price controlled. The Dun and Bradstreet index on that date was $5.40.

McPeek Has Long G.&S. History

By Sam Hirsch

Gwynn McPeek, instructor in the music department and musical director of this weekend's "Pinafore" has directed, sung, and acted in every one of the popular Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

"I began when I was a young boy singing the tenor part of Nanki-Poo in "The Mikado," he said, "and as my voice changed I gradually changed parts each time I played in it, until I had sung every one of the male leads!"

This is McPeek's first assignment as musical director of the annual opera, but he is well-known locally as assistant director of the Choral club and the director of the music department's madrigal singers. He teaches voice, brass instruments and music history, and has composed songs for choral groups, voice and orchestra, and has seven quartettes published.

"I have played Sir Joseph Porter and Captain Corcoran in Pinafore," he went on, "so it feels like old times when I'm in the pit conducting. I think all my experience as actor, singer, director and conductor of Gilbert and Sullivan has given me a fuller appreciation of everybody's problems on this production."

Five years ago McPeek made up his mind that what he wanted to concentrate on in music was the job of Choral director and since then has worked toward this aim. Formerly head of the music department at Transylvania College in Lexington, Ky., and director of instrumental music at Birmingham Southern College, he was guest conductor with the Birmingham Civic Symphony Orchestra, and sang and directed with the Columbus and Cleveland Opera companies. He studied at Ohio State, Indiana university, Harvard, and is now working on his Ph.D. here.

GWYNN McPEEK

While at Ohio State, he was assistant director of the choral group which won the 1938 National Choral Quest sponsored by the Columbia Broadcasting system, and was graduated from there with the highest all-round distinction.

"I started working seriously in music when I was 14 and formed my own orchestra and choir at Loudonville, Ohio which later won the state contest for performance," McPeek added.

"I must admit this show is the first one I've ever worked on

City Manager Protests

Proposed New Highway Hits Disaccord Among Durhamites

R. W. Flack, city manager of Durham, indicated yesterday that the city is not in accord with the route of the proposed new Chapel Hill-Durham highway or its routes of access into Durham.

Flack's report was in the form of an open letter to persons who have addressed communications to the city manager and the City council concerning the subject.

Flack pointed out that the government of the city of Durham was not represented on the committee which appeared before the state Highway commission in Raleigh several months ago and that Frank L. Dieter, city planning engineer, is not in favor of the proposed route.

The city council, Flack said, has appointed a committee to study the route of the new highway. He said undoubtedly the committee, "and finally the council, will give serious consideration to the advice of the director of planning."

Attached to the open letter sent out was a map of the scheduled route which shows the highway entering highway 751 between Pinecrest and Cranford roads in Durham. Flack said residents of

It's Everyone's Problem

Last summer all of North Carolina was horrified by the epidemic of poliomyelitis which penetrated every corner of the state. Fear of the disease was amplified by the knowledge that there was no preventive to stave it off. Nothing could be done for anyone until a medical examination showed that the disease had been contracted. When this diagnosis was reported, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis could be called upon to extend every possible aid in controlling the effects of the disease. The expense incurred in treating victims of polio in this state has since amounted to over two million dollars, and is increasing at the rate of over thirty-five thousand dollars a week.

During the epidemic, people were bemoaning the fact that there was nothing they could do about it. Now that the epidemic is waning, the general interest in the problem has probably flagged, and understandably so. But now is the time when all of us can help, and help greatly, by giving generously to the March of Dimes. Of the funds collected in this state, one half will be sent to the National Foundation, which sent over one and a quarter million dollars to North Carolina last year, and the other half will remain here. The tremendous cost of last summer's epidemic has drastically reduced the funds presently available. As residents of the area which was hardest hit last year, it is hardly conceivable that students will be reluctant to contribute to this drive. It means more than trying in some measure to repay the National Foundation. An all-out effort on this drive will assure us that in the future we shall have the necessary protection to fight polio in every way possible.

Pensive Publius

Concerning an Attitude

Publius, lingering over a cup of coffee was listening to a conversation between two of his friends. One of them was voicing the outworn creed of the campus—that of contempt for politics and politicians.

"Why does the Daily Tar Heel print all this trash about politics" he queried.

Publius, a staunch defender of student activities, thought with disgust that the mental vacuum his friend displayed would surely be the envy of the physics department. Surely student government has its Scrooges and stooges who deserve criticism, Publius admitted, but this does not warrant its wholesale condemnation. The campus politician, like the Yankee, is seldom without the familiar descriptive adjective. Publius reflected that it is blind application of this attitude which dulls the enthusiasm and ability of those working for better student government.

Publius began to consider the oft-repeated question: Is student government worthy of support? He noted that when the campus gripe sounds off, it is the individual, not student government as a whole, about which he complains. Then taking the whole for the sum of its parts, the gripe decides student government should be included in the target-for-today.

Publius reviewed the record of student government for the past year. It had cooperated in trying to show the trustees that Saturday classes are not feasible for the University. The Greater University student council was formed with State college and Woman's college, to cut down duplication of effort by the three schools, promote better relations between them, and present to the State Legislature the student's view of the needs of the Greater University. The State Board of Investigation was called in to control gambling in a quiet, efficient way before it got out of hand, and arrangements were made to try violators before the Men's council rather than in civil courts. Without student government the honor system would be impractical. The list of constructive measures lengthened as he mulled over it.

The voices of his friends interrupted Publius' thoughts. "Yes," said one, "take some of the objectionable characters out of student government and I'll start voting."

That statement convinced Publius that what this campus needs is not a new dormitory or library extension, but a photo lab to develop some of the negats roaming around. In the first place, he pointed out, voting is a privilege, not a right. In the second place, an informed electorate is needed to exercise this privilege in order to keep the "objectionable characters" out of politics.

It is a curious thing, thought Publius, that those who complain the most comprehend the least.

Coed Senate In the News

By Jess Dedmond

The ugly question of the future of the coed senate has again been raised. Reports have it that an effort to abolish will again be made. The movement, if it is a movement, is not very clear at this writing. But whatever its strength, it has been pronounced enough to bring about discussion in last Thursday's coalition cabinet meeting which was conducted by attorney general Dortch Warriner. The latest reports indicate that a bill to abolish the senate will be presented in the legislature in the near future. I consider such action undesirable and unnecessary.

The future of the senate should be a matter for coed determination. It should be so because it is basically democratic to provide for self-determination, and further, because the functions of the senate are wholly financed by a special one dollar per quarter assessment levied only on the coeds. The existence of the senate costs the rest of the campus absolutely nothing. There is no record of the legislature's having appropriated one cent for the support of organizations now financed wholly or partially by the senate.

The criticism that the senate is not the potent instrument it should be may possibly be true. My own observations have been too incomplete to allow a conclusion. If they are true, a possible revision is in order. The initiative for any such-action should be coed initiative. I do not believe that the men of the legislature or the campus have any cause to assume the right to alter the women's governmental structure.

While under the Constitution it is possible for a concerted male effort to do what it wills with women's government, I believe that as a matter of right and fairness the following approach to basic changes in coed government should be used:

1. The coed senate should initiate action on any changes it considers desirable.
2. The senate should determine by informal or formal balloting, after adequate publicity, the will of the majority of the coeds concerning the change.
3. Any changes considered desirable by the coed majority should be incorporated in a Constitutional amendment by the legislature and submitted to the campus for action.

Because I believe this course of action fair and democratically sound in that it allows decision by the group most affected, I oppose any action arising through other channels.

She Wouldn't Be Noticed

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington, Jan. 26—Gibbering mobs in Romania have been driving the authorities crazy searching for a woman with the head of an ass.

The lady is supposed to have had her noggin donkeyfied as punishment for snapping at an inoffensive old man: "Don't be an ass." The old guy niftied back: "He who says so, is." Whereupon the doll sprouted hairy ears and muzzle.

But instead of remaining to bray, the bewitched mule mamma vanished. Although such a jacked-up Jane should be reasonably conspicuous, even in present day Romania, she has thus far eluded the searchers.

Don't the Romanians realize what happened? Disguised in something old, something new, something burro-ed, and something blue, the lady snuck out of Bucharest and came to Washington where she wouldn't be noticed.

* * *

You may not know Miss Bertha Joseph personally, but you saw a lot of her last week. She is the lady with the wide felt hat who was standing right back of our Persident when he was sworn in. She was up this close because she was Mrs. Truman's official escort.

Miss Joseph was given this high honor because she has been on Capitol Hill almost as long as the dome. She used to be secretary to former senator George Radcliffe, of Maryland, and is now with Senator Carl Hayden, of Arizona, who ran the senatorial end of the inauguration.

If there ever was any doubt as to the esteem in which Mr. Truman holds his missus, the President settled it for Miss Joseph. After the ceremony she went up to Mr. Big and said:

"Mr. President, this is the greatest honor a woman could have. There could be no greater honor than being escort to Mrs. Truman."

The President broke into a wide grin.

"By golly, Bertha!" he cried. "You're right!"

* * *

Despite her almost legendary kindliness, Miss Joseph has a penchant, on occasion, for unendearing herself to her friends. She just can't resist sinking in the barb.

One of her closet women chums cornered her the other day, blood in eye.

"Bertha!" challenged the other. "I hear you've been going around describing me as a caustic wit!"

"No, dear," replied Miss Joseph, sweetly. "It couldn't have been me. I don't think you are witty at all."

The Rev. Dr. Joseph F. Thorning, one of our best goodwill ambassadors to Latin America, has just returned from the winter Naval Reserve training cruise aboard the U.S.S. Missouri. The educator and editor made the Caribbean trip as the guest of Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan.

Dr. Thorning, who has been decorated by the governments of Brazil, Educador, Chile, Peru, Cuba and Venezuela, is a gentleman and a scholar—but he is making it very hard for me to keep the hired help in line. He has succeeded in swelling the head of my employee to unbearable proportions.

Writing from the battleship Missouri, in what must have been one of his few unthinking moments, he says:

"We could use Marion Cecile Reid as the pin-up for the drone planes."

Mr. Gordon Sessions, who ghostwrote for Harold Ickes when old McBurp was secretary of the interior, was having lunch at the National Press club the other day when a crony said he had heard rumors that the Ick's contract to turn out a syndicated column was being curtailed.

"That's rather foolhardy of the Syndicate fellows," murmured Mr. Sessions. "They ought to read up on the anti-trust laws. Don't they know they might be prosecuted for restraint of tirade?"

* * *

I see where Margaret Truman is making a bid for a full-time singing stage career.

The President's daughter can really hit those high ones, and undoubtedly would get by, even if her name was Taft. But I wonder if she has given sufficient thought as to what a full-time stage career entails.

What's going to happen if they book her for a split week between Toronto and El Paso? or supposing she gets into a fight over top billing with a troupe of seals? or picks up a paper and reads she can't sing a note without using Todwallader's Tony Toenail tint?

But it could be even worse. All artistes are called upon to play hundreds of benefits.

Supposing she is instructed to appear at a benefit—and discovers, at the last minute, that it's a Republican testimonial for Dewey?

Bi-National State Suggested for Palestine

By Joanathan Marshall

My recent attack on England's relationship with the new state of Israel seems to have provoked mixed reactions, and for that reason perhaps it is worth elucidating further.

It is gratifying to a writer even to receive an answer from one who disagrees, if the answer is intelligent and honest. S. K. Lawry's reply was excellent, and in pointing up my lack of facts, he was right. This will be remedied if possible today.

Mr. Lawry says that a judicial approach should be taken, "allowing each side to state its claims, but not acknowledging their right to any part of the disputed territory until a peaceful settlement has been made." The United Nations heard both sides and made a decision. If it had been supported, it would have been "a peaceful settlement."

After my previous column was written, one of the five English pilots who was shot down over Israel admitted that he had been flying over Jewish territory. This the English still will not admit.

The treaty between England and Transjordan of 1946 which recognized the latter as an independent state also provided that British military personnel would train the armed forces of that country. Brigadier General John B. Glubb and 40 British senior officers were attached to the Arab Legion by the 1948 treaty between those two countries.

On January 15, 1948 England and Iraq concluded a treaty which among other things granted Iraq two English built air bases. An annex to the treaty said, "In the event of either high contracting party becoming involved in war or a menace of hostilities, His Majesty the King of Iraq will invite His Britannic Majesty to bring immediately to Iraq the necessary forces of all arms."

Shortly before the British mandate in Palestine ended the English authorities allowed 10,000 Arab troops to enter the country. In a series of official newsletters the English authorities in Palestine admitted knowledge of the Arab entry, and admitted that the Arab bands were raiding Jewish settlements. This does not seem in keeping with a policy to preserve peace.

In addition to this it is common knowledge that English tanks and other equipment, and American lend-lease equipment that was sent to Britain, have been captured from the Arabs.

Lawry says that the British have had "a long and intimate experience of Palestine's problems." Yet before this experience the two peoples had been living together for centuries in peace. If she was really sincere in seeking an equitable settlement, why did England oppose the bi-national plan proposed by the late Dr. Judah L. Magnes, president of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem?

With British support, this plan might have become a reality. The current criticism in the House of Commons by both Churchill and many members of the Labor Government would indicate that many Englishmen oppose Mr. Bevin's policies.

I will admit to Mr. Lawry that I am biased. I do not favor Zionism, for nationalism is a dangerous thing. A bi-national state still seems to me to be the best idea; however, since the State of Israel is a fact, it should be recognized and given an opportunity for peaceful development. England is helping to prevent this from happening.

Two Views of a 'Compromise'

Editor:

It has been argued that—quite apart from other considerations (freedom of speech, innocent until proven guilty, who has the right to label certain doctrines subversive)—the Carolina forum and the Communist party of Chapel Hill rendered a disservice to the University by inviting John Gates during the session of the legislature.

Yet it is those who argue thus who are rendering a disservice. They suggest that we sell for a few million dollars the great tradition and the very purpose of the University—above all, unrestricted freedom of inquiry which won it its worldwide renown. If we followed this advice consistently, we might well have a pile of books, but no University at all.

I do not believe that a legislature representative of the intelligent people of this state will hold against the University its adherence to its tradition of academic freedom. They are too conscious of the verdict that history will render. Let us also be conscious of it, and remember that history does not treat kindly either those who use their position of power to make others compromise basic principles, nor those who compromise them for short-range expediency.

I may be wrong, of course. Maybe we will have to pay for exercising our constitutional rights. If so, it's about time we found out; in that case, next election we can do away with the paradox of a people having to fear the legislature, and elect a legislature that fears the people.

Congratulations to the Carolina forum and the Communist party of Chapel Hill for considering only the fact that the student body might be interested in hearing Mr. Gates, and for not compromising the fundamental principles of the University.

Editor:

. . .It is unlawful for any person to use public buildings for subversive activities, and therefore all attempts to do so should be prohibited. One may raise the question that this is obviously a contradiction to freedom of speech (at least in public buildings). But at the same time the same one may also raise the question that Marxism is a contradiction to much more than freedom of speech. We seem to be compromised with or without the law.

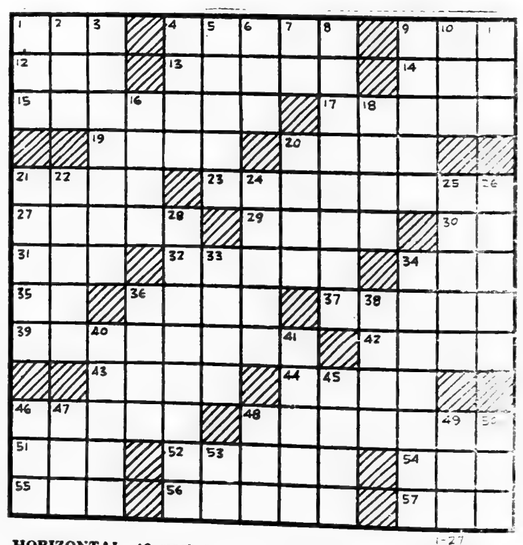
'Religious' Emphasis Weak?

Editor:

Your question as to why college students push religion (ortho-do) into the background in preference to secular studies and activities are due to reasons more pertinent than the one you suggested. The grand old man of 11th Century Persia, Omar Khayam, has left us something which bears significantly on the question. From his prolific Rubaiyat we read:

"Strange is it not? that of the myriads who
Before us pass'd the door of Darkness through.
Not one returns to tell us of the Road,
Which to discover we must travel too."



"Myself when young did eagerly frequent
Doctor and Saint, and heard great argument
About it: but evermore
Came out by the same door wherein I went."

"With them the seeds of Wisdom did I sow
And with my own hand wrought to make it grow:
And this was all the Harvest that I reap'd—
'I came like water, and like wind I go.' "

"I sent my soul through the Invisible,
Some letter of that After-life to spell,
And by and by my soul return'd to me
And answer'd 'I myself am heav'n and Hell.' "

"The moving finger writes; and having writ,
Moves on: nor all your piety nor wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a line,
Nor all your tears wash out a word of it."

With The TAR HEELS

By Dick Jenrette

When handing out credit for work well done, much praise deservedly goes to the Carolina intramural department for its fine job of encouraging student participation in athletics. But during the last few days there have been innumerable complaints about the latest sport to be inaugurated this winter, that sport being boxing. From this point it looks like the complaints are justified.

Boxing is no newcomer to the Carolina intramural program, but this does not necessarily justify its continued existence. It will be remembered by some students that boxing as a varsity sport was banned at Carolina last year. There were numerous reasons for discontinuing the sport, such as lack of opponents in this district and also a shortage of boxing talent. But perhaps the most important factor was the belief that boxing as a sport was too rough for college athletics. And statistics verify this statement, for each year boys are seriously injured in collegiate boxing.

Logic, then, would bring out the question that if boxing is too rough for varsity athletes, isn't it certainly too rough for intramural performers? Supporters of the game, though, point out that in intramural boxing the fighting period lasts for a shorter time and also that both competitors are required to wear a mask and extra large, well-padded gloves. But even with this arrangement the boxers take quite a bit of punishment.

Entrance Not Entirely Voluntary

The Intramural department probably is satisfied with the boxing program because of the large number of entrants each year. This total doubtless is impressive, particularly in view of the fact that entrance theoretically is voluntary. Actually, however, the large number of participants in boxing results from the compulsory entrance of fraternity pledges. Most Carolina fraternities, anxious to improve their intramural point totals, require all pledges to enter. As a result many boys physically unequipped for boxing are forced to go to what they consider their "doom."

If none of the entrants had had any previous boxing experience, then we would say the program would be beneficial to the students. But there always are enough entrants who have done some boxing previously to hand the neophytes at the sport a terrific beating.

Also there is the vital matter of conditioning for the sport. We have observed several boys virtually fasting and working out daily in order to get into a weight classification below that which they really belong in. Working out is good for a person, but it can be overdone.

The Intramural department should weigh all these factors before going along with the boxing precedent next year. From here, it's difficult to see that the advantages of boxing balance the disadvantages.

Cagers Rank 28th Nationally

Associated Press basketball ratings this week rank the Tar Heels 28th nationally, with 14 points. . .State has the best rating—15th with 50 points. Cage Coach Tom Scott, in his search for basketball talent, would do well to observe the play of Bobby Goss, 6-7 center for the undefeated Needham Broughton High team in Raleigh . . Goss is one of the best backboard players in state high school circles and says he is interested in continuing his education at Carolina. . .But Coach Everett Case at State reportedly is making overtures for his services. Seen in the Y-Court yesterday was Bill (Earthquake) Smith, rugged tackle on the 1947 football team here. . . Earthquake played pro ball this past season.

Paul Severin, All-American, end at Carolina in 1940, has accepted a position as freshman grid coach at the University of Florida. . . Buddy Johnson, a promising forward on Carolina's freshman basketball team, is no longer in school. . Johnson went home to Pikeville, Ky., over the weekend and wasn't back in time for the game Monday. . .He came in next day, packed his bag, and left the university . . .Coach Jim Hamilton has inserted Frank Eckert at Johnson's vacated forward position.

Billy Carmichael III, Daily Tar Heel sports editor, is still in Watts hospital, Durham, recuperating from an appendectomy. . .He seems to be improving rapidly. . .Bill has had quite a siege in the hospital recently. . .Prior to his appendectomy he was laid up with an attack of glandular fever. He should be able to return to work on Monday.

Pennsylvania Takes Action Against Sports Bribery

HARRISBURG, Jan. 26—(UP) Football commissioner Bert Bell's two year campaign to make sports bribery a criminal offense finally brought action today in the State senate where a special government committee approved anti-fix bill and sent it to the floor for debate.

Passage of the bill, which has bipublican support, was expected without too much opposition.

Sen. Harvey M. Taylor, Republican State chairman and president pro tempore of the Senate, introduced the measure which he said was designed to "wipe out the worst thing in sports."

The bill would make any attempt to bribe an athlete, either amateur or professional, a criminal offense. It also stated specifically that the bribe need not be for throwing a game— it would also be a crime to reduce a winning team's margin of victory.

Bell, commissioner of the National Professional Football league, has been trying ever since the football scandal in 1946 involving the New York Giants, to get all states to pass anti-bribery bills.

Several states promptly enacted such legislation, but Pennsylvania did not undertake to do so until the present session of the Senate Taylor's bill also would boost the fine for persons found guilty of accepting bribery from $1,000 to $3,000. Persons guilty of making bribes would be given three-year prison terms and $3,000 fines.

Max Reed Resigns Coaching Position

Move Terminates Football Combo Of Long Standing

One of football's oldest coaching combinations was terminated yesterday with the resignation of Max Reed as University of North Carolina line coach.

This past fall, Reed completed his twentieth year as first assistant to Carl Snavely. The veteran mentor was associated with the "Grey Fox" for five years at Bucknell, nine years at Cornell, and six here. His announcement that he is leaving North Carolina came as a surprise. He added that an announcement of his plans could not be made at present.

"One of Best"

Reed, a 49-year-old bachelor, rated by Snavely as "one of the best line coaches in the business," served with the latter as a field man. While other members of the staff scouted on Saturdays, Reed invariably stayed with Snavely on the bench, and the two teamed up in directing their teams.

The former Bucknell star guard and center has a wide circle of friends in this area. In addition to enjoying the respect of Carolina players, he has always been highly popular with them.

Reed began his playing career at Bucknell in 1919 and played four seasons, captaining the team his senior year. After graduating he played five years of professional football. He was with the New York Giants when a shoulder injury ended his playing career.

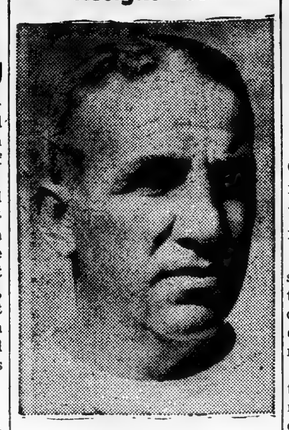
He joined Snavely at Bucknell in 1929 and each time the latter has transferred to another post, Reed has gone with him.

Reed's successor on the North Carolina staff has not been named.

Student Tickets Go On Sale Today For Indoor Meet

Tickets for the Southern Conference indoor track meet will go on sale to University students this morning at 9 o'clock in Woollen gym, Vernon Crook of the Carolina Athletic Association announced yesterday.

Because the meet, which will take place February 26, is not a University event, student and faculty passbooks are not good for admission. However, nine hundred seats are being reserved for Carolina students at half price, which is seventy-five cents, and coupon number 30 from the student passbook.



Since the number of seats for U.N.C. students is limited to nine hundred, Crook recommended that those interested purchase their tickets at once. One thousand additional tickets are being reserved for the general public at $1.50 each.

EQUALS RECORD

NEWCASTLE, Australia, Jan. 26-(UP)-Lloyd La Beach of Panama equalled the world's record of 9.4 seconds for the 100-yard dash tonight but the performance will not be recognized officially because the race was started by a whistle instead of a gun.

A whistle was employed when the starting gun jammed just before the race. The Panamanian olympic star's time was the fastest ever recorded on a grass track in Australia.

Golf Contest

A hole in one contest will be held on number seven tee at the Chapel Hill golf course Saturday and Sunday with all proceeds going to the march of dimes drive, according to Mrs. Estelle Page, who is in charge of the project.

All interested golfers are urged to turn out between the hours of nine and twelve in the morning and one-thirty to four-thirty in the afternoon. The price will be 25 cents for three balls. Contestants are requested to provide their own clubs.

Prizes, donated by Chapel Hill merchants, will be given out Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Feller Holds Out; Is Joined By Mates

CLEVELAND, Jan. 26—(UP)—Mild-mannered Bobby Feller of the Cleveland Indians became a holdout today for the first time in his major league career and he was joined by three teammates who thought that they, too, should have a bigger reward for winning the world title.

Feller crossed up his boss, Bill Veeck, when he said very frankly that "I ame not satisfied with present terms."

Veeck offered Feller a contract based on a cut in his base pay plus a bonus for attendance on Cleveland home attendance.

The only trouble, Feller said, was that "we just didn't see eye to eye on the number of people who will se us play."

"But we'll get together," Feller said. "I'll be in there on the opening day of spring training. It is just that the contract is so complicated it will need a little more working out."

Feller, who won 19 games last season but still failed to come up to expectationns, was joined by pitchers Bob Lemon and Gene Bearden, and third baseman Ken Keltner, as dissatisfied players.

McAFEE TO DEACONS

WAKE FOREST, Jan. 26—(UP)—George McAfee, bruising halfback of the Chicago Bears and a great college star at Duke University, signed today as a member of the Wake Forest football coaching staff.

Wake Forest officials said it was not definite what his exact coaching duties were to be. He will join the staff when spring practice starts Feb. 7.

Grapplers Thump Davidson, 26-7; Frosh Whitewash 'Cat Yearlings

By Frank Allston, Jr.

Carolina's varsity and freshman wrestlers turned in a double win over the Davidson Wildcats in Woollen gymnasium last night. The varsity, in chalking up their first win of the season, scored a 26-7 decision while the undefeated frosh whitewashed Davidson's frosh 32-0.

The Tar Heels won their varsity Big Five match on two falls, three decisions, a forfeit and a draw. Davidson's only victory came on a fall in the second match.

Undefeated Phil Kemp, third in the Southern conference tournament last year, scored the most outstanding victory of the night when he pinned Rice with a half-nelson at 1:11 of the first period in the 155.

Lone Wildcat Winner

After Tar Heel Paul Edmondson had won the 121-pound class on a forfeit, Davidson's Jimmy Jung turned in the only Wildcat win of the night in the 128-pound class. Jung was originally scheduled to grapple in the 121 class, but failed to make this weight.

The closest match of the evening found Carolina's 165-pound contestant John Stoioff fighting Bill Alexander to a 3-3 draw.

Joe Augustine wound up the action with a heavyweight win. Joe had to fight 225-pounder Bill Moore and won in the third period after Moore's war-injured leg had been hurt.

Four Falls

In scoring their third straight victory of the young season, coach Irv Zirpel's Tar Babies won all eight matches, four of them on falls, to win, 32-0.

Tom Williams, fighting his first match for Carolina, got things started in the opening match by pinning Mattson in the 121 after 2:45 of the first period. This was the first time that Carolina had a man to fight in that class.

Tommy Coxe also scored a first period fall for the Tar Babies when he pinned Davidson 165-pounder Boyd in 2:01 of the first period.

The other Tar Baby winners were McGimsey (128), decision; Dotson (136), fall; Farber (145), decision; Quarles (155), fall; Pickard (175), decision and Lovick (heavyweight), decision.

There will be a match with Virginia Tech, varsity and freshman at Blacksburg, Virginia on Saturday night.

The Summaries

121—Edmondson (UNC) won by forfeit.

128—Jung (D) pinned Harless. Time: 2:54, second period.

Unlimited—Augustine (UNC) decisioned Moore, 4-1.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 26—(UP)—Betty Rowland of Lexington, Ky., today scored the first big upset of the 17th annual Helen Lee Doherty Challenge cup golf tournament by defeating Dorothy Kielty of Los Angeles, 4 and 3.

Scottmen Drill For Friday Battle With Davidson

Back at work after Tuesday's respite, Coach Tom Scott and his cage squad went through rigorous paces yesterday in preparation for gruelling schedule that faces them over the week-end.

Tar Heel enthusiasts will be able to watch two vital conference games this weekend as the hardwooders entertain Davidson's Wildcats on Friday night and meet the Pallidins of Furman then, after a day's rest on Sunday, the Tar Heels travel to Knoxville to engage Tennessee Monday night in the only non-conference contest left on the Carolina schedule.

Cheek Big Threat

Preferring to take the games as they come, Scott is now concerned with stopping the rampaging Wildcats and their high-scoring center, Buddy Cheek. Because Cheek is a threat from anywhere on the court with his unerring set and jump shots, the coaches have decided to assign one man to Cheek to hang on to him the entire 40 minutes. However two other Davidson guards, Williams and Cobb, will also bear watching.

The Carolina "brain trust" now has a problem with their own squad. Rip Ryan, the Tar Heels' flashy guard, sustained a twisted ankle in the opening minutes of the VPI game and it is dubious whether the Trenton, N. J. floorman will be able to play at all this weekend.

If not, the Carolina mentor will stick to his starting lineup of Coy Carson, Dan Nyimicz, Nemo Nearman and Hugo Kappler with the last member of the Howard Deasy, John Tsantes or starting five to be chosen from Charley Thorne.

Thorne took over in Ryan's place after the latter's injury Monday night and handled his chores creditably and scoring six points, but his small stature has led Scott to consider the possibility of starting either Deasy or Tsantes in the Friday evening fray against the sky-scraping Wildcats. Tsantes also saw plenty of action against VPI while contributing 13 markers and his performance warrants him another chance.

If You're Not the Judge

It Doesn't Pay To Park In A Judge's Driveway

By J. L. Merritt

Pearl Norwood, local Negro woman, found out Tuesday morning in the Chapel Hill Recorder's court that parking a car in a driveway is bad business, especially if the driveway enters into the home of the Recorder's court judge.

Pearl, who was charged with blocking Judge Henry Whitfield's driveway, declared she had parked outside the driveway when she went to work at the Carolina Inn. She said she had taken extreme care not to park in the driveway, and that someone had moved her car there while she was at work.

However, police officer R. L. Blackwood testified that her car was squarely in the center of Judge Whitfield's drive when he investigated the situation. Judge Whitfield fined Pearl $10 and costs. She immediately appealed, and her bond was set at $100.

Other cases heard were:

Brodie Edwards, Negro, disorderly conduct, costs; Jack Horner, failure to have automobile inspected, costs; Donell Thompson, failure to have automobile inspected, costs; Dwight N. Ray, running through stop light, costs.

William Johnson, running through stop sign, costs; Elmore Ben Davis, Negro, failure to have automobile inspected, costs; Berl Gunter, failure to have automobile inspected, costs; David Scott Love, failure to have automobile inspected, $10 and costs.

John Kuhlken, Jr., failure to have automobile inspected, costs; McKinley Thompson, Negro, improper automobile equipment, costs; John Clinton Bowen, passing on right, costs; H. R. Huse, operating automobile without lights, costs; Robert Rogers, Negro, assault on female, 12 months on roads, appealed and bond set at $1,000.

Rufus Tuck, Negro, shooting craps, costs; Cracker Jack Markham, Negro, shooting craps, costs; Phes Perry, Negro, shooting craps, costs; David Green, Negro, shooting craps, costs; John Gaskin, Negro, drunkenness, $5 and costs.

Edgar Rogers, Negro, assault on female, six months on roads, appealed and bond set at $500; Arguster Faucette, Negro assault with deadly weapon 12 months on roads.

Two UNC Bands To Participate In Band Clinic

The music department will hold a band clinic in Hill hall Saturday, Prof. Earl Slocum, director of bands in charge of the program, announced yesterday.

Two University bands, blue and white, will alternate in playing music to be used in the 1949 district and state music festivals.

Approximately 60 members of the North Carolina Band Masters association will be in Chapel Hill attending the clinic. Major C. D. Kutschinski, director of State college band; Allen Bone, director of Duke university band; and James C. Pfohl, director of the Davidson college band will assist Slocum in conducting the two clinic bands.

The general public is invited to attend the clinic concerts which will begin at 9:30 in the morning.

with so few big problems to solve. Of course, we've had the usual difficulties with rehearsal space, and we lose Memorial hall occasionally to visiting celebrities, but on the whole this is the friendliest group I've ever been associated with in a Gilbert and Sullivan Opera.

"I've performed them with every instrument from a broken-down piano to a full symphony orchestra. This year's orchestra has been hand-picked by Earl Slocum and has been wonderful to work with. The performances Friday, Saturday and Sunday night promise to be a delight from every point of view."

Health Group To Give Course In Parenthood

Mrs. Edith Brocker, supervising nurse of the District Health department announced yesterday that the department, beginning next Monday at 3 o'clock, will present an eight-week preparenthood course as a free service to the community in order to instruct expectant parents in the various phases of pregnancy and infant care.

Miss Dorothy Lunsford, district public health nurse, will teach the classes, which will last from 3 to 4 o'clock each Monday afternoon. They will be held in the District Health department offices on old Fraternity Row. Movies, demonstrations, lectures, and discussions will be included in the course.

The schedule includes such topics as hygiene and nutrition of pregnancy; labor and hospital procedures; and habit training.

All interested persons are invited to enroll at the first meeting on Monday.

Solons Disapprove Tuition Rate Raise

THIS IS A MODEL of the stage set for thePlaymaket-music department production of "H.M.S. Pinafore," the popular Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, which is being given in Memorial hall at 8:30 tonight, tomorrow and Sunday. The working model of the set is on display in the library.

H.M.S. Pinafore Opens Three-Day Run Tonight

Gilbert and Sullivan's nautical operetta "H.M.S. Pinafore" will open a three-day run at 8:30 tonight in Memorial hall under the auspices of the Playmakers and the University music department.

Station WDNC, Durham, will broadcast a half hour of recorded music from "Pinafore" this afternoon from 1:30 to 2:00. Sanford's Station WWGP has been featuring fifteen minutes of recordings from the same opera every afternoon this week.

This rollicking musical voyage will carry Gilbert and Sullivan fans to the hallowed land of "topsy-turveydom" where "things are seldom as they seem, skimmed milk masquerades as cream." There, Sir Joseph Porter advises his aspiring seamen: "If you want to rise to the top of the tree, stick close to your desks and never go to sea, and you all may be rulers of the Queen's Navvvvy;"

The production has been staged by Foster Fitz-Simons and Sam Selden, the music directed by Gwynn McPeek, and the costumes designed by Irene Smart. A unique set has been designed by Gordon Bennet and lighted by James Byrd.

Seen on the stage in the leading parts will be Andrew Griffith, William Collins, Mary Helen zum Brunnen, Lucille Arnott, Richard Smith, Barbara Young, Milton Bliss, Sam Greene, and Carl Perry.

CHARLOTTE, Jan. 27—(UP)—A coroner's jury today cleared three Charlotte policemen in the slaying of a Negro convict as he sought to flee a stolen car.

Creech to Die

RALEIGH, Jan. 27—(UP)—Gov. Kerr Scott refused late today to intervene in the execution of James R. Creech, 37-year-old son of a wealthy Smithfield tobacco grower, who was convicted of slaying his third wife, Mattie Woodall Creech.

Burglars Escape

CLINTON, Jan. 27—(UP)—Determined burglars who hauled a 500-pound safe into an icebox to break it open escaped with about $1,500 Tuesday night, police reported today.

Bible Study

STATESVILLE, Jan. 27—(UP)—A Baptist pastor today denounced attempts to put Bible study courses into public schools and said no church had a right to "dip into public funds to support its parochial schools."

B-29 Is Missing Between England, Dakar Air Base

BUSHEY PARK, England, Jan. 27—(UP)—An American B-29 superfortress with 15 men aboard was reported missing somewhere along the 3,000-mile stretch from Dakar, West Africa, to England.

U. S. Air Force Headquarters here assumed the plane had gone down. Officials said it carried only enough fuel to keep it afloat until 3:20 p.m. (10:20 a.m. EST) today.

Rescue facilities were alerted, and planes roared in search from bases in Great Britain, Africa and Germany. Sister B-29's were taking off tonight from Marham, the nearby U. S. air base which was the missing bomber's destination.

Weather Curtails Western Haylift

CHICAGO, Jan. 27—(UP)—Bad weather sharply curtailed the Air Force haylift on the western ranges today and a new blizzard struck in part of the area where 2,000,000 cattle and sheep face starvation.

Fresh snow drifted down on the storm-plagued areas of Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Nevada and Wyoming.

All haylift planes were grounded at Lowry Field, Denver, and operations in the main distress area of Nevada were slowed.

At the same time a new blizzard roared out of the Northwest into Kansas, Nebraska and northwest Missouri. Heavy snows fell in Kansas and subzero cold and biting winds accompanied the storm.

Hear Report On New Rules For Parking

Quarterly Gets $500 of Funds

By Roy Parker Jr.

A resolution disapproving the proposed raise in University tuition rates by the state General assembly was unanimously passed by the Student legislature last night.

The resolution, in addition, "respectfully requested the General assembly to take action to maintain tuition at the present level." Introduced by Joe Leary, it passed without debate under a suspension of the rules.

A bill to reorganize and set powers for the Carolina forum was the only other measure passed. It precipitated an hour-long debate. Two amendments were introduced, with one by Jim Southerland passing on a voice vote, after another by Al Lowenstein was defeated.

Southerland's amendment allowed member organizations to secure speakers themselves if the forum refused. The original bill had given the group power to secure all speakers for member organizations. Lowenstein's amendment would have allowed members to secure speakers at their own expense, without consulting the forum except concerning dates or conflicting bids.

Steve Millikin, chairman of the Safety committee, reported the committee's action on new parking regulations and answered several queries about the new rules.

Bill Prince reported that recommendations of the legislative committee on improving quonset hut conditions had been carried out by the administration. They included a new priority system for moving quonsct-dwellers into dormitory rooms.

Emily Sewell, business manager of the Quarterly, asked and received permission to draw $500 from the $2,000 fund set up by last year's legislature to underwrite the publication.

Seven other bills were introduced and sent to committee. Jim Southerland presented bills to amend constitutional bylaws relating to carryover bills, and on procedure in adding constitutional amendments, constitutional amendments on procedure in filling vacancies and on adding amendments, and a bill to have all voters vote at polling places in their own districts.

Charles Foley introduced a measure to have a committee appointed to look into the possibility of getting soft drink ma-

Clowns, Hoppers To Meet In Benefit Basketball Game

A benefit basketball doubleheader that promises to be everything but a three-ring circus will be held in Woollen gym Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. Sponsored by the Monogram club, the game will benefit the campus March of Dimes drive.

In the opening tilt, the backs and linemen of the football team are slated to clash, and in the night's feature attraction the famed Carolina Clowns will perform against the Pittsboro Clodhoppers.

The Clowns, though well known in amateur circles throughout the state, have never played here before. The Clodhoppers, who will appear in overalls and straw hats before the game, are composed of several men each from Carolina, Duke, and Pittsboro.

Admission to the game will be 50 cents, and tickets will be on sale in the Y lobby from 9 to 12 o'clock starting today and running through Tuesday. Tickets may also be obtained from Monogram club members. Pete Hexner is chairman of the ticket committee.

Nemo Nearman and Coy Carson will officiate at the Clown's game. It is reported that Norman Cordon, a member of the Clowns, will be part of the act, but he is not scheduled to play.

The Monogram club has contributed $250 from the club's

Rendezvous Act To Feature Smith

Coline Smith, graduate of the class of '48, will be guest star on the Rendezvous room radio show tomorrow night at 9:30, Lib Stoney, program director, said yesterday.

An employee of the Raleigh Times, Coline is well-known here because of the vocal work she did with Sound and Fury last year.

Appearing with her on the weekly show which is broadcast over station WDUK, will be the dancing-singing pair, Dick Johnson and Tommy Thompson, both of whom are radio majors. They will put on a "Clambake" novelty number.

Ray Weems will also sing several vocals. The Town Talk trio will work with the other vocalists on their numbers.

No Grad Students Ask For Men's Council Post

The tri-partisan selection board set up to make recommendations on persons to fill the graduate student vacancy on the Men's Honor council met yesterday only to discover that no students were making application for the post.

To prevent a future recurrance of the incident, the board passed a resolution stating that formal written applications must be made "by a minimum of two applicants to the chairman of the tri-partisan board" before the group will call a session to again consider making recommendations to fill the council vacancy.

The board, made up of three representatives of each political party, recommends names of persons it thinks are qualified to serve on the Men's council to Jess Dedmond, president of the student body. Dedmond then appoints the proper number of men to fill any vacancies and sends his appointments to the Student legislature for confirmation.

The chairman of the Men's council and the chairman of the Student council sit on the board as non-voting members, the former acting as chairman of the group.

The last act of the board was to recommend the name of Roy Holsten to fill the junior vacancy on the council. The legislature confirmed Holsten after Dedmond made the appointment.

Indian Lady Asks $20,000 in Suit Over Seating Law

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 27—(UP)—A part-Cherokee Indian woman testified in a $20,000 damage suit today that she was forced to sit with Negroes in a Jim Crow coach on a railroad trip to the South.

Mrs. Vivian Turner Roberts, 33, charged that Illinois Central railroad employes "greatly humiliated and embarrassed" her by refusing to let her move to a white coach during the entire trip from Chicago to Memphis.

Her nine-year-old daughter, Carolyn Ann, was forced to sit with her, Mrs. Roberts said. The daughter corroborated her testimony.

Mrs. Roberts, an attractive brunette, said she had never before been mistaken "for a colored person." She was born in Brooklyn, Ark., of white and part Indian parentage, she said and she produced a birth certificate to back up her lineage.

When she went to the station in Chicago last July 14, Mrs. Roberts said, she was handed a card with the figure "No. 1" on it and the train conductor placed her in a car filled with Negroes. Her daughter stood up to look over the seat and remarked, "Mother, we're the only white people in this car," Mrs. Roberts said.

"At Cairo, Ill., I asked the conductor to let me change coaches and go into the white coach," she said. "He refused to change me. I was angry and embarrassed and took my little girl and was going any way, but the conductor told me: 'Sit down, you're where you belong.' "

UNC Alumnus Gets Position As State Head

Undersecretary Is James Webb

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—(UP)—The Senate today confirmed the appointment of James E. Webb as undersecretary of state.

It acted by a unanimous voice vote at the request of Chairman Tom Connally (D.—Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee. There was no debate.

Webb, who has been director of the Budget bureau, was nominated for the post Jan. 7 at the same time Dean Acheson was named to be secretary of state. A native of North Carolina, he will succeed Robert A. Lovett as undersecretary.

Congressional circles expect Webb to devote much of his time to departmental reorganization. The Foreign Relations committee report hinted at this when it described him as an official with "a wealth of broad administrative experience," able to lend Acheson "the assistance he needs at the top level."

* * *

Webb, born in Oxford in 1906, entered the University in the fall term of 1923. The following year, he dropped out of school to work in order to be able to finish his schooling. He returned in the fall of 1925, and remained until his graduation in 1928.

While at the University, he worked in the Bureau of Educational Research, and was secretary of the bureau from 1926 through 1928. He was awarded a Phi Beta Kappa key, and received an A.B. in education.

After graduation he remained in Chapel Hill for a year as a full-time employee of the bureau. Afterwards, he worked in a law firm in Oxford, and studied law at night.

Afterwards, he became secretary to the late O. Max Gardner, and studied law at night at George Washington university. He completed law school and was admitted to the bar.

After war service, Webb went to Washington to become an associate in Gardner's firm. Soon thereafter he accepted Gardner's invitation to join him in government service. Webb became 1st executive to O. Max Gardner when Gardner was undersecretary of the treasury.

President Truman appointed Webb director of the U. S. budget in July, 1946, which post he held until his appointment this month as undersecretary of state.

Webb is 42 years old, married, and has one son and one daughter.

Dance Official Says Deadline Was Not Met

UVA Will Appeal To Administration

By J. L. Merritt

Coach Marvin Allen, faculty chairman of the Dance committee, said yesterday that the University Veterans association March of Dimes dance scheduled for Saturday night could not be held because the UVA did not clear its arrangements with the Dance committee.

Allen said that Gene Newton, president of the UVA, did not apply for permission to hold a dance until Wednesday. Under Dance committee rules, he stated, all campus organizations holding a dance with a band are required to get Dance committee permission by Monday of the week of the dance.

"The UVA applied for permission too late for this week-end," he said. "If I let one organization break the dance rules then the rest will want to break them."

The Dance committee reportedly backed up Allen's decision yesterday. Newton said last night that he would speak to administration officials today to ascertain whether or not the red tape holding up the dance plans could be cut.

Allen said he regretted the dance could not be held because he realized it was for a good cause. But he recommended as alternatives that the UVA hold its dance next week-end, or else use juke-box music for the dance Saturday.

He reiterated that any campus organization that holds a dance in which an orchestra is used must first get permission from the dance committee. He said Newton had made application for the use of Woollen gym last week but Newton did not make formal

Drew Pearson Tells Newsmen Future Holds 'War of Nerves'

By Herb Nachman

"For the next five years we will not have out-and-out peace, but a period of a long, drawn-out war of nerves," Drew Pearson predicted last night.

The noted Washington columnist and commentator gave the keynote address of the 24th annual North Craolina Press association Newspaper institute which opened in Memorial hall last night.

Speaking to an audience of 1,600 persons, including newspapermen and women from throughout the state, students, faculty members and townspeople, Pearson divided his talk into a discussion of possibilities of war with Russia and of the new Truman administration.

He said that President Truman has two assets in beginning his term. First, he has a new Congress, "vigorously behind him except for certain sections of the South," and secondly, "He has new confidence in himself. "But he has one liability. Some of the men around him are a conglomeration of mediocrity. President Truman can have some of the finest policies in the world. But if he doesn't have the right men around him he cannot carry them out."

Pearson praised Truman's appointment of Dean Acheson and

YM-YWCA Retreat to Feature Plenty of Fun for Delegates

A trip to Mt. Mitchell, an old style square dance, a banquet, and a party will be waiting for students who leave Chapel Hill for the annual YM-YWCA winter retreat at Montreat Feb. 18.

Opening the light end of the conference will be a party planned by the retreat recreation committee. Emily Ogburn and Ed McLeod, chairman, declared the party was secret.

A motor trip to the top of Mt. Mitchell will highlight activities Saturday afternoon.

Mt. Mitchell, the highest peak this side of the Rockies, was named for a former professor of mathematics, chemistry, and mineralogy at the University, Dr. Elisha Mitchell, who lost his life in the scientific exploration of Black Mountain in 1857.

The 40-mile trip from Montreat to the 6,600 feet peak will be made along the famous Skyline drive.

Opening festivities Saturday evening will be a banquet with Dr. George D. Heaton, minister of the Myers Park Baptist church of Charlotte, as speaker.

Getting into the mood of the "hills," a square dance featuring a hill billy band and caller will take place Saturday night in the Collegiate club at Montreat.

Redhead Says Man Without Master Is Like 'Team Without Quarterback'

"Without a Master, I'm like a football team without a quarterback" said Dr. John A. Redhead, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Greensboro, in an address Wednesday night for Religious Emphasis week.

In his talk on the "Fairest Lord Jesus," the religious leader said having Jesus as a Master is one of the ways to come to know and love Him.

The religious leader said Christ is a Saviour "because he shows us a way of life without us having to find out by the trial and error method. Something is right, he added "because it's the only way you can make life work, and wrong because you can't make life work that way."

"It's the biggest tragedy of all," Dr. Redhead said "to miss the touch of the Master's hand."

Unanimous Vote

Di Senate Disapproves Bill For State Liquor Referendum

A meeting Wednesday night the Dialectic senate unanimously refused its support for a bill now being considered by the North Carolina legislature for a Statewide liquor referendum.

Although a separate vote including senate visitors did muster three eyes for the idea, Di members themselves were ardent in condeming the proposal of a vote for a constitutional amendment that would prohibit the production, distribution, and sale of all forms of alcoholic beverages within the State.

John Brockman and others expressed belief that should the state be voted dry, drinking would never cease but would merely assume the bootleg proportions that swept the whole country during the prohibition era.

Prohibition, according to figures quoted by Bill Harding, had neither improved national health standards nor lowered automobile accidents attributed to drunken driving. Harry Horton sited the new ABC stores in Mecklenberg county as proof that the state treasury could benefit greatly from alcoholic revenue.

David Pittman talked of the suggestion made by many wets that the referendum be taken but that the vote of each county be applied only to the respective counties individually.

Council Needs Candidates

The tri-partisan board has held two meetings in the last two weeks, trying to find a candidate to fill the graduate post in the Men's Honor council vacated earlier this quarter. The two meetings have produced only one candidate, and the board has decided to wait for formal applications from two more men before holding another meeting.

The purpose of the board is to keep judicial posts from becoming political battlegrounds by nominating men for these jobs through previous agreement by the three parties. The board cannot fulfill this purpose unless men will present themselves and their qualifications before the board.

The Men's council can function without this one member, but it will not represent the graduate students in the manner that the constitution provides. Since the tri-partisan board will not nominate a man to fill the vacancy until it has more candidates to choose between, it is squarely up to the men graduate students to volunteer for this job and to serve as representatives of their group.

Send 'em to a Nut House

The lighting or possession of fire crackers is prohibited by state law and should be by common sense on a college campus, but some inconsiderate students seem to be unaware or indifferent to it. The lower quad, in particular has been shaken by nightly barrages lately.

Students who are trying to study during dorm "quiet" hours might overlook the disturbance as a little expected hell-raising if only it were not so persistent. Studying between bursts of explosions is just about as futile as it is nerve-wracking.

The local police probably have pretty definite ideas about the proper place for such flagrant violators, and long-suffering students suspect that it is a state institution of a very different nature from a university.

So Soon Forgot

People forget quickly.

Five months ago no conversation in North Carolina was free of some mention of polio myelitis. Theaters closed, meetings were cancelled, schools delayed opening. People were afraid to travel from one part of the state to another.

At that time North Carolina called upon the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis for help—and the Foundation responded with almost a million dollars, special equipment and trained medical teams. Now the Foundation is asking for help from those it helped. But now the epidemic is over. Now there is no danger—and next summer is a long way off.

People forget quickly.

Entertainment Guide

'HMS Pinafore' Tops Weekend

By Vestal C. Taylor

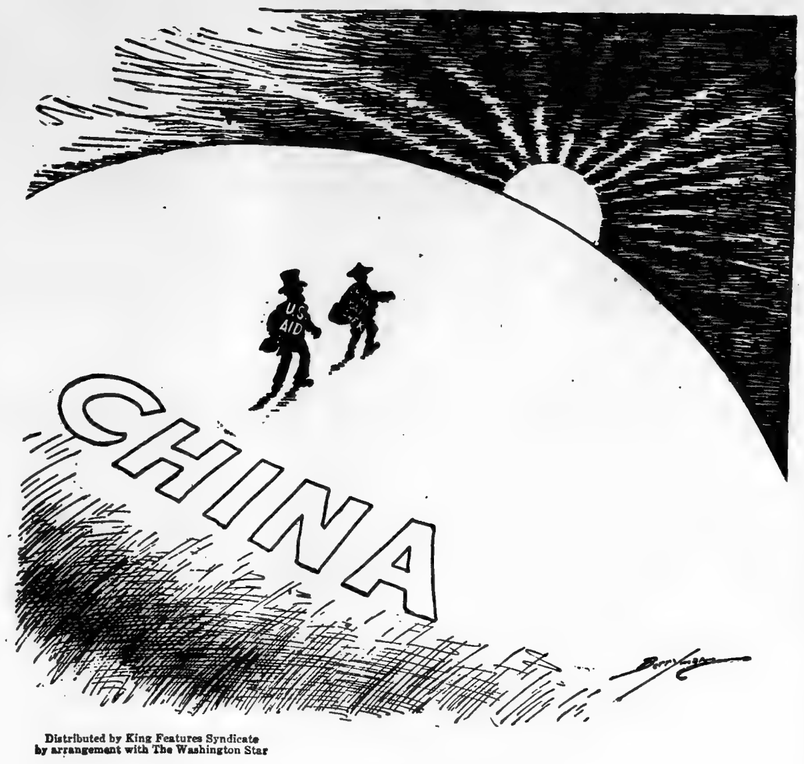
Heading the list of week-end entertainment for Chapel Hillians is the presentation of Gilbert and Sullivan's "H.M.S. Pinafore" by the Playmakers and the University Glee Club.

Played by a cast taken from the top drawer of talent in both organizations, and ably directed by Gwynn McPeek of the Music Department, the performance promises a full evening of entertainment to all who enjoy good comedy and fine music.

The book tells of a lowly English sailor's struggle to win the hand of the sweet, unassuming daughter of his captain. The captain, a high and haughty man in the Queen's navy, further complicates the plot by wishing his daughter united in wedlock to an even higher and haughtier man in the Queen's navy. Other love affairs liven the plot and the climax is satisfactory to both Seaman Rackstraw and the audience.

Collaboration between the Playmakers and Glee Club on a major production has become an annual affair, making its appearance in January of each year. Gwynn McPeek is substituting for Paul Young, who usually directs the annual production, but who has been forced to curb his activities because of a troublesome back ailment.

It is encouraging to interested parties to see collaboration-cooperation between the campus organizations dedicated to entertainment. Not only have we seen too much friction within some similar groups, but the rivalry and jealousy between the units has often been carried too far. A definite step in the right direction is the collusion between four campus organizations to produce and present "Beggar's Opera" in the near future.



Incidentally, the casters for "Beggar's Opera" may be forced to dig below the surface to find top flight talent for the top roles in the cast.

It seems the cream of the crop of active singers on campus are all tired out from two major productions in as many months. Paul Young is reported to be firmly discouraging his best vocalists from participating, not just to be ornery, but so they may catch up on the work prescribed in their curriculum.

This seems a golden opportunity for those of you who have been hiding your light under a basket to come forth when try-outs are announced for "Beggar's Opera."

The Rendezvous room, with Friday night shows is now better than ever.

Coffee At Senator Taft's

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON — Aglow with thoughts of impending conviviality, Representative Brent Spence, of Kentucky, chairman of the powerful House Banking and Currency committee, sallied forth to a jamboree of Kentuckians the other evening.

The address was just off Massachusetts ave., and 33rd St. Pulling into the block he saw a house all lighted up, and people entering.

Among the latter he spotted Senator Taft. Mr. Spence was momentarily nonplussed because Mr. Taft is neither a Democrat nor a Kentuckian. Nor, let's face it frankly, is he much given to conviviality.

But Mr. Spence figured repressed Robert was just letting down the bars for one evening, and followed him in. He was greeted at the door by a lady who asked him if he would like a nice cup of coffee.

The Kentuckian had not come for coffee, but he failed to see any other potables in sight. So he accepted a demitasse with true Kentucky courtesy, and remarked, loathingly, that there was nothing like a hot cup of coffee on a winter night.

He waited for the hilarity to begin, but it didn't. Finally he drew an acquaintance aside and observed that it was a pretty subdued affair for a Kentucky party.

The other looked so bewildered that Mr. Spence asked: "Say, just whose party is this anyway?"

"Why," gasped the other, "you must know! This is the home of Senator Taft!"

Mr. Spence went over to the Ohioan and mumbled apologies. Taft told him the house he wanted was across the street.

"I should have tumbled at once," Mr. Spence commented later. "I should have known it wasn't a Kentucky party when they were serving only coffee."

Our ultra-dignified ex-warrior, Brig. Gen. Joseph F. Battley, was in New York the other day and decided he would like to see Bob Clark in Mike Todd's new show "As the Girls Go." Having an innate aversion to buying theater tickets, the gallant general put the lug on Mr. Clark for a couple of passes.

But the comedian got his own back, with compound interest. In one skit the cigar-shooting Mr. Clark was seated in a drawing room with a couple of grande dames when the butler entered. Looking up, Mr. Clark greeted the starched servitor with:

"Ah, good morning, Battley!"

Every politico and social light in Washington knows "Robert," the famous maitre de hotel of the Shoreham. But few know his last name, which is Kehl.

Probably no man alive is as aware of our Washington peculiarities as Robert. He has sedulously trained his staff to cater to these eccentricities.

The other evening a local tightwad, unstrung by Barnee's jive and the hints of the doll he was with, called for a bottle of champagne. It was brought in, with great formality, by Bing Woods, captain of waiters.

"Pardon me, sir," said Mr. Woods, unctuously, "How do you wish the bottle opened? With a loud bang or a dignified pop?"

When bachelor Joe Martin was Speaker of the House, he received numerous proposals of marriage from ambitious gals of all sizes, shapes, and descriptions. But the quest for his hand slackened off abruptly last November.

A couple days ago, however, he received another proposal —by mail from a lady in England.

Mr. Martin's only comment was: "Apparently she hasn't heard yet about us Republicans losing the election."

The question before the house is: "Who's important, and who ain't?" You can supply your own answer.

News photographers conceived the idea of having Vice President Barkley pose with Jarrett L. Withers, the interim fellow appointed to fill out Mr. Barkley's unexpired term as senator from Kentucky. They figured it would be a nice break for Withers.

The amiable Alben told the photogs he would be delighted to oblige at their convenience.

But the substitute senator replied haughtily that he was much too busy with his many important duties to pose with the Vice President.

The District of Columbia Unemployment Compensation board announced it is constantly on the alert to prevent any "funny business."

Sounds like nasty suspicious-mindedness. What possible "funny business" could there be?

The Board also revealed it has received applications from nearly 300 jobless Washingtonians to have their compensation checks forwarded so they can spend the winter in Florida.

Write Away

And Laugh, Laugh, Laugh

Editor:

For some time now I have been an avid reader of the columns of George Dixon. In fact, many years ago when my family subscribed to the Sunday supplement of the Hearst papers called "This Week Magazine," the sometimes sexy, frequently frothy and always amusing columns of Dixon were a favorite in our household.

I am happy to note that the Tar Heel has finally found a good humorist on its staff. . .and for free too.

It is nice of you to take the strain off our minds by keeping us from reading columns by Pearson, Stokes, the Alsop brothers, etc. After all those columns are well-written and contain much vital information which the students need, and (judging by the recent letters in the Tar Heel) want.

Three cheers and a hip-hooray for joker-boy Dixon. Now pardon me while I read his latest column and laugh, laugh, laugh!

Name Withheld By Request

Peace By Compromise

Editor:

The "showdown with the Soviet Union" suggested by Murray Goldenthal in an article entitled "Freedom the Paramount Issue" would be tantamount to a demand for unconditional surrender. The indications are that in that case the Soviet Union would fight.

Let us examine the assumptions from which Mr. Goldenthal justifies such a "showdown:"

(1) The "cold war (is) not of our own making." To the best of my recollection, the first act of cold war was the steamrolling of Argentina's admission through the San Francisco UN Conference. The USSR has repeatedly offered peace talks to end the cold war. Would this not offer more chance for peace than a "showdown?"

(2) "We have not been met half way. . .by the Russians." On the decisive issue of atomic energy control, the Soviet delegates have conceded on the questions of inspection and of the timing of the destruction of existing stockpiles. The U. S. delegation has not appreciably budged from the original Baruch plan.

It is easy to pat oneself on the back uncritically and loudly denounce Russian guile. The atmosphere of 1949 is such that few people demand proof. How this contributes to the cause of peace I have yet to see.

It is not my purpose in this letter to debate the merits of Soviet policy. I merely assume that most DTH readers, like myself, desire peace without sacrifice of our national interests—and are unwilling to risk immense damage to our country merely to wipe out the (unfortunately) unpopular ideology of Communism. It is also not difficult to show that our State Department has but little resemblance to a knight in shining armor, and has done its share of agreement breaking, double dealing, and intervention in the internal affairs of other countries. Then why not try, instead of a "showdown" and probable war, a Big Three conference to settle honorably, by mutual compromise, in the tradition of Yalta and Potsdam, all basic outstanding issues?

'Christian' Emphasis Needed

Editor:

. . .This week is widely advertised as Religious Emphasis week. That is good. But we need every week for such emphasis. However, in some ways, I don't like the word religious. Why not substitute Christian emphasis? Did Buddha or Confucius ever die on a cross for the sins of all of us? Did they ever rise again from the grave? So why not lay our emphasis squarely at the cross of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. Then He will save and give us the abundant life for eternity. 'Repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."

Four-Sided Controversy Continues

Jewish Claims to Homeland Not Counter to Interests of Palestinian Arabs

Editor:

There is dubious wisdom in Mr. Beshara's irresponsible misinformed attack upon Zionism in the Jan. 23 DTH, as it can only create dissension at a time when Israeli and Arab are striving to settle their differences. However, to set the record straight, I should like to present the following facts:

(1) The League of Nations in 1923 gave Britain the Mandate of Palestine "to facilitate . . . .the establishment of the National Jewish Home," emphasizing that "recognition has been given to the historical connection of the Jewish people with Palestine and to the grounds for reconstructing their national home in that country."

(2) Emir Feisal, Arab spokesman at the World War 1 Peace Conference, welcomed the Jews to Palestine as "brothers."

(3) President Woodrow Wilson stated that "the Allied nations, with the full consent of our Government and our people, are agreed that in Palestine shall be laid the foundations of a Jewish commonwealth."

(4) Arabs had sovereignty in Palestine from 634 to 1071 A. D. From then on non-Arab peoples have controlled the country. In chronological order: Kurds, Crusaders, Circassians, Kurds again, Mamelukes, Turks, and the League of Nations.

(5) There has always been a Jewish community in Palestine. Jews never gave up hope of reestablishing the homeland there, and periodic efforts were made toward this end.

(6) Until modern Zionism brought Jews in large numbers to Palestine, Arab residents were gradually moving away. Improved living conditions, brought about by the Jews through modern industry, agriculture, medicine, and education, reversed this trend.

(7) Oil interests, empire builders, and Arab feudal lords, fearful lest Zionist—propagated democratic teachings weaken their control of the Near East, instigated the bloody riots of 1929 and 1936-39.

(8) Because of British unwillingness or inability to assure public safety, Haganah, the Jewish defense force, was organized. Its principal has always been that of restraint —of fighting only when attacked.

(9) In 1939 Britain imposed severe restrictions upon Jewish immigration into Palestine. The excuse, Palestine's limited absorptive capacity, was disproved by W. C. Lowdermilk of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

(10) The Palestinian Jewish community was the arsenal for British forces in North Africa during the War, and provided 12,000 front-line troops.

(11) Arab leaders either did nothing or, like the Mufti of Jerusalem and Fawzi el-Kaukji, actually aided the enemy.

(12) After the War, extremists, numbering less than 1 per cent of Palestinian Jewry and denounced by their community, began taking reprisals for Arab and British mistreatment of Jews.

(13) Many Arabs have left the new state of Israel, not because of Jewish terrorism, but because of Arab and British fear propaganda. Since British influence ended with termination of the Mandate on May 15, 1948, most Arabs in Israeli-captured territory, such as the 70,000 in Galilee, have remained in their villages.

(14) There are Palestinian Arabs serving by choice in the Israeli army.

(15) The proposed Israeli Constitution zealously guards the civil rights and cultural autonomy of the Arab. . .

Editor:

Since the Arabs and the Jews have gotten together on the island of Rhodes under the auspices of the United Nations to settle their differences, perhaps it is not amiss at this time to suggest a constructive program for the betterment of the Middle East in our long-sought-for "all world-one world society." Mr. Truman has already spoken of the desire of the American government for the bettering of "backward areas" of the world as a bulwark for democracy.

In the state of Israel the social and economic planners have a social democratic government that is a going concern. The Jewish community in Israel, present day descendants of a people with millenia of worldwide contributions, has already proved its capacity for enlightened technological, social, and economic productivity. What better demonstration-ground for their Arab neighbors exists than the blossoming valleys that were once deserts and swamps, the Hadassah hospitals and the comprehensive medical health program, the Hebrew University on Mount Scopus in Jerusalem, the cooperative housing of Tel Aviv, and the social democratic parliamentary government of the infant republic.

To what avail are the fears of the imperialists and other vested interests who count on tracoma, poverty, filth, and illiteracy to rouse a population to the pitch of "holy war," when all these people desire is bread and gardens, doctors and teachers to raise them from squalor of mind and body.

Let the social planners and the rabble-rousers both watch the veiled Arab women cast their ballot for Arab representatives to the Israeli Assembly on January 25th or let them visit the free Arab-language schools or the Hadassah hospitals who drew no line at racial or cultural origins.

The state of Israel is born in the Jewish tradition of social and economic justice. Perhaps the contribution of the Jews in the 20th century to the world lies in the sphere of area planning and reconstruction. Israel invites its Arab and other United Nations neighbors to pitch in and cooperate.

Tar Heels Meet Wildcats Here Tonight

MONOGRAM MUSINGS

By Bill Pritchard

Backing Basketball Benefit

Next Tuesday night at 8:00 p.m., in Woollen gym, the Monogram club will sponsor a doubleheader basketball program that is guaranteed to contain more laughs and thrills than the Cat Girl at a spinsters' tea party. The affair is being billed under the title of a "benefit for the polio fund" but the immediate benefit will be for the spectators who attend. It's a sure-fire rib-tickler, with money's worth.

The first game on the program will be an abreviated affair that will affect you with the same dominating "farce" of a genuine football game, finding the linemen pitted against the men they've been opening holes for all year. Billed as strictly a grudge fight, the larger linemen will be out to grab the spotlight from the "ballhearing" backs as the emphasis changes from rapid running to fancy dribbling. Participating will be such stars as Mike [illegible] a bundle") Rubish, "Sure-Shot Stan" Marczyk, "Nemo" [illegible], "Buckets" Varney, "Easy Ed" Knox, John "The Hook" [illegible]onts, "Points" Powell, those two "Phizz Kids", Bo Kennedy [illegible] Bill Flamisch and many others. So blow the whistle and [illegible] the blood flow.

Clowns' First Home Appearance

In the second, and feature, game of the evening, the undefeated Carolina Clowns will play hosts to an all star outfit from Pittsboro which goes under the title of the "Clodhoppers", but don't let the name fool you. They know how to play basketball.

Tuesday evening will mark the first appearance of the popular Clowns before a local audience. However, boasting such names as Charlie "Choo-Choo" Justice, Art Weiner, Bob Cox, Fred Swartzburg, Jim Hamilton, Bobby Weant, Bernie McKiernan, the mateur Clowns, under the very capable management of Claude Crocker, have marked up an impressive record within and outside of the state. Combining vaudeville with basketball, the Clowns have made a hit with the spectators wherever they have played. The horseplay before and during the game, plus the superior brand of basketball that the local team displays, really provides a fine evening's entertainment.

Clowns Are 'Outcasts'

The original Clowns, known then as the Carolina Freshmen All Stars, began their sports saga in 1945, when a group of outcasts, who for one reason or another were unable to participate in collegiate, banded together and began scheduling games around the state with local amateur and semi-professional ball clubs. On the first squad were such oldies" as Clyde King (now a professional baseball pitcher for the Brooklyn Dodgers), Soc Creticos, Randy Brown, Crocker and others. These boys entered the Piedmont Open Invitational at Greensboro, that year, and literally walked off with first place, winning in the finals by some 30 points. There were some good outfits in that tourney, too. The season record for the "All Stars" that year was a neat 12-0.

The next year, under the same title, the team added Jack Fitch to its roster, and again walked off with the Piedmont Open tournament, posting a season record of 16 wins and no losses.

It was in 1947 that the present name, the "Carolina Clowns," was adopted by the team. A new roster appeared, also, featuring Art Weiner, Dick Donnan, Joe Wright, Jim Camp, Justice, Fitch and other well known campus athletes. This time, they took top trophy in the North and South Carolina AAU championships, held at Winston-Salem, while losing the only game the team has ever lost—that to the Carolina Freshman team by one point, so, at least, they kept it in the family.

In '48, the Clowns had gained such nation-wide recognition that Look magazine sent a photographer on one of the trips with the team in order to take pictures for a feature story, which, incidentally, is to appear in an issue this spring.

This year the Clowns received invitations from all over the east coast from New Jersey to Florida to appear in games and tournaments. The team is also playing six benefit games throughout the state for the current polio drive. It seems proper to add that the group is strictly an amateur team, that plays for the fun of the game, with all proceeds from their games going to charity or other worthy organizations.

They Have Talent, Too

To give you an idea of what to expect besides basketball next Tuesday night, it should be noted that the Clowns include in their troupe such routines as tumbling, with local boys Bob Hurley, Darrell Byerly and "Rasp" Berry; a tap dance sequence by "True-Toe" Bob Cox and Betty Doss; a duet made up of Buddy Spain and Hurley Parrish. Oh, yes, a newcomer named Norman Cordon is also included in the cast, but his talent is untested, thus far. In addition, the entire troupe participates in pre-game and halftime antics that are sure to keep your funnybone jumping.

Coy Carson Increases Point Total To 245 to Pace Carolina Scorers

Coy Carson, Carolina's favorite son on the basketball court, again tops all the Tar Heels in the point column with 245 markers. Coy unraveled the Virginia Tech defenses Monday night and sent 21 points through the hoop to bring his point average to better than 16 per contest.

Hugo Kappler, the Tar Heels' other able forward, found the range against VPI also and added a hefty 19 points to the scoreboard. This moved Kappler ahead of Center Nemo Nearman in the scoring race.

The only other change in the ranks was the jump of John Tsantes from seventh place to sixth. John was also hot Monday night, adding 13 points to his total. He replaced teammate Howard Deasy, who trails him by a slim two point margin.

The team average jumped two points during the week, and now the cagers have averaged 58 points per game.

The totals:

Player	fg	ft	tp
Carson	102	41	245
Kappler	54	24	132
Nearman	35	59	129
Nyimicz	45	17	107
Ryan	34	8	76
Tsantes	23	10	56
Deasy	21	12	54
Thorne	18	3	39
Mitchell	5	1	11

Conference Tilt Scheduled at 8 In Woollen Gym

By Zane Robbins

Carolina's unpredictable cagers will tangle with an equally unpredictable foe tonight when the Tar Heels square off against the Davidson Wildcats at 8 o'clock in Woollen gym.

The hot-and-cold Wildcats will bring a strong quint here for tonight's game, and might well upset the Carolina apple-cart that has rolled to six Southern conference victories in eight outings.

In pre-season ratings the two loop foes were rated on near-even terms, and both were mentioned as conference "dark horses." The Tar Heels have gone out and amazed everyone since the beginning of the season, however, and are currently ranked with N.C. State and Duke as one of the top three in the conference. Recent Associated Press ratings ranked the Carolinians 28th in the Nation.

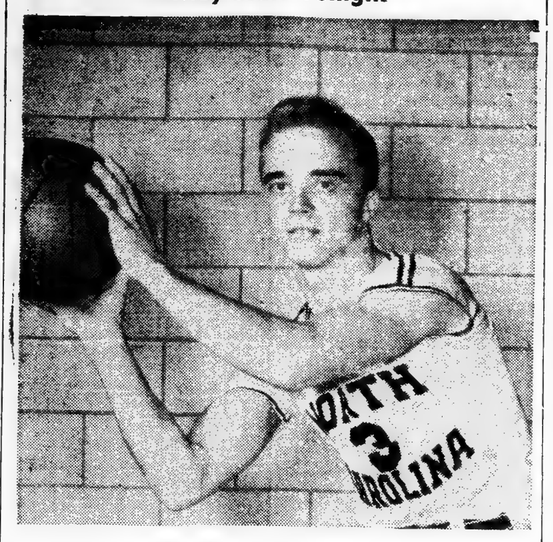
Two League Setbacks

Only surprisingly-strong George Washington and mighty State have administered the lash to the Tar Heels in conference play, while Wake Forest, William and Mary, Maryland, Washington and Lee, and Virginia Tech have fallen before the Carolinians. The latter has lost twice to Carolina.

The Wildcats will be up against their toughest opponent of the season in tonight's tussle and pressure might play a major role in the final outcome of the game. The none-too-steady Davidson lads have turned in creditable performances in recent games, but none of the competition has been nearly as stiff as that they will encounter tonight.

In Monday night's 78-59 rout of Virginia Tech, the Tar Heels turned in one of their best shooting matches of the year. In 68 attempts from the floor, the Scottmen connected on 30 for an accuracy percentage of .44.

Tsantes Leads



Big John Tsantes, one of the top reserves, capitalized on five of six cracks at the basket in rolling up 13 points during his limited tour of duty against the Gobblers, and his excellent performance has warranted a shot at the first string. He may get that chance tonight.

With sparkling Rip Ryan out with a strained ankle, Coach Tom Scott will have to use either Tsantes, Charlie Thorne, or Howard Deasy in the vacated guard slot. Thorne is the only one of the trio that is a guard but it is expected that Scott might install Deasy, who started the season as a guard, or Tsantes in the number five position in order to gain a height advantage. All three turned in sterling performances against VPI. Thorne collected six points and Deasy hit for nine in Monday's bout.

The Davidson attack will center around big Buddy Cheek, the lanky Wildcat center who garnered All-Conference honors last year, Whit Cobb, and Williams. The talented Cheek is ranked as one of the best pivotmen in Davidson history and is a headache to opponents with his accurate shots from all angles.

Forwards Coy Carson and Hugo Kappler, along with pivotman Nemo Nearman and Captain Dan Nyimicz will form the nucleus of the Carolina attack in tonight's battle.

'No Comment,' Snavely Replies To Queries on Reed Departure

By Larry Fox

"No comment" or "I really couldn't say" were the statements most heard around Woollen gym yesterday concerning the surprise resignation of Max Reed, former assistant football coach at the University.

Head Coach Carl Snavely, with whom had been intimatley associated for 20 years, would make no statement concerning the reasons for Reed's resignation, any job possibilities his former line coach had, or a possible replacement for the man known as "Melancholy Max".

Jim Gill, a present member of the Carolina grid staff, has been mentioned as a possible successor to Reed.

Rumors concerning a shakeup in the Carolina coaching staff began circulating soon after Carolina's Sugar Bowl loss to Oklahoma with almost every Tar Heel grid coach mentioned for one or another of the several vacant posts around the country.

The surprise was that Reed, who was Snavely's right hand man, suddenly resigned his position. He had first combined with Snavely at Bucknell, Reed's alma mater, back in 1929 after a shoulder injury has terminated Reed's professional grid career.

Reed starred at Bucknell for four seasons, captaining the team in his senior year and then competed in professional football, which was then in its infancy. He played for the Frankfort Yellowjackets in 1926 and '27 when that team was one of the stalwarts of the National Football league and then moved on to the New York Giants for his final season as a player.

Snavely and Reed spent five years together at Bucknell in addition to nine years at Cornell and six at Carolina.

The two men worked very closely and Reed sat next to Snavely on the bench during every game their teams played.

Reed, a quiet, rather gruff man, was a hard man to get to know, as many of the players could testify, but those who did get to know him, grew to like Silent Max Reed.

Lanier to Florida

DENTON, Jan. 27—(UP)—Max Lanier, former St. Louis Cardinal pitcher, locked up his home here today and headed for St. Petersburg, Fla., hoping to regain his eligibility to play in American baseball.

Lanier was banned from U.S. baseball several years ago when he left the National league Cards to join a Mexican league club.

Returning to the States, he made his home here until his wife was killed last Christmas eve in an auto accident. Since then he has sold his home, Lanier said, and will take his three children with him to Florida.

"I'm still ineligible to play in the United States, but I hope Commissioner Chandler will reconsider my case soon," he added.

St. Petersburg is the winter training camp of the Cardinals.

MORRISON RESIGNS

PHILADELPHI, Jan. 27—(UP)—Ray Morrison, famed originator of football's "Flying Circus" formation, suddenly resigned today as head football coach at Temple university.

Morrison walked into the office of Earl Yeomans, Temple director of athletics, and requested that he be relieved of his coaching duties. Yoemans agreed and that's all there was to it.

Yoemans said Morrison felt his resignation would be "of mutual interest to himself and to Temple.

Hannegan Peddles Redbirds Because of Poor Health

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 27—(UP)—Robert E. Hannegan announced today that he has sold his interest in the Cardinal baseball club to Fred M. Saigh, Jr., for reasons of health.

In a statement released to newspapermen at the Cardinal office, the club president and former postmaster-general said:

"My physician has advised me that the tension and pressure of work as president of the St. Louis Cardinals is not conducive to the completion of the health program he has outlined for me."

Saigh, 42-year-old attorney who had been vice-president and secretary of the club under Hannegan, was one of the group that bought the Cardinals from Sam Breadon in 1947 for a reported $3,500,000.

Hannegan gave up his job in the presidential cabinet and retired from active politics to take over the Redbirds.

SNEED AHEAD

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan 27—(UP)—Slow-talking Sam Sneed, the veteran golfer from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., moved fast enough today to pair a 35-33 for a three-under-par 68 and the first round lead in the $10,000 Phoenix open golf tournament.

'Cats Meet Oxford

Chapel Hill high school's unbeaten Wildcats, victors in seven straight contests will be out to better their record when they meet the Oxford high cagers in the high school tin can tonight at 8 o'clock.

The boy's game will head a tripleheader between the two schools, with the Jayvees slated to take the floor at 6:15 and the girl's teams scheduled to meet at 7:15.

In their last outing the 'Cats had a close call against Roxboro, before winning, 43-42, in overtime. Coach Bill Grice will probably start the same five that took the floor against Roxboro.

Air Reserve Squadron Formed; Elstum Is C.O.

By Owen Lewis

The 601st Air Force reserve composite squadron, 14th Air Force, has been activated in Chapel Hill, it was announced here yesterday. The announcement came in the form of an order by Brig. Gen. Ralph A Snavely, vice-commander of the 14th Air Force, from his headquarters in Olando, Fla.

Commanding officer of the newly-activated unit is Lt. Col. Maurice Elstun, instructor in the romance languages department of the University. Colonel Elstun, now working on a fellowship in Argentina, will return to the United States shortly.

Fourty-nine officers and 15 enlisted men-students, faculty members and townspeople—have joined the unit, according to Capt. James H. Caldwell, adjutant of the squadron. As a composite squadron, the local unit has room for a total of 500 men, and all air force veterans, whether officers or enlisted men, are urged to contact Capt. Caldwell, 212 Saunders, or Maj. C. C. Carter, Bingham hall. Major Carter serves as president of the local Air Reserve association.

The new composite squadron will hold its first meeting on Monday, January 31, at 5 o'clock in the Air ROTC building, and those interested in joining the unit should be present.

At the present time, members of the composite squadron receive no pay for their drills. However, if a sufficient number of personnel in all ratings can be procured, the squadron can be changed to a Table of Organization and Equipment unit, and subsistence payments can be secured.

The local unit is the only composite squadron in North Carolina. The third reserve unit to be formed in the state, it was preceded by TO-E units in Charlotte and Winston-Salem.

Truman Orders Disaster Bill To Be Drawn Up

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—(UP)—President Truman today ordered federal works administrator Philip B. Fleming to draft a $10,000,000 general disaster relief act to provide immediate funds for such emergencies as the western blizzard.

Fleming said after a White House meeting that Mr. Truman wanted the money available so he would not have to go to Congress each time there is a disaster.

Fleming's agency is coordinating federal relief work in the western blizzard areas in an effort to save millions of head of snowbound livestock from starvation.

Congress today rushed through an emergency bill adding $500,000 to the president's disaster relief fund, and Mr. Truman indicated that he will ask even more for the blizzard areas.

The Senate meanwhile passed and sent to the House another $3,000,000 aid measure to reimburse federal agencies for the money they already are spending to help open roads, remove snow and transport feed in the storm zone.

Flood Threatens Tennessee Area; Families Moved

RIPLEY, Tenn., Jan. 27—(UP)—Red Cross workers evacuated 41 families from the lowlands of the Mississippi river near here today and alerted some 110 other families as the river reached its highest peak since the floods of 1937.

Mrs. R. E. Crowder, executive secretary of the Lauderdale county chapter of the Red Cross, said 75 tents are en route from Memphis to house the other 110 families if they have to be moved from the flood-threatened areas.

U. S. Army engineers at West Memphis, Ark., said the lowland sections in Lauderdale county "are poorly protected against flood waters," but added that engineers have only "been alerted to watch flood conditions" as yet.

Post-seekers will be considered in the following order:

Thursday: sophomore candidates at 2 o'clock; juniors at 3 o'clock; any sophomores and juniors who could not be present in the afternoon will be taken at 7:30 Thursday evening.

Wednesday; senior candidates at 2 o'clock; pharmacy and graduate men at 3 o'clock; any seniors, pharmacy and graduate men who could not be present in the afternoon at 7:30.

The tri-partisan session yesterday passed rules for permanent operation of the board.

Provisions are:

1. Four representatives from each party will sit on the board.

2. Nominations will be made as follows. five seniors, five juniors, five sophomores, three pharmacy students and three graduate students.

3. The presiding officer of the board will be the holdover member of the Men's Honor council.

Previously, the agreement governing the board called for renewal of rules each year. The set-up passed yesterday will provide a permanent precedent for future tri-partisan selection of council candidates.

Seven Months Cost 26 U. S. Airlifters

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—(UP)—The Air Force reported today that it cost 26 American lives and $106,750,000 for U. S. planes to fly 651,953 tons of supplies into Berlin during the first seven months of the airlift.

It said British planes carried 220,204 tons during the same period. Both Air Force and Navy planes were used in the American operations.

The UVA application was not completed in time, Allen remarked, and he could not give the UVA permission to hold the dance.

However, Newton said it was his impression that arrangements were in order for the dance. He declared he had seen Allen last Tuesday in regard to using Woollen gymnasium for the March of Dimes dance.

Allen advised him to contact Gus Johnson, chairman of the Dance committee, about the dance arrangements.

Newton said he had seen Johnson who assured him that the dance could be held. With so many activities scheduled for the gym Saturday night, he decided to hold the dance in the UVA clubhouse.

He said the first indication he received that anything was wrong was when Allen told him the dance could not be held.

TD To Play Here For Mid-Winters

The German club announced yesterday that Tommy Dorsey, orchestra leader turned disc jockey turned orchestra leader, will return to the campus on Feb. 11 and 12 to play for two dances and a concert during the Winter Germans.

TOMMY DORSEY, the sentimental gentleman himself, is returning to the campus to play for the Midwinter Germans. German club officials say that Tommy promises to be a good boy this time.

Bob MacMillan, German club president, said the Friday night dance will be from 9 until 1 o'clock and the Saturday night affair will be from 8 o'clock until midnight.

Both dances are formal, he said. The concert will he held Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Memorial hall. The two-hour program will feature vocalists Lucy Ann Polk, Denny Dennis and the "Sentimentalists."

Presently, Tommy Dorsey has one of the top dance bands in the country. He has gained high honors in annual polls conducted by "Metronome," "Downbeat" and in "Billboard," magazines.

This will be Dorsey's second appearance in Chapel Hill. In November of 1946 his orchestra played for the Duke weekend Grail dance. The well-known bandmaster was sued by the Grail for $20,000 for breach of contract on grounds that he did not bring his full orchestra to the campus.

The Grail said at the time that relations with Dorsey during the weekend were "not too good." German club officials said yesterday, however, that Dorsey was being very cooperative and sincerely wished for a fair second chance at the University.

Military Ball Will Be Held In GM Tonight

The first annual formal military ball to be staged by the Air ROTC unit will be held tonight in the main lounge of Graham Memorial from 8:30 until 12 o'clock, Cadet Lt. C. B. Mendenhall, special services officer for the unit announced yesterday.

A feature of the dance will be the selection of "Miss Honorary Cadet Colonel" from among the wives and dates of the attending cadets. The winner of the contest will be awarded an orchid and be a special guest of honor at a formal review of the unit later in the year, Mendenhall said.

A full program of entertainment is being planned for the cadets and their wives and dates during the day. Included in the program will be the showing of a film, "Combat America," at 3:30 this afternoon in Roland Parker lounges 2 and 3. The film is in color and is the story of the flying fortress crews of the 351st Bombardment group. The picture opens with the group's training at a field in Colorado and follows them from there to actual combat over Germany. The picture was filmed by Maj. Clark Gable for the Air Force.

The dance will begin immediately following the reception which will be held from 8:30 until 9 o'clock.

NORTH STATE ROUNDUP

Dimes Stolen

DURHAM, Jan. 28—(UP)—Two thefts involving March of Dimes funds were reported today by Johnny Forlines Jr., general chairman of Durham's 1949 campaign, and a third theft was reported by police.

School Sham

THOMASVILLE, Jan. 28—(UP)—City School Superintendent Charles F. Carroll of High Point said today that North Carolina's highly-rated rural school transportation system was a sham.

Creech Executed

RALEIGH, Jan. 28—(UP)—His last-day pleas for Clemency ignored, James R. Creech, 37, son of a wealthy tobacco grower, went to his death today in the Central prison gas chamber.

Body Identified

ELIZABETHTOWN, Jan. 28—(UP)—Police today identified the body found in the House river Wednesday as that of David James Andres, 35, of Near Ivanhoe

Commies Charge 'Leaflet Bombing'

NANKING, Jan. 28—(UP)—The Communists today accused the government of using leaflet raids to mask "shameless and continuous" bombing of Communist territory.

A Communist radio broadcast renewed the onslought on "reactionary" Nationalist peace offers, charging that government planes mixed bombs with peace pamphlets in recent raids over Red-held cities and towns.

The broadcaster listed Tsinan, Suchow and Lanfeng, points south of Peiping, and unnamed towns in northern Ankhel psovince as scenes of "peace bombings."

"On one hand, the . . . reactionary government calls for peace," the broadcast said. "On the other hand, they are shamelessly and continuously bombing liberated areas. This act has aroused the wrath of the people of the liberated areas."

Meanwhile, the government pressed for truce talks and Red armies advanced farther southward toward this capital. It appeared that the future of China, peace or continued war, might be decided in a matter of days.

Training Officer Will Be Absent

Wilson Honeycutt, public law 16 veterans training officer, will not be in his office in Peabody hall Monday. However, he will resume his regular office hours Wednesday.

Federal Aid Is Discussed By UNC, Elon

Plans Are Laid For Next Debate

The University varsity debate team and the Elon college squad met in non-decision debate Thursday, discussing the subject, "Resolved: that the federal government should equalize education in tax-supported schools by means of annual grants."

Herb Mitchell and Paul Roth took the affirmative, opposing the Elon negative team of Bill Wilkins and Kenneth T. Jacobs.

Mrs. Mary C. Engstrom, Debate council advisor, rendered a thorough criticism of both teams. Plans were made for a return decision debate to be held at Elon, February 17. At the same time, a non-decision freshman debate will be held with the Elon freshman squad.

The freshman team is still in the embryo stage and members of the squad are in the process of being selected. Tryouts are scheduled to be held Tuesday afternoon at 3:35 in Graham memorial.

The varsity debate team recently finished a northern swing. During this tour, the team was described by experts as "outstanding."

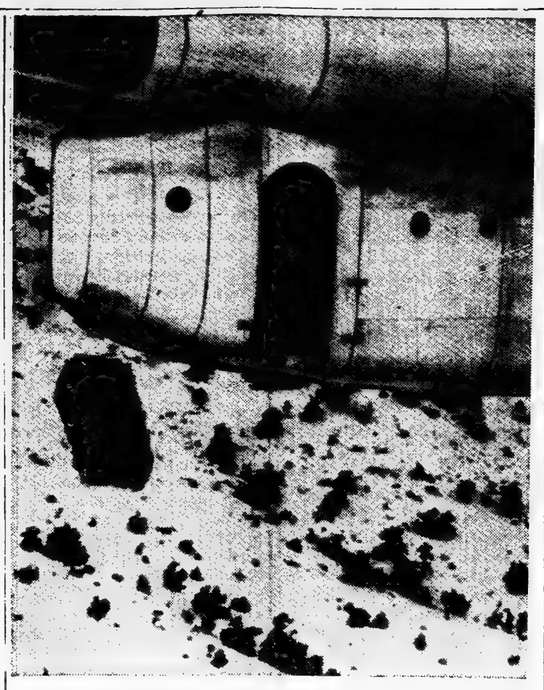
The Debate council program began in October with the intramural debate tournament. The tournament was won by Hurshell Keener and Charles Dixon, affirmative team, representing Old East dormitory.

All debates this year have been on the topic of federal aid in tax-supported schools.

The varsity squad opened its season with a non-decision meet with the University of Virginia.

At Georgetown university, the university negative team won in debate, with Paul Roth selected the best speaker of the eight present.

Following the Georgetown meet, the squad moved to the University of Pennsylvania and Columbia university. Completing the successful northern swing, the University's affirmative team won over Boston university's negative, at the same time their affirmative defeating our negative.



The debate teams operate under the auspices of the Debate council with Mrs. Engstrom and Gerald Barrett, actinng as advisors.

Square Dance Slated Tonight

The Presbyterian church will hold its weekly square dance and student get-together tonight at 8 o'clock in the church rear, Rex Reckendorf, publicity agent, said yesterday.

Dick Weaver, of the sociology department, will be the featured caller, bringing with him several new records. Participants will dance to the strains of mountain music, European folk tunes and conventional square set numbers.

Refreshments will be served during the dance, and everyone is welcome to attend, Reckendorf said.

A BALE OF HAY is dropped from a U.S. Air Force "Flying Boxcar" to help feed starving cattle cut off from regular food in snowbound eastern Nevada. It is estimated that more than 200,000 cattle and a million sheep are in danger of starvation in Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, South Dakota and sections of North Dakota and Montana. A U. S. Senate committee approved a $750,000 fund to finance rescue work.

Tulsa Editor Addresses Press Institute Session

Jenkins Lloyd Jones, editor of the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune was the principal speaker at yesterday morning's session of the North Carolina Press association's newspaper institute.

Speaking on monopoly newspapers, Jones said, "It is ironical that the press is being accused of bringing about a condition which it has actually fought against."

Admitting that monopoly newspapers are here to stay, Jones continued, "The crowning irony of it all is that the left-wingers and self-styled liberals who are loudest in their opposition to newspaper monopoly, are the ones who usually applaud the movement by unions to get more for less production."

Miss Beatrice Cobb, editor of the Morganton News-Herald and longtime secretary of the press association, spoke on her recent round-the-world trip at a luncheon meet in the Carolina Inn.

Miss Cobb described flying the Berlin airlift as her biggest thrill on the 20,000-mile journey. She said that in Prague they were unable to get tickets to a Russian-sponsored movie, "The American Menace," because of a heavy demand on tickets.

Meetings of various regional daily and weekly groups were held in the afternoon.

A speech by Assistant Secretary of State George V. Allen highlighted last night's banquet at Duke university. Governor Kerr Scott presented press awards after Allen's talk.

A past president's breakfast and a short business meeting of NCPA will close the three-day institute this morning.

Minister Makes Concluding Talk Of Religion Week

"Man as a king overplayed his authority, and therefore the kingdom of God is at hand," said Dr. John A. Redhead, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Greensboro, in his concluding address of Religious Emphasis week Thursday night.

Dr. Redhead said a modern myth in the inate goodness and ability of man led to a belief in groups of men, and finally to a belief in the organization of man into government.

"When man got rid of God as a ruler," he continued "he set out to rule himself and opened his arms to the coming of dictators."

The religious leader said there are two phases of life, the spiritual and the material. The spiritual should be the center and the material, the circumference, he added.

"Religion has been shifted from the center to the circumference," Dr. Redhead said, "and that's the reason why churches have become relatively irrelevant."

He continued, "Tension has grown up between the scientific and the religious phases of our life. The duty is upon us to give God the right away."

Religious Emphasis week, which featured afternoon seminars, classroom and dormitory visits, evening addresses and a convocation, began Monday morning and lasted through Thursday.

The purpose of Religious Emphasis week is to stimulate closer cooperation between the various denominations on campus through bringing top clergymen to the campus for one week during each school year.

Dr. Fey to Talk On Conference

Dr. Harold E. Fey of Chicago, managing editor of Christian Century, will give a public address on his impresions of the Amsterdam Conference of World Council of Churches Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in the Methodist church.

Dr. Fey is also speaking at the Institute on Religion now being held in Raleigh.

Playwright Says

'Pinafore' Is Still 'Bright, Fresh'

By Sam Hirsch

"I saw my first Gilbert and Sullivan opera in Boston when I was eight years old," said Walter Pritchard Eaton, distinguished author, critic and playwright currently teaching playwriting with the Carolina Playmakers.

"It was with my sister," he went on, "who was all of two and a half years older than I. We were seeing the first Mikado company in this country, and I laughed and jumped in my seat so much that she tried to restrain me, proper Boston lady that she was. She was mortified, when an old dignified man, with a long, white beard, leaned over and whispered, 'Let the child laugh! ' "

"To this day," Eaton observed, "I can't resist anything they've composed. It's the most perfect thing of its kind written for the last hundred years. Chances are nothing like it will ever appear again. There's a lift to the music, a swing and a rhythm that's contagious. I was walking by Memorial hall last week and heard the opening song. I stopped and went in, and, you know, 'We sailed the ocean blue and our saucy ship's a beauty' is just as bright and fresh as when I first heard it years ago!"

Eaton has seen the D'Oyle Carte company—the original producing company of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas—perform all the operas they have in their repertory. He remembers an amusing incident in connection with this world-renowned company. It was while he headed the Playwright department at Yale, and the company was playing two weeks in New Haven.

"We had just produced 'Utopia Limited," the last the team wrote, and one the D'Oyle Carte did not have in its tour. Most of them had never seen it, and

Atom Group Studying Graham's Clearance

Consultation Will Be Held Before A.E.C.

Matter Will Not Be Heard Publicly

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—(UP)—The joint congressional Atomic Energy committee is looking into the clearance of Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of North Carolina university, for limited access to classitied atomic information, it was revealed today.

The joint committee's newly-elected chairman, Sen. Brien McMahon, D., Conn., refused to say who raised the question before the committee or the trend of the discussion.

Dr. Graham also heads the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Research and is closely identified with the Southern Conference of Human Welfare.

McMahon said that the committee will discuss his clearance with the Atomic Energy commission. The Committee has refused to discuss reports that Graham was cleared by it over the protests of its own security office and its Loyalty Review board.

McMahon said he had called an open hearing for next Wednesday for the purpose of questioning the commission on its annual report and its program. It will be the first time such matters have been heard publicly.

"It is my hope to have open hearings on all matters properly the concern of the committee, subject to the necessity of security of our country," he said. But he added that the Graham matter would not be discussed publicly.

Fantasy Tryouts Set for Tuesday

Tryouts for "Apple Tree Farm," a Laboratory theater production, will be held Tuesday afternoon from 2 until 6 o'clock in the Rendezvous room. Parts are open for students and townspeople as actors, dancers, singers, and technicians.

The new musical fantasy, an original play by Stanley and Ida Lupino of Hollywood, with music by Bob MacIlwinnen of Fayetteville, graduate student in the University dramatic art department, will be presented here on April 4 and 5. The play is for the benefit of the Koch Memorial fund. This will be its first presentation anywhere.

Marty Jacobs, who directed last year's "Sweep It Clean" by the Laboratory theater, will also direct this year's work.

UVA Polio Dance To Use Juke Box

The University Veterans association March of Dimes dance will be held this evening with a juke box instead of a combo providing the music. The change in orchestral arrangements for the affair was made yesterday after Dean of Students Fred Weaver refused to intervene to reverse Coach Marvin Allen's ruling that the dance could not be held.

Allen told the UVA Thursday that the dance would have to be called off if any type of orchestra was to be used, since the veterans' "applied for permission too late for this weekend." Dance committee rules requires the organization giving a dance to secure permission to hold it on Monday of the week the dance is to be held.

Gene Newton, president of the UVA, said yesterday that even though the combo planned for the March of Dimes affair would not be allowed to play, a juke box dance would be held to benefit the infantile paralysis fund drive.

Newton said he conferred with Dean Weaver yesterday about the ruling made by Allen and backed up the Dance committee prohibiting the use of an orchestra. He said Weaver refused to intervene in the situation.

In lieu of the smaller amount expected to be collected at the dance, the UVA, Newton said, will contribute $25, the maximum contribution allowed by the group's constitution, to the March of Dimes. He said he would introduce a bill to contribute an additional $25 to the cause next month.

Concerning the ruling that the Dance committee had to be notified by a certain time if a dance was to be held with any type of orchestra, an employe of Graham Memorial commented yesterday that the Rendezvous room has continually used a three-piece combo at its Friday night dance sessions.

James E. Webb Is Given Oath In Ceremonies

Broughton, Hoey Observe Occasion

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—(UP)—James E. Webb, 42-year-old former budget director, was sworn in today as the new Undersecretary of State.

While his predecessor, Robert A. Lovett, looked on, the oath of office was given to Webb by Raymond Muir, assistant Chief of State department protocol.

More than 150 persons including cabinet members and congressional leaders attended the ceremony in the office of Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

As Acheson handed Webb his commission, he said "I congratulate myself" on the appointment.

Webb replied that he would carry out the duties of his new job with "fidelity, faith and courage."

Webb is a native of Oxford, N. C. Cabinet members attending were Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder, Navy Secretary John L. Sullivan; Interior Secretary Julius Krug and Attorney General Tom Clark.

Sens. J. Melville Broughton and Clyde R. Hoey, Democrats, headed the North Carolina congressional delegation which attended. Chairman Sol Bloom, D., N. Y., of the House Foreign affairs committee, and Lewis W. Douglas, U. S. ambassador to Britain, also were there.

Sound and Fury To Meet Tonight

All members of Sound and Fury will meet this evening at 8:30 in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial. The meeting will be open to all persons who are interested in the organization. Those S & F members who were presented at the reorganization meeting three weeks ago are specially urged to attend.

To Plan Drive

'Solicitors' Supper' Planned By YMCA in Baptist Church

Charlie Fox, chairman of the YMCA Finance committee, yesterday set Monday at 5 o'clock for the "Solicitors' Supper," to be given in the Baptist church for all solicitors in the YM drive beginning Tuesday.

Guest speakers at the supper will be Chancellor R. B. House, Jess Dedmond, studennt body president, and Warren Ashby, chairman of the YM advisory board. Ed McLeod is in charge of arrangements.

"The supper will open the YMCA $5,000 membership drive," Fox said, "and will need the support of all those students who did not become members of the Y during fall registration. Students contributing to the Y budget will receive membership cards entitling them to full YMCA privileges."

Fox went on to list the benefits to which members are entitled, "the membership card indicates that the bearer endorses the purposes of the Y, identifies him as a bona fide student or faculty member of the University, entitles him to the courtesies of any and every Y in the world and entitles him the privileges of 'visiting member' in practically all city associations."

Money obtained from this drive will be split three ways among sections of the campus, Fox continued. $1,500 is earmarked to go to fraternities, $1,500 to town men and $2,000 to dormitories.

"Solcitations will be made by door-to-door canvassers, with the exception of men living in

American Legion To Sponsor Dance

Chapel Hill American Legion post 6 will sponsor a square dance at the legion hut tonight to benefit the March of Dimes fund drive.

The dance will begin at 8 o'clock and continue until midnight. Chairman Paul H. Robertson said all students and townspeople were invited to the dance.

Pensive Publius

What Can I Do, Coach?

Ignorance is bliss, but it sometimes blisters. Publius had a friend from the irrigated pine lands of south Georgia which most people mistakenly call the swamps. This friend said that most of the people who could help Georgia politics through their ability and character gave it a wide berth. Politics is beneath them. They deplore the states' political leadership, but the familiar gripe is their only contribution to the bad situation. So the state's government is not a respectable institution—even though most of its politicians should be in one. The state's highways are paved with sand and bubble gum, and the lawn of the governor's mansion is a combination cow pasture and chicken yard.

The dignity and effectiveness of campus government could decline in a similar fashion.

The low percentage of students voting in the last few elections is an indication that the antagonistic attitude has been deadly effective. Representative student government is not very representative when only a small per cent of the students on the campus bother to cast a vote in an election.

Student government handles some important problems, as Publius well knew. He thought of several instances this year when errors were committed by student government because it did not have its finger on the pulse of the student body. Certainly the representatives are students, but Publius knew that often their actions would be more fruitful if other students would voice an opinion on matters which concern them.

Publius believed that if more students knew their representatives and demanded good ones, there would be no danger of having duds. The threat of an intelligently-cast vote is the best insurance against a poor candidate seeking office.

The students of this school should be proud, Publius thought. The University has the greatest extent of self government of any college in the country. This is in keeping with its liberal traditions. However, the "lux" that appears on the other part of the school's seal does not refer to soap. To be capable of self government, every student must be conscious of its importance, aware of its shortcomings, and willing to work for its betterment.

To be critical of campus leaders is essential, but blind criticism accomplishes nothing. This criticism, Publius knew, had become fashionable. Fashions are fine, Publius agreed, but crippled student government is a high price to pay for being fashionable.

Beware of Greeks. . . .

Peace and security are now being offered by the Communists. In a reversal of strategy they have offered the olive branch and employed a technique which will appeal to the weary Europeans. The Garry Davis cult in Paris is a manifestation of the burning desire of the French to return to the untroubled days of peace that seem so far away. Perhaps taking a cue from this group of "world citizens" begun by an American who renounced his citizenship, the Russians have assumed the ill-fitted role of uotraged virtue.

The villain in this new scene of the European farce will be the United States, of course, in the role of the power-mad militaristic capitalist. Ridiculous, of course, but it is a policy calculated to do us the most possible harm.

The Communist leaders are smart cookies, and they often gouge the temperament of nations more accurately than we can gauge election returns in this country. It is to be expected that there is nothing real or substantial behind their offers, but our diplomatic service must investigate and gain as much as possible in this peace that is offered in the cold war. Let us hope they do not make any serious blunders, for Uncle Joe has caught the attention, and the hopes of mankind.

Dean Martin: New Sensation

By Nelson Taylor
Klassification Key
* Fine
 Fair
 Futile
* Foul

All of the records included in this column are in the Chapel Hill record shops.

Frankie Lane
* It Only Happens Once
 Rosetta

"Happens" is one of the best sides that Lane has ever released. It is low, dreamy and mellow. Frankie keeps his voice from getting away on two many fluctuations and the music comes out smoothly. Wonderful tempo. The reverse is disappointing. The lyrics ruin it, though the instrumental and vocal are good.

Ella Fitzgerald
 No Sense
 Robbins Nest

This gal is her usual terrific self, and the first side, "Sense" lends itself to her treatment. The trumpet work on this tune is mighty fine, and the whole thing fits together. Ray Brown arranges both of these and comes up with some fine interpretations. "Nest" just doesn't ask for a vocal and even Ella can't make it sound like it does.

Dinah Shore
 So In Love
 Always True to You in My Fashion

"So" is in a rhumba tempo but still is dreamy and reminiscing. Much of the music in this week's column is mood music, and this definitely comes under that heading. "Fashion" is a hillbilly ditty. The lyrics are good and catchy. If Jo Stafford can do it, so can Dinah.

Eddy Howard
My Best to You
I'll Hold You in My Heart

I won't rate these two; you have heard them every night. Just wanted to let you know that the records in town.

Doris Day
 My Dream is Yours
 Somebody Like You

Doris tries to move over into Peggy Lee's field with a sexy rendition of "Dream" which tickles the spine. "Somebody" is a little faster, the lyrics are catchy, and the vocal is again fine.

Dean Martin
 Powder Your Face with Sunshine
 Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder

This guy is a little of Al Jolson, Perry Como, Bing Crosby, Frankie Lane, and Frank Sinatra but not just like any of them. He is the best thing that this reviewer has heard in many a day. Watch this boy, he is nothing short of terrific. If he only had some decent tunes to work on, he couldn't help but be rated fine.

Washington Scene

Truman's Old School Ties

By George Dixon
(Copyright, 1949, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington—If there ever was any doubt about President Truman's educational background, it can be stated definitely now that he went to school. Moreover, his school must have been the largest in the world.

Almost any Washington can testify to this. In the last week it has been our bewildered pleasure to be presented to thousands of characters, ranging in age from nineteen to ninety, with the introduction:

"I want you to meet an old school chum of Harry's"

* * *

The famous Battery D, captained by our Chief Exec, must have been similarly overcrowded, particularly with infants yet unborn. I don't know how many youths of pre-shaving age I saw with "Battery D" insignia on their shoulders, signifying they fought side by side with Harry in the first world war.

* * *

I do not believe I am overly-impressed by the trappings of dignity, but I must confess this gave me a vague shock. It seemed so—so— lese majesty, as it were.

While the President was being inaugged, the voice of the radio announcer came over, saying:

"The hot dog stand in front of the Library of Congress is doing a flourishing business."

* * *

In the welter of excitement, the kidnaping of Senator Warren G. Magnuson, of Washington, went unrecorded.

The snatch did not become an FBI case, because the solon finally was released without being taken across a state line. But he had to soothe some very offended constituents.

Senator Magnuson, who either is, or isn't, going to marry Toni Six (marked down from Toni Seven), had planned a party in his office, immediately after the inauguration, for the Washington state delegation including the contingent of Seattle cops. These voters were assembled, waiting for their host.

Mr. Magnuson was about to scram for his office when Mr. Truman and Mr. Barkley descended from the stand. The president pointed to the limousine of Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan and shouted:

"Hey, Maggie! You ride in that!"

The senator hesitated, whereupon Secretary Sullivan held the door open, crying:

"Come on! Get in! You heard the boss's orders!"

The upshot was that Mr. Magnuson had to ride in the parade all the way to the White House and then take a place in the reviewing stand. It was more than four hours before he could break away.

He was informed most of his guests had departed—grumbling maledictions at the absent host.

* * *

It remained for House minority leader Joe Martin (former speaker) to get off the last inauguration crack.

Referring, lugubriously, to the mammoth stand erected with dough appropriated by the G.O.P. 80th Congress as a salute to Dewey, Mr. Martin muttered:

"Well. . .Truman was inaugurated on a Republican platform!"

* * *

The Democrats can truthfully say they have a lot of big men in the senate.

Scott Lucas, of Illinois, who supplants Vice President Barkley as majority leader, is 6 feet 2. But he by no means dwarfs others of his colleagues.

In the six foot, or over, class are senators Clinton P. Anderson, of New Mexico, a bespectacled giant in 10-gallon hat; Estes Kefauver, of Tennessee, and the bean-polish Lyndon Johnson, of Texas.

Also Olin D. Johnston, of South Carolina; J. Melville Broughton, of North Carolina; Paul H. Douglas, of Illinois; Guy M. Gillette, of Iowa; Edwin C. Johnson, of Colorado; Robert S. Kerr, of Oklahoma, and A. Willis Robertson, of Virginia.

The Republicans have a few big ones too, but on the whole, the G.O.P. is giving away a lot of weight. It has six-footers in Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan; Bill Knowland, of California; John Bricker, of Ohio, and Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts—but nearly all the other Republicans will have to crane their necks at their Democratic conquerors.

No matter what you say, the picture is truly inspiring. It proves once again that any red-blooded American boy can become President of the United States—provided he learns to play the piano.

Passing Sentence

Make 'em Sell Subscriptions!

By Jonathan Marshall

Most students working on publications here will disagree with this column; however, if it causes any discussion in the Student Legislature when the new budget comes up, it will be worthwhile.

In many, if not most, American colleges, publications are on a voluntary financial basis. If a student does not want a publication, he does not have to pay for it.

At Carolina we are charged for publications when we pay our tuition, and in order to attend school here we must receive all student publications.

There are two inherent evils in this system. The first and most obvious is that we must pay for a publication whether we want it or not. This columnist invariably scans "Tarnation" and then throws it away in great disgust. Many students don't like "Tarnation"; some people can't find much humor, others find it too repititious, others "disgusting," and some just plain have no interest in it.

The same can be said of the Yack. Our yearbook costs about five dollars per student. It is a tremendous book, and the measure of its success seems to be how large it is, how many pictures it has, and how much it costs.

In times of a paper shortage and when people in other parts of the world are starving, both money and paper could be put to better use.

On other college campuses, the student newspaper is delivered to all students, but other publications must be sold. This is far more equitable, and especially when many students have a hard time making both ends meet financially.

There is much to be learned working on student publications, and the staffs would benefit by having to advertize and sell their publications. Of course, it would be hard at first until they had gained experience, but it is a successful reality other places.

If "Tarnation" and the "Yack" had to go out and sell their issues either through subscriptions or individual sales, they would find that they had to maintain their quality. The present low standards can be maintained when a publication knows that quality doesn't effect circulation or advertising.

Perhaps we would get a readable publication here if quality was maintained forcibly through voluntary sales.

The student government will be able to save many thousands of dollars if they put student publications on this basis, and it is hoped that they will consider it seriously when the budget comes up.

Protests Professors' Ousting

Buildings Somewhat Expensive at the University of Washington

Editor:

In Tuesday's DTH I read with dismay that Joseph Butterworth, with whom I studied for a month last summer, is one of those professors "fired for red activity" at the University of Washington. I must speak up to say that he was a real teacher, putting in arduous hours of high quality work in what must have been a thankless position. He taught only English philology, and he taught it thoroughly, with rare scholarship and rarer clarity. There was no mention of politics in his classes. That he is "incompetent to teach the truth" in his field of English philology is manifestly an absurd statement.

Dismissing an excellent teacher for something "entirely unrelated to real education and scholarly effort" is sometimes done in America, for reasons depending on expendiency, the mores or the times. These professors had refused to testify before the state legislature's crusading Committee on Unamerican Activities.

Last summer I noticed solidarity of political opinion at the University of Washington, against which very little effective expression of dissent was allowed, even in the student paper. Perhaps, as some declared, this enforced solidarity was founded on a fearful proximity of Seattle to Russia. But at the University of British Columbia, which is still nearer Russia, no such frightened and restrictive attitude prevailed.

Or perhaps the authorities at the University of Washington must keep in favor with the dominent reactionary element in the state legislature (which includes the Committee on Unamerican Activities mentioned above) in order to gain appropriations for the pseudo-Gothic buildings now springing up thickly on their campus. If so, their building program seems somewhat expensive.

Editor:

In connection with the firing of the three professors at the University of Washington, and the recent attack on free speech by our own Chancellor House at this University, it is interesting to note certain reports on academic institutions such as the one made by the president of the association of American colleges. Dr. Kenneth I. Brown, president of Denison university, Granville, Ohio, stressing the growing tendency of most educational institutions away from the three R's to the two B's (Big Business.)

In a survey by the American council on education, released last month, it was found that 455 institutions owned or operated outside business activities which netted them, in 1947, a total of $150,492,583, on which there is not the usual 38 per cent corporate taxes.

In a recent book (never reviewed), "Men Who Control Our Universities," Hubert Park Beck makes a study of 30 universities (UNC among them), showing the tie-up of universities—state and private—to business interests. Of a total of 734 trustees, only 34 were educators. The annual income of 207 trustees averaged $102,000 each. Thirty-seven of the trustees had contributed a total of $133,159.84 to eleven fascist groups such as the Crusaders and the Liberty League. 21 of the trustees were found to have been decorated by Mussolini and others received decorations from Hitler.

Another noteworthy trend in education is the high degrees given to men whose obvious cultural distinctibn is that their ranks are all higher than lieutenant: Nimitz, King, Eisenhower, MacArthur, Clark, Halsey, Forrestal, Patterson, Stimson, Bradley, Vandergrift, Wainwright, Hodges, Spaatz.

Quoting from an article published in School and Society by Dr. Monroe Deutsch, provost of the University of California:

"What reason have we to anticipate that men whose aim have been the winning of elections, or increasing the earnings of their stockholders, or even defeating the enemy in a series of bloody battles, will automatically sympathize with these ideals of a university—complete freedom of research, untrammeled freedom of teaching, and the pursuit of truth wherever that may lead?"

What happened to professors Grundlach, Phillips, and Butterworth concerns not only the students of the University of Washington, but the students of the University of North Carolina and all American institutions. The time has come to defend freedom.

Editor:

Last evening I had my evening meal at the Monogram Club. (Or was I had by the check). The following is an itemized account of the cost to the three members of my party:

I.	Fried Scallops	0.75
	French Fried Potatoes	0.15
	Bread	0.10
	Coffee	0.10	$1.10
II.	Grilled Hamburger (steak)	0.60
	Bread	0.10
	Milk	0.10
	Hamburger Sandwich	0.50	1.30
III.	Veal Cutlet	0.75
	Bread	0.10
	Coffee	0.10	0.95
	TOTAL		$3.35
	Tax		.10
	TOTAL COST		$3.45

The entree consisted of the main dish and a small slice of tomato on a leaf of lettuce, bread was not included. It is true that the price of the entree is lower than prevailing prices in town, but there are few people who complain of five or ten cents increase when two vegetables, bread, and coffee are included for that increase. The prices in the aggregate are too high, and the portions are too small even at lower prices.

The atmosphere in the club is wonderful, but the service is slow even when conditions are not crowded. There is herein only a hint of the shortcomings of the "Club."

Hereafter, I shall endeavor to investigate before committing my meagre income to so rapid depletion. I know not the course of others, but as for me, give me lower prices and better service, or I shall take my patronage elsewhere.

Chinese Puzzle

Editor:

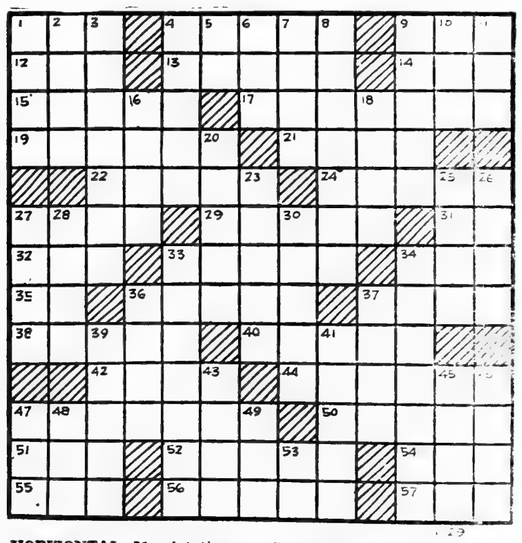
What is the explanation for the recent victories of the Communist armies against the American trained and equipped forces of Chiang? Miss Anna Louise Strong, on pages 27 and 29 of "Tomorrow's China," just published by the Committee for a Democratic Far Eastern Policy, states that the reason the Chinese Communists have received such wholehearted support from the people is found in the policy they developed through 25 years of struggle and most recently codified at the congress of 1945.

I will here paraphrase Miss Strong's summary of that policy.

1. Since China is semi-feudal and semi-colonial, the immediate goal of the people is not Socialism, but to secure independence from foreign imperialism, smash feudalism, and establish industry under forms of capitalism and democracy.

2. The main force of the democratic revolution will not be the bourgeoisie nor the proletariat, but the peasantry in alliance with the industrial workers and progressive members of the bourgeois and landlord classes.

3. Those who work the soil must secure land and be freed from crushing rents, taxes and feudal exactions.



4. Capitalism—private, cooperative, and public—must be encouraged in order to break down feudalism and to develop industrial production. Private monopoly capital will not be allowed to develop.

5. China is so large that democratic areas can be established from which democratic revolution will spread.

6. To defend such areas from the forces of feudalism aided by foreign powers, a new type of army and strategy is needed, closely integrated with the people.

7. Since many classes share in creating the new democracy, the Communists should restrict themselves to one-third of the government posts. Democracy must be based on the energetic initiative of the people.

Cagers Drop Loop Contest To Alert Davidson, 47-37

Cobb Scores 18 To Pace 'Cats; Nearman Tops Locals With 10

By Wuff Newell

Coach Tom Scott's basketballers, who appear to be a hot and cold team, were definitely on the cool side last night as the Davidson Wildcats hnaded them their third Conference defeat in nine outings, 47-37.

Davidson was ahead from the outset, as forward Bob Maner looped a field goal after 45 seconds had elapsed. The Tar Heels came close twice, but were never able to overcome the Davidson lead. By the end of the first half the Tar Heels had narrowed what once was a seven-point margin down to a three-point, 22-19 difference.

Maner opened the scoring with two field goals and Coy Carson entered with a set shot in the opening minutes of the initial period to give Davidson a two-point margin. Then Wildcat center Buddy Cheek dropped a set shot, Mike Williams added a free shot, and Tar Heel Nemo Nearman added a charity toss, to put the score 7-3, Davidson, with six minutes gone.

Lead Narrowed

Three minutes later, after Hugo Kappler's layup and a tap in by Nearman, the 'Cat lead was narrowed to two points. However, Whit Cobb jumped it back up to a six-point lead with two field goals and a charity shot. With 13 minutes gone, Davidson was ahead, 14-9.

Then the Tar Heels, who were missing more shots than they were making, warmed up a little and added seven points before the half-time gun sounded. As the teams left the floor, it was Davidson, 22-19.

Cobb, who garnered high scoring honors for the night with 18 points, opened the fireworks in the second half with a layup shot after two minutes had passed. Carson scored on a free toss and Davidson was in command with a four-point margin.

Wildcats Growl

With one-fourth of the final period in the books, the Wildcats had upped their lead to 31-23, on shots by Cheek and Williams. Three free throws and a beautiful hook shot by Tar Heel John Tsantes brought the Carolina side of the scoreboard up to 28 points, while Davidson had 33. A layup by Nearman narrowed the margin to three points.

But then the 'Cats, coming down the home stretch, opened up with another burst of scoring and with ten minutes gone they were ahead, 41-31. In the last ten minutes Davidson was matching the Tar Heels point for point and at the final whistle were ahead, 47-37.

Furman Here Tonight

The Pallidins of Furman university will invade Woollen gym for a Southern conference tilt with the Tar Heels at 8 o'clock tonight. The Carolina freshmen will meet Campbell Junior college in a preliminary bout slated for 6.

Furman turned in an impressive string of early-season victories and at one time was crowding N. C. State for conference honors. The Wolfpack invaded South Carolina a few weeks back, however, and put an end to that.

The Pallidins will come here as slight underdogs for the loop battle.

Freshman Cagers Succumb to Cats For Fourth Loss

By Lew Chapman

The Carolina freshman cage squad met and succumbed to a surprising yearling quintet from Davidson by the score of 53-46 in last night's initial half of the basketball doubleheader held in Woollen gym.

The game was somewhat of a mild upset because although the Davidson frosh were undefeated, this was their first real test and they weren't expected to survive the ordeal. But the experts were fooled as the young Wildcats rolled to their seventh victory. For the Tar Babies, it was their fourth reversal as compared to seven triumphs.

Although Dick Harter opened the fray with a foul, Davidson's Tom Coleman, a threat all night long, retaliated with two good hook shots and gave the Wildkittens the lead that they held for most of the 40 minutes. Carolina did assume the lead after nine minutes of the first half by a 10-9 count on a jump shot by Frank Eckert but Davidson hit again with two buckets materializing from their efficient fast break. Harter's scoring kept the Tar Babies close on the Wildkittens tail for the rest of the half and the intermission saw a 24-23 Davirson lead.

With the resumption of play the rejuvenated Carolina frosh struck back quickly as Eckert poured in three deuces and John Bowersox added another to take a 31-26 margin and the Carolina fans breathed easier. But Davidson slowly crawled back into contention and went ahead 35-33 after 8 minutes had elapsed. The remainder of the second half was a case of Davidson clinging to a slender lead and Carolina unable to piece together a concentrated winning drive.

Scoring honors of Coach Jim Hamilton's charges were shared by Harter and Bowersox as both scored 15 points while Eckert chipped in with 10 markers. For Davidson, it was a double-barreled forward combination that spelled docm to the Tar Babies. Forward Coleman accounted for 21 points while his running mate, Bill Brooks, was superb in the second half and notched 18 credits.

Coy Carson Leads Carolina Cagers To 12 Victories

By Buddy Vaden

Tar Heel sports fans owe a vote of thanks to the city of Asheville, North Carolina. During the fall months in Chapel Hill and stadia throughout the South, one of Asheville's favorite sons is making a name for himself, his University, and his home community. That person could be no other than Charlie Justice, All-American football star and one of the greatest athletes ever to come out of the University of North Carolina athletic plant.

But then the seasons change, and basketball comes into the limelight. Still, it's another of Asheville's young citizens that makes the news. This time it's Coy Wallace Carson, who accomplishes with a basketball what Justice does with a football.

"The Kit" came to Carolina with a flaming high school reputation. Once he scored 90 points in a YMCA game up in The Land of the Sky. His first year here was nothing spectacular. He needed experience in collegiate basketball. In his freshman year, his first on the varsity squad, he scored only three field goals all season. But he was playing on a team that boasted of such seasoned regulars and all-stars as John Dillon, Jim Hamilton, and Bob Paxton.

Gets Starting Nod

Then, in his sophomore year, he advanced to a starting berth after Coach Tom Scott lost the services of Bill Miller through an incligibility ruling. Playing only half the season as a regular, Carson scored 116 ponts. He was tested and true, ready to play with the best.

Now, in his third year, Coy is at the top of the Conference scoring heap with a total of 247 points scored in 15 games. If he maintains his steady scoring pace, and there is no reason why he shouldn't, he will walk away with top honors in the 16-club circuit.

The handsome 21-year-old commerce major enrolled at the University in 1946, then served a year in the Navy where he played ball for the Camp Perry, Virginia Naval team.

Carson is a clever ball handler, always calm and methodical on the court. His one-handed push shots are deadly and have accounted for a good part of his point total. He is a team player on the squad that has been tabbed "The Fantastic Fantoms" by sportswriters throughout the State.

One of Three

Playing on a team that had only three lettermen returned from last season (Carson was one of them), he has been the backbone of the Tar Heel scoring attack, accounting for almost 30 per cent of Carolina's points scored this season. In the opening game this year against Lenoir Rhyne he tallied 29 points, his highest single game total this year. He duplicated that feat against William and Mary, a highly regarded defensive team. In other games he has scored 19 points on two occasions, and 21 points against VPI last Monday.

With Coy Carson at one of the forward positions, the Tar Heels can always be counted on for a chance at the Conference title come March. Should the Tar Heels fail to overcome the powers of N. C. State, George Washington, and Duke, they will have another shot at the title next year for Carson will be back again, his final year at Carolina, to lead the White Phantoms to victory.

Georgia Tech Mermen Here Today; Favored Tar Heels To Seek 4th Win

By Larry Fox

For the second time this season the undefeated Carolina swimming outfit will go outside of the Southern conference for an opponent, when they face Georgia Tech in Bowman-Gray pool this afternoon with the first event scheduled to get underway at 3 o'clock.

Georgia Tech is the defending champion of the Southeastern conference and is reported to be sporting one of the strongest teams in its hisory. The Engineers have lost only one meet in the past two years and that one was to Carolina last season.

The Tech mermen will be decided underdogs, however.

Carolina and Georgia Tech both have revenge motives going in this game. While the Tar Heels broke Tech's undefeated string last year, the Engineers pulled the same trick on Carolina the season before. The Blue and White mermen had a lengthy winning streak of home engagements working until they faced the Engineers in Bowman-Gray.

This will be the second local meet in two days for the Engineers, who defeated N.C. State college in Raleigh yesterday afternoon by a 39-36 score. The meet, however, was not quite as close as the score indicated.

Johnny House will be favored in the 220-yard freestyle event while a tough fight is looming in the breaststroke where Tech's Towles is a potent factor. Towles' best times have exactly equalled those turned in by Carolina's duo of butterflyers, Dan Breeden and Gerry Cook.

The Tar Heel lineup this afternoon will be basically the same as that which defeated LaSalle here last Saturday by a 45-30 total. Six pool records were set in this contest, which was reeled off before one of the largest gatherings ever to witness a swimming meet in the South.

Of the six new marks, five also topped the best performances ever turned in this section of the country.

Probable Carolina lineup:

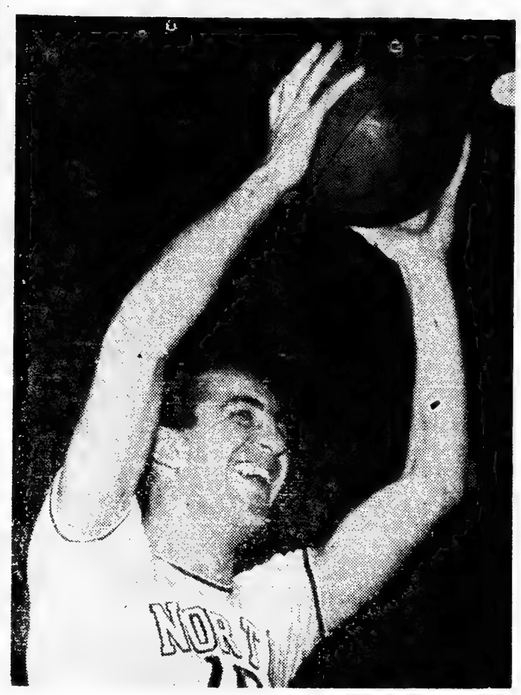
300-yard medley relay—Sper, Twining, and Osborne.

220-yard freestyle—McCauley and Basescu.

50-yard freestyle—Drew and Greenbaum.

Diving—Wichard and Beam.

100-yard freestyle—Norwood and Mericka.



150-yard Backstroke—Sper and Bippart.

200-yard Breaststroke—Breedon and Cook.

440-yard freestyle—Thomas and Hutton.

440-yard freestyle relay-Greenbaum, Twining, Drew, and Osborne.

Tar Heel Wrestlers Meet VPI In Loop Contest at Blacksburg

Coach Chuck Quinlan's eight-man grappling crew will journey to Blacksburg, Virginia tonight to meet the Virginia Tech Keydets in their third outing of the young season. In the two previous matches, the Tar Heels dropped one to N.C. State and earned an easy win over Davidson.

As a preliminary to the varsity match, the undefeated freshman squad will try to make it four in a row, having subdued with comparative ease teams from State, Greensboro high school, and Davidson.

The Tar Heels, weak in the lighter weights, will be depending on the strong middle-weight to avenge last year's one-point defeat by the Keydets. In last year's contest, the first of the season for the Carolina boys, VPI won, 17½-16½ on the Woollen gym mat.

Quinlan will probably use the same starting lineup that was so effective against the Wildcats here last Wednesday. That would put Paul Edmundson in the lightweight event, Charlie Barbosa at 128, Ed Turnley at 136, Co-Captain Carrol Fisher at 145, undefeated Phil Kemp at 155, and Co-Captain Oscar Gupton, John Stoioff, and Joe Augustine in the final three events.

The freshman match will probably open with 121-pounder Tom Williams, who wrestled for the first time here against the Davidson frosh. In previous matches, the Tar Babies had to start with a five point deficit, due to the lack of a competitor in the 121 class.

The rest of the travelling freshman squad will probably consist of Bob McGimsey, Buddy Dotson, Barry Farber, Bill Qualls, Tom Coxe, Bob Pickard and Bob Lovick.

Coaches Quinlan and Irv Zirpel and manager Bill Weatherly will also make the trip.

Brain vs. Brawn In Polio Benefit Here on Tuesday

It's brain versus brawn and speed versus size next Tuesday night as the vaunted football line faces the spectacular backs in a preliminary game in Woollen gym. The occasion is the Monogram club-sponsored polio benefit that will find the Carolina Clowns pitted against the Pittsboro Clodhoppers in the second game.

Following the slogan that "strong legs run so that weak legs may walk" the undeniable substantial legs of about twenty football stars will take the floor, accompanied by their equally substantial bodies, to battle each other in a game designed to offer the crowd a well-apportioned share of laughs and thrills. This game will not be a full length affair, because of the second game but the husky gridders can pack a lot of action into a very short time as emphasised several times this past fall.

Playing for the linemen will be such headliners as "Pro" Romano, Joe Cospito, Sid Varney, Bob Mitten, Mike Rubish, Len Szafaryn, Stan Marczyk, Bob Cox, Roscoe Hansen, and Joe Neikirk. Opposing them on the "runt" team will be Bob Kennedy, Merl Norcross, Bill Flamisch, Dick Bunting, Eddie Knox, Bill Maceyko, Bobby Weant, Bill Hayes and Joe Gurtis.

CHHS WINS AGAIN

The Chapel Hill high school cagers, undefeated to date, whipped Oxford high, 38-20 in the high school gym last night. The Wildcats will play Methodist orphanage in Raleigh tonight.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 28—(UP)—Vanderbilt's search for a football coach to replace Harold (Red) Sanders centered today on Jess Neely of Rice and Andy Pilney of Tulane, former Notre Dame star.

Tracksters Prepare For Indoor Season

Coach Dale Ranson has been putting his Tar Heel trackmen through their paces this past week, preparing them for the track competition on the next four week-ends.

Dick Taylor, who pushed world record holder Harrison Dillard in last week's Philadelhpia Inquirer meet, is scheduled to run in the 60-yard high hurdles at the Milrose Games in Madison Square Garden, New York tonight.

Several men have shown up well in the high jump. The outstanding high jumper to date has been 23-year old freshman Bill Albans, who soared 6 ft. 5 in. to win at the Evening Star games in Washington recently.

Jack Moody, who took the Southern conference indoor title last year and the outdoor crown in '47, did 6'4" in the practice meet with Duke three weeks ago. Moody and Billy Joyner, Southern conference outdoor titlist last year with a jump of 6'3½," also have appeared strong in recent practices.

Two other high jumpers who will be counted on to rank the Tar Heels on top in the high jump will be Fred Saunders and Bill Byatt, both of whom have done better than six feet.

Bill To Raise Gasoline Tax Hits Houses Of Legislature

Senate Approves Motor Vehicle Inspection Cut

RALEIGH, Jan. 28—(UP)—Bills to raise the North Carolina gasoline tax one cent per gallon hit both houses of the legislature today.

Meanwhile, the Senate passed and sent to the House a bill requiring only one inspection of motor vehicles per year, instead of two.

It was the first blow at the state's highway safety program to be approved by part of the General assembly.

The gasoline tax bill, introduced in the Senate would raise the state tax from six to seven cents per gallon.

It would not make the tax dependent on approval of a $200,000,000 road bond issue.

Gov. Kerr Scott asked for the bondn vote, and for the added tax to pay off the bonds. He said later, however, that the state needed the added tax whether the bonds were approver or not.

Bills to call the bond issue to carry out Scott's plan for improving rural roads are already in both houses.

The bill for reducing the number of mechanical inspections was introduced by Sens. L. H. Fountain of Tarboro and Hal Hammer Walker of Asheboro.

HERE ARE FOUR of the coeds who will enhance the chorus line of the rollicking Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "H.M.S. What Looked Like Presidential 'Snub' Was, After All, Presidential Hot Foot

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 28—(UP)—The chairman of President Truman's inaugural celebration said today that what looked like a Presidential snub of the Georgia governor really was a presidential hot foot.

Melvin D. Hildreth, Washington attorney resting here from the rigors of directing the inauguration, explained the misunderstood incident of the inaugural parade in which Mr. Truman appeared to have deliberately ignored the salute of Gov. Herman Talmadge as he rode past the reviewing stand.

It was a cold day, Hildreth said, there was an electric hot pad beneath the reviewing stand flooring where the President stood.

Just as Talmadge was approaching the stand, the pad shorted and a puff of smoke rose between the boards.

"The President doused it with a cup of coffee," Hildreth said. While he was fighting the fire, Talmadge's car pulled abreast of the stand.

Margaret Truman shouted to her father that the Georgia governor was "down there," Hildreth said.

Mr. Truman turned to ask Margaret what she was shouting about and before he got the message. Talmadge had passed by with no sign of recognition from the President.

Frosh Who Wish Phi Eta Notice Must See Mackie

Freshmen who have not been notified that they are qualified for membership in Phi Eta Sigma and who believe themselves qualified, are asked to see Ernest Mackie in 301 South building.

Mackie, dean of student awards and scholarships, is completing the list of those qualified for Phi Eta Sigma, honorary freshman scholastic fraternity. Notices of acceptance into the organization have been sent to some students, Mackie said. Freshmen who have not received word from Mackie, and who think they are eligible, are asked to come by his office to get their records checked.

To be eligible for membership a student's grades must be at least half "A's" and the rest "B's". He must also carry a minimum of 13 quarter hours during the regular sessions, and 12 quarter hours during the summer sessions, if attended.

Students are not allowed to transfer more than 30 quarter hours from another school. Mackie pointed out that any freshmen who met the scholastic standards were automatically eligible for membership into the organizations.

They tapped their feet and sang and hummed along with the music and were just wonderful. The best audience I have ever seen. Gang's All Here

New Experimental 'Inherit The Wind' Now Has Versatile Crew Participating

By Ed Moss

The crew that is now working on the new Playmaker experimental play, "Inherit The Wind," is a versatile one to say the least. Gene McClain, the author, spent two seasons on the stage with the "Lost Colony" cast at Manteo and he has also directed several plays. The director, Sam Hirsch, has written a number of plays and also played with the "Lost Colony" troupe for four seasons.

At least two members of the cast have written plays and with the exception of one newcomer they all have a varied background in theater activities. The roles they have played vary from singing parts in light opera to dramatic portrayals of Shakespearean characters. Most of the people in the cast of "Inherit The Wind" have had experience in building sets, making costumes or lighting the stage.

A quick glance at the roster of students in the play shows that Edna Dooley, cast as Natalie, has done lighting, playwriting for the Laboratory theater, and has appeared in several Playmaker productions; Gordon Argo, David, has been stage manager and has sung in light opera and acted in Playmaker and other theater group productions; Betty Lokey, Marge, has appeared with the Raleigh Little theater, and in the cast of "The Common Glory" at Williamsburg, Va.; Ruth Hubbard Groce, Emeline, has done radio-writing, playwriting, costume work in addition to acting assignments.

Few Chapel Hill theater-goers need introduction to Jose[phine] Sharkey, who has been an active member of the Playmakers for years. She plays the role of Evelyn Forrester, the mother in "Inherit The Wind." Ann Gilliam Martin, who recently joined the Playmakers is handling the role of Cousin Jo like a veteran although she has had little previous experience on the stage.

"Inherit The Wind" will be presented in the Playmaker theater at 7:30 Feb. 2 and 3. There will be no admission charge for this production.

WHICH WILL YOU BE CATCHING WHEN YOU'RE 55?

MOST FOLKS dream of being able to take things easy after 55 . . . of being able to pursue a life of leisure while they're young enough to enjoy it.

But unfortunately, many of us find ourselves at 55 still catching the bus to the job instead.

The reason: lack of enough money to retire on.

Lucky for you, however, there's a safe, sound way to protect your future financial security today—U. S. Security Bonds!

Security Bonds require only a little spare cash every week—yet return you a whopping big nest egg in ten years. For example: as little as $3.75 invested regularly every week will bring you $2,163.45 by 1958!

And there are two easy, automatic ways to get your Bonds.

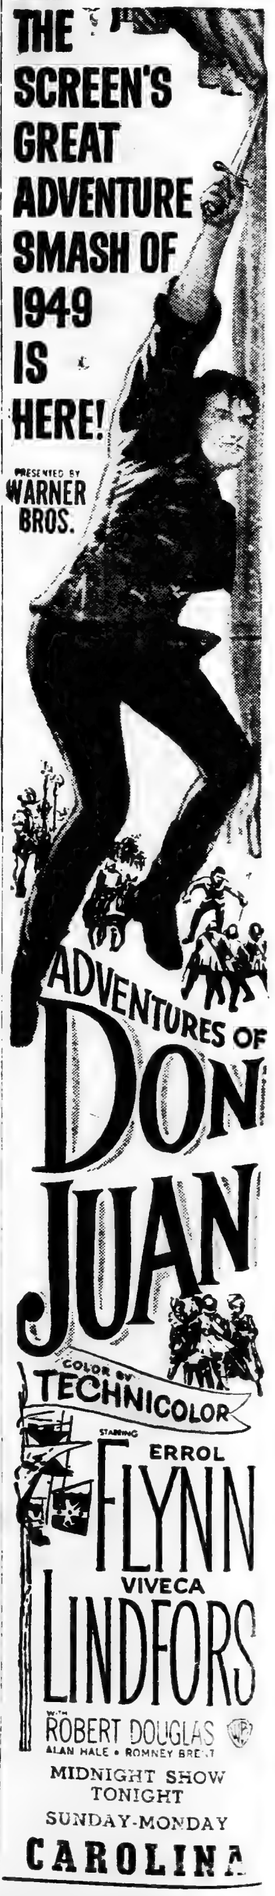
1. If you work for wages or salary, you can get your Security Bonds through Payroll Savings—the only installment buying plan.
2. If you are in business, or in a profession, and the Payroll Savings Plan is not available, you can sign up for the Bond-A-Month Plan at your local bank.



Choose the sum you can afford and sign up today. Then, at 55 perhaps you can start catching fish—and forget about catching that bus every morning!

P. S. Your Security Bond dollars do more than give YOU security. They help you fight inflation. For wise saving means more sensible spending—fewer dollars to bid up prices on scarce goods. Also every dollar invested in Bonds retires an equal amount in inflationary credit.

CPU to Discuss Government Aid For Education

Federal aid to education will be discussed by the Carolina political union at 8 o'clock tonight in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Wellborn Philips, senior in commerce, will present the historical background of the federal aid question along with the details of Senate bill 246 now before the 81st Congress. Philips will also outline the main arguments concerning the proposed measure.

Dr. W. Carson Ryan of the department of education will be present to participate in the discussion. Dr. Ryan has served with several official groups dealing with the federal aid proposals. Several other faculty members and students in the department of education have been extended invitations.

The discussion will be open to both members and visitors. Philips has requested that interested members of the University debate team attend.

Rosary Guild Plans Benefit Card Party

The Rosary Guild of the Chapel Hill Catholic parish is staging a benefit card party tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, Mrs. Milly Bernard, president, said yesterday.

The party will be held at the Veteran's club.

Blue, That Is

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 29—(UP)—It took almost 84 years for something like this to happen.

The Richmond Light Infantry Blues got hollerin' mad today when they found out they were being mislabeled "The Richmond Grays" by Yankees since their appearance in President Truman's inaugural parade three weeks ago.

Newsreels showing the crack infantry outfit turned out in their immaculate blue uniforms on Pennsylvania avenue were referring to them as the Grays, Lt. Col. W. G. Wharton, commanding officer, grieved.

Wharton wants it understood. Those uniforms are blue. Fort Sumter notwithstanding.

Lab Group Plans Tryouts Tuesday

Tryouts for "Apple Tree Farm," the new musical comedy-fantasy to be staged by the Laboratory theatre April 4, 5, and 6, will be held Tuesday afternoon from 2 to 6 in the Rendezvous room.

Any singer, actor, dancer, or technician who would like to be in the production but who cannot be present Tuesday afternoon is asked to get in touch with Marty Jacobs, the director, as soon as possible, to make other arrangements.

Cosmopolitans Plan to Attend N. C. Legislature

Members of the Cosmopolitan club will journey to Raleigh to see the General Assembly tomorrow night at 6:30. Students wishing to join the group are invited to attend the meeting this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial.

The club, an organization of foreign students on campus, will attend the House and Senate sessions. President Hannes Jonnson of Iceland pointed out that it was an excellent opportunity for those who have not had a chance previously to view the legislature in action.

Letters have been received from Kerr Craige Ramsey, speaker of the House, and Lt. Governor Taylor inviting the club to attend the sessions. A special section has been reserved for them.

Benito Bernardo, resident of the Philippine Islands, and Luis Orihuela, from Peru, were recently elected to the executive committee to replace two retiring members.

Bill Friday, president of the University chapter of the American Red Cross, was instrumental in planning the trip.

Sun-and-Golf Clan Bemoans Winter's Return to Dixieland

ATLANTA, Jan. 29—(UP)—Farmers welcomed the seasonal return of wintry weather Southwide today but it didn't make the sun-and-golf clan any happier.

Agriculturists through Dixie begged for real winter weather all through the recent June-in-January climatic spree. Many crops require a good period of frost before they can bloom properly and farmers feared that the heat would cause early, premature blooming and growth of crops.

Some $1,000,000 worth of Louisiana strawberries faced ruin because of the sudden change.

The Southern states have been experiencing almost as peculiar weather as southern California, which has suffered several expensive freezes and unusual snowstorms. But the South, even that part of it which usually has short, but cold, winters, has been basking in summer-like temperatures for some time.

The weather bureau predicted a low of 10 degrees in Memphis, Tenn., tonight and a 12-degree reading at Richmond, Va., and Knoxville and Nashville, Tenn.

Other nearer-to-normal temperatures were predicted as 18 for Charlotte; 20 for Greensboro; 24 for Atlanta, Birmingham, Montgomery and Jackson, Miss.

Charleston, S. C., will shiver, but not so much, at 30 degrees, along with New Orleans.

Jacksonville, Fla., and Miami, Fla., expect only slight drops to 39 and 70, respectively.

Kenyon Says Entire Group Halted Dance

Cancellation Voted By Dance Group

Coach Marvin Allen did not stop the University Veterans association from using an orchestra at the March of Dimes dance last night, George Kenyon, chairman of the Dance committee, said yesterday.

"The dance committee decided as a unit about the UVA dance," he said. "Allen was not the only man who made the decision."

Kenyon said copies of campus dance procedure had been sent to all campus organizations, including the UVA. The present rules have governed University dances for the past two years, he declared.

However, no Dance committee officials commented on the fact that Graham Memorial has been using a small band for Friday night dances in the Rendezvous room for some time, without ever having to obtain permission from any officials or sanction of the Dance committee.

Kenyon said members of the Dance committee would be the first people to recognize the worthiness of the March of Dimes campaign, but once the rules had gone in effect for campus organizations they could not be broken for one group without other organizations wanting similar consideration at some future time.

Kenyon declared the purpose of the Dance committee is not to act as a police organization for campus dances, but rather to protect the students and make sure the dances are conducted in the traditional University spirit.

Coeds May Hear Talk on Careers

Career-minded coeds will get a chance to hear something about jobs open to women tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

The program is being sponsored by the Careers committee of the YWCA with Faith Adams as chairman. It will consist of talks by a board of four faculty members who will each speak five minutes on jobs open to women in his field.

The speakers will be Dr. W. D. Perry of the education department, Miss Ruth Gilpin of the sociology department; S. W. Schriest of the journalism department, who will speak on careers in both newspaper and magazine work, and Miss Betsy Parker of the Placement service, who will speak about jobs not directly connected with majors.

The board will also discuss what experience is necessary for the various jobs mentioned, what pay can be expected, the chances for advancement, and the type of associates.

Following the brief talks there will be a question and answer period.

ANDY GRIFFITH, senior from Mount Airy, has the lead role of Sir Joseph Porter in Gilbert and Sullivan's rollicking opera, "H.M.S. Pinafore," to be presented for the last time by the Playmakers and the music department in Memorial hall at 8:30.

March of Dimes Campus Drive Ends Tomorrow

The Daily Tar Heel-sponsored campus March of Dimes campaign will close tomorrow, in order not to conflict with other drives planned for the week, co-chairman Ed Joyner, Jr., announced yesterday.

"However," Joyner pointed out, "contributions will continue to be accepted at any time."

Dormitory solicitors are requested to bring in their student donated funds tomorrow, Joyner said.

"Most organizations have cooperated, but the amounts contributed are considerably below those anticipated," he went on, "For this reason, we are asking all solicitors to make a final effort to see that all members of their organizations have taken part."

Several organizations that have not had a chance to contribute are holding events after the closing date of the drive.

Proceeds from the Clowns vs. Clodhoppers basketball game will go to the polio benefit fund.

Of the organizations who have turned in funds, Kappa Alpha fraternity is out in front with a nearly 100 per cent contribution of $65.

E. Carrington Smith, March of Dimes chairman for Orange county, announced that final reports are expected in by Tuesday. To date only preliminary returns are in. The total for the drive to Saturday was $3,000 from the entire county. The county drive will end Monday, although donations will be accepted for an indefinite time after then.

YM to Begin Member Drive This Tuesday

Goal of $5,000 Set by Committee

The University YMCA will launch its $5,000 membership drive Tuesday, Charlie Fox, Y Finance committee chairman said yesterday "to enable us to continue to promote Christian ideals and fellowship throughout the student body and in the community."

In a final briefing session before the opening of the drive, a supper will be held for all solicitors in the Baptist church tomorrow beginning at 5:45.

Guest speakers at the supper will include Chancellor R. B. House, Jess Dedmond, student body president and Warren Ashby chairman of the YM advisory board.

"It is hoped," Fox said, "that all students will get behind this membership drive, and contribute to the budget of an organization whose activities are planned by students and are the expression of student interests and needs."

Funds derived from this drive will be split three ways; $1,500 going to fraternities, $1,500 to town men and $2,000 to dormitories.

With these funds bolstering the 1949 budget, the Y will be enabled to carry on its program of assistance to the students, Fox explained.

'Beggar's Opera' Opening Tryouts Are Scheduled

Open tryouts will be held Monday and Tuesday from 7 to 9 o'clock in Memorial hall for the forthcoming production of John Gay's "The Beggar's Opera." The musical calls for 13 men and 13 women in a wide variety of characterizations from the kindly jailer to highwaymen, cut-throats, street-walkers, jades and gamesters.

Dr. J. P. Schinhan and M. David Samples, co-directors of the show, emphasized the fact that "The Beggar's Opera" is not an opera as the name might imply, but a musical comedy. First produced during 1728 at Lincoln's Inn fields under the management of John Rich, Gay's musical greatly inspired Irving Berlin to write in a like manner.

The production is being sponsored by Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, Sigma Alpha Iota, the music department, Sound and Fury, and the Playmakers. Librettos are on reserve in the library for those who wish to read the script before tryouts.

Glee Club Lists Special Practice

The Men's Glee club will hold a special practice at 4 o'clock this afternoon in Hall hall, club officials announced yesterday.

Graham Receives 1st Hillman Award For Public Service

WASHINGTON, Jan 29—(UP)—Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, tonight described "the struggle over the freedom and security of the labor union" as one of the "latest chapters of the rise of democracy in the United States."

Here to receive the first $1,000 Sidney Hillman award for meritorious public service, Dr. Graham said, "the struggle of industrial workers to organize and win the reluctant recognition of legislative bodies, the courts and the corporations," is another step in the "democratic struggle of human beings for autonomous organization around a great human need.

"The movement of working people against heavy odds to win a simple share in the control of their own lives is one of the great human movements of the last 100 years and is at the center of the struggle for freedom and democracy in our time."

Dr. Graham said the United Nations should "follow through in support of its stand for the immediate liberation of the imprisoned Indonesian leaders and the restoration of the Republic of Indonesia."

An investigation into Dr. Graham's clearance for limited access to atomic energy secrets is being conducted by the joint congressional Atomic Energy committee. Sen. Brien McMahon (D-Conn.), chairman of the committee, refused to reveal why the investigation is being conducted, but said that members of the Atomic Energy commission, who granted the clearance, would be questioned.

Dr. Graham is head of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Research.

Jacob S. Potofsky, president of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and Sidney Hillman's successor as head of the union, said in presenting the award that Dr. Graham "has fought totalitarianism in all its aspects."

"As a member of President Truman's committee on civil rights, Dr. Graham contributed to one of the most significant documents of our time," Potofsky said.

Piano Recital By Wallenborn To Be in Hill

Pianist Is Known For Europe Tour

Robert Wallenborn, well-known American pianist and lecturer on music, will give a piano recital in Hill hall on Tuesday, at 8:30 in the evening.

A graduate of the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago and the University of Chicago, Wallenborn studied in Leipzig under Max Pauer and in Berlin with George Bertram.

Since the war Wallenborn has been with the American army of occupation in Vienna where he has found time to concertize extensively. Among other accomplishments he has recently won acclaim for the remarkable feat of performing three concertos on the same program with the Vienna Symphony orchestra.

Wallenborn has become well-known as assisting artist and accompanist to many of the world's leading musicians, including Mary Garden, Riihard Bonelli, and Helen Jepson in her concert here some years ago and has appeared in concert at various points throughout the state including High Point, Charlotte, and Asheville.

Having recently returned to this country for a visit with his family and a short concert tour in the Middle West, Wallenborn plans to return in the spring for a series of concert recitals in several European cities.

Four Persons Die In Plane Crash

HENDERSONVILLE, Jan 29—(UP)—A private plane crashed and burst into flames near here today, burning all four of the occupants beyond recognition.

The plane, a four-place Beechcraft Bonanza, slammed to earth in heavily wooded mountains just short of Hendersonville on a flight from Charlotte.

The plane leaped into flames the moment it struck the ground. The occupants had no chance to escape.

The Trailmobile Co. at Charlotte identified the pilot as K. J. Kirkpatrick, its Charlotte branch manager. Officials said Kirkpatrick's 17-year-old son, Jack, and a salesman, A. R. Courtwright, 32, were aboard the plane.

The fourth body in the mangled craft was identified tentatively as Phil Campbell, 17, of Charlotte.

Witnesses said the plane circled several times about 11 miles northeast of Hendersonville about 9 o'clock this morning, apparently with engine trouble. However, officers said the engine was running when the plane slammed to earth near a small stream.

Reverend Jones Addresses TEP

Rev. Charlie Jones, pastor of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian church, was the principal speaker at Wednesday night's meeting of Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity, as the fraternity continued its newly-instituted speaker's program.

Rev. Jones spoke informally on the way friction between religions and sects could be eliminated by an understanding of similarities, rather of differences between religious and ethical beliefs.

Philological Club Will Meet Tuesday

The Philological club will meet at 7:30 Tuesday evening in Graham Memorial to hear Prof. Raymond Adams read a paper, "Theodore Kingsbury of 'The Leisure Hour,' North Carolina's First Professional Critic."

President George R. Coffman said all members are urged to attend the meeting, which will be held in one of the Roland Parker lounges on the second floor of the student union building.

McCurdy Working. . . . . On Psychological Theory

Gets Inside Dope On Literary Giants

By Gordon Huffines

Dr. Harold McCurdy, professor of psychology who is making a study of the personality of Shakespeare and other literary giants by computing the amount of space each author gives to his main characters, thinks he may be able to derive facts about human personality in general from his work.

Assuming that fictional literature is a projection of the author's personality, Dr. McCurdy has made a detailed study of 36 of Shakespeare's plays and the novels of Emily and Charlotte Bronte.

By counting the lines spoken by Shakespeare's characters and the amount of page space the Bronte sisters gave their characters, Dr. McCurdy has been able to draw certain conclusions about the personalities of these artists. Dr. McCurdy explained that he was working on a theory advanced by the late Duke psychologist Dr. William McDougal, that the human personality is an arrangement of constituents with one ingredient dominating the others. According to Dr. McCurdy, the fictional character represents a nucleus of the author's interests. By studying the emphasis placed on these characters and the traits given to them by the author, Dr. McCurdy is able to trace aspects of the author's personality.

From his study the psychologist has concluded that with an increase in age the author tends to place more emphasis on his central character, giving his subordinate characters less space. "As the author grows older his interests become more central, and show greater stability and more egotism," Dr. McCurdy said.

Comparing Shakespeare's tragedies with his comedies, Dr. McCurdy found that there was less subordination of minor characters in the comedies. "In the tragic mood there is a concentration on one individual — his troubles, moods, emotions—while in the comic mood this interest is less centered with the resulting effect that more importance is placed on other characters," the psychologist explained.

Studying the characters of the Bronte sisters and the biographical background of the two English novelists Dr. McCurdy has drawn the general conclusion that there is a fundamental contrast between the personalities of Emily and Charlotte. "Charlotte is more defensive, Emily more aggressive. Charlotte is more mature in the sense that she has more fully adopted the conventions of society. But one would expect to find her more unhappy than Emily just because of this assimilation to society which is neurotically incomplete," the psychologist said.

"It is certainly evident that we can find out something about the personality of an author through his writings," Dr. McCurdy said. "What I would like to see is the field attacked by a great number of people so that we could gather the great amount of information that is available," he added.

Things Could Be Verse

(From the Syracuse Daily Orange)

There was a line, a mighty line
Before the Commons door, (Lenoir),
And Willie, waiting for his lunch
Was number twenty-four.
But number three had twelve good friends,
And number eight, eleven,
While Willie found to his surprise
He now was forty-seven.
And tho the people far up front
Were moving quite a lot
The longer Willie stood in line
The farther back he got.
This struck the boy as mighty silly
But lunchtime never came for Willie.

'Some Sort of Outfit'

(From the Georgia Tech Technique)

The Technique believes that the male should someday become a part of our social scheme rather than a mere cash register.

In connection with this, we have lightly lifted this article from Bill Boring's column in the Atlanta Constitution.

* * *

With no feeling of guilt whatsoever we steal the following from The Emory Wheel, which, in turn, stole it from the Bulloch Herald. William Worth McDougald, the guy being written up, is an Emory student and ex-editor of The Wheel:

"Among the lovely social events of last week was the marriage early Saturday evening of William Worth McDougald and Miss Charlotte Lorraine Ballanger in the Pleasant Grove Baptist Church near Summerville.

"The groom, the oldest son of Mrs. Walter Edwin McDougald and the late Mr. McDougald, of Statesboro, was accompanied to the altar by John Horace McDougald, his half-brother. For his wedding outfit the groom was radiantly attired in a white tropical worsted suit, cut on the double-breasted style, with matching rows of buttons down the front. The buttons were a lovely coral to match the suit. He wore a sky-blue four-in-hand tie, caught up tightly at the collar of his white shirt. His socks, a left-over pair from his days in the Navy, were clear white, and were worn with white buckskin shoes tied at the center, relics, likewise, of service to his country.

"For his flowers the groom chose a white carnation, fastened with a borrowed pin to complete the 'something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue,' motif. He carried, as a sentimental piece, an empty billfold in his left rear pocket. His jewelry was simple, consisting entirely of a battered antique wrist watch some 15 years old.

"His hair was cut short, styled by Waters Tonsorial Emporium (below the Bulloch County Bank). It was slicked down with hair grease combined with water in equal parts, and parted slightly to the left of center.

"The bride wore some sort of white outfit."

Surprised To Find the World Is Still Revolving

Editor:

. . .Of all the silly things that this so called liberal newspaper has been guilty of, nothing will take the place of the ridiculous editorial("Step Toward Destruction") in Wednesday's Daily Tar Heel. My, my, I am surprised that the world is still revolving.

I am truly glad that elections for a new editor of this paper is soon to come. Maybe we will get rid of such red liberalism.

This paper has become a mouthpiece for every radical on the campus who has something to say. At the rate you are going now, it would be better for the University if this paper was banned from the campus.

I would like to suggest a new name for the D.T.H., Daily Worker, Jr.

Well, so long Comrade.

Donald Wrenn

* * *

Editor:

I am one who stands unequivocally against the legal existence of Communism. The writer of the editorial, "Step Towards Destruction" (which looks like the associate editor's neat work) has "damned" me and my kind for that attitude, but since this is "Religious Emphasis Week," let us not, my brethren, reciprocate by "damning" the editor, but rather, let us smother him with PITY.

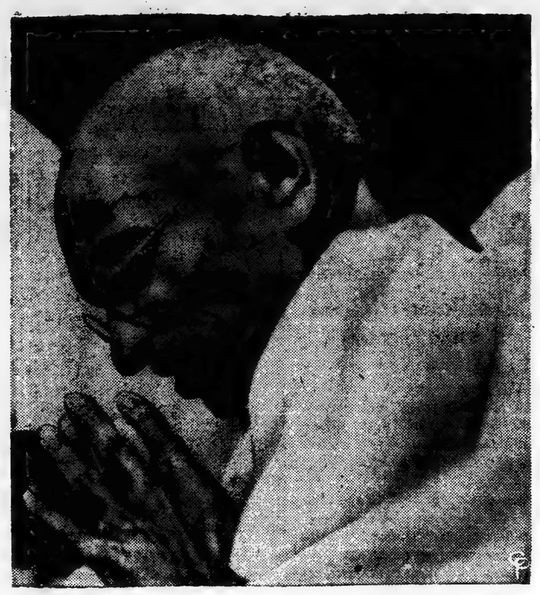
1. Under the law one is prosecuted for "intent" to commit a crime, as well a for actually committing it. What would the editor have us do?—wait until the Reds have gathered sufficient strength (minority or majority) to scuttle us before we lift a hand to prevent it?

2. Does the editor REALLY think that those who would deny "human rights" to others are entitled to such rights in a country where said rights are graciously granted? Now don't tell me what the Scriptures or the Pope has to say on the subject.

3. As a corollary to the previous question, why does it or must it necessarily follow that the outlawing of Communism would mean the decadent and downward trend of democratic ideals?

4. The Communist Party would not become stronger if forced underground — simply because about 80 percent of Communism the world over (even where it is legal) operates already underground and behind iron curtains, slave labor camps, and secret police.

5. The outlawing of the C.P. would not mean the outlawing of an ideology nor a real political party (in the light of existing facts). It would simply mean the outlawing of a vicious Revolutionary Machine!



6. By outlawing the Party we destroy any respectability which it has built up in the minds of innocent and duped people . . .

Aged Saint Was Shot One Year Ago Today

Gandhi: Truth, Non-Violence, Kindness

By Ishu Bangdiwala

Around five-thirty in the afternoon of this day last year, Mahatma Gandhi, while going for his daily prayers, was shot by a man who did not agree with his idea of unity among different groups in India. Three shots were fired and the 80-year-old saint fell to the ground with his usual smile on his face, "He, Rama!" (Oh, God!) on his lips, and an attitude of forgiveness in his folded hands. Those attending the prayer-meeting flocked to the spot, and he was soon taken to his residence. His disciples, the leaders in New Delhi, and many others, including Lord Mountbatten, rushed to his place. Immediately, India and the rest of the world learned of this shocking news, and those who realized his importance to mankind found it difficult to believe his condition serious. Some who believed him no less than a God, wished a miracle to happen through his spiritual power in order that he might live. But he was not a God—he was merely a man—a man from among the common people. And after some few minutes, his soul left his body.

Throughout the time until his body was cremated the next day in the afternoon, millions of people in and around the capital gathered there to have the last glimpse ("darshan") of this beloved man. Broken-hearted, all followed the procession to the place of cremation. Those elsewhere sat beside the radio listening to the ceremonies, and to the songs he loved most which were being sung by his disciples to him. All were so much distressed that they did not care for anything nor even for food. They were spell-bound as they felt that their beloved father—the guardian of the nation—was snatched so instantaneously. And truly he was "The Father of the Nation", ("Bapu", as they called him). Through thirty years or more, he had guided the nation, during the most critical moments of her history. An aged man with not so stout a physique, he resisted with his strong and powerful soul, the rule of a mighty imperialism and all other sufferings of the nation and led the country to the ideal independence without a drop of blood shed. This he did by unprecedented means of non-violence and insistence on truth ("satyagraha"). About "satyagraha", which is often erroneously interpreted by many as "passive resistance", an American author writes, "We in the west who sit daily under the shadow of war, should at least make the effort to explore this principle, for it presents a challenge both to our Christianity and humanity. If soul-force can work—and its effectiveness has been proven—why do we hesitate to put in practice that which is a derivation of our own religion?"

The roots of Mahatma's thinking lay in "Bhagwad Gita" (Hindu Scripture) and other books of wisdom given by ancient India. From those very roots, he derived the capacity to profit from Christianity and other sources of wisdom. About religion, after long and deep study, he concluded that all religions are true, and all have similar basic principles. He loved them all as he did his own Hinduism. He said, "Our prayer for others ought never to be 'God, give them the light thou hast given to me!' but 'Give them all the light and truth they need for their highest developments!' ".

At his daily prayer-meeting, which was held in public, he recited hymns and paragraphs from the holy books of all religions — "Bhagwad Gita" (Hindu), "Koran" (Moslem), the Bible, and others.

One of his great teachings to the people was to be fearless. He asked them to be strong and not feeble. He said, "To suffer a wrong thing is cowardice; but to return hatred for hatred is folly and if we are sincere, love will prevail and conquer hatred." One cannot doubt his fearlessness when one imagines his going on foot without any kind of escort, among the rioters in Bengal. He appealed to them to be wise and peaceful and to the surprise of all, they realized their wrong acts and pledged themselves to this great man's wish for peace and non-violence. Again, when, a couple of weeks before his death, seeing that his life in public was not safe, many of his well-wishers requested him to have protection at least in his public prayer meeting, he refused, saying that he was not afraid of death. "My prayer meeting is a place where everyone has the right to attend. That will be the only place where I can be killed." These words came true.

He was kind to everybody, and believed in universal brotherhood and good will. Though an intense nationalist, he kept his outlook world-wide. His nationalism was free from any aggressive intent and hatred. In particular, he believed that a nation like India, made up primarily of villages, can better progress by village industries, and it was out of his personal experiences and the knowledge of the condition of life there that he evolved his program of the spinning wheel and other home industries. His nationwide constructive program included inter alia the education on the mass scale fitting the Indian life.

In many of the sufferings of the country he saw a vast gulf between the rich and the poor in the ways of living and in opportunities for growth, and for his personal and psychological satisfaction, he crossed the gulf and went over to the side of the poor, adopting their ways of living and their dress, with only such improvements as they could afford. Thus he lived among them, and stood for their rights of equal status in society and nation, which he achieved by his great principle of insistence on truth. He was not a dreamer living in thoughts. He practiced what he believed and preached, and therein lay his greatness. He insisted that like him others should be right and impartial in their actions and it was this of his great principles that tempted all leaders and great men interested in India to often rush for his advice.

Of truth and God he said, "Truth is God—Denial of God, we have known; denial of truth, we have not. Search after truth through non-violent means will lead us to God." That search after truth was his goal of life, and rightly has he given the name "Experiments on Truth" to his autobiography. In his death, India suffers the loss of a father, a great leader, and a physician, and the world, a great man and a teacher of world peace. Today that great lover of humanity, who gave the world the message of peace and goodwill, is not among us, but we can still keep his spirit alive by accepting and practicing his great principles of truth, non-violence and kindness. He lived for unity and died for its cause.

Praise for 'HMS Pinafore'

A Gay Success, An Evening Of Fun

By J. O. Bailey

Gilbert and Sullivan's nautical classic, "Pinafore," was applauded for curtain-call after curtain-call, till the curtain failed to budge and the house-lights dispelled the illusion. In the faces of the audience and their lingering gaiety, the Carolina Playmakers and the Department of Music, joint-producers of the operetta in Memorial Hall, Chapel Hill, on Friday evening, read success rather than to act, there was and the promise of full houses for the rest of the run.

The good ship "H. M. S. Pinafore" bulged out over the orchestra pit, its prow cutting pasteboard waves beyond the prosoenium arch. When the outer curtain parted, the audience broke into applause, for Gordon Bennett, stage-designer, had rigged an authentic mainsail for inner curtain. When the mainsail went up, and the good ship was under weigh, the audience gasped and applauded again. The stage was the main deck of the ship of old romance.

From the deck rose a sturdy mast and rigging into which the sailors climbed; at the rear was an authentic poop-deck in old mahogany, weathered woods, and scoured brass. The creative imagination exhibited in the design of this set and the technical skill in its construction, the smooth perfection of the lighting directed by James Byrd and the stage-management of choruses directed by Foster Fitz-Simmons and Samuel Selden, were all professional or better-than-professional.

To this untrained listener, the performance of the orchestra had just the tone of gravely gay that Sir Arthur Sullivan intended. The music throughout the operetta, directed by Gwynn McPeek, enchanted the audience.

In the acting, however, perhaps because Friday was a first night without a full-dress rehearsal (Drew Pearson had the hall on Thursday), and perhaps because characters had to be chosen for their ability to sing here and there a lack of nuance, a tendency to let the gay pace drag, the acting lapse into deadpan or forced smirking. But the opening, a little slow, mechanical, picked up when Sir Joseph Porter, K. C. B., First Lord of the Admiralty of the Queen's Navee, ably acted by Andrew Griffith, came aboard accompanied by his fading-fair Cousin Hebe, played well by Barbara Young, and his sisters, and the color, the variety, the prissiness and the sauciness, that fit the play. At the pretty gowns and pretty faces, the girls pinked, prim, and prancing, the audience applauded.

The show was not stolen, but Andrew Griffith—Sir Joseph—in this reviewer's opinion snitched it now and then. He kept moving. He acted his role of pompous, middle-aging gay old dog in twinkling shanks, gleaming lights reflected from white-satin breeches kept in movement, and expressions of his hands, as well as in speaking his lines with verse and singing his songs with clarity of enunciation.

Diction is especially important in rendering a Gilbert libretto, for the humor is often in the whimsy of an unexpected word. Throughout parts of the show the audience sat impassive and a little puzzled by songs that, if read or enunciated clearly in song, would have stirred delight.

Where all were reasonably good and the show was a success, the role of Dick Deadeye, played by Rchard Smith, failed to get across. Perhaps Deadeye was, as Richard Smith, too good-looking to make a convincing villain, in spite of patch and make up. Deadeye acted somewhat mechanically, or overacted, in a glum tone, rather than in the gay malice of a take-off. Meanings in his songs and even his spoken words were clear only in somewhat exaggerated attitudes and the printed synopsis.

Josephine, the Captain's lovely daughter, played by Lucille Arnott, sang well all the time, and acted well part of the time, though she tended to present a rather tearful heroine, rather than the tongue-in-cheek mockery of a tearful heroine intended by the author. She twinkled now and then, but her lover Ralph Rackstraw of every manly virtue deserved a gayer girl.

Rackstraw, played by Carl Perry, was excellent in one scene, toward the end of the play when, warmed up, he was ordered to a dungeon cell, and strained against his chains. In the parts requiring more subtlety, he needed more training.

Little Buttercup, round and roly-poly in the script, has a few lines that interpret her as a soothsayer. Her make-up tip-tilted her saucy nose into a witch's beak and confused the impression. She might have bounced a good deal more.

Yet, if not Gilbert and Sullivan at its imaginable best and liveliest, the production of "Pinafore" was a gay success, an evening of fun for the audience, brilliantly designed and set, gayly costumed, charmingly sung, and ably stage-managed. It gave the audience a good time.

Whose National Interests?

Editor:

Hans Freisdadt is vague on one point in his letter of yesterday. When he says, "I desire peace without sacrifice of our national interests," does he refer to the national interests of Soviet Russia, or the United States?

It is difficult to understand why Herr—or should I say Comrade?—Freistadt chose the United States as a place of refuge from the Nazi regime when he would have felt so much more at home on the other side of the iron curtain.

Federal Aid To Education?

By Wellborn Phillips

Two million eight hundred thousand Americans are illiterate! Eight million more of our people have never attended more than five years of school and during World War II, 659,000 of our men were found to be physically fit but were rejected because they lacked even the minimum educational requirements to perform even the most simple tasks required.

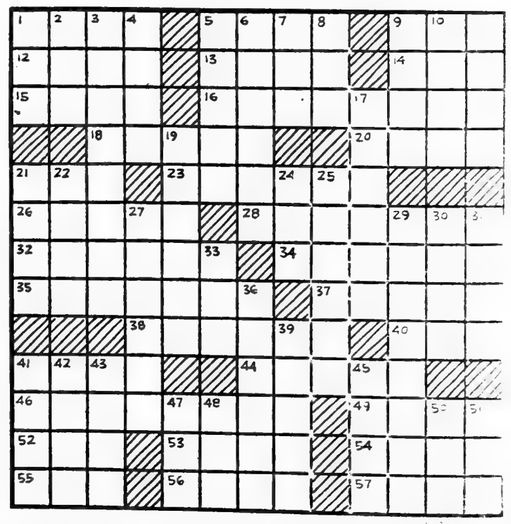
These are shocking facts for our people to think about. It is hard sometimes for us to realize that such great inequalities do exist in this "great land of opportunity."

President Truman believes that the country should meet this problem by federal grants to the states. He has asked the Congress for an appropriation of $300,000,000 to be distributed among the states in proportion to their needs. This is determined by a formula which takes into consideration the income of the state, the number of school children in that state, and the amount that the state is already spending for education.

The President's proposals were embodied in senate bill 472 which passed the Senate last summer. But then the bill went to the House where it was bottled up by the Rules committee.

During the first three weeks of the eighty-first Congress, eight aid-to-education bills have been introduced in the Senate and eleven in the House. And the President believes that these will be more successful. Many opponents of federal aid in the House were not re-elected. And, in the Senate, fourteen of the freshmen senators favor aid and only two oppose it.

Federal aid to education is not something new. Back in 1938, it was proposed by President Roosevelt on the advice of his Advisory Committee on Education, which had made a detailed study of the education needs of the Nation.

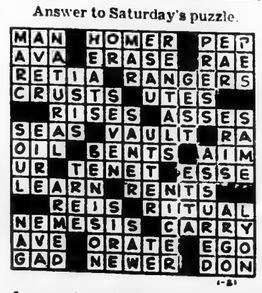


In 1785, by the Northwest Ordinance, the national government under the Articles of Confederation set a precedent by setting aside certain tracts of land for aid to schools. Many times since then the federal government has taken steps to aid education by such methods as land grants and establishing the United States Office of Education.

Proponents of the aid-to-education bills believe that it is now time for the federal government to take another step.

They say that education is essential to the creation and maintenance of a high economic and social status. They insist that it is necessary if our democratic institutions are to function properly and our people are to understand the problems in international relations. The proponents believe that a good education is a birthright of every citizen—not a privilege. It should not be left to the chance of being born in a family or being a member of a community that can afford the necessary expenses. They say that a legitimate function of democratic government is to sustain and make a reality that birthright.

The plan, however, has many opponents. They visualize it as one big scheme whereby the federal government will seize control of the school system. They say that the states are better able to pay the expenses as they have less obligations and little debt. And they point out that even the poorer states are improving their financial conditions rapidly. They remind us that one of the greatest guarantees of genuinely democratic government is that the children of the nation should be taught in schools not dominated by the President in Washington, but devoted to the needs and wishes of the state and community.



As things look now, the Congress should reach some decision this time—and so the country will soon know what the answer is.

Tar Heels Trounce Furman Quint In Wild Tilt, 61-44

Coy Carson Again Leads on Offense With 20 Markers

By Frank Allston Jr.

Carolina's rough and tough cagers scored 37 points in the second half to overcome a half-time deficit of one point and defeat the Purple legions of Furman university, 61-44 before 3,500 spectators in Woollen gym last night.

The rough action saw 60 whistles during the forty minutes of play. 32 of the misdemeanors were charged to the visiting South Carolinians and 28 to the Tar Heels. Seven men fouled out during the hectic last half, five Purples and two Tar Heels.

Coy Carson, who apparently sharpened his shooting following Friday's Davidson debacle, tossed in 20 points to lead the victorious Tar Heels to their seventh Southern Conference victory and their thirteenth against all opposition.

First Half Close

At the start of the game it seemed as if the contest would assume proportions of a fairly close tussle. Three free throws by Carson and one each by Hugo Kappler, Nemo Nearman and Furman center Frank Drake gave the Tar Heels a 5-1 lead after 3:16 of the half. A field goal by Carson made it 7-1 at 3:47.

The visitors then began to whittle down the Tar Heel lead and a hook shot by Bill Phillips put Furman ahead, 15-14 at 11:07. The Purples held onto that lead and went to the dressing room with a 25-24 half-time advantage.

The second half appeared for three minutes to be a repition of the preceeding ten minutes, but Carson's push shot from the foul line made it 29-all at 4:56. A set shot by Carson put the Tar Heels ahead briefly at 5:58, but Furman guard Milton Hughes dropped in a long set from the side to knot the count once again, 31-31 at 6:10.

Furman Drought

Taking advantage of a four-minute Furman drought, when the Purple and White clad warriors failed to score, the Tar Heels racked ten straight points to lead, 41-31 at the halfway mark of the period.

Adding fuel to the already burning fire, the Carolina cagers racked up basket after basket and continued to widen the margin. Dan Nyimicz's charity conversion gave the Tar Heels a 15-point advantage. 48-33 at 11:22. Charlie Thorne's lay-up at 15:35 made the count 56-36.

The Tar Heels will meet the University of Tennessee, a strong Southeastern conference quint, at Knoxville on Monday night.

Carolina's Freshman Basketball Squad

Campbell Junior College Five Tops Inept Frosh Club, 47-37

By Lew Chapman

Carolina's freshmen basketball squad engaged Campbell Junior college before a small crowd last night in the first game of the usual twin-bill at Woollen gym and in the ensuing 40 minutes proceeded to lose to the Camels of Campbell by the score of 47-37.

The extremely dull ball game was marked by too many fouls and very little basketball, especially in reference to the Tar Babies. The freshman hardwooder's stock reached a new low as the yearlings were unimpressive throughout the fray. Their set offense was not able to crack the Camel's tight man for man defense and most of the time hat Carolina had possession of the ball was spent looking for openings that never appeared. The fast break that Campbell utilized to the fullest extent was rarely attempted by the yearlings who preferred to stick to their methodical system of play.

Only Two Deuces

The play by play account was all Campbell. The Camels scored first and ran the count up to 8-1 before Dick Harter broke the field goal ice for the Tar Babies at the eight minute mark. Ten more minutes passed before substitute guard Mac Godwin hit for Carolina's second two pointer to make it 21-11. The disasterous half ended with Campbell on the long end of a 25-11 count.

The second half was a replica of the first. Although the Tar Babies did counter with six scattered field goals this half, the concentrated drive was lacking.

New Texas Series

It was announced last night by Athletic Director Bob Fetzer that the Carolina-Texas football rivalry will be resumed in 1951. The first of a two game series will be played at Austin, Texas in 1951 while the return match will be here at Chapel Hill to inaugurate the 1952 gridiron season.

Golf Contest

Today is the final day of the hole-in-one contest now in progress at the Chapel Hill golf course. The contest, which is being staged largely through the efforts of Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, is sanctioned by the local March of Dimes project and all proceeds will go to the polio benefit fund.

Matmen Split With Gobblers In Blacksburg

BLACKSBURG, Va.Jan. 29—Carolina and Virgnia Tech wrestlers fought to a 16-16 deadlock here last night before a good sized crowd who were well pleased with the matches. For the Tar Heel grapplers, the tie evened their season's record at one win, one loss and a tie. Previously the Carolina matmen had been defeated in the season's opener against State but had bounced back to rout Davidson.

In a preliminary contest, the Carolina freshmen wrestlers gained their fourth straight win to remain unbeaten by routing the Virginia Tech yearlings to the tune of 27-2.

Joe Hilton Is Forgotten Man

By Owen Lewis

Buried beneath the rave notices for a Sugar bowl football squad and the current cage team, Carolina also has a track team. But when the sports writers do break down and mention the local cindermen, there is one man whose accomplishments still remain unsung. He is the forgotten man of Carolina's coaching staff—Joe Hilton.

Hilton, along with Dale Ranson and Ralph Casey, serves as assistant to R. A. (Coach Bob) Fetzer, dean of U N C mentors and head track coach. So completely obscured is Coach Hilton that the Carolina athletic handbook identified him simply as "Joe Hilton."

The teams that Joe coaches aren't kept out of the headlines, though, for in the high and low hurdles, broad jump, high jump, pole vault, javelin and all the other field events, his pupils are consistent winners.

His coaching prowess was clearly shown in the case of Eugene (Rusty) Russell. Russell, a Goldsboro boy, had never had a pole in his hands until Hilton took him in 1947 and turned him into a 13-foot vaulter. In the Duke meet last year, Rusty tied the University record—something of an accomplishment for a Johnny-come-lately. Other Hilton-coached boys who exhibited record-breaking performance were Jack Moody, who did it with a 6-4 high jump in the Carolina Relays, and Herman Hickman, who duplicated Russell's 13-foot vault in the Duke meet.

Other star pupils of Hilton's are Dick Taylor and Olympic star Chunk Simmons. The modest Hilton, however, is quick to disclaim any credit for Simmons' stellar performance. Just as he says of most of the other champions he coaches, Hilton says, "Chunk had so much natural ability that I couldn't help him much. He might have been even better if I'd left him alone."

His whole coaching philosophy runs in the same modest vein. "If you just keep a boy around long enough, and keep him interested, he'll eventually do some good."

Joe, who came here from high school coaching jobs at Chapel Hill and Goldsboro, was no mean shakes as a track man himself, before finishing S. I. C. competition in 1939. In addition to being a 200-footer with the javelin, he pole-vaulted and ran the high hurdles.

Carolinians Dunk Engineers, 47-28; Thomas Sets New Freestyle Record

By Larry Fox

With only one pool record being broken, as compared to six in their last meet, the Tar Heel swimmers nevertheless managed to down a previously undefeated Georgia Tech outfit, 47-28, yesterday afternoon in Bowman Gray pool and continue their own winning streak for the season.

The Tar Heels will play host to VPI here tomorrow afternoon beginning at 4 o'clock. The Carolina mermen will be seeking their fifth consecutive victory of the campaign.

Sophomore star Jim Thomas once again slashed the standard for the 440-yard freestyle, this time slicing 2.2 seconds off the mark he had set against LaSalle just last week. The record now stands at 4:54.0.

Tar Heels Grab Lead

The Tar Heels took the lead in the very first lap of the 330-yard medley and were never headed thereafter. Norm Sper, Dick Twining, and Steve Osborne won the initial event by about 15 yards and came within three tenths of a second of equalling the pool mark set last Saturday by LaSalle.

Carolina placed first in six of the nine events with the Engineers copping the 220-yard freestyle, the 200-yard breaststroke, and the 400-yard freestyle relay.

The Tar Heels forfeited the latter event when a man who was not present was entered. Captain Dick Twining swam a 0:51.6 anchor lap, which was seven tenths of a second under the pool 100-yard record, to salvage some glory for the Blue and White.

Greenbaum Wins

The 50-yard freestyle produced the most thrills of the afternoon as Tar Heels Jesse Greenbaum and Floyd Drew fought it out for first place. Greenbaum won by a fingernail in the slow time of 0:24.1.

Tommy Towles, Tech breaststroker, brought the crowd to its feet in the butterfly event when he nosed out Carolina's Dan Breeden by two or three feet. ohnny Hiles provided the other Engineer first place in the 220-yard freestyle.

With Gil Beam out with an infected toe, Johnny Wichard took care of the diving chores for Carolina, racking up 106.5 points to out do George Kirk, who came in second for the Engineers with a total of 80.4.

Gal, Pair of Record Smashers Provide Thrills at Swim Meet

By Don Maynard

The soggy squish, squish of the low diving board greeted our unofficial group of sports scriveners as we trooped over the shores of Bowman Gray pool to the press box, the better to observe the Carolina-Georgia Tech swimming meet.

Being an uninitiated fan, I didn't understand what was transpiring, and consquently took no interest in the proceedings until the Lady Goodiver of UNC walked upon the scene.

And a goodiver she was too. Miss Sara Wakefield, junior from Palm Beach, took an unofficial second place among the mermen. She was obviously the possessor of an A medical rating, how else could she participate in collegiate sports? But in the eyes of loyal fans she rated A-dorable.

I was embarrased by my ignorance, but still asked all sorts of questions. The announcements made by Coach Ralph Casey especially confused me. What on earth was, "Wakefield, Carolina, back double tuck, with a somersault and half-nelson?"

At one point in the meet, there was a tremendous wave of applause from the crowd—some 1,000 spectators—aimed at Norm Sper, sans his color cards, who was on hand to win the 150-yard backstroke.

But it was Jim Thomas who stole the show, even to my unknowing eyes, with his announcement through Casey that he was going to break his "own 440 freestyle pool record of 4:56.2." Everyone chuckled but Thomas, he meant it.

He meant it and he broke it. The new pool record for the 440, 4:54 "flat."

Flat? That had me stymied for awhile until a neighbor to my right explained it meant "no one was betting on him." I wonder about that definition. I thought it meant the position the swimmer took as he passed along on the water.

As we wandered out of the gym after the meet, a friend remarked that "Dick Twining would have broken the 100-yard freestyle record with his 51:6 if he weren't racing in the 400-yard relay when he did it." Which made no sense to me whatsoever. If he raced 100 yards and broke a record, why haggle over the technicalities?

CAROLINA

Every year, America has 5,000,000 "fall guys"!

EACH PASSING YEAR, about 5,000,000 people accidentally fall and get hurt badly enough to need medical attention. So the National Safety Council tells us.

Above, you see several innocent-looking yet fiendish causes of such mishaps. They're put there to show that you never can tell what unforeseen quirk of fate may change the course of your normal existence.

And since it is impossible to predict the future, it's wiser to prepare for it.

One sure way to do that is to invest in U.S. Security Bonds now. Regularly . . . automatically. For a cushion of dollars is a mighty comforting piece of property to own.

Why U. S. Security Bonds? Because they are the safest investment in the world—backed by Uncle Sam. And it is a paying investment—returning to you, after 10 years, four dollars for every three you tuck away.

The handiest way to buy U.S. Security Bonds is on the Payroll Savings Plan. Ask the cashier at your office or factory about it.

★ Your Security Bond dollars do more than give YOU security. They do their part to insure a stable economy. Wise saving means more sensible spending—fewer dollars to bid up prices on scarce goods. Also every dollar invested in Bonds retires an equal amount of inflationary credit.

Alpha Delta Pi Honors Pledges At Yearly Black, White Dance

In the dignified simplicity of a Black and White ball, Alpha Delta Pi's pledges were presented to the University Friday night at the Carolina Inn, to the music of Chic Burroughs and his orchestra.

Highlighting the decorations were the silver silhouettes of the pledges on black diamonds placed on the stage curtains. The silhouettes were drawn by Julia McHenry, pledge from Charlotte.

Two cups were awarded to outstanding pledges by President Katherine McMillan, the scholarship cup going to Bobby Lunsford, Madison, N. J., and Ann Faulconer, Chevy Chase, Md. Patricia Denning and Peggy Martin were named the most outstanding pledges of the class.

The girls who stepped through a black and silver diamond were Louise Alsup, Dublin, Ga., with Fred Hauser; Ruth Barne, Sanford, with Irvin Holdash; Mary Billings, Morganton, with Gene Blake, Jean Crouser, Waynesville, with C. D. Martin; Patricia Denning, Coral Gables, Fla., with Don Stanford; Audrey Donnan, Rutherford, N. J., with Dale Evarts; Nona Edge, Raleigh, with Clyde Wall.

After their presentation the girls and their dates formed a diamond-shaped figure in the middle of the ballroom and placed bouqets of blue and white flowers around the figure. They then danced their lead-out, as a spotlight played upon the couples.

Out-of-town guests for the dance were alumnae Mary Lloyd Craddock, Blackstone, Va.; Martha Whitaker, Oak Ridge; and Bill Henderson, Greenville.

New Sorority Members Feted As Initiation Ceremonies Begin

The beginning of sorority initiations brought to a close the season of pledge dances this weekend when 21 Delta Delta Delta pledges and 16 Alpha Delta Pi pledges became active members.

Tri Delt pledges were formally initiated early this morning in the traditional Star and Crescent ceremony after a Delta week of entertainment and preparation. The week, which began Sunday morning with a breakfast in the sorority house, featured a tea given by the sorority's advisor and a pledge supper Thursday night.

To prepare pledges for their initiation, which formally began yesterday morning, Hilda Sharkey, sorority's vice-president and pledge trainer gave a pre-initiation lecture Friday afternoon.

At the breakfast following the initiation this morning, Jean Serpell of Daytona Beach, Fla. was presented a cup for being the best pledge. Mary Willis Matthews and Mary Angelyn McNease tied for the highest average among the pledges and received the scholarship cups.

Tri Delt members initiated this week-end are Pat Bailey, Clara Jane Burroughs, Mary Copenhaver, Madge Crawford, June Crockett, Jo Anne Darden, Betty Dixon, Muriel Fisher, Patty Ann Frizzell, Gene Hines, Louise Horner, and Lorraine Howard.

Others are Mary Angelyn McNease, Mary Willis Matthews, Barbara Payne, Jean Rankin, Jean Serpell, Betty Smith, Frances Sowers, Susan Trumbo, and Margean Whitehurst.

Following a "Curtesy Week" of serving their "exhaulted sisters-to-be, Alpha Delta Pi's pledges went through their initiation exercises yesterday morning. They received their pins and the ADPi handclasp late yesterday afternoon. Immediately after their initiation they were entertained at a buffet dinner, at which Pledge Master Grace Marie Blades, Apex, was hostess.

The climax of the woes through which the pledge class went last week was an informal party at the house Thursday night, where they did take-offs on the actives of the chapter and jumped to the commands of their big sisters.

The girls who were initiated were Mary Billings, Jean Crouser, Patricia Denning, Audrey Donan, Nona Edge, Ann Faulconer, Anita Gates, Ann Green, Gloria Jackson, Barbara Jean Lunore Noll, Sarah Pegram, Jackie Sharpe, Margery Williams, and Charlotte Wilson.

University Chi Omega members attended the wedding Saturday of an alumna Lucie Baxter to Paul Dulin, a former University student in Charlotte. Among those present were Barbara Ann Covington, Ann Bumgardner, Helen Bouldin, Carinne Grimsley, and Frankie Johnson.

Ida Constable, a Chi O from Charlotte, had as her guests during the week-end Mary Ann Taber, Gay Williams, Marjorie Yokley, Stella Lassiter, and June Casstevens who also attended the wedding.

Sorority-fraternity entertainments continued this week when the Delta Psi fraternity entertained the Alpha Gamma Deltas Thursday night. During the evening the Rev. Mr. David Burgess, a CIO organizer spoke in connection with Religious Emphasis week.

Tuesday night the Kappa Sigma fraternity presented a dinner party for the Chi O's and the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity gave a dinner dance for the ADPi's.

Sororities will continue holding Sunday open houses this week-end with the Phi Beta Phi's beginning Sunday night supper at 5:30. The Alpha Gamma Delta and the Chi Omega sororities will serve coffee from 7 until 8 o'clock. The Tri Delts will hold open house from 7 until 8 while the ADPi's will not hold their weekly open house this Sunday night.

Among the recent pinnings on campus are Chi Omega Ann Llewallen to Neil King a Zeta Psi, and Landy Lacy, also a Chi O to Lyman Wilkins, a Zeta Psi.

Pan-Hellenic President Ferne Hughes has named the committee chairmen who are to make plans for their dance which will be held March 26. They are as follows: decorations, Peppy Lucas and Babs Kerr; invitations, Helen Stephenson and Katherine McMillan; orchestra Becky Holton; arrangements, Edie Knight; publicity, Molly Craig; dance figure and flowers, Mary Glen Slater; and fun and fund, Ann Cooper Knight and Harriet Sipple.

The dance is to be a benefit for the purpose of raising money to support a war orphan for a year under the Foster Parents for War Parents for War Children plan.

Half the funds collected for the March of Dimes remain in the community where it was contributed.

Air ROTC Cadets Hold Military Ball

The first annual formal military ball of the Air ROTC unit was held last night in the main lounge of Graham Memorial, climaxing a full day's entertainment for the cadets and their wives and dates.

The highlight of the dance was the crowning of Miss Gene Hines a Tri-Delt of Greenwood, S. C., who was crowned "Miss Honorary Cadet Colonel," and was awarded an orchid and will be a special guest of the unit later in the year.

An iceberg is always seven-eighths under water. A conflicting belief often leads to the drowning of eskimoes.

Student Spirits Still Undaunted By Class Tests

Despite the fact that mid-term quizzes are knocking students for a loop, parties and gay times continue to flourish on campus. They seem to have the same fighting spirit that Mrs. Foster Fitz-Simmons is displaying in her attendance of tonight's "Pinafore" performance. Just home from Watts hospital, Mrs. Fitz-Simmons will be on hand in an aluminum wheel chair for her husband's production.

On the social docket for tomorrow night is the University club's informal party. The group have decided that they need to get to know each other better; so they are going to dispense with their weekly business meeting and have some fun instead.

The Town Men's association was so pleased with their fall quarter party at Terrace View that they have made plans for "another one just like the other one" Friday night.

Campus Visited By Coline Smith For Radio Show

Coline Smith, recently of Chapel Hill and the University and more recently of the Raleigh Times, returned to the campus Friday evening to present her innimitable blues songs at the Rendezvous room floor show in the basement night club in Graham Memorial.

Coline graduated from the University last year, but returns to see old friends and entertain frequently. She is working on the society staff of the Raleigh Times.

Also starred on the floor show program was Ray Weems, promising young campus baritone.

Chi Phi Fraternity Gives Formal Dance

The Chi Phi pledge class was honored this week-end with a series of parties by the fraternity. A formal banquet on Friday night in the main living room of the Chi Phi house for pledges, brothers and their dates began the week-end entertainment. A formal dance followed the banquet. Music was furnished by the "Bull City Night Hawks," and entertainment during intermission included a solo by Coline Smith.

Brunch was served yesterday morning at 11:30. The brothers entertained the pledges again yesterday afternoon at a party at the Terrace View supper club. A shipwreck party was held last night at the fraternity house, which had been converted into a ship. Guests came "dressed as they were when the ship went down," Skits and songs were performed throughout the evening and prizes were awarded for the most original costumes.

Chi Phi pledges are: Francis Buchanan, president; Charles Bums, vice-president; O. C. Pennington, secretary-treasurer; Ray Bond, Dick Conrad, Sam Haddock, Joe Hamilton, Robert Johnson, John Jones, Mike Kiser, Blake Leckie, Allan Milledge, Dick Nunis, Bill Peacock, Roddy Rourk, Douglas Roxcraft, Jerry Smith, Allan Tate, George Valentine, Edward Williams, Jerry Willingham, and Frank Swindell.

This dance and round of social activities marked the beginning of a series of fraternity pledge dances that will continue through this quarter until the men who were pledged last fall are initiated.

Rushees Entertained By Alpha Kappa Psi's

Climaxing its winter rushing period, Alpha Kappa Psi, professional fraternity in commerce, extended invitations at a smoker Tuesday night in Graham Memorial to undergraduate rushees. Dean D. D. Carroll and other members of the Commerce school faculty were present at the function.

Pledge rituals were then held for the winter pledge class in Bingham hall. Following the ritual an industrial film entitled "Rhapsody in Steel" was shown.

Fraternity Parties Are Presented For Men, Dates

An eerie atmosphere prevailed in the Alpha Tau Omega house Friday night when the fraternity entertained members and their dates at a haunted house party. Everyone entered the house through the cellar which was filled with ghosts, strange noises, and skeletons. The decorations on the main floor of the house also carried out the theme of the party. During the evening a skit, written by Pete Strader, was presented. Walt Tally, who was in charge of all arrangements for the party, was master of ceremonies.

The Kappa Sigma's entertained their sister sorority, the Chi Omega's, at a buffet supper Tuesday night. This was the first in a series of parties which the Kappa Sig's are planning for the near future.

Monday night two faculty alumni were entertained at the ATO house at dinner. They were Dr. Fletcher Green of the history department and Mr. K. C. Frazer of the political science department.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity entertained the Alpha Delta Pi's last Tuesday night with an informal dinner dance at the SAE house. The house was decorated with the blue and white colors of the ADPi's and the purple and gold of the SAE's.

New pairings on campus include Sam Newkamp, ATO, to Judy Nowell, a Pi Phi; Howard Holt, ATO to Jean Roberts, a Pi Phi.

Dr. H. E. Fey's Talk Highlights This Week's Religious Calendar

Reporting on his personal experiences at the Amsterdam conference, which assembled the World council of churches, Dr. H. E. Fey, managing editor of the Christian Century, will speak at the Methodist church tonight at 8 o'clock. The conference which has been said to be "the most important event in the life of the church in this century," met last August.

An ordained minister in the Disciples of Christ church, Dr. Fey has followed various vocational lines, as an author, a professor, and an editor. His account of the Amsterdam conference, which appeared in the Christian Century, has been described as a vivid report.

Regular morning services in the churches will be at 11 o'clock. Dr. S. T. Habel will deliver a sermon, "On Sincerity," at the Baptist church, while the Congregational Christian Congregation will hear a message by Superintendent William T. Scott, of the Southern convention of Congregational churches. Following his address there will be a fellowship dinner for members and friends of the congregation.

"The Christian's Objective" will be the topic of the Rev. Mr. Henry Ruark's sermon this morning. The Rev. Mr. David Yates will speak at the Episcopal church, and the Rev. Mr. E. C. Cooper, at the Lutheran church. Presbyterians will have services at 9:45 and 11 o'clock, at which the Rev. Mr. Charles Jones will preach.

Tonight the Westminister fellowship will launch into a series of discussions on Christianity and communism, and the Baptist Student union will hear Paul Green, noted playwright, who will speak on the significance of religion in the development of the historical drama. His talk will be the last in a series of programs on "Religion Speaks with Many Voices."

The Wesley foundation will continue their series of discussions on "Marriage, the Success of the Church Today," tonight after the student supper at 6 o'clock.

After the 8 o'clock worship service the Episcopal congregation will divide into groups and continue their marriage discussions, and Tuesday night the Canterbury Club will discuss marriage.

Married students will meet tonight at 6:15 o'clock at the Presbyterian church, and after pot-luck supper, will study the book of Jonah. The Friday night discussion group will meet at 6 o'clock this week and discuss Christianity and the University, and Saturday night the Presbyterian group invites students to their weekly square dance, held upstairs in the big Sunday school room.

The Presbyterian church held its weekly square dance and student get-together last night to the music of European folk tunes and conventional square set numbers. Refreshments were served during the dance.

Dick Weaver, of the social department, was the feature caller. He brought along with him several new records.

The local church officials expressed the hope to see a reawakening in the religious attitude of the students after Religious Emphasis week, which ended Thursday, since its purpose was to stimulate closer cooperation among the various denominations on campus.

Registration For Retreat Begins Today

YM-YW Meeting Begins Feb. 18

Registration of students planning to attend the YM-YWCA sponsored winter retreat at Montreat, Feb. 18-20, will begin today in the Y building.

A registration table will be open Tuesday through Friday from 9 until 1 o'clock according to Muriel Fisher, chairman of the registration committee for the annual retreat.

A fee of $3.50 to cover cost of transportation and recreation, will be collected at the time of registration. Upon arrival at Montreat, total weekend expenses of $10 for room and board are payable.

Sudents able to take other students to the retreat in their cars will receive compensation for driving expenses.

J. C. Herring, Baptist chaplain, is to be adviser for the "What can we believe about God, prayer, and other bases of faith" discussion group and Ray Mills is to serve as student adviser.

"What different does religion make in thoughts, actions and purposes" will be headed by Betty Carpenter, holder of the Danforth fellowship. Sue Stokes is student adviser for this commission.

The third discussion group, "Social aspects of campus life," will be headed by Fred Weaver, dean of students, and student adviser will be Bill Mackie.

Bill Friday, assistant dean of students, and Al Lowenstein, student, will be in charge of the "Political aspects of campus life" group.

Dr. Arnold Nash, head of the school of religion, is scheduled to advise the group discussing "Academic aspects of life." Tom Donnelly will be student adviser for this group.

"Civil rights" will be headed by Nell Morton, secretary of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen.

"Labor problems and economic tensions" will be discussed under the leadership of Paul N. Guthrie. Dick Murphy, student, will assist Guthrie.

Dr. Frank Hanft, of the University Law school, will head the group to discuss "International problems." Edie Knight will serve as student adviser.

UVA Announces $75 Collected At Polio Dance

The University Veterans association cleared over $75 in the March of Dimes dance Saturday night, even though only juke-box music was used during the evening, president Gene Newton announced yesterday.

The contributions began with $25 from the UVA, and money kept rolling in all evening from the people who attended the dance. Coeds Margaret Gaston and Danny Payne solicited contributions during the dance.

With the addition of another $25 which the UVA is expected to vote at the next business meeting, the association expects to top all campus groups in money collected for the March of Dimes campaign.

Piano Concert Slated Tonight

Robert Wallenborn, famous pianist and music lecturer, will open the music department's February schedule of concerts with a piano recital tonight at 8:30 in Hill hall.

The Pasquier trio will sing on Tuesday, Feb. 8. Admission will be $1. Another trio, the Vielle, is set for Sunday, Feb. 8. The program will include medieval and Renaissance music and will be free. The concert is presented in cooperation with Graham Memorial.

The University Men's Glee club will give a concert on Thursday, Feb. 28. Admission will be 85 cents. The final concert will be held on Monday, Feb. 28, with Antonio Brosa and Kathleen Long presenting a concert of violin and piano music. They will be sponsored in cooperation with the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge foundation, and admission will be by complimentary ticket.

Monogram Club Elects Terrell New President

Monogram club officials announced yesterday that the new president of the club is Laddie Terrell, elected at the last meeting. Dan Breeden was voted in as vice president of the organization.

Bill Flamisch was elected secretary-treasurer and Vic Seixas was chosen as representative to the Carolina Athletic association. Gus Johnston received the newly-formed post of representative to the Monogram board of directors.

Terrell, the new president, is a track man specializing in middle distance and the broad jump. Breeden is on the varsity swimming squad.

Outgoing officers are Gus Johnston, president; Bob Hutton, vice president; Dan Nyimicz, secretary-treasurer; Bill Pritchard, representative to CAA.

Retreat Chairmen Schedule Meeting

A meeting of the chairmen of all committees set up for the YM-YWCA winter retreat will be held this afternoon at 4:15 in the Y building.

Final plans for the retreat will be drawn up. Lil Hotard and John Hough, co-chairmen of the retreat, have urged that all chairmen attend the meeting.

Council Group Reviews Plans For Projects

Four Proposals Are Discussed

The Project committee of the Student council of the Greater University of North Carolina met here over the weekend and discussed projects that have been submitted by various members of the council.

Composed of two members from each of the schools of the Greater University, the committee discussed at length several proposals.

Heading the list and receiving much attention was the proposal for the sponsorship of the State Student legislature. This proposal would have the council sponsor the legislature at its annual meetings in Raleigh. To grant the council this authority a bill would have to be introduced and passed at the regular legislature meeting.

Another project discussed was the possibility of a Greater University day sponsored by the council. As suggested there would be one such day in the spring of this year and another next fall at the time of the State-Carolina football game.

The proposal for recognition of the council and of the unity in the Greater University was made in a motion that such recognition come by reciprocal of monograms on cheerleaders uniforms.

An idea for presenting some token to the delegates as a symbol of the unity of the three schools was discussed. The final proposal rested on the idea of presenting keys each year to the delegates. The keys would be so designed to show the unity of the three branches of the University.

It was suggested that three copies of the newly adopted constitution be drawn up, written in longhand and on parchment. The copies would be signed by all members of the council and a copy would be presented to each library of the three branches.

Delegates present at the meeting were Nell Jones and Betsy Umstead of Woman's college, Ted Williamson and Preston Andrews of State college; and Jim Godwin and Dortch Warriner of the University.

Fantasy Tryouts To Be Held Today

Tryouts for parts in "Apple Tree Farm," a musical fantasy, will be held this afternoon from 2 until 6 o'clock in the Rendezvous room of Graham Memorial.

Twenty speaking parts are open to students and townspeople. The play, written by Ida Lupino, will be presented April 4-6.

Sleet Storm Hits Campus As Warm January Fades

Month Is Warmest Since Freeze of 1931 Says Saunders of Local Weather Station

"The warmest January since 1931" stepped out of the limelight early yesterday to make way for a low mercury reading of 25 degrees and a blustery sleet and rain storm of almost one-inch depth, filter plant official Max Saunders said yesterday.

The sleet and freezing rain began to blow into the Chapel Hill area Monday night, following a steadily-sliding mercury reading throughout the day. Relatively cold weather Saturday and Sunday nights were the early forerunners of yesterday's freeze.

The sleet storm became quite heavy late Monday night, icing roadways not only in Chapel Hill, but throughout the state and in most of the Southland. Snow was reported in Raleigh and other areas of the state, although only a few flakes were noticed in this vicinity.

Saunders said the University electric and water division cooperative weather station recorded a low early yesterday morning of 25 degrees, and a high reading of 36 degrees at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The temperature was not expected to drop below yesterday's 25-degree level this morning.

The filter plant worker also said the University weather station's precipitation reading showed that .95, or almost one inch, of sleet and rain fell during the storm.

Saunder said the lowest temperature reading this winter was 14 degrees last Dec. 26 and 27. The highest temperature reading in the unusually summer-like January was 79 degrees on Jan. 25, last Tuesday. But Saunders pointed out that yesterday's 25-degree low was the lowest for any January reading since 1940. Last year the January minimum reading was 26 degrees.

The Chapel Hill police department reported no accidents caused by the heavy ice slick which covered the town's streets. And the State Highway Patrol said the number of accidents in the state was "surprisingly low," the United Press reported. The patrolmen were quoted as saying motorists have been much more cautious because of the treacherous weather.

L. C. Morrow of the University electric and water division said yesterday that few power lines had gone down because of the weight of ice or snow. He said some were down on Columbia streets and in west Carrboro along the Lake road. No telephone wires have been broken so far, he reported.

The local Carolina Trailways bus ticket office said their buses were running "on schedule without any accidents."

Winter Strikes South From Gulf To Virginia

ATLANTA, Jan. 31—(UP)—Winter dipped deep into the South today, spreading snow, sleet and ice from Louisiana to Virginia.

The weather bureau reported freezing rain from Atlanta north through the Piedmont section to Virginia. In North and South Carolina and Kentucky, the rain fell on top of snow.

Snow covered large parts of the Carolinas, Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas.

Highways were slick and dangerous, particularly in the mountains. Many schools were closed. Power failures were numerous.

At least seven deaths were attributed to the storm. There were numerous accidents resulting in minor injuries.

Only Florida and the lower sections of the Gulf states escaped the freeze. In Miami, the temperature was 80, the sky was blue and a soft wind was blowing.

In Atlanta, inch-thick ice coated trees and buildings. The Georgia Power company's 110,000-volt underground lines went out in the downtown area about 8:30 a.m. Nearly all of the city's business offices were darkened.

Snow, Icy Rain Blanket State

By United Press

Winter skidded into North Carolina yesterday on a slick coat of ice and brought a warning that highways were dangerous with or without chains.

Police departments and the weather bureau joined in broadcasting road warnings after a 36-hour fall of snow, slect and freezing rain over the entire state.

But for east and central portions the weatherman promised quick relief. Freezing rain ended at mid-day with somewhat warmer showers continuing through yesterday to thaw out the ice coating.

Four-Year Coeds Will Be Subject Of Phi Tonight

The Philanthropic assembly will discuss the possibility of a four year curriculum for women students at the University in its regular session in Phi hall, New East at 7:30 tonight.

Speaker pro-tempore Pete Gerns announced as an alternative to the four-year plan the following resolution: That the University refuse admission to women students.

A member of the assembly asserted that the idea of excluding women from the University would encounter stiff opposition. No proponents for making the University an all-male institution have yet been found to speak for such a measure.

Crowded dormitories and classrooms are expected to be presented as arguments against a four-year curriculum.

Residence Board Hears Brockwell

Sherwood Brockwell, fire marshall of North Carolina, spoke to members of the women's Board of Residence Thursday afternoon on the problem of fire prevention and safety.

Brockwell said fire drills should be planned and timed with attention to the structure of a building, the floor space to be covered in making an exit, the width of the stairway, and the number of occupants. He added that planners should allow for two thirds of the occupants to exit by one stairway.

According to the fire marshall, experts figure it takes no more than two minutes to evacuate a frame building; no more than three minutes for a building of masonry with frame interior; four minutes for a building with fire-resistant floors; and no more than six minutes for a building of top fireproof material.

Canterbury Club Will Hear Wells

Dean William Wells of the College of Arts and Sciences will be one of the four lay members of the Episcopal church to lead discussions on "Marriage and the Family" at a meeting of the Canterbury club tonight at 6 o'clock in the parish house.

This is the second in a series of four programs on the subject of Christian marriage. In planning these programs, the members of the Canterbury club are following the project of Episcopalians all over the country.

Y Solicitors Begin Drive With Supper

Baptist Church Scene of Meet

A kick-off supper for YMCA fund solicitors held yesterday evening in the Baptist church formally opened the campus-wide fund raising drive, Charlie Fox, YMCA financial chairman, announced last night.

Speakers at the supper included Chancellor R. B. House, Jess Dedmond, student body president, and Warren Ashby, chairman of the YMCA advisory board.

Today, solicitations will begin all over the campus and all students will be asked to contribute money to the depleted Y funds.

Booths will be set up in the YMCA for town men or other students who wish to contribute their money there. Pledges may be used for money in case students are short of ready cash, and all students contributing to the Y fund campaign will receive membership cards granting them full YMCA privileges.

Fox said the membership cards will indicate the bearer endorses the purpose of the YMCA, identifies him as a bona fide student of the University, and gives him the privileges of "visiting member" in city YMCA associations.

"The YMCA is shooting for a $5,000 goal," Fox said. "I feel confident the drive will be a success and we will meet our goal."

Chancellor House, endorsing the drive, said, "I am appealing to students to give more financial support to the YMCA. The University has always given what it could and would give more if it were able. Friends and alumni give some money, perhaps they should give more."

"But my appeal is to students who benefit by the Y every day and who may take too much for granted. The YMCA is a fellowship of Christians in service of the campus, and it needs student membership, support and participation. To me, it is not just a matter of meeting a campus need. It is a personal opportunity. I have been working in the YMCA for over 30 years, and I find that it gives me more than it ever gets from me."

Waiting for Spring?

'Winter Is A Natural Phenomenom'

By Don Maynard

Students who tripped heavily down their dormitory steps yesterday morning were somewhat startled to see that winter had last arrived in Chapel Hill.

Several meteorologists, unperturbed by the sudden shift in barometers, sat by their firesides yesterday and calmly awaited the spring.

"After all," they asserted, "winter is a natural phenomenon." And they produced records to back their statement.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's yearbook for 1941, "Climate and Man," furnishes factual information on North Carolina in general along with a few scattered chips pertaining to "the Hill."

In spite of the sunny outlook of the yearbook, statistics cannot be overlooked. In the period from 1899 to 1938, the Chapel Hill area averaged 100 days per year of rain, 60 days of thunderstorms, 15 days of snow blanketed mud, 30 days of dense fog, 120 cloudy days and one hailish day.

Add 'em up. In the course of one average year, 326 days are passed beneath overcast skies. And when it does get sunny—whew!

In 1936, during the summer months, Carolinians were grumbling that it was too hot when the mercury soared to 107. They prayed for the coolness of winter. "We can always warm up," they could be heard to say.

But the Tar Heel state is not at a total loss. Figures show that in leap years Chapel Hill may look forward to from 15 to 65 days of absolute weathery bliss.

To a disgruntled student body these appalling figures are submitted: Approximately 25 days of that fair weather allotment have been expended since the beginning of 1949.

Weather observers are beginning to make long-range predictions for next summer. "If we have any more fair weather between now and the summer months, the good days will be dangerously near exhaustion," they warned.

"If this allotment is exhausted we will be forced to predict a summer of sleet and snow."

"Mother Nature must be kept balanced," they grimly explained.

Agrees to Closing

Negro Taxpayers to Keep Up Efforts to Get Into Charleston

COLUMBIA, S. C., Jan. 31—(UP) — A South Carolina Negro leader today said it was all right with him if Charleston college was closed rather than admit Negroes, but if Negro taxpayers continued to support the college, they would continue to seek entrance to the college.

James M. Hinton, state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, last week wrote Mayor William McG. Morrison requesting that Negroes be allowed to enroll in City college. He said Negroes pay some of the taxes that support the school.

Mayor Morrison said, "Before acceding to such demands, I would instruct the City council Ways and Means committee to cut off an appropriation for the college."

Hinton replied, "If Mayor Morrison and the city of Charleston desire to deny white children the right to a college education rather than extend the same privileges to Negro youths, it will be all right with the NAACP.

"But if Charleston college still operates on taxpayers' money, with whites and Negroes paying those taxes, Negroes intend, through due process of law, to share the funds on an equal basis," he said.

Models Minus Chests

Goff Scoffs at 'False Modesty', Bosom Is 'God-Given Right'

CHICAGO, Jan. 31—(UP)—A girl who can wear sweaters should be proud she is built that way, an orthopaedic surgeon said today.

Dr. Charles M. Goff of Hartford, Conn., said he'll have none of this false modesty from women with bosoms.

"It's their God-given right," he said, "and they should be proud of it."

Dr. Goff's chief interest is in posture. He's a member of the Posture committee of the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons which is in session here. One of his chief worries, he said, is the esteem American women are giving to the flat-chested figure.

"It's awful," he said. "There's a growing impression that the thin flat-chested women are what men want—and that's not true."

Actually, he warned, girls who try to look flat-chested can grow up with all sorts of inhibitions. They'll have trouble with their husbands, too, he added.

Dr. Goff said that the women who model clothes are setting the bad example.

"Live models make us groan," he said. "They're terrible."

"These fashion models go around with their stomachs pushed out and their chests caved in," he said.

An Aid to Lectures

(From the Purdue Exponent)

The educational system is one of those things which constantly undergoes a series of alternate praise and condemnation, some of which is factual in nature and some of which is beyond the realm of practicability.

The net result is constant change which is a good thing. Our parents become grouped as the people who contend, "They didn't do it that way when I was in school." Beneficial change constitutes progress in a large measure and in what field other than education is progress more important, since it affects all people.

A few years ago, professors were lambasted for using the same identical lecture notes from semester to semester, and in some quarters were even accused of teaching the same things from generation to generation. That situation seems to have improved to an appreciable degree—at least the textbooks are changed frequently as we all are aware.

But how about those lecture notes, and what's more important, the actual process of taking notes?

One of the most difficult situations in note taking is the problem of keeping up with the lecturer so that some semblance of meaning accompanies the written word. Some professors have suggested that their students take a minimum of notes and pay more attention to the discussion. Others let the student follow his own inclinations and employ any form of shorthand which he has developed in the sometimes futile attempt to put on paper each and every small detail. Add to this the fact that at least one professor on the campus has said that there is no need to take notes in his classes, pointing out that he can lecture for a full month from one page of notations. His students are the first to admit that his lectures support his view.

In order that this heterogenous mixture of teaching methods be standardized to some extent, why not do as other universities, such as the Wharton School of Business at the University of Pennsylvania and Indiana University, have done? In courses of the lecture type, the professor distributes a mimeographed copy of his lecture at each class period. The students then follow the thoughts as they are discussed, underlining those ideas which are stressed; and there is no note taking, as such, which does much to distract attention from the lecture. An assessment of the students at the beginning of the semester would pay for the mimeographing and paper at a cost of about seventy-five cents per student. For veterans this charge would come under the G. I. Bill, but aside from that the value received should keep no student from resenting the small investment.—r.v.p.

Why Do College Men Fail?

(From the Georgia Tech Technique)

Why does the college trained man frequently fail at his first job?

The answer—he is still a child in one way or another, because he lacks one or more of seven basic traits.

That is the answer given by Dr. Robert N. McMurry based on a survey by his management firm which studied 1,17 trainees directly hired from college by 247 companies.

He listed the seven traits as:

The ability to stay long enough with a company to repay the investment in training.

The ability to accept responsibility.

Perseverance, or the ability "to follow a path to the end," even if the path is unfamiliar.

Self-reliance.

The quality of being agreeable to different groups and different persons.

Identification of his personal goals with those of the firm.

And the ability to exercise authority without belligerence.

"Absence of these traits, or any one of them, indicates failure of an indvidual to grow emotionally," said Dr. McMurry.

He said his study was based on experience with the 1,167 trainees recruited directly from college who were trained at the expense of $2,750 each for the first year, exclusive of such items as supervision and breakage.

Of the whole group, only a small percentage were judged desirable at the end of the first year. The others had left or had proved unsatisfactory and were discharged.

The way to avoid this loss, Dr. McMurry said, is "to keep clearly in mind the qualifications for the job, and to use a patterned interview which permits the interviewer to explore all facets of the applicant's background.

"This latter will give the interviewer a factual basis for judging whether the trainee does have the qualities the company seeks—and this judgment must be made upon a careful evaluation of what the candidate has done rather than on what he says he will do."

Apologies To Clean Hogs

By Jonathan Marshall

In every crowd there are a few people who act as if they were brought up in a pig sty—this columnist asks all cleanly hogs to forgive the comparison.

There are always people who leave lighted cigarettes on tables, who don't bother to flush toilets, and who never return books that they borrow. A lot of these people must have agreed to concentrate operations in the town of Chapel Hill, or at least on our campus.

Of course many parents never bother to teach their children to consider other people, but one would think that instinctively the old "do unto others" proverb might eventually make a dent on their thick skulls.

Just for laughs this columnist counted the trash on the path between Graham Memorial and the new stop light opposite the post office the other evening. The count did not include cigarette butts which were too numerous to count and which wash away with the first rain. There were 118 pieces of trash on the path.

The list included such items as paper, orange peels, apple cores, cups, one whiskey bottle, paper bags, half a hot dog and roll, a tobacco tin, several empty cigarette packs, and a torn shirt.

Although there are five or six garbage cans in the Y court and behind South building, the ground is always littered. Maybe it takes too much muscle to put cups and other trash in waiting garbage cans.

This isn't the only manner in which lack of consideration for other people is demonstrated around here. During the last year two punch bowls and a silver service set have disappeared from Graham Memorial. Result, organizations must furnish their own equipment now.

This column has often mentioned the fact that school spirit means more than cheering at athletic events. Keeping our campus neat and respecting university property would be one good way of showing school spirit.

It looks as if the increase in taxi rates mentioned recently in this column wll go through without any more investigation. Mr. Lanier and Dr. Hobbs did their best to further good government, but again the public fell down on its responsibility.

Perhaps those who said that a public hearing would be a waste of time were right!

The Dutch Are Burned Up

By Charlie Kauffman

The Dutch are pretty burned up over the rather overbearing attitude of the U.S. in the currently projected Indonesian settlement. They have been given about as much credit for honesty as a gang of Chicago crooks. Their incensed stand shows that they fully understand the good-will we have so recently crammed down their throats.

Certainly we can agree, and we have agreed, that a federated republic would be set up in Indonesia by July, 1950. The difficulties involved have been only in matters of procedure and implementation of agreement. Yet we have, with apparent ease, managed to insult the Dutch and their good faith; we have flayed them at every turn. Of course, we have Holland, economically speaking, in a very bad position—the cessation of ERP funds into Holland would wreck the country within a very short time. Yet the Dutch had promised to do their utmost to establish an interim government by next month, hold elections by the fall, and achieve the transfer of sovereignty to a federated republic during the course of the year 1950. This is precisely what the United States resolution, adopted by the Security Council last Friday, calls for.

It can hardly be argued that the U.N. has no jurisdiction in Indonesia or that observers for the Security Council do not have the right as such to oversee the progress in the area toward the setting up of the Republic. The approach taken by the U.S. in its resolution does, however, seem to be decidedly shortsighted in view of the situation in Burma, where a "republic" was hurriedly set up, and as a result, the country is now near a state of utter chaos. Britain simply got out rather than face the music. It can be argued that the Dutch have previously pursued a rather enlightened colonial policy in their Indonesian Empire. All the Dutch have asked for is a little time to carry out the similar measures they had planned long previously to those put forth last Friday at Lake Success. It cannot be denied that the U.N. has granted the Arabs and the Jews an enormous length of time before assuming the period for settlement had expired. The Soviet Union has to this day not complied with the Security Council resolution on Korea of a year ago.

There are those self-termed "enlightened" ones among us who demand to know what right the Dutch have in Indonesia on the grounds that a great "people's movement" is being suppressed. The obvious question is what people and what percentage of the population these participants comprise. The question of the political ideologies involved is open to debate. The percentage of the Javanese population participating in this great "people's movemennt" is decidedly small. The overwhelming majority is simply tired of being terrorized.

Even for those who believe the withdrawal should be ahead of the U.N. and the Dutch schedule, this explanation should, but probably won't suffice. In the first place, the principle of colonial empire and economic exploitation thereof is as old as that of the international community itself. And in the second, in all fairness to the Dutch position, it must be considered that before the war nearly half of Holland's annual income came from her trade with the Indies, while 67 per cent of all Indonesian trade was with the mother country. The rich produce of the islands can no doubt be absorbed by trade with other countries, especially if we intend to build our stockpile of strategic materials beyond the 30 per cent of the goal already obtained. It is highly unlikely that the Dutch will find new, rich colonies for exploitation, and they are well aware of it. In view of this, it is no wonder that the Dutch do not look forward with any particular anticipation to scuttling two-thirds of their vast merchant fleet in the months ahead, and retiring as a nation to the banks of Lake Ysel to fulfill a destiny at codfishing.

Dutch economy is, of course, going to be pretty thoroughly shaken. We are proceeding with our Indonesian policy on the highly laudable but somewhat dubious assumption that more will be gained by the Indonesians than will be lost by the Dutch. When the paint starts to dry, we can look forward to this: acute instability, economically and politically, in Java if not in the entire republic; Dutch dependence upon the U.S. for restabilizing its economy, already in a perilous position.

This article is not meant to take the form of a defense of the Dutch empire system. It is meant to point out that there is another side to this Indonesian melee-something which has apparently not occured to but a very few American observers of the situation there.

Suggestion from Miller

Editor:

Gentlemen, I wish to make a modest proposal for the better... ment of the University. It is extremely difficult for me to sit in my house of ease and let the University which has fostered my education go to financial ruin. We the men who have been kicked from Nash Hall under the one happy roof of Miller feel that we have even more to offer. We suggest that the heat from the g... number of men here will suffice. This may not seem like much to the untrained student but I am sure that our campus fathers will immediately see the value. Actually it will accomplish the same saving as the closing of Nash.

This is however only a slight saving as compared to the other proposals which I wish to bring to your mind. Most of the men who live in Miller Hall go home on the week ends and actually have no need for water facilities. Let me say here however that I don't think it wise to cut the plumbing facilities out entirely as some of the men living here have the extremely bad habit of using these facilities once or twice a day, and this I feel would complicate matters, so until these habits can be broken may I suggest that they be allowed to use these facilities to some extent.

As for lights we are all in accord that they could be disconnected without any serious interrpution to our lives. The lights now serve only to Illuminate card games at which we lose our money.

I wish to impress further that I do not seek recognition to these proposals but seek only the solution to a very difficult financial problem.

Sidelights On Some Congressional Figures

By George Dixon

Washington — "Freshman" Representative Stephen M. Young, of Ohio, was standing impatiently in line at the house disbursing office the other day. He was trying to get a pay check.

Mr. Young explained, vehemently, that he just had to get dough because he had to go home to Cleveland and pick up some decent clothes.

"I just have been appointed to the Ways and Means committee," he said. "It is a very important committee and I've got to look dignified."

* * *

The reason I put quotes around "freshman" in referring to Mr. Young is that he was here before. But he has been out since 1942 when he was defeated by George H. Bender, the hymn-singing solon.

Young and Bender have carried on quite an election feud. Young defeated Bender three times, and Bender defeated him twice.

In 1940 they both won. This was because a population increase gave Ohio two representatives-at-large. But re-districting ensued and now there is only one again—and Young is it.

The Navy is getting out a text book for its reserve officers. It contains many interesting items not matters of general knowledge.

For instance:

Did you know it's a bread-and-water offense for a naval officer to wear non-regulation socks with a regulation uniform?

Outside of that, how've ya been?

A former United States senator makes good—or how to bristle with success:

The distinguished John A. Danaher, who represented the great state of Connecticut in all his Republican dignity until Democratish Brien McMahon defeated him in 1944, has just registered as a lobbyist with the secretary of the Senate.

He stated he has been retained as lobbyist by the Fuller Brush company!

* * *

There seems, however, to be a little uncertainly in ex-senator Danaher's mind about his new eminence. In filling out the lobbyists' "confession" form, he answered questions as follows:

"Expenses? 'Indefinite.' Salary? 'Indefinite.' Duration of employment? 'Indefinite.' "

Never knew the Fuller Brush people were so indefinite.

Since Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith, graduated from representative to senator she has dolled herself up quite a lot.

The pretty, little woman with the soft gray hair used to give the impression of being about to set forth on a cross-country hike. But now she dresses like a gal with a hot date for dancing.

The flat-heeled shoes have given way to the trickest suede opera pumps you ever saw—stilt-heeled numbers with a buckle three inches high clustered with rhinestones.

I saw her out dancing the other night. Never before have I seen such a dreamy look on the pan of a senator.

The new head doorkeeper of the House of Representatives is named William M. Miller, but everyone calls him "Fish-bait."

Seems it's a holdover from his boyhood in Mississippi. A devoted chum expressed the opinion that Miller was no good for anything except fish-bait—and it stuck.

Ex-representative Fred Hartley, of Taft-Hartley renown, was introduced at the boxing matches here the other night. Few seemed to recognize the name.

Vols Massacre Tar Heel Five; Swimmers Sink Tech

Carson Is Star; Scores 29 Points In Lost Cause

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 31.—Sparked by a burning desire for revenge for the football defeat offered in the fall at the hands of the University of North Carolina, the University of Tennessee basketball team turned in an 84-75 win over the Tar Heel five here tonight. A crowd of 2,500 fans viewed the proceedings in Alumni Memorial auditorium.

It was Tennessee all the way. The Vols jumped into an early lead and maintained it throughout the contest. The home town boys hit with consistancy from all angles of the court and maintainned a 35 per cent shooting accuracy.

Little Hugh Jones, Vol guard and brother of Kentucky's famed Wah-Wah, paced the Orange and White to their intersectional victory by pouring in 26 points. Nine of his twelve field goals came on long set shots, a favorite weapon of the Vols.

Scoring honors for the night, however, went not to Jones, but to Carolina's Coy Carson, the Southern conference's leading scorer. The Asheville hot-shot poured 11 field goals and seven free throws through the hoop for a total of 29 points.

Carson's scoring spree stole the spotlight from the brilliant play of Jones and from the Southeastern conference's top scorer, Vol forward Paul Walther, who pumped in 19 points.

The Vols scored on the tip-off play as Walther took the ball and fed it to Montgomery going down the middle. Montgomery dunked the oval for two points and Tennessee was off to the races. Soon after, Walther stole the ball and drove through for a lavup to give the locals a 4-0 advantage.

Nemo Nearman tossed in a pair of free throws for the Tar Heels and the score stood at 4-2. Tennessee at the one-minute mark. That was the closet Carolina ever came.

By ten minutes of the first half, Tennessee had widened the gap to 25-10 and, maintaining a first half average of 41 per cent, upped the count to 41-25 at the half.

In the second half it was the same story. Tennessee, seizing every opportunity to humble their guests, continued to pile up the points and by the ten-minute mark of the second half the Vols were ahead, 56-34.

Another torrid scoring spurt saw the home town lads throw in 28 points in the last ten minutes.

Carolina Clowns Play Clodhoppers In Polio Benefit Game Tonight at 8

By Bill Pritchard

The undefeated Carolina Clowns will play hosts to the Pittsboro Clodhoppers quintet in a specially-arranged benefit ball game tonight at 8 o'clock in Woollen gym. The game will mark the end of the current campaign for funds for the polio drive.

Star athletes will be more numerous than Carmichael's puns as twenty varsity footballers take the floor in an abreviated game which throws the linemen against the backs. Since it will be impossible to use the two-platoon system, the game has been shortened to twenty minutes instead of the usual forty, for the benefit of the participants who are unable to go an entire game, due to habit.

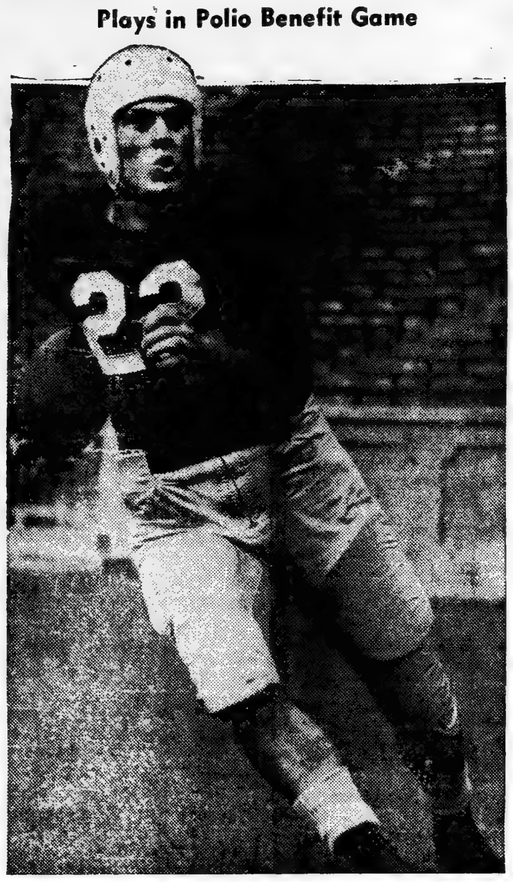
Although the starting lineups have not been issued yet by the coaches, it is certain that among those who will see action are Sid Varney, Len Szafaryn, Stan Marczyk, Bob Mitten, Mike Rubish for the linemen, and Bill Flamisch, Bo Kennedy, Eddie Knox, Bill Maceyko and Bobby Weant for the backs.

Half-Time Mayhem

For the intermission between this game and the Clowns- Clodhoppers game, the Monogram Club has been indeed fortunate in contracting two professional wrestlers to add a little gore to an otherwise good, clean evening's entertainment. In one corner will be Stan (The Angel) Marczyk, at 283 pounds, who used to train by mining coal in the Pennsylvania foothills, crushing the huge lumps to dust in his bare hands. Facing him and hailing from the local area will be C. J. (Tiny) Simpson, who only tips the scales over to 275. This fight is strictly on the up-and-up with no holds barred. The grapplers will be released from their cages about 8:30.

The feature event of the evening will be the highly-touted game between the local Clowns and the visiting Pittsboro Clodhoppers, an amateur group boasting several Carolina students, headed by Purcell Jones, and ex-cage stars from Duke and Pittsboro.

Climbing from a virtual death bed to assist the Clowns and the polio drive in maintaining their undefeated records, will be Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice and his stomach, which is nearly as famous in its own right as the triple-threater himself. Backing him will be Art Weiner, Fred Schwartzburg, Jim Hamilton, Bob Cox, Bernie McKiernan, and a galaxy of well-known aces.



Time-Out Horseplay

Besides fielding an excellent basketball team, the Clowns take time out during the game to keep the audience in a jovial mood with their unceasing antics and horseplay. To add to the fun, a half-time program has been worked out that will feature Norman Cordon as master of ceremonies, paving the way for a tap dance duet by Bob (Twinkle-Toes) Cox and Betty Doss. Present, also, will be the University Band, plus the Sigma Chi Sextet which will render its original version of "Tradition". An acrobatic act is slated at this time too, with Darrell Byerly, "Rasp" Berry and Bob Hurley providing the thrills, here.

The whole show is for the single purpose of raising funds for the polio drive and even the players are paying to play, so come on down tonight at 3:00 to Woollen gym and help a most worthy cause while helping yourself to an evening of entertainment.

Tickets will be on sale at the "Y" from 9-12 in the morning and at the gate tonight. The contribution will be $.50.

Plays in Polio Benefit Game

CHARLIE JUSTICE, Carolina's All-American tailback during football season, will be wearing a different uniform when he participates in the benefit basketball game in Woollen gymnasium tonight at 8 o'clock. All funds go to the campus drive to combat Infantile Paralysis.

MANAGER'S NEEDED

Varsity managers are needed for next fall's team. Boys from the present freshman class are particularly needed. Anyone interested in being a manager this year is requested to report to Henry Moore this afternoon in the freshman football dressing room.

Win Fifth Meet As Twining Cuts Record for 100

By Larry Fox

With Captain Dick Twining breaking the Southern conference record for the 100-yard freestyle, Carolina's swimming team won its 40th consecutive conference dual meet yesterday afternoon in Bowman Gray pool by easily defeating the VPI Gobblers, 48-27.

Coach Ralph Casey used mainly his reserves in copping Carolina's fifth straight decision of the campaign and thus it wasn't until after the next-to-last event that the Tar Heels clinched the victory. In fact, VPI led through the first three events and the score was knotted at 16-16 after the diving competition.

In accounting for one of Carolina's seven first places, Twining chopped half a second off the old loop standard of 0:53.8 he had set last season.

Norm Sper backstroked to victory in 1:39, which was 2.4 seconds over the mark established by Jim Thomas last year and the 400-yard freestyle relay quartet missed the record of 3:35.8 by the same margin. Floyd Drew was the third disappointed merman. Although he won the 50-yard freestyle handily, his time of 0:24.1 was a bit too slow.

Once again only one man represented Carolina in the diving. Gil Beam took a first place in that event with a total of 91.6 points, while teammates Buddy Crone and Johnny Wichard gave an exhibition on the high board in preparation for the meet with Ohio State.

The two VPI firsts were registered in the 300-yard medley relay and the 200-yard breaststroke. Wayland Ronnie, Al McKeithen, and Frank Brouse took the relay in the slow time of 3:15.5. McKeithen proved to be the high scorer for the Gobblers by also capturing first place in the breaststroke in 2:29.0.

The next meet for the Tar Heels is against Ohio State in Columbus this Saturday. They return home February 18, meeting Emory.

The summary:

300-yard medley relay - Won by VPI (W. Rennie, McKeithen, and Brouse) 3:15.5.

220-yard freestyle - 1. Norwood (C), 2, Wood (VPI), 3 Roy (VPI). 2:28.5.

100-yard freestyle - 1. Twining (C), 2. Greenbaum (C), 3. Brouse (VPI). 0:53.3. (New Southern conference record. Old record of 0:53.8 held by Twining (C).

150-yard backstroke - 1. Sper (C). 2. W. Rennie (VPI), 3. Dance (VPI). 1:39.0.

Initial Winter Football Drills Slated to Begin This Afternoon

Initial winter football drills will begin today at 4 o'clock on Navy field. All members of last year's freshman squad and a number of specified varsity men will participate in drills this week, and all other varsity performers and new men will report for practice on Februray 7. The drills will extend until February 28.

Head coach Carl Snavely and his assistants will hold intensive drills during the succeeding three weeks in an effort to get a good line on next year's talent. Spring drills will bring about any changes that might be made and will give the Carolina coaching crew a good idea of who will form the nucleus of the 1949 squad.

Formation changes and player hifts have been rumored during he brief lay-off period since the fateful Sugar bowl clash, but no official word has been issued on anything pertaining to the team.

All players beginning drills today must be dressed and on the field at 4 o'clock, and all participants who haven't already checked out equipment must do so in time for practice. The equipment room will be open for this purpose from 1:30 until 4 this afternoon.

That Justice Again

Choo Choo Charlie Justice returned to national prominance Sunday night when he made a brief address over a coast-to-coast radio hook-up.

The Choo was a guest of honor on the Horace Heidt show which was aired from Charlotte, Heidt, like Justice, a Beta, was awarded the football used in the Carolina-Duke game last year by the All-American halfback.

Ticket Exchange For Duke Contest Slow at Woollen

Sale of reserved seat tickets to the Duke - Carolina basketball game here Saturday night have been unusually slow this week, and today and tomorrow are the last days that students having odd-numbered pass books will have priority.

The athletic department emphasized that only one ticket will be issued per person. In other words a student cannot pick up a ticket for his room mate at the same time he gets his. Also the student must present his ID card.

The following rules govern distribution of the tickets:

1. Holders of passbooks bearing odd serial numbers, that is 1, 3, 5, etc., will have a priority on seats for the game with Duke on Feb. 5.

2. Individuals who wish to see this game and who have odd numbered books must exchange coupons at the ticket window on Monday—Wednesday between 9 and 5 o'clock.

3. On Thursday and Friday if there are any tickets left after the above priority period, they will be issued on a first come, first serve basis to holders of passbooks bearing even serial numbers or to any one with a passbook.

4. Any space which is not called for by Saturday morning, Feb. 5, cannot be claimed by holders of passbooks and will be sold to the general public.

5. When two members of the same family have passbooks and one carries an even serial number and the other an odd number these individuls will be permitted to secure seats for the same game, but the serial number of the book issued to the head of the family will determine the game to which they can be admitted.

Chase Loop Title

Coach Bill Grice's Chapel Hill Wildcats, who are the leading contenders for the Eastern conference class A cage crown, will try for their tenth straight victory of the current season tonight when they battle Siler City's hardwooders in the Siler City gym.

The local hoopsters rang up win number nine Saturday night in Raleigh with a 48-37 decision over a strong Methodist Orphanage quintet.

Tickets on Sale For Track Meet To Be Held Here

Tickets are now on sale at the ticket office in Woollen gymnasium for the Southern Conference Indoor Track meet to be held here on February 26.

Since the event is a Southern conference affair rather than a school function, the athletic passbooks will not be valid for the cinder meet. The University has made special reservations for the student body, however, and 900 reserved seats are now on sale at half price. The student admission for the event will be $.75 and ticket number 30 from his athletic passbook.

Because of the lack of reserved seats, it is recommended that all students interested in attending the annual meet purchase their tickets at once. Each student must buy his own individual ticket, however, and must present his athletic passbook in order to get the reduction.

UNC Press Releases List Of 21 New Books

The University press yesterday announced its list of new books to be published this spring. The list includes 21 titles of wide interest.

According to George F. Scheer of the press, one of the top books on the spring list is "Epicurus, My Master," by Max Radin, "a truly great work of literary art; an impressive accomplishment, full of implications for our own time." It is in the form of an autobiography of Atticus, friend of Cicero and disciple of Epicurus. The story is a portrayal of the evils that led to the downfall of Rome.

"The Campus of the First State University" is the title of Archibald Henderson's "interesting and entertaining" new book on the history of the University.

"Freedom and Renaissance," by Hardin Craig, is a collection of five lectures concerning the author's belief that a modern renaissance is necessary for survival and progress.

Also on the list is "International Folk Plays," edited by Samuel Selden. It is a collection of student-written folk plays.

"The Devil's Tramping Ground (and other North Carolina Mystery Stories)" by John Harden is a collection of North Carolina mysteries, historical and otherwise, ranging from the disappearance of Roanoke's colonists to present day yarns. The stories originally appeared as a popular radio series called "Tales from Tar Heelia."

The press considers as its top books from the standpoint of national appeal, "Arabian Oil: America's Stake in the Middle East," by Raymond F. Mikesell and Hollis B. Chernery; "Titans of the Soil," by Edward Jerome Dies; "Peter Harrison: First American Architect," by Carl Bridenbaugh; and "Epicurus, My Master," by Max Radin.

"The Woman Who Rang The Bell," by Phillips Russell, is the story of Cornelia Phillips Spencer, who rallied alumni to the cause of reopening the University after reconstruction days, and rang the bell of South building when word arrived that it would reopen.

"Aucassin et Nicolete," is a new edition of one of the masterpieces of old French literatures, edited and prepared for easy classroom use by Robert White Linker.

"Race and Region," by Edgar T. Thompson, is a "rich, descriptive" bibliography of all materials pertaining to race relations in the United States to be found in the very important collections of the University, Duke, and North Carolina college.

Completing the list are, "Connecticut's Years of Controversy, 1750-1776," by Oscar Zeichner; "A Documentary History of Education in the South Before 1860. Volume I," edited by Edgar W. Knight; "Forsyth: A County on the March," by Adelaide L. Fries and Associates; "Blasco Ibanez, Unamuno, Valle Inclan, Baroja—Cuatro Individualistas de Espana," by Jose A. Balseiro; "Humanistic Scholarship in the South," edited by Thomas B. Stroup; "The Struggle for Democracy in Germany," by Gabriel A. Almond; "Regional Research Cooperation," by Harold Hoffsommer; "Exploring the South," by Rupert B. Vance, John E. Ivey, Jr., and Marjorie N. Bond; "Research in Political Science," by Ernest S. Griffith; and, "A North Carolina Naturalist—H. H. Brimley," edited by Eugene Odum.

Woman Is Cleared By Students Here

Two Men Confess Moving Parked Auto Into Recorder's Court Judge's Driveway

By J. L. Merritt

Pearl Norwood, local Negro woman who was convicted of illegal parking last Tuesday in Chapel Hill Recorder's court, found two unexpected champions yesterday in the form of students Mike Wallace and Dick Barab.

Last week, Pearl parked her car on Pittsboro street while she went to work at the Carolina Inn. While she was at work in the Inn, the two students decided to wash their car which was parked directly behind Pearl's. They moved Pearl's car further up the street to avoid wetting it and then washed their own.

After washing their car, the students went in to eat at their fraternity house and forgot to move Pearl's car out of the driveway in which they had pushed it.

Judge Whitfield found the car blocking his driveway. He called the police station and officer R. L. Blackwood came out and moved Pearl's car.

Pearl was found guilty in last week's session of the Recorder's court and ordered to pay $10 and costs. She appealed the decision and was released under $100 bond.

Upon reading the Daily Tar Heel report of the case, Wallace and Barab remembered they had pushed a car away a few days before, and went to Judge Whitfield to tell him the story. As a result, the judge reopened the case and Wallace and Barab appeared before him in Recorder's court.

Pearl was cleared and the two students were ordered to pay the amount of costs and the $10 fine which Pearl had been ordered to pay.

Judge Whitfield, in pronouncing his decision, commended Wallace and Barab for the voluntary admission of guilt.

"There was no evidence at the time of the trial except the defendant's denial," Judge Whitfield said. "I consider it a very fine thing that the two young gentlemen, with a fine sense of duty and obligation, admitted that they were guilty."

YM Solicitors Initiate Drive For Members

48 Men Working On Fund Campaign

More than 48 solicitors yesterday opened the $5,000 YMCA membership drive by endeavoring to contact all of the 6,000 male students living on campus.

Funds were beginning to come in yesterday, Charlie Fox, YMCA financial chairman, said, although "semi-complete returns only are available at present." Today marks the halfway point of the drive.

At a pre-campaign supper held in the Baptist church Monday night, the solicitors heard Chancellor Robert B. House praise them for serving God and man "with will, energy and youth in this collection of funds."

House illustrated the difficulties solicitors would most likely meet in their contacts and outlined methods for overcoming them. At the same time he charged the Y men with their responsibility during the drive.

"If you do anything whatsoever on this campus," he said, "you will need courage, conviction and persistance to carry it out."

The chancellor pointed out that non-members of the YMCA may not be fully aware of the work it accomplishes here, but that once this work is brought to their consciousnesses, they will want to join the YMCA and "testify that by their contribution."

Stating that he "didn't know of anything more important" than the drive which the solicitors were undertaking, House went on to say, "If you yourself believe in what you are doing with all your heart . . . it will give you an air of dignity and conviction as you approach your fellow students."

Original Play In New Series Slated Tonight

'Inherit the Wind' Written by McLain

Too many cooks spoil the broth, as the saying goes, but too many playwrights apparently do not spoil the Playmaker production of Gene McLain's "Inherit the Wind," scheduled for 7:30 tonight and tomorrow night in the Playmaker theater.

The original full-length drama of a mother's fight to control the lives of her three daughters is directed, acted, costumed, lighted, set, and run entirely by students, as part of this season's new series of long original plays on the experimental bills.

Playwrights predominate in the production, from the author to the stage manager. Gene McLain's "Call Back Yesterday" was produced last season as part of the major Playmaker shows. Director Sam Hirsch has had four one-act plays produced by the Playmakers in the last two years ("Give Us Pause," "Subway Rhapsody," "The Atom Cantata," and "The Shiksa"), and has had three short plays accepted by the American National Theater and Academy out of a list of ten for regional distribution.

Tommy Rezzuto, the set designer, has won prizes for his plays in the Carolina Dramatic Association Festivals, Frances Michael Casey, designer of the lighting, has had his "You're Dreamin,' Dearie" done on the last experimental bill, has written several long plays and is working on

Symphonies Plan Extensive Tours Throughout State

The North Carolina Symphony orchestra will be on tour from tomorrow until May 23, presenting 127 concerts, 60 for adults and 67 for children, Albin Pikutis, business manager, announced yesterday.

The Little Symphony, touring small towns and rural communities from tomorrow until April 1, will present 66 concerts, 31 for adults and 35 for children. It will appear at many towns for the first time, including Edenton, St. Paul's, Boone, Lumberton, Henderson, Belmont, Mt. Holly, Smithfield, Bladenboro, and Hillsboro.

The Little Symphony will also appear at several colleges, including Mars Hill college, Campbell college, and Piedmont college at Demarest, Ga.

The full Symphony, touring the larger towns, of the state from April 4 until May 23, will give 61 concerts, 29 for adults and 32 for children.

Coeds Get Tips On Job-Hunting From Speakers

Coeds got a few pointers on jobs open to women graduates at the monthly coed get-together held Monday afternoon in Graham Memorial. The four fields discussed were education, journalism, sociology, and secretarial work.

The greatest number of available jobs and the best playing ones are in the teaching profession, according to the report given by Gordon Ellis of the education department. The need for well prepared teachers is particularly great in the elementary schools, he stated, and also in the science, mathematics, and physical education departments of the high schools. The salaries run from $180-$240 a month according to experience and whether the teacher has an A or B certificate.

Miss Ruth Gilpin of the sociology department stated that there is also a great demand for girls in the fields of case work, group work, and community organization. She warned, however, that girls going into social work would have to be content to be paid "with more than money."

A girl just out of college who starts in social work in this region could not expect to earn more than $1,800 a year.

Burchfield Speaks To Administrators

Laverne Burchfield, secretary-treasurer of the American Society for Public Administration and managing editor of the "Public Administration Review," will address the local chapter of the society tonight at 8 o'clock in room 207 Caldwell hall.

The meeting is open to all University students interested in promoting the science and art of public administration.

Clipped

RALEIGH, Feb. 1—(UP)—Rep. Dennis Massey of Graham county today claimed the distinction of having clipped Gov. Kerr Scott.

Massey, a barber by trade, explained he was helping to pay his way to the General assembly by carrying on his profession in his spare time.

Governor Scott agreed to the appointment with the comment:

"Last summer they said the legislature was going to cut my throat. But I'm going down and let one cut my hair instead."

School Regents Change Stand On Segregation

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 1—(UP)—Oklahoma's regents for higher education suggested amendment of the state's segregation laws today to permit Negroes to enter white universities—on a segregated basis—if they cannot get desired training at Langston university for Negroes.

Dr. M. A. Nash, chancellor of the regents, said the recommendation was made to Gov. Roy J. Turner and both houses of the state legislature.

Nash said the board's action is meant to comply with a three-judge ruling last October. In the case of G. W. McLaurin, the judges ruled he must be admitted to the University of Oklahoma to study for a doctor's degree because the type of training he sought was not provided at Langston.

Today's action came on the heels of another attempt to crack Oklahoma's segregation laws. Three Negroes applied for admission to O. U. graduate schools last week and a fourth said she would try to enter this week.

Groups Are Asked To Submit Budgets

The Budget committee yesterday requested a number of organizations to send their proposed budgets for the fiscal year 1949-50 to Bob Kirby, secretary-treasurer of the student body, by next Tuesday evening.

The organizations are the University club, the sophomore class, the senior class, the freshman class, the Men's Interdormitory council, the Carolina forum, and the Debate council.

Senior Rings Will Be Sold Tomorrow

Senior rings will go on sale tomorrow from 1 to 4 o'clock in the Y lobby. A deposit of $5 will be required at that time.

Senate Approves Truman Selection Of UNC Alumnus

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1—(UP)—The Senate last night confirmed the nomination of Wilson Warlick to be federal judge for the western district of North Carolina.

Warlick succeeds veteran judge E. Yates Webb, who retired last year. Former federal district attorney David E. Henderson had served in Webb's place under an interim appointment.

Warlick's confirmation ended a tiff between North Carolina's senators and western North Carolina Republicans, who successfully blocked Warlick's original nomination.

The Republican 80th Congress shelved his nomination last year and Henderson was named acting judge to relieve the aging Webb.

Henderson's resignation was accepted last week after Warlick's second nomination won approval of the Senate Judiciary committee.

Episcopal Alumni Asked to Meeting

Alumni from the Episcopal high school of Alexandria, Va., are requested to meet C. C. Baldwin at the Carolina Inn tomorrow evening at 6 o'clock for supper.

Baldwin announced that all who plan to attend schould leave word for him at the desk of the Inn.

Candidate Holds Top Council Post

Student Party Chairman Says Mackie Is 'Most Qualified Man Ever to Run'

Bill Mackie, chairman of the Student council, has been nominated by the Student party for the presidency of the student body, SP spokesmen said yesterday.

Mackie, 21-year-old special student in arts and sciences, was described by Student party Chairman Gran Childress as "the most qualified candidate that has ever run for the position."

The candidate, aside from being the chairman of the Student council, highest judiciary body in student government, has been a member of the Student legislature, the State Student legislature, the Greater University Student council, and a member of former President Tom Eller's coalition cabinet.

As chairman of the Student legislature Finance committee, Mackie helped draw up the first student budget under the new constitution.

He served in the House of Representatives in the State Student legislature. He also has been speaker pro tempore, critic and sergeant-at-arms-of the Dialectic senate and vice president of the International Relations club.

Mackie has served on the Debate council and is a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

SP Chairman Childress's statement, in full, said:

"The Student party is honored to nominate Bill Mackie for the presidency of the student body.

"We feel that he is the most qualified candidate that has ever run for the position."

The Mackie nomination was made unanimously by the party.

Pearson Says Webb Slated As Dean Here

Says Salary Was $15,000 Annually

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1—Drew Pearson, Washington columnist and radio commentator who spoke in Chapel Hill last week, said today James Webb had been slated to take over as dean of the University of North Carolina School of Commerce.

Pearson said Webb was scheduled to take the post before President Truman appointed him as the new undersecretary of state. The Capitol Hill reporter said Webb had been offered several inviting jobs, but the one he wanted most was offered him by Frank Porter Graham, president of the Greater University of North Carolina.

Webb, then director of the budget, had received offers, Pearson said, from Tom Morgan, head of the Sperry Gyroscope company, and Clay Williams of Reynolds Tobacco. The commentator said the salary for the former job was $35,000 per year.

Webb had also reportedly received a bid from a New York chemical company for his services.

Pearson said Dr. Graham, while in the Dutch East Indies working for the United Nations, had written Webb a letter in longhand asking him to become dean of the North Carolina university School of Commerce.

The job would have paid, Pearson reported, a salary of $15,000 per year, less than half that of at least one of the other offers. The columnist said, however, that the University position was the one Webb was planning to take until Truman appointed him undersecretary of state.

New York Round-Trip By A-Model

By Sam Whitehall

Two Yankees and one Rebel packed their Carolina Confederate flags and charged to New York and back this weekend—in an open-to-the-elements model A Ford of 1928 vintage.

Morehead Stack of Red Springs was the one Southerner on the trip, while Jack Reuther of Darien, Conn., and Pete Moore of Doylestown, Pa., made up the Yankee contingent. A third Northerner joined the party in Pennsylvania and also left it there on the return trip—an ex-University student and Pete Moore's older brother, Al "Little Turk" Moore.

The trip was instigated when a few brother ATO's made questionable remarks about the "Ufkinay," the A-model which is jointly owned by Stack and another former University student, John "Spider" Webb.

Jack, Pete and Moe decided to see if "Ufkinay" had any steam left in her after 20 odd years, so they got underway for New York Friday night about 9 o'clock.

They had no trouble at all until they crossed the Maryland line and the car decided to lie down for a rest. Nothing that the students did could start her, until three hours later when she decided she had rested enough and started of her own accord. Then they headed for Pete's home town and arrived about 12 o'clock Saturday.

They rested at Doylestown for a couple of hours and shoved off again with the fourth adventurer, Al Moore.

The four picked up dates in Morristown, N. J., and hit New York about 11:30 Saturday night.

The town was really booming at that time and they chugged down Broadway singing "Dixie" while two Confederate flags proudly waved from the rear of the A. After making a grand tour of Broadway, they pushed on to Greenwich Village and a round of night clubs.

They completed their whirlwind New York tour around 3:30 in Sammy's Bowery—natcherly,

Former Governor Says

Caldwell Urges Legislature To Ratify Regional Schools

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. Feb. 1—(UP)—Former Governor Millard Caldwell of Florida urged the Oklahoma legislature today to ratify the Southern governors' compact on regional education.

Caldwell is chairman of the Regional Education organization formed by the governors chiefly to share the expense of establishing centers of higher education for Southern Negroes. The governors, in a Tallahassee, Fla., conference early in 1948, set up machinery for the regional movement. The compact agreed on there must be ratified by the legislatures of the states involved.

The plan was not conceived as a means of "evading the South's responsibility to Negroes," Caldwell told the lawmakers. It was conceived long before the Supreme court decisions directing Southern states to provide equal facilities for white and Negro citizens, he said.

Caldwell said the federal government already has approved more than 100 interstate compacts touching on state activities.

"It was generally agreed among the Southern governors that the federal government has no place in higher education and that the integrity and sound development of our colleges and universities depend upon absolute freedom from the central government," Caldwell said.

He pointed out that Mississippi and South Carolina legislatures already have approved the compact, that nine Southern legislatures now are in session with Florida and Alabama sessions scheduled for April and May.

Most Southern states, Caldwell said, cannot alone afford to have the "highest type colleges offering all subjects to its young citizens, but together they can."

For instance, he said, Florida has no medical or dental college and it would cost $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 and require several years to get one underway.

Who Gets Geesed?

The Advisory Budget committee of the state has caught the board of trustees of the Greater University in a neat squeeze play, and unless the state legislature does something about it that maneuver will cost students here, at State and at Woman's college some $1,377,000 in the next two years.

Taking into consideration that the board of trustees has sole authority over tuition rates, the budget committee "recommended" that the trustees raise tuition fees at the University from $86 per annum to $150, with comparable hikes for State and WC. As it extended this "recommendation" in one softly gloved hand, the committee kept its other hand behind its back—and in that other hand was a "persuader."

When it set up the University's recommended budget, the committee decreased the amount to be appropriated by the exact amount it estimated the increased tuition would net. If the trustees do not raise tuition, the University must obtain that revenue from other sources. There are no other sources. So what happens? Naturally.

Neat. Very neat. But that is only the beginning.

The proposal to increase tuition has been made before and the people of the state have objected. Why not this time? Suppose some of the trustees and University officials go over to Raleigh to the joint appropriations committee and say, "Now look. The constitution of the state says tuition at the University shall be as nearly free as possible so as many people as possible can get an education. North Carolina needs educated citizens.

"You know that as well as we do, so instead of raising tuition and keeping a lot of people from coming to school, why don't you do it like you always have—appropriate the money out of state funds."

Well, this year the legislature is being asked to appropriate $50,000,000 to help the counties improve public school facilities. The lower schools are badly in need of new buildings, and there just isn't enough money to go around. Should we take the money away from them, or should we increase tuition?

Yes, the appropriations committee is in a dilemma. It's just too bad that both ends of education are being played against the middle, and either way the question is answered, education loses. But there are a few things that are being overlooked:

Before the legislature is a bill to lower the corporate franchise tax from $1.50 to $1.25 per $1,000 of determined value. The object is to attract new industry to North Carolina, yet any economist will tell you that this tax is of such relatively minor importance as to be almost negligible in an industry's decision to locate in a particular state. This bill will probably pass, and Governor Scott estimates that it will result in a revenue loss to the state of approximately $400,000 a year.

Before the legislature is a bill to remove the sales tax from farm implements. The sales tax is not being removed from other items, but the farm implement dealers have a lobby in Raleigh. Estimate annual loss of revenue will be $825,000.

Before the legislature is a bill to construct a coliseum and other improvements at the fair grounds, less than three miles from the State college coliseum. Proposed cost is $1,985,000.

Are these items more important than education?

Captain Deserved Praise

Reviews of entertainment are seldom more than one man's opinion, and sometimes not all of that. For instance, in the review of the stage production "HMS Pinafore" printed Sunday, one of the leading characters, Captain Corcoran, was not mentioned. This was not due to oversight on the part of the reviewer but to cutting of the article.

William Collins, the captain, was certainly due high praise for both his singing and his acting. He took a character usually played as a foil for the more important part of Sir Joseph and made it one of the highlights of the operetta. In an outstanding production, Collins' performance stood out.

BIGOT, n. One who is obstinately and zealously attached to an opinion that you do not entertain.

BELLADONNA, n. In Italian a beautiful lady; in English a deadly poison. A striking example of the essential identity of the two tongues.

ACADEMY, n. (from academe). A modern school where football is taught.

Original Play Bows Tonight

By Jonathan Marshall

Chapel Hill theatre goers will not want to miss "Inherit the Wind" which will be performed tonight and tomorrow in the Playmaker's theatre.

"Inherit the Wind" was written by Gene McLain and will be a three-act experimental production of the Playmakers.

It has been interesting to watch rehearsals this past week and to see the play take shape. There has been a constant growth in intensity and understanding as the cast has become more familiar with its lines. Each day new improvements are added by director Sam Hirsh and author McLain as the possibilities of greater exposition unfold.

The story is about a family which is dominated by the mother who has withdrawn them from the outside world. It is a study of conflicting personalities woven so tightly that at first they seem to complement each other eliminating the need for the outside world. Slowly there is an awakening which is climaxed by the final escape of the three daughters from their mother.

* * * *

While on the subject of the theatre, mention should be made of a recent news item which has not received much publicity.

A bill was recently introduced into Congress by Representative Jacob Javits of New York to provide for a National Opera, National Theatre, and a National Ballet. The American National Theatre and Academy was a start, and Congressman Javits wants to make it a living reality.

It is strange that a nation such as ours should not have government-sponsored theatre, for almost all of the large nations in Europe have it. Few Americans outside of the largest cities receive the opportunity to obtain the best of the world's culture.

When our national budget is in the billions, the few thousands of dollars that would be required for a federal theatre, ballet, and opera seem small. The project would be largely self-sufficient, and it would certainly be popular.

Representative Javits' bill deserves the support of everyone—it will benefit everyone.

From the Inside

Lesser Campus Leaders Aghast

By Jim Southerland

The "Charles O. Long for President" petitions have the campus political world buzzing this week. Lesser campus leaders stand aghast at the thought of having to oppose a man of such well-known experience and ability. The outcome of the petition drive will be well worth watching.

The two-hour session Thursday night of the student legislature saw the long-delayed passage of the Carolina forum bill. The question of speaker procurement and presentation has been an important one as well as the point of considerable conflict. A brief statement of the pros and cons on this issue may help to clear the smoke remaining from the battle.

The forum was set up to coordinate the speaker procurement and presentation programs of several major student organizations. Prior to the forum a rash of conflicts had plagued those interested in attending speeches. Under the forum many of the conflicts were eliminated but two points of controversy arose.

The seven-man board set up last year under the original forum bill seemed to many student leaders a potential threat to the Carolina tradition of presenting all points of view. While there seemed no immediate danger of censorship by the forum, the law setting it up offered no safeguards for the future. An amendment to the new forum bill provides this vital safeguard by permitting any speaker rejected by the forum.

The second point of conflict was not resolved Thursday. Both sides have valid arguments which can only be tested by time. On one side there is the opinion that the member organizations need the experience and publicity derived from speaker procurement and presentation to build up and maintain their memberships. Arguing that the forum is no stronger than the organizations represented on it, they seek to retain the right of independent procurement and presentation.

On the other side there is the opinion that the co-ordination program will fail if these major organizations retain the right to act independently of the central body. The student legislature chose to support the latter position.

By the time this column is printed the Carolina Political union, the original and most active speaker presentation group, will have decided what course it must take under the the new arrangement. After careful consideration the CPU may feel forced to withdraw from the forum and work independently of the forum but in cooperation with it. The CPU may, on the other hand, choose to wait longer and hope their fears are over-emphasized. Whatever the CPU does, it too will be trying to serve the best interest of the campus as it sees it.

In spite of the sneering of some, the resolutions passed by the student legislature are not a waste of time. One recently introduced by Bill Prince proved a marked success. A special committee set up under the resolution conferred with the administration on the situation in the quonset huts. The result was a solution satisfactory to the men in the huts and an illustration of effective student government.

Maidens Not Monsters; Or, Maidens—Not Monsters

Seeking More Than Husbands

By Mary F. Johnston

In years to come there will no doubt be a definite chapter in history dedicated to a fabulous creature who roamed the University of North Carolina campus known as the Carolina Coed.

The annals will probably contain accounts sworn to be factual of women driving from one fraternity house to another in Cadillac convertibles seeing if their date-books were scheduled correctly for the coming three months.

There will probably be quotations from men who vowed they spent entire evenings phoning coeds trying to get one date on a week night for a church party four months away. They will tell, with a certain bitterness they never had before come in contact with this breed of femininity, of how some had coyly told them they would try to work them in between their 7 and 9 o'clock dates while others reported they had been pinned since their second day on campus.

They will continue to relate how these women heartlessly picked over the seven men alloted to each of them in search for the only thing a coed possibly attends college for—a husband. A few other points such as the $15 minimum limit which must be spent on every coed date will be included and soon the picture will be complete. People will ask themselves, as have a large majority of over 6,000 University men, just how the male students were able to bear up under the strain of being constantly confronted—unless, of course, they took hard courses—by this disgrace to womankind.

It is just possible that this report, which is daily flashed far and wide by persecuted males of UNC, might accidentally lack a few existing facts. In comparing the seriousness with which the girls regard their studies as to that shown by the boys, the sorority and fraternity grades may be considered a representative scholastic ranking of both sexes. In tabulating the ratings of the 28 Greek organizations for the Fall quarter a sorority topped all fraternity averages and no sorority ranked below seventh place. Last Spring quarter the five sororities took the top five places. This certainly doesn't conform to the tales of women who date every school night, never entertain a serious thought and find interest only in the clever art of husband-hunting.

It would do well for the coed criticizers to look around themselves and carry on an unbiased comparison of the number of women students who are earnestly working to prepare themselves for an occupation and the number of men who are getting out of college what their parents or the United States government are putting into it. The fact that four per cent of the men and only one per cent of the women flunked out of the University this past quarter shows that some excellent social entertainers and quite a few "men of distinction" may blossom from our Alma Mater.

It may be hard for some boys to realize, but a Mr. Hyde transformation does not take place the minute a girl steps on this campus. It has long been time for a Carolina "gentleman" to act like a gentleman and treat a coed in the same manner he would a girl from his home town instead of a monster with seven heads. It would be both appreciated and deserved.

Lord Nelson Fired Dead Animals

By George Dixon

Made brief mention yesterday of the new text book the Navy is getting out for its reserve officers. It contains many valuable hints to success.

* * *

One particular chapter has my interest because it makes me understand at last why I have never been able to command either attention or respect at home, at work, at play. It states:

"A command voice is essential to the control of a group . . .Everyone of us has experienced the embarrassment of being under the command of a person whose voice was weak and apologetic.

"Make sure that you give your orders loudly enough to be clearly audible to the recipient. Watch the face of the recipient for any quizzical expression that might indicate he has not clearly understood.

"By conscientious effort make your voice colorful and effective."

I must try being colorful and effective the next time the little woman gets a quizzical expression on her pan. Here she comes now!—I'll try it:

"Hey you! Snap smartly to attention when I address you and take that dumb quizzical look off your kisser! Hold it! —Don't you know you can get 30 days in the brig for socking your superior officer with a finnan haddie?"

* * *

One more item of intelligence, as supplied by the Navy handbook:

Did you know that Lord Nelson fired garbage and dead animals from his ships' gun, hoping to start a pestilence among Napoleon's hordes?

A party in Denver, who signs himself merely "a friend," writes to ask if the Economic Cooperation administration is buying minks and sables for the secretarial help.

He states he has been concerned ever since reading this item in the papers:

"Secretarial help in the new ECA building have been complaining about their fur coats being burned by smokers while riding in the elevators."

For the benefit of "a friend" I have checked, and the coats were not purchased with ECA funds. Nor are all the ECA secretaries fur-class. They just don't like being singed, that's all.

Spotted With Many Trials

Editor:

The history of the world is spotted with many trials like the Communists going on in New York today. In many of them the prosecutors lived to rue the day they tried to supress thought "legally." The frame-up of Sacco and Vanzetti in Massachusetts, of Tom Mooney in California, and Dimitroff in Berlin boomeranged.

The spotlight being thrown on the federal jury system in the Southern District of New York at the present trial reveals such a perversion of the traditional system of jurisprudence in the United States that it bids fair to eclipse the other issues in the case.

According to Senior Judge John Clark Knox, the grand and petit juries of New York now consist primarily of "superior" citizens of "better" and "more select" quality. Instead of a jury representative of the district, culled from the voting register as before, jurors are now selected from The Social Register, Poor's Directory of Directors, University alumni lists, etc. Laborers, women, Negroes, Jews, and political minorities are excluded.

Juries loaded with upper-class jurors are, of course, biased. Trial by a jury of one's peers, cornerstone of the democratic process, has had the props knocked from under it. I doubt seriously whether the federal authorities would have risked a case like the present if the jury system were otherwise.

It's Ground Hog Day . . .

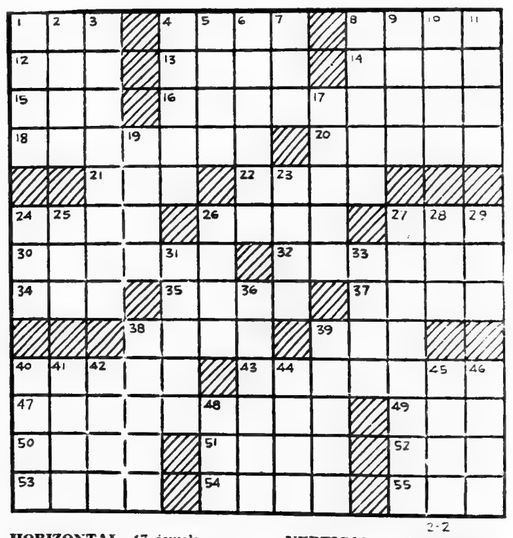
. . . So Why Not Celebrate?

By Ike Andrews

Most holidays are celebrated with zeal,
Hearts become light; happiness is real
We need to reap pleasure as much as we may
So why not more celebration of Ground Hog Day?

It's said that his shadow
Will drive him away.
And he will not reappear
Until a far later day. .

Sure, the Ground Hog exists,
Do I know who he is?
Sure, for he is you.
I know this to be true.



You have your trouble like the winter's cold,
Then later you come out, as his story is told,
And in some realm the sun doth shine—
Thus you see your shadow and it affects your mind.

You stupid fool,
Look what you've done,
You observed the shadow
Rather than the sun.

Thus you admit that you are the hog.
You were given good eyes but your mind's a fog.
You searched for the shadow, you son of a gun,
You searched for the shadow and ignored the sun.

Now look at yourself as I have said,
And within your mind let the hog be dead.
Now emerge and come out of that mental cold,
Don't look for the shadow—be wise and bold.

Realize, Foolish One, when the shadows appear,
They but signify that the Sun is near.
So cease your quest for the shadow display,
And celebrate with me foolish Ground Hog day.

Swartzberg Paces Tar Heel Stars To Lop-Sided Win

By Zane Robbins

A throng of some 3,000 people piled into Woollen gym last night for what was one of the top all-around features to appear in the University plant all season. Two basketball games, a wrestling [illegible], even talented tap-dance [illegible], the Sigma Chi sextet, and a [illegible] exhibition crowded into a night crammed with thrills, [illegible], and excitement. And all for the sake of charity. All proceeds from the big variety show went into the kitty for the polio fund.

A rock-em-and-sock-em basketball game between the Tar Heel linemen and backs started the night off with a bang. The gridmen - turned - cagers battled through two hectic halves that provided more scuffling than scoring before the ball-carriers romped home with a narrow 1-point, 17-16 victory.

Norcross Wins Game

With 15 seconds left and the game tied, 15-all, speedy Stan Marczyk dropped in a charity toss to send the linemen ahead, but Merl Norcross, an unsung backfield ace, intercepted a pass and dashed down court to flip in a two-pointer and give his mates a hard-earned 17-16 victory.

Intermission brought on the aforementioned "rasslin'" match and four masked huskies climbed into the ring to give the fans a treat. Joe Gurtis, Roscoe Hansen, "Tiny" Simpson, and Stan Marczyk were the alleged grapplers, but before things got started, good referre Irv Zirpel, a former Carolina matmen and present freshman coach, was in the middle of the fray, and the thing eventually ended with a mass of bodies clustered in the middle of the ring.

Charlie Makes It

Then came the clowns, accompanied by dreary music supplied by the University band, bearing a stretcher. The eerie-looking group trudged slowly to the center of the court, set the stretcher down, and up bounced the man of the hour, Choo Choo Charlie, wearing number 8 instead of his familiar 22. This brought a roar from the crowd, and got things off to a good start.

The two teams lined up, Randy Brown took the opening tip from Payne, flipped it over to Fred Swartzberg who laid in a neat push after three seconds, and the game was on.

After that basketball was only a semi-serious business, and the Clowns completely outclassed their Pittsboro rivals. The half ended with the Clowns holding a lop-sided 26-12 lead.

Halftime Festivities

Halftime brought on more entertainment for the laugh-happy crowd. First it was the Sigma Chi sextet with its humorous rendition of an original song, "Tradition," that kept the spectators in high spirits. Following this the tap-dancers took over.

A wave of laughter rippled through the stands as five husky footballers and a pair of tumblers took the floor as dancers. Bob Cox, Art Weiner, Joe Romano, Joe Cospito, Mike Rubish, Bob Hurley, and Ben Perry then proceeded to shock everyone present with an excellent show of co-ordination and finesse. Cox then teamed with Betty Doss to put on a top-notch dancing exhibition.

At the beginning of the second half, the Clowns rapidly widened their margin over the hapless Clodhoppers and won going away.

Pals Play for Polio

BOB MITTEN and Sid Varney, pair of steel-ribbed football guards, and inseperable chums, switched from the gridiron to the basketball court last night to lend a helping hand to the campus polio drive which sanctioned last night's double-header in Woollen gym.

Cindermen Go Through Paces In Preparation for Two Foes

Carolina's indoor track team will spend the next two weeks preparing for the Southern conference indoor meet here on February 26 and the University of Maryland's meet on the preceeding week-end.

Two practice meets will be run with Duke and possibily State. The first of these meets will be run on the tin can board track Saturday and the second will be run in the tin can on the following Saturday. No team score will be kept in either of these meets.

Only one Tar Heel entrant competed in indoor meets over last week-end. Dick Taylor, number one timber-topper, skipped home third in the semi-finals of the 60-yard high hurdles at the Milrose Games in Madison Square Garden, New York. Taylor finished close behind Ed Dugger and Jim Gehrdes.

Terp Quartet Surprises

A surprise winner at the Milrose Games was the University of Maryland mile-relay quartet. The speedy Terp foursome of Ostrye, Salvanelli, McGowan and vet Ed Matthews, raced to a sizzling 3:23 victory over some of the nation's top relay teams.

The Maryland win caused considerable comment by Southern track enthusiasts after the statement which Maryland coach Jim Kehoe made on Saturday. Confident Kehoe announced that his Terp squad would win the indoor meet here later this month and thereby be acclaimed Southern conference champions.

Kehoe has made similar statements in the past and his prognostications have met with varying degrees of success. Maryland's cross country team copped the loop title in December after Kehoe had predicted that his team would win it. Kehoe also said last spring that his '49 team would win the conference outdoor crown as well as the indoor.

The Terps will be strong in the mile relay and in the 440. With a team capable of a 3:23 mile, there is a strong chance of Maryland winning that event in the conference meet. All of the relay men are top quarter-milers and Matthews will be one of the favored in that event.

Strong Dash Man

Maryland also has a strong dash man in Bill Alexion. At the Evening Star-District AAU games in Washington recently, Alexion won over the star-studded 100-yard dash field with a 10 flat performance.

Carolina coach Dale Ranson admitted yesterday that the Terps had him worried. "I don't agree with him (Kehoe), but if we don't improve I might have to verify that statement," Ranson added.

Ranson also pointed out that Kehoe had predicted a win in the outdoor meet for Maryland last spring, but his Tar Heels came through and won that meet in addition to the indoor title which they copped in February.

Carolina will have a strong team for the indoor meet this year. The Tar Heels will be especially strong in the high jump and hurdles and will have outstanding men in other events.

Cagers Drill Hard for Battle Against Duke on Sat. Night

With the "game of the year" coming up Saturday, Coach Tom Scott's Carolina cagers settled down yesterday to begin preparations in earnest for the coming battle with Duke's potent Blue Devils in Woollen gym.

The Tar Heels, if past games are any criterion on which to base their expected performance Saturday night, should be running hot against the Dukes. Take a look at the outcome of the past six games-the Tar Heels were definitely not against William and Mary, then they suffered a case of shivers against State, only to come back in top form against VPI. Then came another complete reversal against Davidson and another turn-about in the Furman affair.

In their last game, against Tennessee Monday night, the Tar Heels were apparently a little on the cool side, being soundly trounced by an 84-56 margin. However, according to Coach Scott, the Tennessee crew was really set for the Carolina game and offered Carolina perhaps the best competition to date.

Its Not True

Monday evening's game proved that "as Carson goes, so goes the Tar Heels" was a little off, for the Tar Heel forward tallied 29 points, the third time he has reached that total this year. Previously he was credited with the same number of points against William and Mary and Lenior Rhyne.

The Blue Devils will come to Carolina immediately after taking on the potent N.Y.U. Violets in Durham Friday night. The Violets are one of the top teams in the Metropolitan area and should take the wind out of the Devils' sails.

Currently Duke has been suffering from poor shooting accuracy and only against Davidson last week have they made an appreciable showing in the percentage column. Through the first eight games the Dukes had been hitting the nets on slightly over 30 per cent, but then came Washington and Lee and the downward trend.

Collins Injured

The poor accuracy, combined with the fact that starting center Ben Collins is suffering from an injury, will definitely hurt the Dukes, but they will nevertheless enter the Carolina game as favorites.

Duke followers are hoping that the Davidson victory launched a comeback, but a win over N.Y.U. Friday night is almost too much to expect.

Szafaryn Goes Pro

It was announced yesterday that Len Szafaryn, erstwhile Carolina tackle, has inked a contract with the professional Washington Redskins of the National Football league.

Szafaryn, a 205-pound senior from Ambridge, Pa., played on both offense and defense during the past season despite the heralded Snavely two-platoon system. The big tackle started the season as a defensive man, but was called on for double-duty when Ted Hazelwood was shelved with a leg injury in mid-season.

Szafaryn was named on several All-America teams at the end of the season and has been tabbed an excellent pro prospect.

Hamline Pipers Only Cage Team Without Loss

NEW YORK, Feb. 1—(UP)—This is the day to ring out the cheers for the peerless Pipers of Hamline university, the only undefeated major college basketball team in the nation.

The mighty machine from the school in Minnesota was left alone on the list of glory when the roof fell in last night on Villanova, swamped by Duquesne, 65-37, after winning 12 straight games.

Hamline's Pipers have won 14 games and their next contest, figured to be an easy one on Saturday night, is against Concordia. They kept rolling through victory after victory while other leading teams—St. Louis, Kentucky, Western Kentucky, Oklahoma A and M. and the rest—fell by the wayside.

Now the Pipers stand alone and richly deserve the fancy praise they are receiving. But their joy may be short-lived—on Feb. 17 they have a date with the Phillips Oilers, National AAU champions and perhaps the finest team anywhere.

Club Extends Thanks

Laddie Terrell, president of the Monogram club, on behalf of the club expressed sincere appreciation for the fine support shown by students and townspeople at last night's basketball show staged for the benefit of the polio fund. The Monogram club made all plans for the event and was its sole sponsor.

The demonstration was highly successful and approximately $1,000 was collected for the polio fund.

Defensive Work Gets Going-Over In Football Drill

With the bulk of the undefeated freshman squad and eleven veterans of the Sugar bowl donning cleats and pads as candidates for Coach Carl Snavely's 1949 varsity eleven, winter football practice was opened yesterday afternoon on Navy field in near freezing weather.

In all, 72 grid hopefuls answered Coach Snavely's opening call and went through the light blocking and tackling drills that marked the beginning of winter practice.

Although most of the gridders were members of last year's strong freshman squad that rolled through a five-game schedule with an unblemished record and copped the Big Four junior crown, several former Carolina players were among those who reported on Navy field. Among the group, which was not in school last season but matriculated again this quarter were four linemen: Bill Doran, R. L. McDonald, Dan Logue, and Joe Kosinski.

All-American Charlie Justice and most of the other veterans of last season's great team have been excused from most of the opening practice sessions, while 18 varsity lettermen are due to graduate this spring.

The 1949 Tar Heels are expected to face an even tougher slate than the '48 version, which remained unbeaten through a ten-game schedule, with only a 7-7 tie with William and Mary to blot its record, and then lost a heartbreaking 14-6 tilt to Oklahoma in the Sugar bowl classic.

Only two games are "official" for next season so far. One is the much-publicized scrap with Notre Dame, while the other is with South Carolina. The entire schedule will probably be forthcoming from the athletic department in the near future.

Louis Scores KO Sends Veteran Foe To Fla. Hospital

ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 1—(UP)—Heavyweight champion Joe Louis kayoed Dixie Lee Oliver, St. Petersburg, Fla., Negro, in the final round of a four-round exhibition match last night. Oliver's head struck an inadequately padded floor of the ring and he was immediately hospitalized for observation.

Louis, wearing 14-ounce gloves, flattened Oliver with a long left hook one minute and 30 seconds after the round began. Oliver was unconscious for five minutes from the impact of his fall against a wooden floor that was covered with thin canvass.

Hospital authorities described his condition as "fair" and said he would be released in 24 hours.

Louis rushed immediately from his dressing room to the Orange County hospital to talk with the St. Petersburg veteran who had not boxed recently.

"I didn't hit him hard," Louis said.

Louis, weighing 221 for the bout, had complete command over his 222-pound opponent throughout the fight. He floored Oliver in the first round with a flurry of punches to the body.

Rumors Now Flying Again; Possible Coaching Shake-up

The snow clouds had all drifted past Chapel Hill yesterday, but a series of rumors were still floating around this tiny college town near dusk. All of them concerned football.

One of the foremost yarns making the rounds these days is the one concerning a possible replacement for the departed Max Reed, erstwhile Carolina line coach and long-time Snavely aide.

Several men are known to be under consideration by the University Athletic association, but the grape-vine has it that Marvin Bass, present line coach at William and Mary has the inside track.

Conference Rumored

The Richmond Times-Dispatch disclosed the news two days ago that University officials have been talking with Bass and that they are evidently pleased with the prospect of his coming here.

The Times-Dispatch said that Bass was in Chapel Hill on Sunday to confer with Carolina officials at Carl Snavely's invitation.

Bass is a former William and Mary star and captained the Indians' 1942 team which walked away with the Southern conference title. He served a hitch in the Navy V-12 unit and then returned to Williamsburg and his alma mater to take up a coaching position under J. N. (Rube) McGray. Since that time he has enjoyed a great amount of success, and has produced exceedingly tough forward walls.

W and L Eyes Bass

Carolina could well use the Virginian, he's from Petersburg, but Washington and Lee University also has its eyes on the young mentor.

The head coaching position was vacated at the Lexington, Va. institute some time ago when Art (Pappy) Lewis resigned to join the coaching staff at Mississippi State college.

In conjunction with the Washington and Lee affair, Bass is not the only prospect under consideration for the General's head coaching post. Carolina freshman coach Crowell Little is also among the prospects for the W and I job.

Possible Decision

Recent reports seem to indicate that the Washington and Lee officials may have reached a decision already, and that Little may soon be proclaimed "man of the hour" in the half-pint Virginia town.

State wire services have contacted Jake Wade, Sports Publicity director of the University, asking for pictures and feature articles about the Carolina assistant, and a pertinent announcement concerning the youthful's strategist's immediate future may be in the offing.

Radical Change?

One other rumor that has bounced through the alleys of Chapel Hill and into the Daily Tar Heel office has it that a radical change may mark winter and spring football practice this year. The word is out that the T-formation may be installed as the Tar Heels number one offensive weapon before next fall. A number of single-wing plays will be retained, however, when and "if" the change is made.

A pair of the most prominent advantages cited by the exponents of this unbelievable fable is that the tricky formation relies solely on quick-opening plays, and that the blocking angles are easier for the linemen.

The rumor-mongers point to the fact that jet-propelled Charlie Justice would not have to tarry begind the line in such a formation. They say that his opening would be there on his arrival and he would have no need for the wearying "hula" stuff behind the line. The Tar Heels backs would have a somewhat easier time of it with such a formation and would be able to stand up under a greater strain.

None of the afore-mentioned rumors have been confirmed, however.

Cerdan, Zale May Fight Again

NEW YORK, Feb. 1—(UP)—A title bout between middleweight champion Marcel Cerdan of France and Tony Zale of Gary, Ind., in June was a distinct possibility today as the Tournament of Champions, inc., began plans to bring about the return match.

Art Winch, Zale's trainer, said in Chicago yesterday that Zale, former middleweight champion, "wants a return match" with Cerdan. Winch added, however, that both he and Zale's manager, Sam Pian, were against any further bouts for their fighter.

Cerdan's American representative, Lew Burston, told the T. of C. that the champion was ready to fulfill "any contract he has" with that organization. If Zale's handlers convince him he ought to retire, the T. of C. will submit names of other logical contenders to Burston.

Cerdan took the title from Zale last September. Contracts for that fight gave Zale the option of a return bout if he lost his title.

Scribe Says Any Groundhog Who Gets Up Is Danged Fool

By Leo Turner

NEW YORK, Feb. 1—(UP)—Any groundhog that gets out of his warm bed tomorrow is a danged fool.

The country is half covered with snow, and the other half is shivering. The weatherman says it's cold all over.

Suppose the woodchuck doesn't see his shadow tomorrow and doesn't go back in his hole for a final six-weeks snooze, which in itself sounds like a fine thing on a cold morning. Where does the woodchuck go when he decides he's wide awake?

Well, he wakes up hungry. And being a vegetarian, he goes sticking his nose in various places looking for something green and succulent to ease his appetite.

He pokes his nose through garden fences and chews into seeding frames.

Through spring and summer he fights a running battle with mankind just because he likes to eat. The woodchuck, center of attention for a day and a villain for the rest of the year, is a muchly misunderstood fellow.

He doesn't give a darn about the woods, preferring to live in holes in the ground and under rock piles.

His name comes from the fact that the Algonquian Indians called him wejack or fisher. White man came along and called the Indian word woodchuck, then woodshaw. They finally settled on woodchuck, for no more reason than they singled him out as the weather prophet who's supposed to get out of bed on each Candlemas, or Feb. 2, and predict the weather.

The superstitution is based on the early Christian belief that if the sun shone on Candlemas, there would be six more weeks of winter and that if it was cloudy winter was near its end.

At Quarryville, Pa., the Slumbering Lodge of Groundhogs will be on hand in full force tomorrow when its "patron saint" gets out of bed to predict the weather.

Clad in night shirts and top hats, the brethren will gather at their favorite groundhog holes for the 41st annual "official" observation of the woodchuck's prophecy.

This Candlemas day, however, the hibernating woodchuck will have to share honors with President Truman, "a prophet unfailing as Brother Groundhog himself."

Mr. Truman, who didn't make

One Half of Country Is Covered With Snow, Other Half Shivers on Woodchuck's Day

the grade last year, will be granted membership in the lodge.

In turning down a proposal to admit him last February, the lodge felt he needed to improve on his "ability as a mule driver." He did.

"Harnessing the Democratic mule in Philadelphia, he drove him 'single line' throughout the USA and made that mule haul him right back to Washington," the lodge proclamation said.

Alumni Group Hosts Meeting

The University Alumni association will play host to a meeting of district three of the American Alumni council at the Carolina Inn today and tomorrow, J. Maryon (Spike) Saunders, alumni secretary, announced yesterday.

About 70 people from eight Southern states are expected to attend the meeting which gets under way with registration in the alumni office of the Inn this afternoon.

The meeting will be presided over by Mrs. Elizabeth C. Duncan of Emory university, supervisor of district three.

Distinguished guests and speakers at the meeting will include William S. Gibson of the University of Minnesota, president of the American alumni council, and F. Hill Turner, rector of the national conferences of the council.

a new play in Walter Pritchard Eaton's playwriting class.

The stage manager, Estelle Ritchie, has had many of her plays produced in Boston, and though all she has done since she joined the Playmakers as an assistant is act ("I Remember Mama," "School for Scandal" and "You're Dreamin' Dearie"), she really came down here to write, and is working on a first draft of a long drama. Ruth Groce, playing Emiline Forester in McLain's play, is the present holder of the Kay Kyser scholarship in dramatic art, which she won primarily for her playwriting.

Last year, her original play, written in collaboration, was awarded first prize in the Betty Smith Award in the CDA. Edna Dooley (Natalie Forester), wrote a one-act play in the playwriting class here, and saw it produced last quarter. Jim Geiger, chief electrician, had his new one act play staged last year, winning first place on the bill with it, and his assistant, Edsel Hughes is currently writing a musical comedy.

Tonight's opening will show the results of all this expert collaboration. These talented people not only helped in playwriting problems, but their acting, directing, lighting, stage managing and set designing will bring all the facets of the theater together for an exciting premiere performance.

The chief playwright will be introduced by Samuel Selden, Director of the Playmakers, after the performance which will begin at 7:30. Admission will be free and the audience will be invited to comment, praise, question, condemn and let the author know what its reactions were to this opening, to aid him when he rewrites his play.

-Trip-

in the Bowery. And they arrived back in Doylestown about 7 o'clock in the morning after dropping their dates off in Morristown.

Snow began to fall Saturday night in Doylestown, so "Moe," Jack, and Pete borrowed the ski clothes and blankets they could and departed from Doylestown at 3:30 Sunday afternoon dead set to make 8 o'clock classes Monday morning.

Coming down through Pennsylvania, they hit a detour and decided they could save lots of time by going straight through the barricade. They did so, and were proceeding merrily along their way when stopped by a representative of the Pennsylvania State Highway Patrol.

"You're tearing down state property, "he yelled at them. "That will be a $100 fine or 100 days in jail."

Then the member of Pennsylvania's finest escorted the three to a nearby justice of the peace who told them they would have to go to court.

Being slightly short-handed on the financial side and still trying to make Monday classes, they decided they had better plead their case before the judge. They finally found him at home where he set up a special Sunday afternoon session of court just for their benefit.

After he took one look at the "Ufkinay" and heard the state of their finances and the tale of their trip, he let them off of the $100 fine with only $7.50 court costs and a sound admonition to be good boys.

They then took off for Baltimore. As they passed a large street thermometer in Baltimore they saw it read 20 degrees. They checked finances again and decided to change course and go through Washington instead of Richmond, because there was a toll of $1.05 on a bridge between Baltimore and Richmond.

They hit Washington and put the touch on a fraternity brother for food and drinks. They left about 11 o'clock Sunday night, still intent on making 8 o'clock classes.

It started snowing again when they left Washington so they were slowed down to about 10 miles per hour while the "Ufkinay" bravely charged the blinding flakes of snow. Then the snow turned to rain and the rain to sleet. About this time, the ice-covered students abandoned ideas of making 8 o'clock classes and saught sanctuary in Richmond.

They borrowed $15 from another fraternity brother in Richmond and sacked in at a local hotel.

They got out of bed at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon and shoved off for the Hill at 4 o'clock. They arrived in South Hill, Va., after dark and the lights of the A model knocked off and they had to get the battery charged. From South Hill they had smooth sailing and arrived in Chapel Hill around 11:30 Monday night.

The trip cost approximately $40 and no repairs at all were made to the "Ufkinay" besides getting the battery charged. Also, all owners of new cars can note, the A did not use one drop of oil all the way.

Far from being discouraged about the rough trip, all three of the ATO's said they had a good time and thoroughly enjoyed it.

"We're not going north again," they agreed, "but as soon as it gets warmer we're going to the beach."

'True Academic Freedom'

President Allen Backs Firing of Professors

NEW YORK, Feb. 1—(UP)—Dr. Raymond B. Allen, president of the University of Washington which recently fired three professors for Communist affiliation, defended that action today as being in the interests of "true academic freedom."

He referred particularly to Prof. Thomas Cook, now at Chicago university on a year's leave of absence, who sent Allen a letter of resignation last Thursday in protest. Allen said today that Cook had "gone off half-cocked."

"I will not accept his resignation until he has had an opportunity to read the transcript of the exhaustive evidence and testimony that was presented," Allen said. "If after making that examination, he still wants to resign on the grounds we have not observed due process, I will be very much surprised."

Allen, in New York for a meeting of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, held a press conference at the University club to elaborate on the dismissal of three faculty members and the signing of non-Communist affidavits by three others.

Allen said there had been some protests against the action among his faculty members and among civic groups in Seattle. About 12 faculty members registered their opposition, he said. But he added that telegrams received since the dismissals favored the action of the president and the board of regents by a margin of 3 to 1.

Near Tragedy Destroys Pump At Cab Stand

Careless Blaze Misses Gas Tank

While Chapel Hill slept early yesterday morning, the Carolina Cab company had a narrow escape.

One of the drivers was gassing up his cab for a normal day's work. He was using the pump in front of the cab stand on the corner of Columbia and Rosemary streets.

Carelessly, he left the hose to the pump lying on the bumper of the car. When he drove off he pulled the pump completely off its base.

Broken electrical connections sparked and set the pump on fire. The pump was a total loss. Fire extinguishers from the fire department across the street quickly put the flames under control.

One of the drivers said later, "If those flames had reached the 450-gallon tank under ground, we would all have been blown up."

Sparks from the connections resulted while cab driver Max Weaver attempted to set the tank up after it had been pulled off its base.

'Foxes' Tryouts To Be Conducted In Theatre Today

Tryouts for Lillian Hellman's Broadway hit show, "The Little Foxes," have been set for tomorrow at 4 o'clock and 7:30 in the Playmakers theater. Director John W. Parker, business manager of the Carolina Playmakers, has placed copies of the play in the reserve room of the library for anyone interested in reading it prior to tryouts.

This popular drama was originally produced on Broadway in 1939 with Tallulah Bankhead in the leading role, has been made into a movie, and is currently being turned into an opera by composer Marc Blitzstein. It has excellent acting parts for four women and six men.

"The Little Foxes" will be produced the first week in March, and will be the feature of the Southeastern Theater Conference meeting in Chapel Hill at that time. Prominent theater workers from this area will gather here for a two-day session to discuss problems of this regional theater group.

Class Dance To Be Held By Freshmen In Spring

By Frank Allston, Jr.

Freshman class president Dalton Ruffin announced yesterday that plans are underway for a freshman class dance to be held in Woollen gymnasium on May 9.

The dance will be for members of the freshman class and their guests only. The affair will mark the first freshman function of the year.

According to present plans, girls will be imported by the Freshman council for the men who will not have dates. The girls will be brought from the Women's College in Greensboro and from Meredith and St. Mary's in Raleigh. A pool will be taken among the freshman to ascertain the number of girls that will be needed.

Music for the dance will be furnished by Stormy Weathers and his orchestra.

Due to the lack of funds in the treasury, it will be necesary to charge a $1 admission fee, stag or drag. Any proffts will go into the class treasury for other dances or class functions.

The Freshman council has discussed the possibilities of using a portion of the profits for the financing of a freshman weekend during the last few weeks of school. The council will discuss the weekend after it knows how much money it will have to work with.

Following the tradition of all Carolina dances, this affair will be a no-corsage dance.

Ruffin added that the council will discuss plans for the dance at the next meeting of the class officers and the council on Monday afternoon.

VIC HUGGINS

Ladies' Night Set For Friday

The annual ladies' night banquet of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants association will be held next Friday night, Feb. 11, at 7 o'clock in the main ballroom of the Carolina Inn, Vic Huggins, president of the association announced yesterday.

The banquet will be an evening of fun, good food, and plenty of entertainment, Huggins said, with favors for everyone and drawings for a large number of door prizes.

Norman Cordon, Metropolitan Opera has agreed to lead the group singing for the occasion.

Mr. Thompson Greenwood, assistant secretary of the North Carolina merchants association of Raleigh, will be a special guest.

Mrs. Mildred Cartee, newly elected association secretary - treasurer, will be installed as the first full-time secretary of the organization.

YW Junior Group To Meet Tonight

Reports from committee chairmen of the YWCA will head the list of activities at the Y Junior council meeting tonight at 7 o'clock in Horace Williams Lounge, Graham Memorial.

Local Health Officials Meet Here To Discuss Procurement, Training

Approximately 20 state health officers and directors of local health administration from five southeastern states are meeting today in Chapel Hill to discuss problems of the recruitment and training of health officers and other public health personnel.

Held at the invitation of the North Carolina Board of Health and the University School of Public Health, the conference opened last night with a dinner meeting at the Sir Walter hotel, Raleigh, and will continue through today at the School of Public Health.

In addition to representatives from North Carolina, Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, there are several officers of the United States public health service. Dr. William P. Richardson, in charge of the field training division, and Dean E. G. McGavren of the School of Public Health are in charge of the conference.

All Candidates For Council Will Be Heard

Two Nominations To Be Made Today

The tri-partisan selection board will interview all students interested in running in spring elections for positions on the Men's Honor council as representatives of the sophomore and junior classes this afternoon in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

The board will interview all candidates for the sophomore nominations at 2 o'clock and all candidates for junior nominations at 3 o'clock. Students to appear before the board this afternoon may be interviewed at a meeting of the board in the Grail room at 7:30 tonight.

Candidates for nominations form the senior class and the pharmacy and graduate schools will be interviewed next Wednesday

Composed of four members from each of the political parties on campus the board has the authority to nominate all candidates to the Men's council from the sophomore, junior, and senior classes, and the pharmacy and graduate school. A maximum of five candidates will be nominated from each class, and three from the pharmacy and graduate schools.

UP Gives Tenney Committee Seat At Recent Meet

The University party yesterday decided to give Ed Tenney, a former chairman of the Student party, a voting non-dues-paying seat on the UP Steering committee.

Jim Gwynn, in speaking for Teney, said that the one-time SP chairman has resigned his seat in the Student legislature and designated that it be given to the UP.

Under the by-laws of the party, any person who represents a group of 25 or more voting students may sit on the Steering committee as a representative of that group.

Tenney will represent the residents of Victory Village on the Steering committee. He recently walked out of the Student party during a recent party "split."

Union Director To Speak Tonight

Kenneth Douty, Georgia state director of the CIO Textile Worker's Union of America, will speak before the Delta Sigma Pi professional commerce fraternity this evening at a banquet in the Terrace View supper club.

Douty recently served as a labor adviser to the American Army of Occupation in Japan for three months.

Classroom discussions and a symposium will be lead by Douty this afternoon before his address.

Solons Asked For Addition To UNC Funds

Carmichael Goes Before Committee

Controller William Carmichael, Jr., in a hearing before the Joint Appropriations committee in Raleigh, Tuesday asked the committee to add $1,573,00 to the Greater University's appropriation for maintenance to replace "an overestimate" in institutional receipts.

Carmichael told the committee that the overestimate probably occurred because the Budget commission figured on the basis of all students paying a recommended increase in tuition rates from $81 to $150.

Even if the proposed increase in tuition is approved by the University trustees, Carmichael pointout, the income from many veteran students will not be increased. In many instances the government already is paying the maximum of $500 allowed for veterans, which includes fees and other charges in additions to tuition, he said.

Of the addition sought by the University, $844,000 was for the University and $729,000 for State college.

Dr. Graham told the committee that the three branches of the University needed the permanent improvement funds recommended by the Advisory budget commission to supply the "minimum facilities" needed by the three schools. Graham pointed out that the student body had increased more in the past 10 years than it had in the preceding 150 years.

Dedmond, Leary Talk With Solons

Student Body President Jess Dedmond and Joe Leary, member of the Coalition cabinet, are in Raleigh today discussing the proposed tuition raise with legislators.

Dedmond said, "We are interested in talking with the legislators about the proposed increase in tuition for University students and to evaluate the University's program with the legislature."

Fred Kendall, student body president at State college, Martha Fowler, president of Woman's college will also be present in Raleigh this week to discuss the situation.

"I have previously stated my disapproval of any increase in tuition. We will make an effort towards elimination of the proposed increase and will survey the entire budget situation," Dedmond pointed out.

'Farm' Tryouts To Be Held Today

Final tryouts for bit players and chorus for "Apple Tree Farm," the new Ida Lupino musical, will be held from 3 to 6 o'clock this afternoon in the Rendezvous room.

Senate Passes Bill

Compulsory Coed Mass Meet Will Hear Talk By Dr. Wood

A bill for a compulsory mass meeting of Coeds to hear Dr. James Wood, former president of Stephens college, was passed Tuesday night by the Coed senate.

Dr. Wood will be the key-note speaker for the student government forum which is being sponsored by the senate. The dates of the meeting have been set for Feb. 25 and 26.

A resolution stating that the University join the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Governments was passed with the understanding that several delegates from the women's branch of student government be sent to the annual meeting, which will be held this year on April 7, 8 and 9 at Mary Washington college in Fredricksburg, Va.

A subsidiary organizations bill was passed which said that any organization receiving donations from the senate must have a copy of its constitution filed with the Senate, a report of the year's activities, a financial statement of the budget for the past year with a budget for the coming year, and a summary of the organization's chief problems and objects, whether achieved or not.

These records are to be made in duplicate, one copy to be filed with the Dean of Women and one copy to be filed in the records of Coed Senate. No organization will be allowed to draw upon the money allocated to them by Senate until these reports are submitted.

Mina La Marr, from Birmingham, Ala., was installed as a new member of the Senate.

College Shop Thief Steals $2,200 In Cash, Checks

Cash Drawer Emptied of All But Bond; Robber Uses Key to Enter Front Door

Local police reported last night that no arrests have been made in the $2,200 robbery yesterday morning of the College Shop and Carolina Bootery on Franklin street.

"It was definitely an inside job," declared Maurice Julian, owner of the establishment, who said he came to work yesterday morning and found his cash drawer completely cleaned out.

Of the amount stolen, $1,000 was in $20, $10 and $5 bills. The rest included 12 government and a number of personal checks, Julian reported.

"They cleaned us out completely. The only thing left was my $200 G. I. Leave bond," Julian said.

Officer C. C. Durham of the police department investigated the robbery and reported that the thief entered with a key. Durham said that there was no evidence of force and no way of getting into the building from the rear

A drawer ehind the cash register which contained the shop's records was also entered. Julian said that a number of suits and cashmere sweaters were stolen.

"I know this was an inside job because it must have been done with a duplicate key. Probably someone who has worked for me in the past, that is the only thing I can think of."

Officers said an investigation is underway and fingerprints will be checked. Julian requested that all persons who left checks with him anytime on Tuesday to stop payment on them immediately.

Travel Agency Is Ready To Help More Students

By Rita Adams

Comfortably settled in their new quarters on second floor Graham Memorial, Travel agency staff members Charlie Ufen, Winston Hall, and Hugh Kossoff are now ready for the largest influx of business in the history of the organization.

Charlie, the efficient head man of the agency, has a field of experience behind him that is varied enough to qualify him to handle almost any situation that arises. Having done everything from running an elevator to clerking in a department store to taking pictures, he has finally come to the conclusion that his chief purpose in life is "to make a million dollars." When asked how he intended to do this, he replied that he would like to own a holding company some day.

Looking over a few of his past experiences, Charlie likes to reminisce about the trips he has taken with Universty students. It was through the influence of Roland "Foo" Giduz, whom he first met when he was a communication sergeant at Fort Bragg, that he first came to the University. After they were discharged from the Army, Foo and "Foo's Flunkie Charlie" tried one deal whereby they would buy a "bunch of camera equipment wholesale in New York and sell it in Chapel Hill." The idea fell through when the pair ran out of money.

Undaunted, Charlie turned his attention to other expeditions, such as the trip West he planned to take with Graham Memorial Director Bob Watson. Charlie smiles sadly when he thinks about it and says, "It was

Board To Meet To Pass on Bills On Taxes, Trials

The Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen will meet in special session tonight to consider two bills, Town Manager Gilbert Ray's office reported yesterday.

First, the board will pass or reject a proposal that the county collect all school taxes instead of the city as in the past. The board will have to pass on the proposal before it can be introduced on the floor of the State Legislature in Raleigh.

Officials reported yesterday that confusion has resulted from people living outside the city limits having to pay their school taxes at town hall in Chapel Hill.

The other bill which the Board of Aldermen will consider tonight is an ordinance that will automatically move to Hillsboro jury cases coming up in Judge Henry A. Whitefield's local recorders court.

Lighting Effects Of 'Inherit Wind' Have Psychology

Interesting psychological lighting effects have been designed by Francis Michael Casey, graduate assistant in the dramatic art department, for Gene McLain's original play, "Inherit The Wind," premiered last night by the Carolina Playmakers.

Assisted by James Geiger and Edsel Hughes, Casey has caught the moods of the psychological drama, adding to the dramatic values of the set designed by Tommy Rezzuto. Sam Hirsch staged the play, which will be shown again tonight at 7:30. Admission is free and the audience is invited to participate in the discussion.

YMCA Freshman Council to Present Movie 'How to Conquer War' Tonight

The Freshman council of the Young Men's Christian association will present a movie tonight at 7 o'clock on the second floor of the YMCA building on "How To Conquer War."

Following the movie, which will be shown for the freshman class and others interested, there will be a discussion on the alternatives presented by the problem of conquering war.

The program committee of the council is continuing a series of discussions on topics of especial interest to freshmen. These topics were determined from questionnaires recently given to members of the freshman class.

Discussion on courtship and marriage began the series, which will continue in Thursday evening meetings the remainder of the year. Topics of most interest were Religion in life, the value of culture to a college student, and understanding the bible.

Pensive Publius

Gym Light, Please

Publius was late for hygiene. He ran past "A" dorm and into the Raleigh road. Glancing up and down and finding it clear, he started to cross. Suddenly there was a screech behind him, and a quick glance over his shoulder showed him that he was about to be Forded. Fast thinking avoided an accident, but Publius was a little rattled. He swapped dirty looks with the driver and walked into the gym.

"I wonder why we don't have a red light at that corner?" Publius thought. There are probably more students who cross at that corner every day than any other place on the campus, and there isn't anyone to flag the cars down to 20 mph as in front of the Y.

Publius mentioned the idea to a friend who agreed. "Course," said the friend, "We don't have any red lights back in Halifax county but most of the wagons only have one horse instead of 135, and people do the driving instead of jackasses. If we get a light, though, let's just get a plain old-fashioned red light, one that doesn't have to have an orientation program to show how to use it.

"Wait . . . walk" has helped on Franklin Street, but if we wait much longer to put a light by the gym, someone won't be able to walk.

Admission of Weakness

Two letters printed on Sunday morning condemned the Daily Tar Heel for an editorial which pointed out what we consider to be dangers attending the trial of Communist leaders in the United States. Our stand is this:

We contend that Democracy can out argue Communism in the open ten times out of ten. We do not say that our democracy is perfect but we do say that it has provided a greater amount of good for a greater number of people than any other system of government yet devised. Communism, on the other hand, is in many respects a beautiful theory, but it a theory which has demonstrated itself incapable of practical application. If the Communists claim that it has shown its workability, then we want no part of it, for in every Communist controlled country the rights of the individual have been denied.

Suppression of freedom is a tactic of totalitarianism. It is a tactic used by the communists. Many are now advocating that the United States adopt this tactic. If we do so, we are admitting that our democracy is no better than Communism. If suppression is used, it matters not whether it is called by the name of Communism or democracy or dictatorship—the end result is the same. Dictatorship thrives on suppression of freedom; democracy cannot, for freedom is the very foundation stone of democracy. What profiteth it us, then, if in striking at our adversary we destroy that which we are seeking to defend?

Suppression is an admission of weakness. It is a sign which says, "I am not strong enough to stand criticism." Shall we hang such a sign upon democracy? Shall we say that the theory of democracy has cause to fear the theory of communism? If this is the true case, the fault lies not with the Communists but with us, and the solution is not to be found in the suppressing of our challenger but in the strengthening of our democracy.

Sidelines

Completely Uninterested?

By Don Shropshire

Someone once said that a political leader is one who finds out which way the crowd is going and jumps out ahead of it. Such may many times be true, but nothing could be more like suicide than to try to jump in the direction that the campus seems to be going at present.

For the many years that this reporter has been familiar with the extra-curricular set-up here, never has there been such complete lack of interest in those activities in which all students are invited to participate. We even had more real activity when our leaders were more incompetent than some we have today.

What is the trouble? Smarter observers have admitted their inability to put their fingers on the right spot; this one is no exception. Some say that gross inefficiency on the part of the "flat tires" are responsible; some believe the system used here is all "fouled up"; even more believe that all effort is a complete waste of time in the environment which now calls for extra time and thought on purely academic matters.

Perhaps all are right in their observations, but in spite of this reasoning, there is no excuse whatsoever for anyone to turn away from the ever-present responsibility to the government of which they are a part. Plato said, "The penalty good men pay for indifference to public affairs is to be ruled by evil men."

An example of this deplorable attitude was the fall elections of the freshman class. Of all the disgusting displays of infantile nonsense, the rally which preceded the voting and the election results "took the cake" without exception. Fortunately, some of those participating were experienced, qualified, and sincere; but such were not the qualities for which the freshmen seemed to be looking. It is encouraging to note now that the very people the few voters defeated are the ones who are now in the Student Legislature fighting for the betterment of those conditions they promised to try to correct during the campaign.

For the next few weeks, much political activity will be in evidence, and we will soon have another opportunity to put a new and much-needed vigor into our campus life. Doubtless, some of the actions of parties and candidates will at times tend to disgust even the best to the point of wanting to have no more to do with the whole situation. But in that disgust lies the wonderful chance to show our determination to see that the big business of student government is not turned into a petty tool for the selfish. Failure in this action may spell doom.

Arresting Things To Say

By George Dixon
(Copyright, 1949, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON — Formation of a group called the "Ex-GI Small Businessmen" was announced the other day. It had a few extremely arresting things to say for itself.

The organizing committee, which has headquarters at 35 W. 8th St., New York City, is chairmanned by Jay V. Smith, a Guadalcanal Navy veteran, who last year returned his war medals to President Truman in protest against the government's hamstringing of people who want to help themselves.

Veteran Smith, who has a restaurant in Greenwich, Conn., is backed up by a host of ex-GI's who went into business for themselves, including F. Stephen McArthur, Jr., ex-Army captain, who sank his pay savings into a food concern.

The "Ex-GI Small Businessmen" do not mince words about what our generous and paternal government is doing to them. Here are a few well-directed shots from their first broadside:

"The core of the traditional American free enterprise system has been the opportunity to start your own business and climb the ladder of business opportunity by your own efforts.

"Thousands of ex-GI's, inspired by the victory they had just achieved for the American way of life, decided this was the opportune moment to roll up their sleeves and test their abilities under the American economy.

"These ex-heroes soon found themselves all tangled up in the red tape of bureaucracy.

"From the first day the enterprising ex-GI decides to start his own business he must start paying out for various permits, licenses, incorporation papers, and various special taxes—even before he makes his first sale.

"He also learns that under the present intricate American system there is no encouragement for those who seek to work their way up by their own efforts. In fact, the controlling forces of present-day America look askance at such old-fashioned notions as trying to build a business by working 14 hours a day, 7 days a week.

"But . . . while the government drains his meager resources with taxes and assessments . . . it is quite generous to other GI's bent on more glamorous careers. There seems to be no dearth of funds for would-be artists roughing it in Paris or would-be Thespians aspiring to be movie stars.

"While our government is generous in underwriting the perennial 'gimme' groups it turns a deaf ear to the problems of the self-reliant."

These ex-GI small businessmen seem to have summed up our new philosophy of government with deadly insight—tax the life out of the worker to save the bum.

Senator Harry Cain, of Washington, added a writing lady named Emily Walker to his staff to assist with public relations.

Mrs. Walker came here from Tacoma—and her first effort to hit the hometown papers was an avid plug for Senator Cain's Democratic rival, Senator Warren Magnuson!

Speaking of Senator Magnuson, whaddya suppose he's got that makes the dolls go ga-ga about him?

It's got to the point now where they apparently have to number them. The last one I heard of was Toni Seven.

My old sparring partner, Teddy Hayes, has become a champion commuter. He shuttles between here and Mexico as if the Rio Grande were the Potomac.

The former trainer of Jack Dempsey is now American representative of the Mexican tourist bureau and maintains offices here and in Mexico City. The other day I got two phone calls from him.

The first was from the country estate of Bronx Democratic boss Ed Flynn, in nearby Poolesville, Md. The second was from Mexico, D. F.

I regret to add, however, that Mr. Hayes is not being very consistent. He does all his commuting by aid. But he's trying to get tourists to go to Mexico by bus.

Keep the Taft-Hartley Act!

By Wellborn Phillips, Jr.

The Communists, the Socialists, the Americans for Democratic Action, and the President of the United States may all make very strange bedfellows. But for one reason or another, they all seem to agree on one thing. The Taft-Hartley act must go! And they have all joined forces to run up and down the land and rant and rave and call for repeal. Despite all the noise and furor, however, there still remain many good reasons why this law is good and should stay!

This thing we call "the American Way of Life" may be very hard to define, but one thing that it does constitute is the conviction that everyone is equal, at least before the law, and that the public welfare comes before everything else.

However, we should not allow the wool to fall so far down over our eyes that we fail to see that the purpose of the Taft-Hartley Act was to make a reality that equality before the law and to help bring about more healthful conditions in which the public welfare would no longer be trampled in the earth.

Many years ago we realized that many big businesses were irresponsible in their actions, even in cases where those actions and policies actually were harmful to a large segment of our population. And so the Congress stepped in to shield the people from abuse. The Taft-Hartley act was a product of a realization that big unions can act just as irresponsibly as big business and that the Congress still had a responsibility to shield the people—regardless of the source of the damaging acts and policies.

We should realize that no legislation is liberal or reactionary because someone says it is. Its nature is determined by its provisions. This is something we quite often forget. Let's take a look at the Taft-Hartley act.

The act extends to management the right to bring charges of unfair labor practices against unions. The unions had already had the power to bring similar charges against management. It also gives to management the right to sue unions for breach of contract. We might ask ourselves what's so wrong with these provisions. Should not management have equality before the law and a right to bring grievances as unions do? And what is so wrong with the requiring that unions keep to their contracts? Everyone else in America has to do so.

Two other parts that are bitterly attacked are the section requiring regular financial reports to the members and the section permitting an injunction for a limited period of time. So far no one has told us why members of unions should not know whether their officers are pocketing their money or how it is being used. And why shouldn't unions in vital industries be restrained from going on strike on a moment's notice until they have searched diligently for every basis of settlement?

In regard to the controversy which is being waged over the requirement that officers of unions must sign an affidavit that they are not members of the Communist Party—in regard to this, we should ask ourselves what is wrong with denying to a Communist union protection from the government they are working to overthrow?

These and others are questions which have not answered. And, unless they are answered satisfactorily, the Taft-Hartley act should not be repealed!

Write Away

'Simplicity Fixation?'

Editor:

The headline writer really hit the nail on the head with his "Religious Emphasis Weak." However, the rest of the article was not quite so cogent. Friend Fitzgerald is a great writer, but I don't see quite what point the letter—writer wants the great man to make for us. The point is, probably, 1.) There is no God. 2.) Man cannot know God 3.) Man does not now know God. 4.) Our celebrated author doesn't know God.

Point 4 obviously is interesting; but so what?

The other three theses take us into the realms of metaphysics and epistemology where we all feel uncomfortable. But we have to answer these questions because we are active, living creatures who use a reflective mind to guide our actions. As H. G. Wells said, "The question is not whether we will have a metaphysics or not; the question is whether we will have a good one or a bad one."

Point 3 I will accept, with modifications.

Points 1 and 2, whose feasibility I think you meant the poem to maintain, are indefensible. If you say that man cannot know God, then you are saying that you have plumbed the depths of the possibilities of human knowledge and have found the limit beyond which the human mind cannot go. Within this limit of knowable things there is no God. Anyone who thinks he knows the limit of human knowledge is certainly a deluded person. Thus, it is senseless to maintain that men cannot know God. The fallacy in the first point is like unto that is the second. To postulate "no God" means that you have knowledge of the non-existence of God. Such knowledge would require an understanding of everything—"the choir of heaven and the furnishing of earth," lest a yet unexplored fact should be the key to the discovery of the dwelling place of the Most High.

So the only thing we have left on this most basic of all questions is probability and opinion. Ironical isn't it, that knowledge fails just at the point where men need it most? Such is to be expected. The basic questions are the most general and hence the most complex. (They embrace a wider area, have more ramifications and applicability) The simpler problems were solved first, because they were simpler. But man will never solve his problem until he gets over this "simplicity fixation," and examines the situation as it really is.

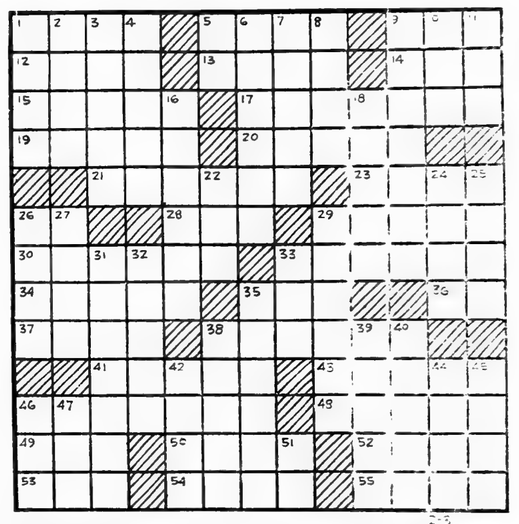
Regain People's Friendship



Editor:

You probably receive hundreds of letters like this a week. However, I would greatly appreciate it if you would print this in your paper.

Mr. Drew Pearson's appearance on our campus should certainly influence us more than as merely an important speaker giving a lecture. We should take heed to what he said instead of only conversing about and then finally forgetting it. Nothing can be more important at this critical stage of world insecurity than to "regain the friendship of the Russian people who used to like us." Many veterans, like myself, who fought the Nazis, know that there were many Germans who did not know why they were fighting. If we could only reach their Russian equivalents in some manner to establish friendlier relations, this talk of war would stop. Why couldn't we, the students of the University of North Carolina, start a friendship drive to gainn the true friendship of the Russian people. If we would start a friendship drive, I am sure that every University in the United States would follow suit.

God knows that I never want to see another war nor do I want my son to go through what I did, a few years ago.

Playmakers Start Presentation of Full-Length Plays

By Vestal C. Taylor

H.M.S. Pinafore has come and gone, leaving a very favorable impression on those who witnessed the performance. There were some instances of stiffness and upstaging by the cast during the first night of performance, but most of the defects had been eliminated by Sunday evening and the audience was more than usually pleased with the interpretation given Gilbert and Sullivan's great show.

Speaking of "Pinafore," there is a curious and indirect relationship between "Beggar's Opera" and some of Gilbert and Sullivan's works. To students of the period, "Beggar's Opera" represents the first of the musical comedies as we have them today. In the last century, before musicals had developed to their present meaning, this work is known to have influenced Gilbert and Sullivan in writing their plays for 19th century audiences.

Gene McClain's new play "Inherit The Wind," marks the second in a series of three full-length plays to be presented to Chapel Hill audiences during the current year. The first was Bob Armstrong's "Egyptian," a moving story of the South with a different slant on the socialogical aspect of racial relationship. The third selection for the year has not yet been announced.

The presentation of full-length plays marks a new era in play-giving by the Dramatic Arts department. For years the department felt that the reputation of the Playmakers had been founded and rested on one-act folk plays. Instruction and encouragement to student writers was directed toward one-act playwriting. But 10 or 15 years ago the material in the work stopped coming from fresh sources. The well of folksy material ran dry and the stress in playwriting came to be on quantity not quality. The true folk plays ceased to be, and were replaced by pseudo folk plays.

Some of the few notable exceptions to this trend were the works of Betty Smith, Paul Green, and Josephine Niggli, but their contributions would only bring the average of good writing up to perhaps one good play in twenty produced.

As a result of this stagnation, the Playmakers ceased to grow; their reputation ceased to grow. The theater of the nation passed them by, since the national trend was toward full-length plays.

At last the powers put their heads together and a new policy evolved—a policy of emphasizing full-length productions, to begin this year. These plays are to be written by graduate students, since it is thought by those in the know that graduates are more mature and more capable of producing creditable work than is the undergraduate, who is usually the author of one-act plays. The focus of all writing done from now on will be full-length productions.

The observer will be able to notice the one-act play, so prominent in the past, being deemphasized and used only to train beginners, and staged without costumes or scenery.

Carolina Swimmers Depart Today For Ohio State Meet

A crew of 13 swimmers, two coaches, and a manager will leave Chapel Hill early this afternoon to face what is probably the Tar Heels' biggest foe of the season, undefeated Ohio State, Saturday afternoon in Columbus.

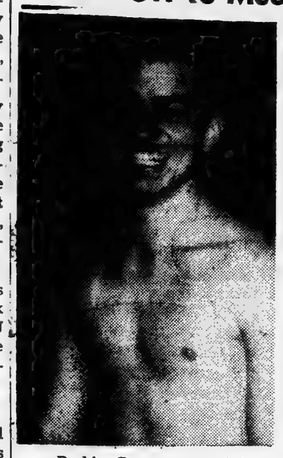
For the first time in many meets Carolina will be in the position of a decided underdog and it is doubtful if the five-game victory skein boasted by the Tar Heels will hold up against the onslaughts of the Buckeyes, defending National AAU champions.

OSU Coach Mike Peppe has virtually the same personell back this year, which took the AAU title by 20 points and lost the NCAA crown by only three markers.

Two Easy Wins

The buckeye outfit has had little trouble in its two meets thus far this year; defeating Wisconsin and Northwestern, both Big Nine foes, by identical scores of 50-34. The Big Nine uses a different scoring system, and that accounts for the apparently strange total.

The Tar Heels will run up against another innovation against Ohio State and that is the use of the high diving board rather than the three-meter springboard. It is a collegiate rule that when both schools participating in a meet have a high board, the diving is to be conducted from the 10-meter height. This will be the first time this season that Carolina has faced an opponent, which has those facilities.



Diving is expected to be one of the strongest events for the Buckeyed, whose top quartet of divers finished in that order in the nationals. They are headed by Olympic three-meter champion Bruce Harlan, one of the five national title-holders in the Ohio State lineup.

'Fastest Swimmer Alive'

"The fastest swimmer alive," Bill Smith, is the outstanding member of the OSU squad. Smith, who also won many laurels in the Olympics this summer, holds records in almost every distance from the 220 through the 880.

Deacons Dump State

WAKE FOREST, Feb. 2—A fighting bunch of Demon Deacons ended N. C. State's three-year domination of the Southern conference in Gore gymnasium tonight with a stunning 52-49 upset victory over the Wolfpack.

The Stateman, who had won 27 straight conference games prior to tonight's tilt, were never able to go ahead in the thrilling contest that ended in a near riot. Led by sharp-shooting Buck Geary, who racked up 19 points, the Deacons held a 31-26 edge at half-time. Sam Ranzino dropped in 14 points to lead the Wolfpack.

Sigma Chi, TEP, And Chi Psi Still In Handball Race

Although more than a week of action remains in the intramural basketball leagues, play is rapidly drawing to a close in the mural handball tournaments. Old West and Town No. 1 battled last night in the dormitory finals, and the fraternity championship probably will be decided on Monday.

Sigma Chi No. 1 has already earned its way into the finals for the fraternity championship. Their foe will be either Chi Psi No. 1 or TEP. These two teams meet tonight in a semi-final engagement which will decide Sigma Chi's opponent. Chi Psi is the defending champion, having captured the fraternity title last year.

The mural department yesterday also announced that it expected basketball play to continue until about Feb. 15.

Tar Heel Cagers Prepare For Clash With Blue Devils

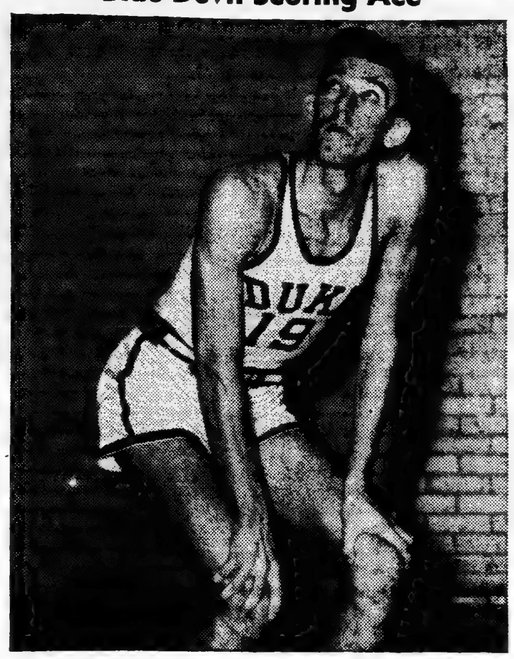
Coach Tom Scott sent his up-and-down cagers through another day of drills yesterday afternoon in Woollen gym as he began final preparations for Saturday's big game with the Blue Devils of Duke.

The neighborhood scrap will pit two of the conference's oldest rivals against each other when the Dukes come here this week-end, and plenty of torrid action may be expected from both sides.

The Blue Devils have turned in an excellent record thus far in the season and on paper rate as slight favorites over the Tar Heels, but when these two old foes come together in any sort of athletic clash, whether it be tiddly-winks, football, or what-have-you, odds mean very little to either side.

Rivalry Rates High

Spirit rates high in the comparison of the two rivals, and rivalry rates higher still. Coach Scott and Assistant coach Pete Mullis have been working all week to get their boys in the proper frame of mind for this all-important conference clash, and it takes very little to stir the rivalry between the two opponents.



The Carolinians will enjoy at least one decidedly good break even before the game gets under way. That being the differences in the two team's schedules. The Devils made a long trip to Annapolis, Md. yesterday to play Navy, meet powerful NYU here on Friday, and then have to tackle their old Carolina rivals, whereas the Tennessee game, played on Monday, was the only other bout of the week for the Scottmen.

Another factor in Carolina's favor is that the Tar Heels are slated to be "up" for the week-end joust. The Carolinians have had alternate "up" and "down" nights in recent outings and, after the Tennessee disgrace, the Scottmen should be plenty "hot" on Saturday night.

Another important fact to be considered in pre-game reckoning is the fact that the Blue Devils have been suffering from a scoring defiency in recent games. Against Davidson last week they snapped out of their slump long enough to pound out a loop victory, but with the Carolina pressure on them, the Dukes might not even hit the backboard all night. And the same holds true for the Tar Heels.

Ceep Youmans, towering Duke forward, is currently the top scorer in the Durham camp, but he is being pushed hard by lanky Ben Collins.

Blue Devil Scoring Ace

BEN COLLINS is currently pacing the Blue Devils of Duke in Southern Conference battling. Collins has racked up a total of 160 points in 13 games, playing four times with a bad hand. He will lead his mates against Carolina on Saturday night in Woollen gym.

Chapel Hill Plays in Sanford

The Wildcat cagers of Chapel Hill high school will journey to Sanford tonight to meet Sanford high in a class A conference game. The Wildcats, coached by Bill Grice, have won ten consecutive games this season without a defeat, and are ranked as one of the top Class A teams in the state.

The local hoopsters racked up win number ten Wednesday night when they handed Siler City a 47-37 setback. Coach Grice's starting lineup will probably see Tom Maultsby and John Jernigan at the forward slots, and Russell Perry in the pivot position, while Ivalee Hill and Bob Phillips are due to take the floor as guards.

The 'Cats trounced Sanford earlier in the season in Chapel Hill, and they are favored to make a clean sweep of the series when the two quints tangle again tonight.

Harter Leads, Bowersox Trails In Frosh Scoring

With more than half the season behind them, the scoring honors of the freshmen cage squad is developing into a personal battle between forward Dick Harter and guard John Bowersox with nary another contender in sight.

Of the two Tar Babies, Harter, due to his scintillating performances in the more recent games holds a slight edge of five points over his teammate, 143 points to 138. Harter, a six foot one inch competitor from Pottsdown, Pa., also leads the present squad in game averages, having averaged 12 points a game for 12 contests played by yearlings to this date. Bowersox, the slim floorman who is the other half of the scoring punch, has a 11.5 game average to his credit.

Harter has relieved the point getting laurels from the departed Buddy Johnson who, while still in school, sported a neat seven average of 14 markers per tussle.

Hogan Hurt

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 2 — (UP)—Bantam Ben Hogan, the nation's top golfer, suffered three fractured ribs, a head abrasion and back injuries which threatened his fabulous career today when his new Cadillac sedan crashed head-on with a Greyhound bus.

The mighty mechanical mite of the fairways, who in seven years as a golf star has pounded out more than $150,000 in tournament winnings, saved his own life by heroically shielding his wife from injury.

At the last moment before the crash he threw his body in front of his wife, Valerie.

"It's a good thing he did, because the engine of our car was tossed back into the seat and the steering gear was shoved through the driver's seat and into the rear section," Mrs. Hogan said.

Pending a study of x-rays, hospital physicians declined to say whether any vertebrae had been fractured.

Life After Death?

Duke University Scientists Wrestling With Immortality

DURHAM, Feb. 2—(UP)—Scientists at Duke university here are wrestling with the age-old question of whether anything about a person survives after death.

Is there any real evidence to prove that we have a soul that goes on after the body dies?

The latest scientific word on that question comes from the laboratory of Dr. Joseph B. Rhine, Duke psychologist. Dr. Rhine

"Yes, there is a great accumulation of evidence that strongly favors the possibility that there is something about human personality that could survive."

But the psychologist is not yet ready to tell in precise terms what that evidence is.

Dr. Rhine is head of the laboratory at Duke university that for years has been conducting experiments to show that the mind could influence cards, dice and marbles. The theory is that if you says:
think "seven" hard enough when you roll the dice you will get more sevens—not every time, but more often.

Other experiments have been made to test scientifically whether there is such a thing as telepathy —the transmission of thought from one individual to another.

The ability to "pick up" thoughts from another individual, he explained today, is extra-sensory perception, or ESP for sort. The ability to influence moving objects like dice is psycholknesis, or PK for short. Together they are known as PSI.

Dr. Rhine conducts experiments with Duke students in the laboratory and at his own home. He said that in the past "a few scientists have tkaen steps to investigate the performance and claims of mediums, and any other manifestations that suggest the agency of discarnate personalities or spirits."

Today, however, the popular interest in gone, he said, and the work at Duke on ESP and PK is about all that is being done.

"This decline of interest," he said, "is a part of the general shift away from all theological doctrine. Iist Ioykni etaoinETAO doctrine. It is the mode of thought resulting from the advancement of scientific thinking. First, hell and the personal devil, and now Heaven and the angels are passing out of the picture as intellectual advance overtakes them.

"Unfortunately, there is no impulse to investigate the problem under discussion on the part of those who accept the hypothesis of immortality of faith, no more than there is by those who, equally dogmatically, reject the doctrine as nonsense.

"Both of these types of blind stand in the way of inquiry, and it is only by scientific investigation that the world will ever know the answer to the question."

Dr. Rhine actually wants to determine whether there is scientific proof of the immortality of the soul. He does not believe his work is in conflict with religion. In fact, he believes there "is a most important and wholly constructive relation between the two."

The doctor and his colleagues here have been experimenting in para-psychology, the study of mind over matter, for 20 years.

To investigate the powers of hought communication, Dr. Rhine said "there are two main courses to pursue.

One, he said, is to push vigorously on with the investigation of extra-sensory perception abilities of some persons and whether the mind can be made to influence moving objects, like the fall of heads or tails in pitching pennies.

"In showing us the nonphysical properties of the human mind," he said, "these investigations have already given scientific proof of the existence of a spiritual order of some sort.

"This constitutes a scientific substantiation of the soul theory of man, even though it does not tell us much of anything about the soul.

"We must see how far these researches can lead us, how independent we shall find the mind, how separable, what scope of action it possesses. This may in itself be the best and most direct route to the solution of the problem of survival.

"Certainly it has got us further in the past than any other route."

The other line of research, Dr. Rhine said, is "a more exploratory one."

"Interest in the question of survival arises from spontaneous experiences of a sort that suggest a spirit agency," he said. "We must collect all of these cases that we can and build a research program around them."

Clergy Protests

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2—(UP)—Ohio pastors said today that attempts of Duke university scientists to prove that man is immortal are "silly and useless."

The clergymen, here for the Ohio Pastors convention, don't think much of the experiments of Dr. Joseph B. Rhine, Duke university psychologist who claims he has found "a great accumulation of evidence that strongly favors the possibility that there is something about human personality that could survive."

"The story in Matthew, Mark, Luke and John is good enough for me," said Rev. Anderson Brown of Hoffman Memorial Methodist church, West Milton, O. "The scientists couldn't possibly tell the story any better."

Rev. Thomas P. Simpson of Trinity Episcopal church, Newark, O., said, "I don't believe science ever will find out whether we are immortal. Scientists are concerned only with things they can see, taste and touch.

AFTER CALLING on President Truman at the White House, Mark F. Ethridge (left), Louisville, Ky., has an informal talk with Dean Acheson, secretary of state. Ethridge is leaving for Palestine to assume the post as United States representative on the U. N. Palestine commission.

California or bust. We busted in Asheville."

Since Charlie and his two assistants moved into their new office at the beginning of this quarter, they have made numerous improvements in order to offer more efficient service to the University. Formerly housed in the office of the director of Graham Memorial, the agency now has a separate room and a private telephone, 9683.

Through the ingenuity of Charlie's artistic ability, additional time schedules of buses, trains, and planes are being posted on the walls of the room daily. The charts are printed clearly in blue, black, and red and are accessible to anyone who comes into the office. Visitors may also secure individual pamphlets and time schedules concerning trips all over the country.

The office is open from 9 until 12 o'clock and 2 until 6 o'clock Monday through Friday, and from 9 until 12 o'clock every Saturday.

The purpose of the Travel agency is to give information concerning transportation reservations and itineraries. Through the courtesy of Graham Memorial the staff works out itineraries and makes reservations for both faculty members and students.

During the middle of a quarter, when classes keep students confined to Chapel Hill, the agency's collection of pamphlets and folders on vacation lands all over the country is an inviting

Judge Whitfield Has Hands Full Of Tag Trouble

By Sam Whitehall

Inspection dates have long since expired for most makes of automobiles, but Judge Henry Whitfield of the Chapel Hill Recorder's court still has his hands full of auto owners who failed to have their cars inspected. Five such cases were heard in Tuesday's session of Recorder's court.

Most of the car owners got off with light sentences, but Judge Whitfield warned them if they appeared before him on similar charges he would deal severely with them.

Cases heard Tuesday in Recorder's court were: Dennis Edwards, Negro, assault with a deadly weapon, $25 and six months on roads, suspended; Curtis Gattis, Negro, assault with a deadly weapon, six months on roads, suspended; Joseph Baldyin and Artis Snipes, Negroes, defrauding taxi, $10 and costs.

Curney Atwater, Jr., Negro, disorderly conduct and failure to obey an officer, prayer for judgement continued and costs; J. B. Goldston, failure to have car inspected, prayer for judgement continued; Willie Cotton, Negro, failure to have car inspected, prayer for judgement continued.

Johnny Mason, Negro, no driver's license, $5 and costs; Joseph Martin Jones, failure to have car inspected, $5 and costs; Benjamin Mason, Negro, drunkenness, $25 and costs; Leonard Edward Moore, reckless driving and speeding, prayer for judgement continued.

Di Is Against Public Probes By Government

Senate In Favor Of FBI Checks

The Dialectic senate went on record Wednesday night as being opposed to public "loyalty probes" and favored secret investigations by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Loyalty investigations by the president's loyalty commission and the House committee on un-American activities were condemned during the heated debate.

The bill presented by the Ways and Means committee was tabled, after considerable debate on parliamentary procedure, to make way for a substitute bill introduced by Gus Graham. The substitute bill would have placed the Di on record as favoring "loyalty probes" conducted in a "fair manner." Graham called for continued investigations by the congressional committee in closed hearings with only the results released to the public.

Artie Murphey supported the activities of the House committee contending that all freedom would be lost if the Communists took over the country. He cited favorably the activities of the committee in investigation pro-Nazi groups during World War II.

Bill Hardin attacked the loyalty investigations conducted in the executive branch of the federal government for condemning men on the basis of who they knew and what they read.

Gran Childress opposed the House committee on un-American activities contending that it was wasting money by duplicating the activities of the FBI.

Don Shropshire opposed the publicity received by the loyalty investigations and favored expansion of the activities of the FBI.

An amendment introduced by Tom Mayfield restricted the investigations to the Justice department. The amendment passed by a standing vote of 15 to 9 after Mayfield condemned the House committee for making a fool of itself and accomplishing nothing.

Trio to Present Concert Tuesday

The famous Pasquier String trio will appear here on Tuesday at 8:30 in Hill hall under the sponsorship of the Music department. The trio is composed of three brothers belonging to a most artistic and musical family, their father being an unusually fine violinist and their mother a pianist of distinction.

The three sons, as well as a sister were brought up in musical surroundings and started musical studies under their father's direction. As the boys grew older, ensemble music was performed by the entire family.

Tug-of-War

BERLIN, Wis., Feb. 3—(UP) The Community Chest sent a sound truck out today to urge residents to boycott the March of Dimes.

A tug-of-war between the two fund-raising agencies developed when the Community Chest offered the local March of Dimes campaigners a check for $1,000.

In return, the Community Chest asked the March of Dimes people to call off their campaign. Community Chest officials said residents should not be forced to submit to "doorbell-ringing campaigns every other week."

The March of Dimes refused the check and sent workers out on a door-to-door campaign anyway.

Hebert, Rankin Join Lewis In Attack On Frank Graham

THERE'S A COMPLACENT LOOK on the bovine face of this Brahma steer as he sends Clayton Hill of Canadian, Tex., soaring skyward at the National Western Stock, Horse Show and Rodeo at Denver, Colorado. Mr. Hill came back to earth but the photograhpers who made the picture, is still literally walking on clouds.

Communist-Front Affiliations Are Charged in Talk

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3—(UP)—Rep. E. Edward Hebert, D., La., today accused Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of North Carolina university, of Communist-front ties and said he "cannot be trusted" with matters "involving his country."

In a speech on the House floor, Hebert said the House Unamerican Activities committee has listed Graham as either a director or sponsor of 18 Communist-front organizations.

Dr. Frank Graham said last night that he had not heard all the facts on charges hurled at him by Congressmen Edward Hebert and John Rankin, and he wished to make no comment at the present.

The United Press reported last night that Gov. Kerr Scott, who is ex officio chairman of the Board of Trustees, also had heard none of the facts in the case yet. Charlie Parker, the governor's secretary, said he doubted if any statement would be made before today, if at all.

He suggested the educator be "relieved" of his university post, and attacked Graham's clearance by the Atomic Energy commission for limited access to secret atomic information.

Rep. John E. Rankin, D., Miss., said "it develops also that there is a Communist organization among the student body" at North Carolina university.

Both Rankin and Hebert were removed from the Unamerican Activities committee this year by Democratic House leaders.

The joint Congressional Atomic Energy committee is looking into Graham's clearance by the Atomic Energy commission. Radio commentator Fulton Lewis, Jr., claimed the clearance was given over the objections of the commission's own security office and loyalty board.

Coed Handbook Editor To Be Selected Tues.

Emily Baker, speaker of the Coed senate, announced yesterday that editor of the Woman's handbook will be selected at a special meeting of the senate next Tuesday.

All coeds who are interested in the position should submit a letter of application, containing information of previous publication experience, especially editorial, to Emily Baker at the Alpha Gam house. The editorship, which will be awarded by a vote of the senate, is open to any coed on campus.

The handbook, which is the only publication containing coed social rules and regulations, is sent to new coeds during the summer before they enter the University. In addition to presenting rules to the new students, the handbook presents a historical sketch of the University, descriptions of student government and other activities, and explains the Campus and Honor codes.

Polio Drive Gets $114 From Dance By Legionnaires

A square dance sponsored by the American Legion Saturday night in the Legion hut netted profits of $114 for the current polio drive, Paul H. Robertson of the Legion announced yesterday.

In presenting the check to the chairman of the drive, Robertson, chairman of the committee on arrangements for the dance said, "I want to take this opportunity to publicly express my appreciation to those members of the committee who so generously gave their time and energy to make the dance a success. I especially want to thank the musicians, H. C. Wilson, Hyden Clark, W. H. Mecham, and Robert Harris, who gave their services without charge."

The public was also enthusiastic in its support of the dance, Robertson said, and deserved the thanks of the committee. The proceeds from the dance amounted to $114, Robertson said, but some voluntary contributions are still coming in.

"I'd like to take this opportunity to invite any of the students to come down to the hut for our Friday night meetings," Robertson said. It does not matter whether they are members of this post or whether they are non-legion members, Robertson said.

The campus March of Dimes drive ended Monday but contributions may still be turned in to the Daily Tar Heel offices in Graham Memorial.

Tobin Recommends Ban on Communists

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3—(UP)—Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin told Congress today that it ought to pass a law making it a crime for a Communist to hold office in an Labor union.

Russian Navy Fails To Return Battleship

ROSYTH, Scotland, Feb. 3—(UP)—The Russian Navy failed to return the borrowed battleship Royal Sovereign on schedule today and the Royal Navy which steamed out to sea to meet it turned around and steamed back empty handed.

Fraternity Revolt

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 3—(UP)—College fraternities and sororities probably will lose more chapters this year because of a revolt against restrictive pledging, George Banta, Jr., publisher of Banta's Greek Exchange, a national fraternity magazine, said today.

Banta referred to recent action by national fraternal organizations who dropped houses in some colleges because they pledged Negroes.

He said there was no sign of a changed attitude on the part of national fraternity and sorority officers.

"The national organizations are not likely to make any concessions," Banta said.

Betty Lou Ball To Be Vocalist At Rendezvous

Talented Singer Performs Tonight

Betty Lou Ball of Winston-Salem will be the guest singer in the Rendezvous room tonight, Lib Stoney, program director, said yesterday.

First place winner of an all-Southern vocal contest, Betty Lou was sent to New York and offered a contract by orchestra leader Fred Waring. She turned down the offer, however, in order to finish her education at Salem college, where she majored in music and voice.

She is now teaching vocal classes in two Winston-Salem high schools and working with the Tri-City Opera company of Greensboro, Winston-Salem, and High Point.

She will sing one solo on the Rendezvous radio show and also a duet with Carl Perry, who played the romantic lead in "H.M.S. Pinafore."

The floor show will feature Ralph Mulford as its comedian and Tommy Thomas and Dick Johnson in a song and dance number. Tommy and Dick were scheduled to appear on last week's program but were called to New York for a television audition.

Labor Unions 'Conservative' Declares Douty

Delta Sigs Hear Georgia Director

Kenneth Douty, Georgia director of the CIO Textile Workers Union of America, last night told the members of the Delta Sigma Pi commerce fraternity that the American labor movement is "the most conservative labor movement in the world."

Douty spoke at a dinner meeting of the professional fraternity at the Terrace View supper club. Fraternity spokesmen said he was invited to speak in order to carry out the chapter's program of covering all fields of commerce and other related fields in its professional program.

Explaining his stand on the "conservativeness" of the American labor movement, Douty pointed out that both the CIO and the AF of L are for the present labor system as it is, even though they are against monopolies and for extension of things like TVA. But he said industry views with alarm any labor movement.

Douty stressed the fact that unions are formed because "there

Playmaker Lab To Give Tragedy

The Laboratory theater of the Carolina Playmakers will present "Gorboduc, The Tragidie of Terrex and Porrex," by Thomas Norton and Thomas Sockville, in the main lounge of Graham Memorial Sunday night at 8:45, W. P. Covington, director, said yesterday.

The play, which was the first English tragedy written in blank verse, has not been presented in public for 387 years. The laboratory theater experimented with it last week during the Southeastern Renaissance conference here and it was named a success by those attending the presentation. Since the laboratory staff decided that it is still playable, they are presenting the campus showing.

Duke Was Named In Original Will

Gratitude of University for Bequeath Expressed in Statement by Dr. Graham

By Margaret Gaston

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday handed down a decision which designates the University as the site of the $1,500,000 William H. Ackland Memorial Art building.

Ackland's will, which has been contested in courts since 1942 involves the construction of a museum and art gallery in his memory.

The court's decision, written by Justice Wilber K. Miller, with Justices Edgerton and Clark concurring, reversed a 1947 ruling which held that the money should go to Rollins college, Fla.

The original will, drawn up in 1938, left the money to Duke university. The bequest was subsequently refused by Duke. An earlier will designated that the bequeath be left to either Duke, the University of North Carolina, or Rollins college.

After Duke refused the offer, Ackland's heirs brought the issue to court. Judge Bailey of the District Court of Appeals directed the trustees of the will to study the claims of the two colleges.

The trustees spent two years investigating and finally decided that the proper site for the museum was in Chapel Hill.

During the two years, Judge Bailey left the court. When the recommendations were submitted, on July 25, 1947, his successor, Judge Alexander Holtzoff, disregarded them.

Judge Holtzoff's verdict was that the money should go to Rollins.

Yesterday, Justice Miller held that the findings of the District court were erroneous and reversed Holtzoff's decision. He held that the money should go to the University because it was more in line with the wishes expressed in Ackland's will.

Yesterday, Dr. Frank P. Graham made the following statement about the late William Ackland:

"William Hayes Ackland loved the people of his native southland, and he long dreamed of the establishment, at a Southern university, of an inspiring center that would increase the people's knowledge, appreciation and enjoyment of art. His will provided for this noble cause.

"Now after esveral years of legalistic entanglements, and chiefly through the determination of his Trustees, Messrs. John Larson, Edson B. Olds and Stanley Holland to carry out the

Phillips Says Teacher Grads To Number 151

Class of 1950 May Have 200

A total of 151 teachers, the largest number since 1930, will graduate from the University as qualified teachers by next September, Dean Guy Phillips of the School of Education announced yesterday.

"Enrollment in the beginning classes this year indicates that the graduating group in 1950 will number approximately 200 students," he said.

Dean Phillips stated that a new plan of teacher preparation had been put into effect which provides more actual observation and student teaching experience for those qualifying for a teacher's certificate.

Three separate plans of practice teaching are now in operation at the University, according to Dean Phillips. First, a limited number of students are permitted to do practice teaching in the Chapel Hill high school. Another group consists of students living in Chapel Hill, who commute to schools within driving distance, and a third plan is to send students off the campus for the entire quarter to do practice teaching in an actual school situation."

GM Will Present Music Programs

Graham Memorial will present the first in a series of weekly programs Sunday at 7:30 in the main lounge. The Alden quartet will be featured on the program.

The quartet is composed of Edgar Alden, first violin: Dorothy Alden, viola; Frances Simmons, second violin; and Ernest Peschel, cello. Selections for the program have not yet been announced.

The program for the next five Sundays is as follows: the Dickieson trio, from WCUNC, Feb 13; the Vielle trio, co-sponsored by the music department, in Hill hall, Feb. 20; the Latin American trio in a program of carnival music, in Hill hall, Feb. 27; and a woodwind quintet, March 13.

The purpose of the programs, said Mike Loftis, Graham Memorial entertainment chairman, is to give "something worthwhile in music to the students and townspeople."

There will be no admission for this Sunday's concert.

Sullivan Orders Navy Reshuffling

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3—(UP)—Secretary of Navy John L. Sullivan today ordered the Navy to reshuffle its fighting strength immediately so it can stay within President Truman's tighter new fiscal 1950 budget.

He ordered 72 ships taken out of active service, cut the Navy Air Force by 418 planes, said 13 Naval air stations would be put on inactive or reduced status, and pared down the officers and enlisted strength of both the navy and marine corps.

Archduke Autographs Rathskellar

By Don Maynard

"Otto of Austria," written in the bold hand of royalty, took its place yesterday among the signatures of the many celebrated persons who have visited the Ram's Head Rathskellar and registered in the "Gastebuch."

Otto, Archduke of Hapsburg, son of the late Franz-Josef, the Emperor of Austria and King of Hungary, added his autograph to those of Norman Cordon, Kay Kyser, Georgia Carroll, Mayne Albright and hundreds of University students.

Otto visited the Danzigers and Chapel Hill yesterday enroute to Burlington, where he spoke on international relations last night.

Lecturing on the world situation and international relations, the Archduke is touring executive clubs in this country until the end of the month, when he will return to Paris. Included in his itinerary are Chicago, New Orleans, and Washington, with stops at Wilmington and Ashville.

When asked if he had ever been to Asheville before, Otto replied, "No, and I'm looking forward to it very much. I hope I will have nice weather there, but I suppose it will rain dogs and cats."

A student of world situations, the Archduke attended schools in Belgium, Spain and France. He obtained his Docterate of Political and Social science at Louvain, Belgium, in 1933.

It was in the candy kitchen that the Archduke, eldest of five brothers scattered throughout the world — London, Mexico City, Brussels and Canada—told of his experiences with the underground in England and Portugal from 1938 to 1945.

Nearly six feet in height, dark-haired with a dark moustache and flashing eyes, the Archduke related his adventures with an air of royalty in a resonant commanding voice.

He described his tour of Russian-dominated European countries, "to obtain a better comprehension of conditions there."

Otto spoke vehemently of the Russian obsession, expressing surprise at Americans who did not comprehend the tremendous accumulation of power made by the Russians during the past six months. "If the American people were told of the full Russian menace," he said, "they wouldn't believe it."

Declaring Stalin a "brilliant man," Otto voiced a distaste for Stalin's philosophy. Nevertheless, he said, "the mark of a great leader is the number of great collaborators he gathers around him."

The Archduke, whose family dates back to 860 A.D., said he preferred the European private method of education to the American state-supported system. "My colleges were good," he said. "Primary education is a private affair, therefore the state enters only where private initiative ends."

An experienced traveler who has been in every state in the union twice, Otto complimented Chapel Hill as one of the "nicest towns I have visited," and the Rathskellar as simply, "Charming!"

YM-YWCA Conference

Montreat Delegates to Meet In Buildings of Native Stone

By Caroline Bruner

When University students retreat into the Blue Ridge mountains of North Carolina for their winter conference at Montreat, they will carry on fellowship programs in buildings made of native rock.

While enjoying their week-end of worship and recreation, Feb. 18 through 20, they will be housed in Assembly inn, built many years ago from materials collected in surrounding areas. The inside of the building is finished with sparkling mica rock, and sea shells are used in indirect lighting.

Gaither chapel, where worship programs will be held, carries further Montreat's tradition of buildings made of native materials. Fashioned like the inn, the chapel is found in the administration building of Montreat junior college for girls.

A featured worship service will be held early in the morning on Look-Out mountain, which overlooks the inn. Retreaters will hike the one-mile-long trail to its summit.

During the summer months, Montreat serves as a resort, where 400 cottages are located. An old hotel, which was burned down several years ago, is gradually being rebuilt from the rocks in surrounding areas.

In the center of the resort area is Lake Susan, an artificial lake for summer-time sports of swimming and boating.

Sex Education

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3—(UP)—Experts of the American Social Hygiene association sat back and listened today to four high school and college students tell how they think sex education should be taught to youth.

The 'teen-agers gave their views in a panel discussion at the association's annual convention. They told the psychologists and physicians among other things that parents are harder to educate than their offspring, and that schools need a standardized program of sex education.

The four participants were not unanimous in their opinions. Two felt that schools were a good medium for teaching sex education, but that courses bieng taught these days were inadequate. Another thought that a change in the public attitude toward the sex problem was needed.

The fourth said that a "sex course does no more to develop a pupil's character than a course in history or a good stiff drink."

Aid for Student Groups

Student organizations which have been loudly lamenting the apparent dearth of interested workers will be happy to receive the letter sent out this week by Mike Loftus, assistant director of Graham Memorial.

The letter announces availability in the GM office of a complete file of Freshman Interest Indicator cards. These cards, filled out last quarter by incoming students, list the fields of general interest, interest in specific campus organizations, and previous experience of each freshman. The cards are filed alphabetically and cross indexed under the various categories of student activities.

The card file idea was originated last year but was little used since few people knew of its existence. This year it is expected to be a much used convenience. If organizations continue to be deficient in younger members, it will be entirely due to their own lack of initiative.

It's Better In Bottles

Lenoir hall, short-order joint for a few thousand students every day, has resorted to an unethical practice. Ketchup is no longer left bottled for use on the tables, but placed in a dish on the line.

This insidious practice is playing havoc with the ketchup vitamin content of the more absent-minded students. Buying a dish of beans, they casually wander by the ketchup and come to a rude awakening only when at their table. Being absent-minded they are also shy, and eat the beans straight rather than carry a dish up to the line and break in before some one. As a result they are becoming anemic-looking and creased with the outer signs of the inner conflict they engage in when contemplating a ketchupless plate of beans.

It is not only the bean eaters, but the other true-blooded American students who like to douse their food with ketchup, and do it straight from the bottle. This spooning the gooey stuff is sloppy and somehow lacks dignity, and Carolina students are well-known as fastidious (they never open beer with their teeth) gentlemen.

So we demand the abolition of this barbaric custom, this retreat from cultured civilization. Back with the bottles!

No Cure for Sin

Do people, and especially North Carolinians, ever learn? Prohibition has been tried before by the entire country and found to be a failure. It was not very nice—increased drinking, increased alcoholism and many deaths from poisonous concoctions, plus the growth of gangs. Yet, a large group of Carolinians want to try again. Conditions are no different, so the same result may be expected.

History labels the Prohibition Era as a vicious, sinful, vice-filled time with America as a new moral low. It cannot be disputed that the criminal element fed and expanded on bootlegging activities, later taking over and creating new fields. It was a costly national error.

North Carolina is not different. There is no inborn sanctity here, there is no lack of criminal element. Prohibition will mean a return to the lawless era, with the churches paradoxically and naively taking the lead.

Why this insistence on removal of vice from the vicinity of others? Do not movies, magazines, comic books cause as much or more sin as whiskey? What of the cigarette? Haven't ministers damned that in years gone by as an instrument of the devil? Has Baltimore, home of many whiskey distillers, ever had a strong Prohibition movement?

We realize the good motives the leaders of this movement have, but we doubt their judgment. Phohibition will not bring about a desirable decrease in sin, but will have the opposite effect, if history is a just criterion. If men want vice, they'll find it. The harder it is to find, the more it's wanted. Let's keep it where it is, under state supervision and doing some good for the upkeep of our educational system.

ACADEME, n. An ancient school where morality and philosophy were taught.

ADAGE, n. Boned wisdom for weak teeth.

ADHERENT, n. A follower who has not yet obtained all that he expects to get.

Reaction Begins

With Male-ice Toward None

Editor:

In the issue of February 2nd, Miss Mary Johnston proves herself to be a wonderful apologist for the coeds. Surely, after reading this article, no one could doubt the fact that the girls are all sweet, innocent things who came to the University only to study, and so contribute to its greater glory. It is possible that some doubting heretic might ask why it was that every weekend saw a mass exodus of men to Greensboro and Raleigh and Durham, and why one hears persistent rumors of three or four coeds on a floor having dates for a dance while the rest sit in their rooms and study (?). However, for daring to ask such a question he would be banished to Dook for life.

The ratio of 6 to 1 is unfortunate, but what makes it worse is the placing of coeds on a pedestal. We are always hearing of contests for Beauty Queen of this or Sweetheart of that or Miss something or other. With the ratio being what it is, the natural result is to make the coeds place a high value on this homage and require it in return for dates. A few less "Queens" and a few more coeds would help the situation no end.

Bill Stewart

Editor:

We wish to commiserate with the unjustly maligned Carolina Co-eds. The recent apologia by Miss Johnston tore our hearts. We had not realized that the reason that coeds refrained from greeting men they met on the campus was due to the excessive mental activity and concentration which accounts for the high grades made by the females. No, we had wrongly surmised that the aloofness of the "fairer sex" was due to more romanticized reasons.

Presented with the facts, we can but marvel at the low rate of scholastic disabilities incurred by the feminine portion of the student body. We had imagined that a higher rate of failures occurred during the first two years of college. Perhaps, the figures of the U. S. census have been misleading, but we were disposed to take such to be a factor in the higher percentage of scholastically-deficient males.

Somehow, we though that the $15 limit on coed dates was somewhat exaggerated. According to our most recent account, the minimun fee was posted around the $10 level. The date proposition also includes the embarrassment of having the coed kiss your car good-night, particularly white side - wall tires. This is especially irritating because it is difficult to shine a car marred with lipstick.

And then for those peasants not endowed with automotive means and the peons who are not of the fraternity strata, life still looks barren, even if a date must be made only two weeks in advance.

Perhaps the difficulties which have arisen could be eliminated if the coeds would condescend to speak to the men they met on campus without eyeing him as a prospective supporter for the rest of her natural life—in the way on which they would like to become accustomed.

In reply to Miss Johnston's article, "Seeking More Than Husbands", in the Daily Tar Heel of Feb. 2, we would like to make only one comment. Her statement comparing the scholastic averages of the sororities and the fraternities must have been dreamed up with little, or rather with no, forethought!

We wonder just how high the sororities' average would be if their class schedules read: Statistics, Accounting, Coroporation Finance, etc., rather than History, Archaeology, Sociology, etc.

Love In Heavy Industry

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON—My social secretary, Mrs. Tabitha Talcott Pratt, waddled in today with a rhapsodic beam on her rhapontic* pan and said, wasn't it wonderful about the resurgence of romance in Czechoslovakia?

When Tabby looks rapturous there is probably no spectacle on earth more repulsive. We shuddered, and tried to look away, but the old eyesore commanded our attention.

She rummaged around in a handbag, roomy enough to carry a couple of suckling pigs, and fished forth a newspaper clipping.

"Czechoslovakia," she burbled, "is fostering love in heavy industry!"

The clipping proved to be a poem stressing the close relationship between the tender passion and industrial production in the "people's democratic republic." Before we could smother her she began reciting this love lyric which tells of the meeting of a worker and his lady love at the factory gate:

"With her kiss, I heard the breathless question—

Whether the shock brigade in plant no. 2 had proclaimed its competition with no. 1—

'For there works Tony, and he has boasted

That he would wipe up the earth with you by his performance.

I only laughed at him, because I knew

That you are the best of all and that you can work

Until your bones crack in your body.'

And the young lover replied: 'We beat the record by 20 per cent.'

In his words there was love,

And there was no division between the good work and the good woman.

Until the blood boiled in my veins

To see her clasp him closely, starry-eyed,

'My dear boy, the best of them all!' "

When Tabby concluded, she glowed at us, her fat puss practically beatified. "Isn't that beautiful?" she heaved.

Miss Reid, who had been looking sort of stunned, pulled herself together with obvious effort.

"Simply adorable," agreed the dizzy damosel. "Why can't we bring something lovely like that to sorbid American business?"

I asked if she had any ideas. She put on a dreamy look, in horrid imitation of Mrs. Pratt, and said she could think of plenty if she only had music and soft lights from a blast furnace.

My senior Naval aide, Machinist's Mate Michelangelo Rembrandt Kelly, who is of a technical turn of mind, said: "How about this?"

"More than all great loves of fact and fable

"I love you like a coaxial cable."

* * *

Mr. Grover Whitney McKeister, the distinguished legislative consultant, agreed that Mr. Kelly's offering was lovely, but that the love-smitten worker might be inspired by a more factual motif. "Like," he added " 'My love contains only 23 per cent alloys.' "

"Here's an idea off'n the back of this there bottle," cut in Mr. Clarence W. (Slats) Rafferty, the retired safecracker. "The guy says to his doll: 'Sweetheart, my staright love for you is 36 months or more old: 27 per cent straight love; 73 per cent neutral spirit; 21 per cent straight love 36 months old; 6 per cent straight love 6 years old.' "

* * *

"I just thought of a wonderful title for a workers' song," said Miss Reid. " 'The kilowatt hours I spend with thee, dear heart. . .' "

"Naw," objected Machinist's Mate Kelly, "You want something lilting and old-fashioned like: 'Do you remember sweet Allis Chalmers, Ben Bolt?' "

"The Old South motif is always popular," said Miss Reid. "You know — the yearning kind. Like: "When it's high octane time, I'll come back to you, sweet Ethyl.' "

Mr. Rafferty said we got to have something for the heavy steel industry too.

"How about," he asked, "A piece where the fellow is saying to his tomato: 'Come leave us look at the slag pile by moonlight.' "

It means: *"Rhubarb."

Interesting and Tense Drama

By Jonathan Marshall

Last night the Carolina Playmakers presented "Inherit the Wind," by Gene McLain, before an enthusiastic audience in the Playmakers Theatre.

The play was the second full length experimental production written by a student to be given this season. The author, whose "Call Back Yesterday" was given last year, has written an interesting and tense drama with deep undertones, and it was superbly directed and acted.

The plot revolves around the efforts of a mother to possess her three daughters by preventing them from having any contact with the outside world. Slowly the daughters awaken to the fact that their mother is controlling every moment of their lives, and as they do so the play becomes more intense until they finally break the spell.

Tension mounted throughout the performance as the audience realized that there must be an escape. Perhaps the major criticism of "Inherit the Wind" is that the transitions between the dramatic and humorous scenes were too sudden, and it was sometimes difficult to grasp the change.

Unable to penetrate the mother's web by themselves, the daughters are finally shown the truth by their cousin, Jo, played by Anne Martin. Miss Martin acted with a power and assurance that were especially pleasing as it was her first stage appearance with the Playmakers.

The characters were well drawn, and their actions aptly suited their personalities. Each of the daughters was a distinct personality whose rebellion came in an individual way.

Edna Dooley's performance as daughter Natalie, the sensative and weak member of the family, was both sympathetic and mature, and she caught the subtle nuances of the part. This can also be said for Ruth Groce who played the frustrated older sister Emeline.

After the younger sister, Margaret had left the house, and Natalie had committed suicide, Miss Groce's power was especially felt as she completely dominated the mother, Josephine Sharkey. Miss Sharkey lacked the boldness that was necessary to present the mother in her true light, which detracted from the build up: and the character did not come out until her final scene with Miss Groce. The relationship between the mother and each of the other characters was basic to a good interpretation, and the lack of power detracted from the sympathy that the daughters should have received.

Betty Lokey, Margaret, gave a convincing performance, and was especially good in her drunk scene and her scene with the art critic—both of these scenes were played with a delicate humor. Gorden Argo, the art critic, provided a welcome male relief which eased the tension of the second act.

Much credit must be given to director Sam Hirsch for his intelligent and subtle interpretation. Both Mr. Hirsch and his technical staff were responsible, to a large degree for the mood and continuity of the play.

Monogram Dining-Room Hailed

Editor:

The recent articles inn the Daily Tar Heel aroused my curiosty, so I decided to find out if there were a basis for the criticism of our newest dining-room.

I knew before I had ever seen a menu I wasn't having dinner in Lenoir (thank heavens!), and so I didn't expect cut-rate prices, food, or service. Much to my pleasure, my Monogram special dinner, consisting of an appetizer, country-style steak, two vegetables, a salad, hot rolls and butter, plus my beverage, were mine for the reasonable amount of $1.00. I wonder just where else in such a dining-room I might eat a delicious meal for so little.

The atmosphere is tops, as it the music. Any complaints as to service are undoubtedly thoughtless, for with a little time anyone should realize the girls will improve.

We students have been wanting a really nice place to entertain our friends and families, and as for me—the Monogram dining room can't be beaten!

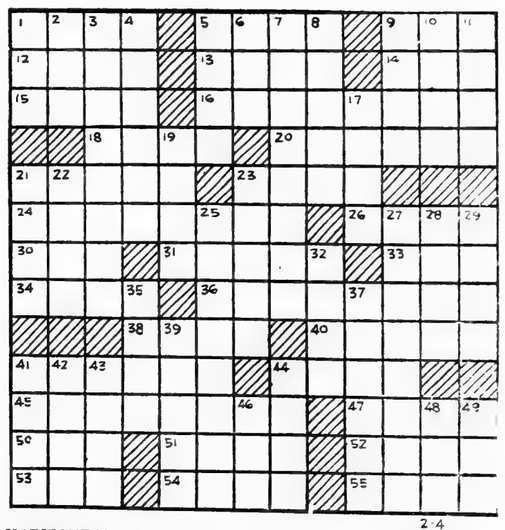
Some Tricks of Propaganda

Editor:

In reply to John J. Beshara's letter to the Daily Tar Heel, I'd like to point out that Mr. Beshara is arguing from an admittedly partisan viewpoint and that he appears to ignorea big passel of facts in putting over his argument. Proceeding from the point where he admits he's pro-Arab, Mr. Beshara seems not to be interested in getting at the facts, but only in showing that Zionism is "an expansionist, terroristic, racialist, pagan, aggressive totalitarian movement." To do this, he uses some tricks of propaganda that most of us wouldn't stoop to using.



One of these tricks is to get endorsement by dignified names. Mr. Beshara has found an archbishop in Cairo who charges that the Zionist movement is "a deliberate Jewish effort to decimate the Arabs and destroy Christianity in Palestine." But Bartley C. Crum, American member of the UN Palestine Commission and an eminent Catholic, has spent many months in Palestine since the fighting began and has reported at length on the treatment of holy places and churchmen in Israel. The Arabs have generally, almost consistently, destroyed synagogues and looted churches; the Israelis have been careful to put their MPs on guard at all churches and monasteries within their jurisdiction. Bartley Crum is not an obscure figure. He is an earnestly religious man, and his word is not to be laughed away.

Mr. Beshara's next little trick is not so simple. For this one he cites three unimpeachably dignified men, who offer an accurate description of the outfit called Irgun Zvai Leumi. Now few would deny that the Irgun is a violent gang similar in almost every respect to Hitler's storm troopers, but anyone who claims to be a student of Middle Eastern affairs should know that the Irgun is only a tiny splinter of the Zionist movement. Its members, in fact, call themselves Revisionists. They are fanatics, "direct actionists" like the American anarchists of thirty years ago. To say, as Mr. Beshara does, that the Irgun is Zionism is like saying that everything in bottles must be poison. The skull and crossbones of Irgun Zvai Leumi is not the emblem of the Zionist movement.

Mr. Beshara conveniently ignores the Altalena incident when a terrorist ship bringing arms to Israel was repulsed by the Israeli government in obedience to the UN truce agreement. The terrorists at that time came very close to waging open guerrilla warfare against the Israeli government. They simply do not consider themselves a part of that government—they have no representation in the cabinet—and the people of Israel look upon the terrorists as outlaws and perverts. I, for one, wouldn't like to see Al Capone and John Dillinger pointed out as representative Americans.

As Sumner Welles puts it, "There has been no greater tragedy in recorded history than that which the Jewish people have suffered during these past few years." Welles believes that "the one fitting compensations which humanity can offer the survivers of that tragedy" is the apportionment of Palestine between areas predominantly Jewish and areas the Arabs may rule as their own.

Publius Overlooks

PENSIVE PUBLIUS, who appears elsewhere in this paper from time to time, is a well-travelled man in his tedious tours of campus life and activities. But Publius, an off-hand thought would remind, has missed one of the University's outstanding activities in his journeys, a group that amazingly enough, has plenty of members. And piled upon this firm foundation of membership is a program of things to be done and the necessary sip-in-their-doo-da to do them.

What Publius is rubbing his eyes to behold, is not the local Captain Midnight society, but merely a group of deserving athletes bound together in what is called the Monogram club. Membership in this group, it will be remembered, is open to those who have proved themselves on the fields, courts, and courses of the University's varsity athletic program and who have been singled out for achievement in their efforts.

But the Monogrammers don't stop there. The feeling at many colleges today is that the star athletes of the school are a gang of gentlemen brought into college captivity for the purpose of giving it's all for the dear old Blue and White. That's the myth the local fathermen have been out to disprove with their activities in the past years that have absorbed and benefited both the campus and the surrounding communities.

Because of a Cause

A STRIKING EXAMPLE of the Monogram activity was this week's variety athletic show at Woollen which saw a host of letter owners run, tumble, clown, and maul so that some less unfortunates might some day be able to enjoy these freedoms of a sound body. Charity events have not been the limit of this active body. Though the use of constant contact the present Monogrammers have held much with those who brought glory to Carolina in the past and those at hand are continued hosts to their returning brethern.

Each year the Club sponsors the Blue-White football game which gives Tar Heel fans an advance look at Carolina grid prospects. The Monogrammers do not limit themselves to participation in activities of their own origin. A Monogram entry in any beauty or Miss Something contest is always a winner or near-winner, backed by a group that hates to lose in any kind of competition.

The Monogram club has made many of its greater strides in the past few years under the leadership of such as Len Szafaryn, Bill Pritchard and Gus Johnson. The elimination of major and minor letters depending on the size of the sport taken part in was another step towards the strengthening of the club. Now housed in its comfortable, controversial home beyond the lower quadrangle, the Club looks for new plans and new horizions.

Yet, truly the main purpose of the Monogram club is to honor those who have athletically honored Carolina. And what the Monogram symbolizes would seem best told in the crisp phrases of the little known code of the organization:

The Monogram Code

I BELIEVE in the University, her traditions, her standards of scholarship, her devotion to sound, clean manhood.

I believe in the game. It challenges my courage, and tests my skill. It teaches me patience and self-control. It requires me at times to "takes it on the chin" and get up with a smile, ready and eager for more. It does not tolerate wrangling or jealousies or abilis. It expects me to be fit in body and mind, and to keep fit by building sound and efficient mental and physical habits. It rewards intelligent and unwearied drive and condemns sloppiness, haphazardness, laziness, and loafing. It is a man's game, built solely for courageous, laziness, clean, and intelligent men.

I realize and assume my duty as a monogram man. The University has trained me and built its schedules counting on me. I pledge my best to stay in school, to continue participation in the game, to keep in training to give my best, to work always for greater excellence. I will strive to be a better athlete each successive year.

I realize my personal responsibility for the attitudes and the standards of the successive generations of athletes who are coming up at Carolina, for the standards of sportsmanship among all students and not just among athletes, for the good or bad repute in which the people on the outside hold Carolina athletes. As a wearer of the "NC" I will at all times remember and fulfill my duties in keeping our standards and reputation high and spotless.

I want to be deserving, not asking handouts. I want to win my place because I am the best man, not by waiting until a better man graduates and I attain it by right of succession. I want to meet non-athletes in the classroom on even terms without thought of favors, for after all I am at college to get an education and make a man of myself. I engage in sports for the lone of the game and the glory of the school, and if I have a job on the outside I want to secure it and keep it because I am a good workman.

I believe in victory. The scoreboard is an incident. Victory is in the heart. It is born in the hard, clean fight. It is the consciousness that I have done my best.

I will fight for the University's glory until the last sound of the whistle.

Batterymen Begin Daily Drills

With several pitchers and catchers scheduled for practice in the Tin Can each day, baseball practice for varsity batterymen candidates from last year's varsity and jayvee teams began Monday. Other battery candidates will be called for practice Feb. 15.

Coach Walter Raab said yesterday that varsity infielders and outfielders will be called for practice around Feb. 21. The exact date will be dependent on the weather. Practice thus far is consisting of conditioning exercises, running and easy throwing.

Veteran pitchers who are practicing now are Co-captain Ray Blair, Tommy Andrew, Dean Cassell, and George Whittig of last year's varsity. Jayvee pitchers working out now are Bill McGinn, the only southpaw on the squad, Ralph Brake, and Doc Gaston.

All freshman interested in playing will begin practice sometime in March.

During spring vacation the team will make a trip to Florida to play the University of Florida and the Jacksonville Naval Air Station.

Coach Bunn Hearn is due to return to Chapel Hill around February 15.

Duke, State Trackmen Here For Two-day Indoor Meet

By Frank Allston, Jr.

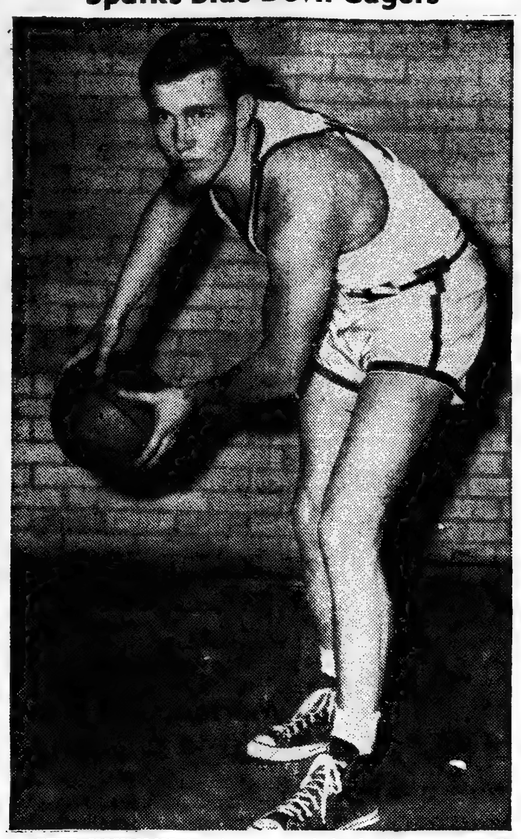
The Carolina indoor track team will act as host to the runners from Duke and N. C. State in a two-day meet in the Tin Can starting this afternoon at 2 o'clock Action on the boards will continue tomorrow afternoon.

Duke will be bringing their complete team over and will have both varsity and freshman performers. State will have several entrants, but not a complete team. No official score will be kept for this meet.

Coach Dale Ranson said yesterday that the coaches have not decided whether the freshman and varsity performers will compete together. A decision will not be reached until the field of entries is compiled before the meet today.

First of Two Meets

This week-end's meet will mark the first of two meets with the neighboring institutions before the Maryland meet and the Southern conference indoor meet on February 19 and 26 respectively. There will be another meet with Duke and State next week-end.



The Tar Heels will be strong in several fields tomorrow. Carolina has top knotch men in both the high and low hurdles, the high jump, the broad jump and in several of the distance events.

Carolina Hurdle Stars

In the hurdles Carolina will have vets Dick Taylor and Bob Morrow and 23-year old freshman Bill Albans. Taylor pushed Harrison Dillard, outdoor high hurdle champ and Olympic sprint gold medalist, to a new indoor delphia Inquirer meet inootttt 60-yard high record at the Philadelphia Inquirer meet in Philadelphia and reached the semi-finals at the Milrose games in Madison Square Garden. Morrow reached the finals in the Star—District AAU meet at Washington.

Albans, who high jumped to a record 6 ft. 5 in. victory over Olympic star Dave Albritton at Washington will lead a trio of outstanding high jumpers against the Devil and Wolfpack boardmen. Conference indoor champ Jack Moody and outdoor champ Billy Joyner will also be on hand.

Sparks Blue Devil Cagers

CEEP YOUMANS has been one of the leading men on the Duke cage team all year, and is currently number one man in the Blue Devil scoring column with a total of 170 points.

Hardwooders Drill For Saturday Tilt With Blue Devils

Wednesday night's exciting Wake Forest win over the big bad Wolfpack of State college proved to North Carolina fans that form sheets can be thrown to the winds as far as Big Five athletic competition is concerned. Although Duke will be coming to Chapel Hill tomorrow night with a better record so far this season, the Carolina squad should be rated even with them.

Duke has just come back from a trip to Annapolis, where they seemed to have had an easy time of subdueing Navy. Tonight, however, things look very different, for over in Duke's Indoor Staduim was the Violets of New York University will be strutting their stuff against the underdog Blue Devils. The Violets, as Tar Heel fans well remember, are quite the thing up in the Metropolitan area, and should have little trouble in taking care of Duke.

With the Carolina-Duke game coming up tomorrow night, the Blue Devils will have only Saturday morning to concentrate on the Carolina game and it is doubtful that they will have a workout then. Meanwhile, the Tar Heels, who have been idle since the disasterous trip westward, have had four days to work up some special tricks for the Durhamites.

According to the basketball barometer, the Tar Heels should have a good night, especially after the cool Knoxville air. Ever since the William and Mary game last Jan. 20, the Carolina courtmen have alternated regularly at winning and losing ball games.

Five National Champs to Pace OSU Against Carolina Saturday

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

Columbis, O., Feb. 3—With the University of North Carolina swimming squad still enroute to Columbus and not due to arrive until early tomorrow morning, the undefeated Ohio State Buckeyes continued drills for their meet with the likewise unbeaten Tar Heels this Saturday afternoon.

The five national champions on the squad have been sparking the OSU mermen, who are favored to turn the tide most decidedly in favor of Ohio State.

For the Buckeyes present a well-rounded attack, added to by the brilliance of such stars as Bill Smith, Halo Hirose, Bob DeGoot, Bruce Harlan, Hobbie Billingsly, and Ralph Knight.

Holds Distance Records

Smith, who holds freestyle records in almost every distance event has only been beaten once in several years and that defeat came when he attempted to swim in a 1500-memer event.

The big freestyler holds world and Olympic records in the 220, 440, and 880 and will swim in three events for the Buckeyes, the 220, 440, and anchor leg for the 400-yard relay team. Smith won the 400-meter championship in the Olympics this summer while swimming the best 200 meters as anchor man for the victorious American 800-meter relay team.

Another freestyle champion is Hirose, who specializes in the shorter distances. Hirose, who is 26 now, was the national outdoor sprint champion at 14 and was the NCAA 100-yard champion in 1946.

Backstroker Bob DeGroot took the national AAU title in that event in 1947, but he isn't the only star backstroker for the Buckeyes. Knight was third in the AAU's last year.

Heads Diving Corps

Head of the almost legendary Ohio State diving corps is Harlan, who has copped almost every honor that his teammate, the equally famous Miller Anderson hasn't captured.

Harlan also won an Olympic title for the United States in London this summer by triumphing in the three-meter diving competition.

Tar Babies Defeat Belmont Abbey By Score of 61-31

By Lew Chapman

After looking extremely bad in their last two outings, the Carolina freshmen cagers snapped out of their doldrums last night in Woollen gym to soundly wallop Belmont Abbey Junior college by the breezy score of 61-31.

The starting lineup that had disappointed Coach Jim Hamilton against Davidson and Campbell JC finally clicked in last night's clash and it was all Carolina from the opening tip-off. Per usual the yearlings prolific scorer, Dick Harter, cashed in on the first points of the fray with an early twisting layup and the Tar Babies were off. Harter, slim John Bowersox and bespectaled Frank Redding, starting at center in place of the injured Lenny Guyes, paced the frosh to a comfortable 18-4 lead before the visitors could deuce their first field goal after 17 minutes of the first half had elapsed. At this spot, Coach Hamilton sent in most of his reserves but the second string still maintained a 28-12 intermission lead.

The Tar Babies terrific pace showed no signs of chilling in the second period, as forward Frank Eckert, scoreless in the first half, hit for 10 markers to lead his mates to an even more fruitful second half. The freshmen notched 38 points in the final stanza to double their opponents' total, and won their eighth victory of the campaign going away.

The lineup:

Carolina (66)	Pos.	(31) B. Abbey
Harter 15	f	Leftwich 16
Eckert 10	f	Porvaznik 2
Redding 8	c	Jones 4
Bowersox 11	g	Cenula 4
Chseek 10	g	Fletcher, B. 1

Score at half: Carolina 28, Belmont Abbey 12.

Substitutions: Carolina: Smith (1), Hill, Barr (3), Reuning (2), Godwin (1). Belmont Abbey: Fletcher, D. (3), Bowen (1), Handon, Rohr.

1949 Gridiron Schedule Is Announced By Fetzer

University Athletic director R. A. Fetzer yesterday announced the 1949 Tar Heel football schedule, with Notre Dame and South Carolina replacing Maryland and Texas on this year's slate.

"Coach Bob" Fetzer added that neither Texas nor Maryland has been permanently dropped. He stated that the Texas series would be resumed in 1951, and that games are already definitely scheduled with Maryland in 1950 and 1951.

Fetzer said that Maryland was dropped this year because a substitute date could not be arranged after Terrapin officials had "generously" released the Tar Heels from the original date next fall. The switch was made in order to enable Carolina to squeeze mighty Notre Dame onto its already-tough slate.

Every team on the Tar Heel schedule is expected to be as tough or tougher than last year, but the initial meeting with the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame in New York's famed Yankee stadi- battle for state supremacy T um will probably be the highlight of the season. Duke and Wake Forest can be counted upon to provide a pair of tough games in the battle for state supremacy, and William and Mary, Tennessee, and Georgia are always strong.

The complete schedule follows:

Sept. 24—North Carolina State at Chapel Hill.

Oct. 1—Georgia at Chapel Hill; 8—South Carolina at Columbia; 15—Wake Forest at Chapel Hill; 22 Louisiana State at Baton Rouge; 29 Tennessee at Chapel Hill.

Nov. 5—William and Mary at Williamsburg; 12—Notre Dame at New York; 19—Duke at Durham; 26—Virginia at Chapel Hill.

Town Team Wins

One contender for the Intramural handball championship was determined Wednesday night when a powerful team representing Town 1 shutout Old West 3-0, thus shutout Old West in the dormitory final 3-0 thus gaining the right to meet the winner of the fraternity loop next week for the all-important campus game.

TMA Party to Be At Supper Club Tonight at 7:30

The scheduled Town Mens' association party for tonight will be held at the Terrace View supper club, association officials announced at the TMA regular meeting yesterday.

Members will assemble in front of Graham memorial at 7:30 tonight, Nelson Taylor, TMA president said, and those who have no ride to the club will be transported there.

Funds drawn from the association's treasury will finance the party, Taylor said, and will supply the members with refreshments, a floor show and dancing.

"We are expecting every member of TMA to show up," Taylor said, "we want this party to be a successful gathering of all town men. There will be a slight assessment to supplement our treasury appropriation."

Graham heads the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Research, an organization to promote research among Southern universities.

Hebert said Graham claimed to have joined the alleged Communist-front organizations "to defend civil rights and freedom of speech," and asked, "Is Dr. Graham that simple-minded?"

"I do not suppose Dr. Graham is a Communist or Red agent," He continued. "But it is disgraceful that a man in so great a position should so conduct himself that he cannot be trusted in any situation involving his country."

Hebert said the Atomic commission's security officer and Loyalty board had ruled Graham "a bad security risk."

"The gravity of this situation is actually increased," Hebert went on, "by the fact that David Lilienthal, whose own views and sympathies have been called in question, prevailed upon this board and against the opinion of his own security offices . . . and admitted Graham to these atomic secrets."

Bulldozer Operation Continues to Rescue

CHICAGO, Feb. 3—(UP)—The world's biggest bulldozer operation has rescued almost 5,000 persons and 150,000 head of livestock from the snow mountains of the frozen west, the Army announced today in reporting a new fear—epidemic disease.

THE BALMY CITY of San Antonio, Texas, suddenly became a winter play land as freezing temperatures and a record five-inch snowfall blankets the area. Braving the elements, Joan Dix, 16, dons her bathing suit and Texas boots to toss a snowball at the weather man—if she can find him.

New Army System Of Court-Martial Is Tried at Bragg

FT. BRAGG, Feb. 3—(UP)—Four veteran sergeants sat on the General court-martial of another GI here today, in the first reported airing of the "new look" in Army justice.

Army authorities believed it was the first time in the United States that an enlisted man was tried by his equals.

The sergeants and five officers made up the court hearing testimony against a 19-year-old recruit accused of escaping from confinement. They handed him a stiff six-months hard labor sentence, and fined him $50 a month for six months.

The new Army system of justice giving enlisted men the right to ask for trial by other enlisted men as well as officers went into effect Tuesday. Recruit Rudy F. Johnson was the first man known to be tried under the "new look" court, authorities said.

The board for his trial was picked from some 150 officers and enlisted men who attended a judge-advocate's school here and qualified to sit on court-martial.

The board found Johnson guilty by a two-thirds vote in a secret ballot. Another ballot fixed the sentence and fine. However, the new system provides that the penalty is subject to higher approval before taking effect.

TEP to Dedicate Scholarship Cup To S. P. Brooks

Members of Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity have dedicated a scholarship cup to the memory of their brother, Sidney P. Brooks, student from Warsaw, who was killed in an automobile accident in Raleigh last spring. The announcement of the establishment of the cup was made at ceremonies here attended by members of Brooks' family.

Dean of Awards Ernest L. Mackie of the University presented the Phi Beta Kappa key which Brooks had earned in his final quarter at the University to Brooks' sister, Mrs. D. Solomon, of Richmond, Va. Brooks was killed on his way home from the University following final examinations last spring.

Dave Arner of Wilson, University alumnus and former member of TEP, opened the ceremonies with an eulogy of Brooks.

Characterizing Brooks as a "man with a vital capacity for friendship, warmth, and human understanding, and a tremendous desire for knowledge," Arner suggested a re-dedication to these ideals of friendship and scholarship.

Dean Mackie then gave a summary of Brooks' grades, none of which was below a "B", and presented the Phi Beta Kappa key, which Brooks had been awarded posthumously in the official ceremonies held last quarter.

Fred Morrison, Nat Townsend, Ward Lattin and Thomas Bedow, the decision of the court today seems to definitely assure that in the near future our people will begin to receive the benefit of the Ackland Memorial Art museum.

"Through the years to come, the people of North Carolina and the South will pay tribute to Mr. Ackland's vision and generosity. The University acknowledges this benefaction and expresses its deep gratitude to its devoted son, Oliver Max Gardner, for his unselfish and untiring services, for which he and his firm have refused to accept any compensation.

"When this splendid gift finally comes to Chapel Hill, the University will accept its responsibilities in all humility and will carry out the letter and spirit of Mr. Ackland's will."

Marsan, 'Ze Great Franch Lovair,' Gets 90 Day Jail Term in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 3—(UP)—Claude Marsan, "Ze great Franch Lovair," today was handed a 90 day jail sentence, two years probation, and a sound bawling out by the judge.

The dapper Frenchman, who invaded this country to reform "Lousee American lovairs," was told that hereafter he'll have to watch his step.

"I want to make an example of you," said Municipal Judge Harold Schweitzer. "Too many people think you can get away with anything in California, and particularly in Hollywood."

Barbara Weir, the 24-year-old Model Marsan used a little too realistically in his lectures on the three-hour way to make love, was given a 30-day suspended jail sentence, a $50 fine plus two years probation.

Marsan's sentence was the stiffest the judge could give on the two charges of contributing in and giving a lewd lecture in a saloon annex Nov. 19. Schweitzer howled along with a packed courtroom when Marsan repeated his spicy lecture during his sensational three-day trial, but today the judge was stern.

"Every citizen is guaranteed free speech, but there is a time and place for everything," he said, while Marsan stood, grim and silent.

"I am not opposed to sex education. That never has been an issue in this case. Neither has the medical soundness of your theories.

"But the jury ruled you performance was lewd, the lecture was a daring and intimate even newspapers could not publish most of it. I don't feel any doctor in the privacy of his office would say a word of your words to a married couple.

"To Miss Weir he said: "I have sympathy for you. You are like many American girls who are attracted by the bright lights of Hollywood and in order to make ends meet some time slip."

is a definite need for them." He continued, "The labor movement does not grow to take in dues for a union or to give workers a mere feeling of power. The worked has a definite need to have a voice in his own wages, his working conditions, and in any mistreatment he may suffer while working.

"Without a union, he has no voice. He has to take what his bosses want to give him. And when any type of arbitration is used, he has to abide by what his employer considers a fair decision."

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Feb. 3—(UP)—Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, Roman Catholic Primate Hungary, denied today that he ever participated in a plot to overthrow the Hungarian government but said, "I am guilty in principle and in detail to most of the accusations made."

Hospitalization For GI Families Is Over, VA Says

The Veterans administration will not provide hospitalization and outpatient treatment for veterans families, Wilson Honeycutt public law 16 veterans adviser, announced yesterday.

Many wives of veterans were treated by Army and Navy doctors while their husbands were in the service. But when their husbands were released from military service, medical treatment by service physicans was terminated.

Ex-service men and women only are authorized VA medical treatment in the following cases: if they are suffering from service-incurred injuries, if unable to pay hospital charges, or in emergency cases.

Outpatient treatment is available only for veterans with service connected disabilities. Each veteran's eligibility must be determined by VA before treatment can be authorized.

NORTH STATE ROUNDUP

To Take Oath

CHARLOTTE, Feb. 4—(UP)—Western North Carolina's new federal district judge will be sworn in Feb. 12. Wilson Warlick of Newton will receive his oath of office from Senior Judge John J. Parker of the Fourth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Identifies Suspect

MARSHALL, Feb. 4—(UP)—Sheriff Hubert Davis said today he had identified a suspect who allegedly fired into a loaded school bus in an attempt to halt the vehicle. Davis did not name the man but said he had alerted Virginia and Tennessee police to be on the lookout.

Ballot Burning

TRYON, Feb. 4—(UP)—A man convicted of burning general election ballots last Nov. 2 faced five years probation today. Ray Johnson was found guilty in Polk county court of interfering with election procedure at the Saluda polls last fall.

Too Much Paint

GREENSBORO, Feb. 4—(UP)—They just had to ask the 18-year-old German youth who came here last week to study sociology that old standby:

What do you think of American coeds?

Cautiously, young Wilhelm Anders, of Breslau, Germany, paused to think it over. Finally, in his careful English, he whispered:

"Too much paint."

Wilhelm is a student at Guilford college, an institution recommended by the Quakers to Germans intending to study in the United States.

Southerners Hit New GOP Move

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(UP)—Southern Democratic senators today asked, and promptly received, support of Senate Democratic leaders against a Republican move to speed up action on anti-filibuster legislation.

Chairman Scott W. Lucas (D-Ill.) of the Senate Democratic Policy committee, said all Senate Democrats will be asked to oppose the GOP move when they caucus tomorrow.

The issue is a motion by Sen. William F. Knowland (R.-Cal.) to debate the anti-filibuster issue at once without waiting for the Senate Rules committee to act. The motion comes up Monday.

Lucas called it "a purely political move" and an "insult" to the Rules committee which has put off action on new "gag" rules until next Wednesday.

He said he favors legislation to cut off overlong debate, but is against by-passing the Rules committee. "I don't think many Republicans will support the motion. . . unless they want to play politics," Lucas added.

Local Hospital Gets Approval For Federal Aid

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—Final approval has been given by the United States Public Health service for construction of hospitals in Chapel Hill and Burlington with federal financial assistance, Rep. Carl T. Durham said today.

Durham said he had been informed by Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele that the Public Health service had approved federal aid amounting to $1,500,000, to be paid in three annual installments beginning this year, for construction of the University of North Carolina hospital at Chapel Hill. The hospital, estimated to cost $5,290,000, will have a 318-bed capacity.

Tentative approval of the allotments had been announced earlier, but Scheele said the granting of final approval would enable sponsors of the hospitals to begin drawing up plans and specifications for them.

Paramount Asks Playmaker Script

Gene McLain, author of "Inherit the Wind," yesterday received a wire from the New York representative of Paramount pictures corp. asking for a copy of the play to consider its possibilities for a movie treatment.

Tuesday's New York Times drama page carried a notice of the premiere of the play which was produced by the Carolina Playmakers last Wednesday and Thursday.

The wire was sent to the playwright in care of the Carolina Playmakers and was read to the capacity audience Thursday night before the show opened.

Too Hot to Handle

Quick-Thinking Middle-Ager Risks Life, Moves Dynamite

PAOLI, Ind., Feb., 4—(UP)—Robert Goforth had only a second or two to decide how to save the lives of a lot of people.

Goforth had a case containing 25 sticks of dynamite in the rear of his jeep when he pulled up at a gas station here yesterday.

The dynamite was used by his employers, the C. & D. Construction company of Louisville, Ky., to blast holes for utility poles.

Station attendant Earl Lane, Jr., was pumping gasoline into the jeep's under-the-hood intake when the fuel ignited, apparently from a battery spark.

The jeep caught fire and the flames spread rapidly toward the dynamite.

Goforth thought fast. There wasn't any chance to get the explosive out of the jeep. He could run and save his own life. Maybe he could yell to Lane and they could both run.

In either case the dynamite would explode, setting off the service station's gasoline tanks. Nearby houses, where residents were asleep or eating breakfast, would be set afire.

Goforth, who is middle-aged, leaped into the jeep, started the engine and threw it into gear. The jeep roared down the street 100 feet to a point where the explosion could not set any houses on fire.

Goforth barely got clear before the dynamite blew up. The jeep was destroyed. But the blast only shattered a few windows and knocked down plaster in nearby homes.

Senate Hears Bill To Boost Trustees

RALEIGH, Feb. 4—(UP)—The State Senate today received a bill to add 40 trustees to the University of North Carolina and spread the membership of the Board of Trustees evenly over the state.

Sen. Henry McKinnon of Lumberton introduced a measure to give the board 140 members, 15 of them women. They would be picked by joint ballot of the legislature.

Present law sets the board at 100 members, 12 of them women.

Under McKinnon's measure, 120 members would be elected from various counties, distributed on the same basis as the state's 120 representatives. The other 20 would be picked from the state at large.

Staggered terms of the new board would begin next July 1, and thereafter members would be elected to eight-year terms.

The Senate and House adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, when only local bills will be considered.

Meanwhile, North Carolina public schools wanted the legislature to increase their budget by a whopping $102,899,000 for the next two fiscal years.

That request probably represented the biggest single problem the legislators would be called upon to handle during the entire 1949 session.

The request for additional school money dwarfed the total of all other requests presented to the joint Appropriations committee to date.

It was like asking for $1 to go with ever $1.65 the Advisory Budget commission had planned to give the schools.

Biggest single item educators asked was a $50,000.000 permanent improvement appropriation for state aid to school construction. It was in line with recommendations made following the exhaustive study of the State Education commission.

Funds to establish the salary scale recommended by the Board of Education and the State Education commission accounted for $39,683,000 of the requested boost. That money would provide a $2,400 minimum and a $3,600 top salary for teachers holding "A" certificates, together with proportionate increases for other teachers, principals and superintendents.

For the purchase of new school buses by the state to expand the school bus fleet, the educators asked $2,100,000.

Among other sections of the plea were requests for an additional $1,100,000 for vocational

Six Schools Will Attend Forum Here

Coed Government To Be Discussed

Six Southern colleges have accepted invitations to attend a forum on women's student government to be held here Feb. 25 and 26, Edie Knight, chairman of the forum committee, announced yesterday.

Sponsored by Coed senate, the forum will have about 50 delegates, Edie said. Colleges which have accepted are Sweet Briar, Hollins, St. Mary's, Woman's College, Queens, and Duke. Replies from 11 other schools which have been invited are expected in the near future.

Dr. James Wood, former president of Stephens college and a well-known figure in the field of women's education, will present the keynote address for the conference at a mass meeting Friday afternoon, which will be compulsory for University women.

Delegates will attend workshops Saturday to discuss such topics as enforcement of social rules, honor systems, all-girl entertainment, extra-curricular activities, faculty-student relationships and orientation and officer training.

Other features of the conference will include informal recreation, sightseeing and a banquet at the Carolina Inn.

Members of the planning committee include Joan Lucas, in charge of registration; Sue Stokes, housing and entertainment; Bobbie Lowe, finance; Fran Angas, program; Emily Ogburn, food; Gussie Young, recording secretary, and Mary Anne Daniel, corresponding secretary.

Charles Davis Talks To Jaycee Members

Charles Davis, superintendent of Chapel Hill schools, spoke at Thursday night's meeting of the Chapel Hill Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Davis said that the facilities for the local schools were not sufficient to meet the growing needs. Specifically he said that there were not enough rooms for the classes in the elementary grades now, and with the expected increase in school children during the next year or two it would be almost impossible to hold classes in the now existing space.

He added that he believed the county commission would take the matter up in a bond issue.

School Paper Drive Planned Tomorrow

A paper drive sponsored by Chapel Hill high school will occur tomorrow afternoon beginning at 1:30. Collections will be made from the curb, and everyone is requested to leave old paper in front of their home.

Administration Silent On Saturday Classes

Trustee Cobb Says Faculty Downed Plan

Weekly Story Is 'Unofficial'

Administration officials refused to comment yesterday on a "completely unofficial" news story in the Chapel Hill Weekly which said the University would definitely not institute Saturday classes, but a member of the Board of Trustees admitted that a joint faculty-administration committee had disapproved of the plan.

Trustee Collier Cobb said last night, "It is completely unofficial that the University will not have Saturday classes. Members of the faculty and administration met with the visiting committee of the Board of Trustees and presented views.

"They thought that Saturday classes would be unwise. I am not in a position to say what the committee will recommend to the Board of Trustees."

The Weekly article said the visiting committee, chairmanned by Victor Bryant of Durham, voted unanimously one week ago yesterday to accept the faculty-administration report against Saturday classes. The headline

Art Exhibition In Person Hall To Begin Today

Person hall art gallery will feature the 12th Annual Exhibition of North Carolina artists in both the large and small galleries today through Feb. 27.

Sponsored by the North Carolina State Art society, this year's exhibition will include some 85 works—oils, water colors, drawings and sculpture.

The exhibit was judged by a jury consisting of Hobson Pittman and Isabel Bishop, noted painters, and Alonzo Lansford, associate editor of the "Art Digest." The first appearance of the display was in the state art gallery in Raleigh, Dec. 1.

John Rembert, assistant professor in the Art department, was awarded a purchase prize of $200 for his painting, "By the Wind Grieved." His wife, Jenny, also represented in the present exhibit, last year won a similar purchase award.

Other Chapel Hill artists represented in the show are Ben Williams, sculpture, Arnita Joyner, Joseph Bolt, Marianne Manasse, J. Louis Cobb, Archie Daniels and Paul Sink.

Association Grants $30,000 for Study

A grant of $30,000 by the Southern Association Cooperative Study in Elementary Education to continue elementary educational work in the South was announced yesterday by H. Arnold Perry, association chairman.

The association met here recently to plan a summer elementary education conference this year.

The date was set for June 27, 28, and 29. Visiting speakers and conference leaders from throughout the nation will appear on the program.

Dean Guy B. Phillips and Dorothy McCluskey of the University School of Education attended the meeting.

Art Department Heads Laud Ackland Decision

By Margaret Gaston

Officials from the University Art department yesterday expressed extreme satisfaction about the latest court decision to place the Ackland Memorial Art building at the University.

"The art building will mean a great deal to progress in art on campus and to the whole South," John Alcott, head of the art department, said yesterday. "This museum is very much needed, and could not have come to the University for a long time, if ever, from the state."

Alcott said the Ackland trustees made the initial recommendation that the University be the site of the memorial on the basis of a comparative study of the two campuses involved. Officials from the art department made a presentation to the trustees of the work already done in the department as well as future plans.

Dr. Clemens Sommer, professor of art history, said the gift was a tremendous boost for the department. He said definitely that interest in art would increase as well as enrollment in the department.

Sommer said that activities of the department could be centralized in the building, which would be a tremendous improvement over the present set-up.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia awarded approximately $1,500.000 to the University for the construction of an art museum under the terms stated in William Ackland's will.

Ackland died in 1940, leaving his entire estate, valued at approximately $1,500,000, for the establishment of a museum of fine arts. Duke university was offered the museum, but refused to accept it. Since that time the Ackland heirs, Rollins college in Florida and the University have fought in court for the possession of the money for the museum. Thursday, Justice Wilber Miller reversed a previous decision that granted the bequeath to Rollins college, and held that the site of the museum would be at the University.

Ackland's will specified that the museum should contain his personal belongings and effects. The location was to be a college campus and the interior was to shelter, in addition to objects of art, a marble sarcophagus in which his remains would rest beneath a recumbent statue.

Aldermen Put OK on Transfer Of Jury Trials

Proposal Subject To State Approval

In a special session Thursday night, the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen passed a proposal which would transfer jury trials from Judge Henry Whitfield's local Recorders court to Superior court in Hillsboro.

The proposal is subject to approval by the North Carolina legislature before it can go into effect, Town Manager Gilbert Ray said yesterday.

Ray also reported as result of action by the board, he will appear before a meeting of the Orange county commissioners on Monday to request that school taxes be collected by the county instead of the city.

Previously, school taxes were collected for this area at town hall. Ray said that some confusion has resulted from people living outside the city limits who have been accustomed to paying their taxes here.

J. T. Gobbel of the Chapel Hill bank will accompany Ray when he meets with the commissioners.

Play Competition Deadline Is Today

The close of the production contest of the Carolina Dramatic association has been announced for today by John W. Parker, executive secretary.

So far 20 groups have registered for the CDA festival to be held here March 23-26.

Appearing in one-act plays will be representatives from Durham, Raleigh, Winston-Salem, Salisbury, Rocky Mount, Asheville, Charlotte, Goldsboro, Hickory, Laurinburg, Hendersonville, and Gastonia.

The Betty Smith original play award has attracted 33 new short plays. In addition, two long plays and a new symphonic drama have been submitted for the Playmaker award. Mrs. Paul Green, Kai Jurgensen and Walter Pritchard Eaton will judge the entries.

Nine Miles in 114

Golfer, Pianist Earn Money For Campaign the Hard Way

By United Press

A cross-country golfer and a marathon pianist turned their novel labors into more than $1,300 for North Carolina's March of Dimes yesterday.

The long-distance linksman Dugar Aycock, who putted and plowed the nine miles from Lexington to Thomasville in 114 strokes.

In Charlotte Jerry Ball took over a downtown store window and played a piano all day, charging $1 per tune from the shopping crowds.

Dugan, a veteran pro, chose his cross-country course from an airplane and set out with a dozen balls and six caddies at 8:10 in the morning. Five hours after he left downtown Lexington he had made it to the ninth green of the Thomasville Country club.

The Carolinas PGA president charged $1 per guess with prizes donated by civic organizations going to those who most nearly predicted his score. One of the guesses said it would take 2.265 strokes to cover the nine miles down highways, over fields, through woods and across railroad tracks.

Total proceeds will exceed $500, he said today.

The Charlotte pianist charged his listeners $1 for every tune he could play on request and himself $1 for each one he didn't know. It cost the crowd $801 and Ball $23—All of which went today to the March of Dimes.

Chapel Hill Choral Group Wants Chorus Voices for Mass by Bach

A special drive to obtain a chorus of 200 voices for a performance of the Bach Mass in B minor was announced yesterday by the Chapel Hill choral club.

The performance of the Bach oratorio is scheduled for commencement week, as part of the regular annual activities of the choral club, which is made up of citizens of Chapel Hill and surrounding communities and of students and faculty of the University. Paul Young, associate professor of music, is director.

Mrs. G. A Harrer, president of the choral club, said that since the Bach Mass presents an unusual opportunity for a chorus, a special effort is being made to see that all potential members know of the project.

First rehearsal for the B Minor Mass will be held in Hill hall at 7:30 Monday evening.

Gripe From Lower Quad

The Daily Tar Heel has received an amusing and unprintable letter about conditions in the lower quad. It seems that a student there desires to study, especially in the evening. Since the other alleged students cannot be accused of such motives, he has objections to their activities.

In sharp, clear Anglo-Saxon phrases, he states several regrettable items. The moronic element have regressed to the firecracker stage and often hold explosive get-togethers in the quad. The advanced moronic element get gloriously potted at near-by sinks of iniquity and roar up in their cars blowing a variety of horns. Everybody else just sits around and shoots the bull in loud, penetrating voices. Our correspondent has a word for it—but we are a family newspaper.

He attacks the library as a campus social center and gossip factory, and rules that out as a retreat. His studies are shallow and tortured, his sleep is shot, his nerves are going! What to do?

We could say a lot and reprove the errant lower quad ders, but it's no use. The idiot percentage seems to be high there, if all this is true, so the only solution is to move to quieter surroundings. Just where, we don't know. The other dorms do seem a bit more orderly, but then we may have developed a callous indifference to the foibles of our fellow-men. So move west, young man—or puncture your eardrums!

Prospect Is Encouraging

The news that this year's graduating class will include more teachers than any since 1930, is encouraging for North Carolina education. Expectations of even more graduates in 1950 indicates that the increase is a growing trend and not just a spurt due to the unusual size of the post-war student body.

There are several likely reasons for this up-swing of interest in secondary education. At last it appears that teaching pay is going to be made commensurate with the cost of the necessary training. Also the profession has an important advantage over law, medicine or other crowded fields; no starvation period has to be spanned. At the end of the first month, the first pay-check is received. And now that the old argument to the effect that the entire career of a teacher is one long starvation period will no longer be valid, more college students will turn to this field and the disgusting spectacle of North Carolina graduates migrating to other states to teach will cease.

Norway Shows Courage

In view of its proximity to Russia, Norway's intention of joining the Atlantic powers or at least of refusing to submit to any Russian claims for bases is a mark of courage. The small Scandinavian country shares a common border with the Soviet Union and its leaders must have realized that such a stand might, in the future, jeopardize their national independence. At the same time it was made clear that no nation would be given the right to establish or maintain military bases on Norwegian territory.

Thus one small country has overcome its fears of Soviet domination and has taken a strong stand which can not be misunderstood. If only other Northern and Western European lands will exhibit the same courage, aggression, from whatever area, will not succeed.

Hurrah for the 81st Congress

At last it appears that Congress, when put to it, can enact legislation to meet pressing needs. The half million dollar appropriation for the relief of humans and livestock stranded on the western ranges was a model of speed and expediency. Without any obvious political wrangling or delay the bill was put through and signed. Food and forage were supplied before the appropriation was passed and so no unnecessary suffering occurred. Perhaps it is not expecting too much to hope that other legislative matters will be handled with as much dispatch by the new Democratic congress.

Wash. Scene

Rep. Hoffman Not Motherly

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON — Capitol gendarmes are on the alert for a pious-looking individual who represents himself as a clergyman. He has been making suckers of our kindhearted Congressmen. This saintly-kissered party prays very good, but he preys better. He can "amen" even a Dixiecrat out of a sawbuck.

The sanctimonious con man employs a remarkably simple system. Accompanied by a woebegone-looking boy about five years old he cases the corridors of the House office building.

Then comes the story. It is very embarrassing to one of the cloth, and he hopes it won't come to the ears of his congregation, but he finds himself stranded in Washington on account of he mislaid his wallet. At this point the kid squeezes out a few tears.

Among the first the solemn scoundrel took into camp was Rep. Prince H. Preston Jr., of Georgia, a fellow who shouldn't be so easy a fall guy because he used to be a city court judge. But he went for the stranded preacher gag to the tune of 10 bucks.

The con man hit a couple of others, but they ain't talking on account of an aggravated case of sheepishness.

* * *

It seems, however, that we have a case of mistaken identity, blame for which must be placed upon the parents of Rep. Hoffman, of Michigan. They insisted on naming him "Clare."

Mr. Hoffman revealed he had received a letter from a woman who wished to know whether he was a spinster or a widow. The writer declared it was wonderful that a woman had achieved such success politically, and added:

"It is to be deplored that Mr. Dewey, due to his poor technique of campaigning, failed to enjoy the success that you have attained. It must be a bitter experience for him to be repudiated, when a mere woman, faced with the inherent obstacles attending female participation in public life, has been returned to office by her constituents.

"You ought to give him a little motherly advice."

* * *

To those of us who have seen Mr. Hoffman in the flesh, the vision of him giving motherly advice, particularly to the Governor of New York, has been almost more than we can endure. Let us face it bravely, he is not the maternal type.

Irked About Indonesia

Dutch Policy 'Enlightened'?

By Bill Evans

Let's examine briefly what Mr. Charles Kauffman, in a recent article in the Daily Tar Heel, called the "rather enlightened colonial policy" of the Dutch. The Netherlands Indies had what economists euphemistically call a "favorable" balance of trade—i.e., from 1920-39, $100 to $400 million more was taken out of the country annually in exports than was returned in imports. This is "favorable" to Indonesi in the same sense that a cut throat produces a favorable balance of blood. For a more complete picture of the extent to which Indonesians were bled, we must take into consideration the quarter of a million "Europeans" living in Indonesia on salaries ranging from $2,000 to $80,000 per year. Ninety-five per cent of the Indonesians make less than $50 a year. That means about 25 cents a day for long hours on the plantations and in the mines. After two centuries of Dutch rule, 90% of the people are illiterate. The Dutch maintained a police state. One could be arrested for singing Indonesia Raja, the national anthem. One could be arrested for criticizing the government. It was a criminal offense to advocate independence. Even the use of the word "Indonesia" was forbidden. President Achmed Soekarno, was exiled four times.

Unlike Mr. Kauffman. I believe there is abundant evidence of a "people's movement" in Indonesia. Evidence of this was given by John Bower, U. S. correspondent with the anti-Japanese underground, during World War II. Foreign correspondents tell of mass demonstrations when the republic was proclaimed at the end of the war. They note the response of the people when the Republic proclaimed, by radio, decrees calling for universal adult suffrage, freedom of the press, freedom of religion, the right to organize unions universal education, and the nationalization of the principal industries.

In 1945, the British tried to crush the Merdeka (Freedom) movement with Japanese troops and the Kempeitai (Japanese gestapo). When the forces of world imperialism tried to move in reinforcements, they found they were blocked by a strange new force —the conscience of the world. Ordinary people of many races and nationalities refused to help crush the infant republic. Australian longshoremen refused to load Indonesia-bound ships. Chinese and Indian seamen refused to man them. The imperialists found their superior weapons lying idle on docks, and their ships tied up helplessly at Sidney, Singapore, Cape Town, and even Amsterdam itself. The fight of Indonesia reminded many Dutch of their own fight against the Nazis. Dutch dock workers refused to load the ships, and Dutch sailors would not man them. Dutch students became conscientious objectors rather than fight against the freedom of another people.

This principled resistance was soon broken, and Dutch troops with American and British equipment were able to launch an attack. I agree with Mr. Kauffman that the policy of the United States has been short-sighted. The Indonesians are aware that the Dutch invasion would not have been possible without United States aid. The invaders are dressed in G. I. "class A's," armed with bazookas, and ride on Sherman tanks. Marines were trained at Camp Lejeune, N. C., and sing the U.S. Marine corps hymn. B-25's roared overhead. President Truman, protested his "irritation" at the attack, but E. R. P. aid was used directly in the invasion. Killing Indonesians is expensive. The expense has been borne by the American conumer. The interest of America lies in friendship with Indonesia. There are 70 million Indonesians living on one of the richest island systems on earth. Regardless of what the future holds, their friendship would be a powerful asset. They produce the very things America needs: tin, rubber, oil, tea, quinine, pepper and margarine. Conveniently, we produce the very things they most need: machinery and other manufactures and technical skill. There is a sound basis for friendship.

Mr. Kauffman was concerned over the future of the Dutch. I am afraid they are going to have to earn their own living.

Knowledge, Logic and Rationalism As Factors in Modern Religion

Editor:

In Mr. Mills' letter of the 3rd, in which he takes issue with the letter of one Mr. Fitzgerald, he analyzes this letter and criticizes two of the points that his analysis reveals: (1) That man cannot know God, and (2) There is no God. Mr. Mills says that these two points are indefensible. I think, however, if he would carry his own argument to its logical conclusion, he would find that his points are just as indefensible. When he denies that man cannot know God, he is tacitly asserting that man can know God, and by his own argument this would imply that he, Mr. Mills, knows the limit of human knowledge. If he merely means, "In my opinion man can know God," then he should take into consideration that any statement is only an opinion, no matter how violently asserted, and therefore Mr. Fitzgerald was certainly doing no more than he himself is doing. I do not think that Mr. Mills means to deny the individual the right to hold an opinion although he may wish that the opinion expressed did not disagree with his own, which, in this case, it obviously does.

On the second point, "There is no God," Mr. Mills states, "To postulate 'no God' means that you have knowledge of the nonexistence of God." I presume by this that he means an empirical knowledge, for emotional "knowledge" ("faith") is in no sense open to question. If Mr. Fitzgerald's "knowledge" is of the latter type, it is of the same type as that of Mr. Mills' so Mills is arguing against himself. (I am assuming here that he has an emotional belief (again "faith") in the existence of God); if the type of knowledge meant is empirical knowledge—or a logical proof—then by eliminating two negatives from Mr. Mills' statement we have: "To postulate 'God' means that you have knowledge of the existence of God." This necessarily follows from the original statement. I am sure that Mr. Mills does "postulate God," and I am equally sure that in the sense of our present use of the word "knowledge" he does not have "knowledge of the existence of God." Or at least he may have some knowledge, in the sense of deducible evidence, supporting his belief, but, if he were to investigate, I am sure he would find equal knowledge supporting the contrary opinion.

I would enjoy continuing this discussion, particularly some of the points he attempts to make in the final paragraph, but limitations of space prevent. I will however make the blunt statement that, in my opinion, knowledge does not fail us just at the point we need it most; that probability is knowledge; and finally that were it not for knowledge we would not even be aware of the existence of these problems, much less making headway toward the solution of them.

Gaston S. Bruton, Jr.

Editor:

The purpose of this letter is to refute the point of view presented in the letter entitled "Religious Emphasis Weak?" on January 27th. The opinion referred to is that typical of the rational denial of the validity of religion. The prevalence of this attitude toward religion is due indirectly to 18th century rationalism which has continued to influence philosophical and religious thinking. This has, to be sure, undermined the traditional authority of the church, and, because changes in social institutions evolve slowly, some time may be required for the church to reclaim its position of vital influence in human affairs. It must be pointed out, however, that the validity of religion does not depend upon either the status of the church or the philosophical and social ideas peculiar to a certain period of time. To be sure, the existence of God today is just as certain as ever before. The faith each individual has in God must result in his deepest experience in human values and also the deepest experience of the human race. But, there is no purely rational way to prove the existence of God, that is, in the laboratory sense. Moreover, it would be foolish to predicate our beliefs merely on the scientific facts available, since these are meager indeed compared to the total amount of knowledge to be acquired in the future.

Sex Through the Mail

Editor:

Today I received in the mail a form letter advertising ten or twelve sex novels. All of these had lurid and appealing titles. Since other students have received such solicitations in the past, I presume somebody here is mass-mailing these forms.

Although a consistent critic of a few unbiblical doctrines of the Catholic Church, I certainly agree with the following statement on sex of a prominent Catholic:

"The principal reason for sex deification is loss of belief in God. Once men lose God they lose the purpose of life; and when the purpose of living is forgotten, the universe becomes meaningless. Man then tries to forget his emptiness in the intensity of a momentary experience. There is no surer formula for discontent than to try to satisfy our cravings for the ocean of infinite love from the teacup of finite satisfactions. Once God has been denied then everything becomes permissable."

Here is the belief required of all men "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. God did not send His son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through Him might be saved."

Dixon No Improvement

Editor:

With such a wealth of excellent columnists available—Thomas Stokes, Marquis Childs, Drew Pearson and the Alsops—it would seem almost impossible for the Daily Tar Heel to make a third wild swing in its next sally into the field of syndicated columnists. With Sokolsky as strike 1 and Dixon as strike 2, the fans or readers are waiting to see if the Tar Heel is going to strike out. Let's hope that we don't have to wait too long to find out.

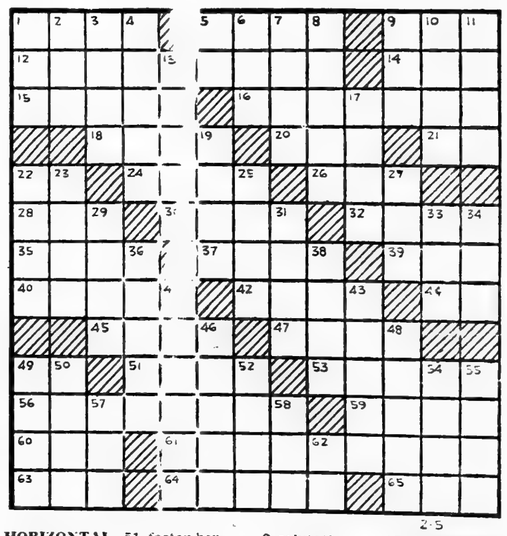
Market Place of Ideas

Editor:



On January 21, Jake Wicker, explaining the position of the Carolina Forum in the matter of John Gates, wrote: "The Forum recognizes the right of the administration to deny the use of University buildings to any speaker. . .No statute need be invoked . . .No one's civil rights. . .were violated by the denial of the building for use by Mr. Gates." Further on, Wicker states that a faculty-administration "advisory board" to approve Carolina Forum speakers is being considered.

The appointment of such a board to censor speakers at UNC would be a serious departure from the University's traditional policy of free speech. The University is not a private organization, such as a theater, whose owner may rent the hall to whomever he pleases—a university is a public institution, and its facilities should be available to all who meet the standards of intellectual honesty. It is a market place of ideas, and not an instrument for the propogation of one set of beliefs.

The Administration has the duty to maintain the University's role in this respect, even to the extent of permitting speakers who dissent with its own point of view. It can rightly bar only the indecent and keep order and peace. (Even here, as much as possible should be done by student government). But to step beyond that, to attempt to discriminate between "orthodox" and "heretical" ideas, and to regulate what ideas may be heard is a violation of civil liberties.

Furthermore, freedom of speech and assembly is meaningless without a place in which to speak and assemble. I therefore cannot recognize the right of the administration to deny the use of a University hall to any speaker without a strong reason, for which it must give account. (And the one alleged—that Gates is under indictment, not convicted, of advocated overthrow of the government—seems insufficient.) For the same reason, I oppose an "advisory board" to pass on Forum decisions.

Cagers Face Duke Quint; Swimmers At Ohio State

Bass May Become Member Of Tar Heel Coaching Staff

Marvin C. Bass, who for the past five years has been a member of the William and Mary football coaching staff, has been recommended by University of North Carolina athletic officials to fill the vacancy on the Carolina coaching staff created by the resignation of Max Reed two weeks ago, according to a statement released last night by Athletic Director R. A. Fetzer.

Final action on his appointment will be made at a board of trustees meeting to be held later this month. If he is appointed, and there is little doubt that he will be, he will join Coach Snavely, Jim Gill, Russ Murphy, Crowell Little, and Walt Pupa to coach the Tar Heels next year.

With the exodus of Reed, Jim Gill has been promoted to first assistant to Snavely.

Bass started out in football at Petersburg high school in Virginia and then played at William and Mary for four years, starting in 1939. After a brilliant freshman year, he was an All-State varsity tackle for three years. In 1942, when he captained the Indians' Southern conference champions, he was named on the all-conference team.

William and Mary's teams have been noted for their exceptionally fine lines, as Tar Heel fans will remember in the 7-7 tie game in Kenan stadium last fall. Bass has been a great part responsible for the showing of the Indians' line. W&M head coach Rube McCray recently paid tribute to Bass's coaching abilities by saying, "Marvin is a fine coach and has been an inspiration to our players."

Tickets for Tonight

Approximately 1,500 tickets for tonight's Duke-Carolina basketball game will go on public sale at Woollen gym this morning at 9 o'clock.

The tickets will be sold on a first-come, first-served to all comers at the price of one dollar per seat.

The limited supply of ducats became available when student pass book holders did not create demand for the entire 6,500 seats to the traditional clash.

Telephone orders will not be accepted for tickets, but telegraphic money orders will be taken.

Carson Continues As Top Point Man

Up to date scoring statistics for the Carolina cagers released last night revealed to no one's surprise, that Coy Carson is still leading the Tar Heel attack with a total of 304 points in 18 games.

Carson, the leading point man in the Southern conference has averaged 16.9 per game to far outdistance his nearest rival, Nemo Nearman, who has 155. If Carson's average holds up in the remaining seven games on the schedule, he should finish the season above the 400 mark.

As a team, the Tar Heels have racked 1,028 points in winning 12 games while losing five and their opponents have totaled 966. Carolina has a slight edge in the averages, with 56.5 per game as compared with opponents' 53.6.

Frosh Grapplers Meet High Point At Woollen Today

Carolina's freshman wrestling squad will face High Point high school on the main floor of Woollen gym this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The undefeated Tar Heel freshman grapplers will be gunning for their fifth straight win, already having soundly trounced N. C. State, Greensboro high school, Davidson, and VPI.

In their last home appearance the Tar Babies completely whitewashed Davidson, 32-0. Against VPI last week they gained a 27-2 win.

The Tar Babies will be favored in today's match and will have several undefeated men in competition. Among these are 128-pounder Bob McGimsey and 165-pounder Tom Coxe.

Tom Williams, the Tar Baby lightweight who won a fall in his first match against Davidson, is slated to start in the 121-pound class.

Duke Upsets NYU By 73-44 Score

DURHAM, Feb. 4—(UP)—The Duke university cagers pulled one of the greatest sports upsets of the year here tonight by soundly trouncing a highly-favored New York university quintet, 73-44.

The decision bodes ill for the Tar Heels' chances tomorrow night when they meet Duke, for NYU had defeated Carolina by an equally one-sided score earlier in the season.

The Blue Devils led by only two points, 32-30, at the half, but rapidly pulled ahead in the second stanza as they held the Violets to a mere three field goals during the 20-minute session.

Ceep Youmans was high scorer for the Dukesters with 18 points, but he was closely followed by teammates Carl Sapp, who tallied 15, and Tommy Hughes with 12.

Joel Kaufman was top scorer for NYU with 10 markers.

Call Issued For Footballers

Winter football practice will begin in dead earnest come next Monday afternoon, according to an announcement from the Football office.

A call has been sent out to all old squad members to report along with members of last year's freshman team and new candidates for positions on the 1949 Tar Heel grid aggregation.

An advance guard of footballers have been engaged in practice sessions for the past week and the new reportees will join this group to start major drills.

The Winter session will probably continue for three more weeks until February 26.

The Football office is stressing the importance of all men—old and new—being on hand for the opening session of practice Monday afternoon.

Locals Underdogs In Important Tilt With Ancient Foe

By Dick Jenrette

Carolina and Duke, two old basketball rivals who usually fight it out between themselves for Southern conference honors, stage their traditional battle in Woollen gymnasium tonight at 8 o'clock with both teams seeking to move into a contending position with N. C. State for the 1949 loop championship.

The experts pick the Blue Devils of Coach Gerry Gerrard as the favorites in the colorful engagement. But if Coach Tom Scott's hot-and-cold Tar Heels continue their present trend of play, they may be in for a good night.

The locals have played alternately good and bad ball in their last seven games. Back on January 20 they began this habit by defeating a strong William and Mary team, 69-61. But State humiliated them two days later by vanquishing the Tar Heels, 67-36. Carolina bounded back to beat VPI, 73-59, then lost to Davidson, 47-37. The Scottmen, however, pulled by Furman 61-44, and lost to Tennessee, 84-55, in their last outing.

Night To Win

So if this custom continues, tonight should be the Tar Heels night to win.

Carolina has an overall season record of 13-5 and one of seven wins in ten conference games. A win over Duke tonight would go a long way toward assuring the locals of a berth in the annual Southern conference tourney in March. It generally is necessary for a team to compile a better than .500 won-lost record to qualify for this event.

The Tar Heels' 7-3 loop mark right now would easily be good enough to make the tourney, but there are eight more conference games remaining on the schedule, and each of these are against rough opponents.

Most of the expected capacity crowd of 6,000 tonight, and particularly the Duke players, will be observing the antics of forward Coy Carson, high scorer of the Tar Heels and for both teams for that matter. The man from Asheville has racked up 304 points thus far which give him a per-game average of 16.9 On six occasions he has gone over the 20-point mark.

Others expected to contribute heavily to the scoring punch for Carolina are Dan Nyimicz, Hugo Kappler, and Nemo Nearman.

Duke Leaders

Duke will counter with a well-rounded attack paced by Center Ben Collins and Forward Ceep Youmans. Collins missed some of the vacant Duke games because of a fractured hand, but he has now returned to action. Youmans has been the most consistent Duke scorer all year.

Coach Gerrard also may call on reserve Center Carl Sapp for duty tonight. Sapp got hot against Navy this week scoring 19 points to lead the Devils to victory. He also turned in an exceptional game against State, when Duke came within two points of beating the favored Wolfpack.

Tracksters Take Unofficial Lead; Indoor Meet Continues Here Today

The Blue and White clad indoor tracksters took an unofficial 36 2/3-17 1/3 lead over Duke in the first day of their two-day meet in the Tin Can yesterday. State, scheduled to enter a group of contestants in the meet, failed to show up yesterday, but is expected to compete today.

Jim O'Leary, Duke shot putter, tossed the iron pellet 48 ft 6 1/2 in. yesterday to better the present Southern conference record. O'Leary's performance was unofficial, however, since this was a practice meet.

Carolina's Julian MacKenzie turned in another outstanding performance when he toured the three-quarter mile event in 3:05.1. Coach Dale Ranson said that MacKenzie's time was "the best 3/4 mile time ever registered here in any competition."

The Tar Heel freshmen were ahead in the unofficial scoring by a 19-13 score.

Today's Schedule

The schedule of events for today is:

2:00—pole vault
broad jump
70-yard high hurdles

2:30—60-yard dash

3:00—70-yard low hurdles

Carolina has a strong group of hurdlers and broad jumpers to participate in the meet today. In the hurdles the Tar Heels will have Dick Taylor. Bob Morrow and Bill Albans to top the field and in the broad jump Albans and Jack Moody are expected to give the top performances.

Varsity Summaries

330-yard dash—1. McLain (UNC), 2. Davis (D), Flowers (UNC), Grisso (D). Time—37.7.

Lacrosse Practice

Although the new lacrosse equipment has not yet arrived, beginning Monday anyone wishing to get in some early practice may check out gloves, balls, and sticks from the athletic storage room, 109 Woollen gym.

This equipment may be checked out any day from Monday through Friday, but must be returned each day at 6 o'clock. Equipment checked out late Friday afternoon may be kept until Monday. If anyone fails to return it by the deadline, the service will be discontinued.

Badminton Meet, Handball Finals Feature Murals

The Intramural spotlight for the weekend is being shared by the handball finals and the Carolina badminton club.

The fraternity handball championship will be decided Monday night when two strong teams, Chi Psi and Sigma Chi, meet at 7:30. The dormitory division crown was won Thursday night by the Town team. The campus championship tilt between the Town five and the fraternity winners will probably take place Tuesday night.

The Carolina badminton club announced that it will help sponsor the Southern Badminton tournament in conjunction with the Southern Badminton association. The tourney will be held in Woollen gym on April 1, 2, and 3.

There will be a meeting tonight after the Duke game with a representative of the Association to discuss plans for the event. All interested persons have been urged to attend the meeting.

The University badminton club is conducting an all-campus tournament in men's singles and doubles, women's singles and doubles, and mixed doubles. The men's singles have begun, but entries are still being accepted for the mixed and the men's and women's doubles. All interested students should enter at once.

Mural basketball play is slated to continue for another week, before the playoffs begin, while the boxing program is now in full swing.

Ben Hogan Improving After Auto Accident

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 4—(UP)—Ben Hogan, knocked off the professional golf trail with a broken collarbone and fractured pelvis, was "resting well" today, but the "no visitors" sign was still hanging outside his hospital door.

Hogan was injured seriously Wednesday when his Cadillac and a Greyhound bus collided head on a hazy highway 150 miles east of El Paso.

Barclay Signs

LEXINGTON, Va., Feb. 4—(UP)—George Barclay, former, Carolina football great and a University of Maryland line coach, has accepted a two-year-contract as head football coach at Washington and Lee university.

Barclay played football three years at Carolina and was an All-American guard in 1934. After graduation in 1935 he joined the Brooklyn Dodgers, but a knee injury ended his playing career after only four games in the 1935 season.

Freshmen Cagers Seeking to Halt Duke Win Streak

Carolina's freshmen courtsters have their golden opportunity for revenge at the expense of the highly publicized frosh cagers of Duke at 6 o'clock tonight at Woollen gym when the Tar Babies tangle with the Blue Imps in a lucrative preliminary to the varsity contest.

Coach Jim Hamilton and his boys know well what they are up against when they take to the floor tonight. Several weeks ago in an earlier battle between the two quintets, the Tar Babies were rolled over by the terrific onslaught of the baby Dukes who still boast an undefeated slate, including a decisive 60-49 victory over the State frosh.

The shining light of the Duke offense and defense is one Dick Crowder, a 6'5" center from High Point whose high scoring feats are the talk of the Trinity campus. Tallest of a well-rounded team, Crowder specializes on tap ins and jump shots. This Blue Imp ace is ably abetted by a pair of guards, Larry Ashley and Dick Groat, both of whom show great prospective talent.

For the home side the outlook is not too bright. Mentor Hamilton has lost two of his highest scorers since the last Duke clash and he is faced with the necessity of flooring a stronger five to do battle if a victory is anticipated. Another blow that should make Hamilton a bit greyer is that the regular center, Lenny Guyes, will definitely not play this evening due to a strained ankle.

Casey's Boys Face Strong Buckeyes In Columbus, Ohio

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 4— Virtually the same lineup that saw action in the University of North Carolina's victory over LaSalle two weeks ago will swim in the dual meet against the Ohio State Buckeyes here tomorrow afternoon.

The Carolina squad, 13-strong, arrived here early this morning for the big meet, which has already been sold out for several days.

The OSU pool will be crammed to its 2,000 capacity tomorrow when the undefeated Tar Heels, long rulers of the Southern swimming scene, invade the home waters of one of the nations top tank aggregations.

Thus far this season, Carolina has swept through five meets in a row, but Ohio State is also undefeated and is a heavy favorite to come out of the intersectional clash unscathed.

Of the five meets won by the Tar Heels, only one was against what might be termed first class opposition. That was when the Blue and White mermen defeated LaSalle in spite of the efforts of Olympic star Joe Verdeur.

The Carolina team can also point to its impressive string of Southern conference victories, but that isn't expected to change the heavy odds favoring the Buckeyes, who are the present national AAU titleholders.

Six pool marks were shattered against the Explorers, four of them by the Tar Heels, and the Carolina record-smashers are expected to be the big guns against the Buckeyes.

Sophomore star Jim Thomas, who has lowered the 440 standard several times this season is the number one distance man for Coach Ralph Casey. Thomas will swim in both the 220 and 440 with Bill Smith of OSU, the man he'll probably have to beat both times.

Captain Dick Twining will try to pick up points for the Tar Heels in three events against Ohio State. He'll do the breaststroking in the 300-yard medley, and turn to the crawl in the 100 and 400-yard relay. Twining set an individual record in the century and helped turn in a new mark in the relay against LaSalle.

The only other triple threat man for Carolina is Jesse Greenbaum, who will be entered in the 50, the 100, and the 400-yard relay. Greenbaum's participation in the 100 constitutes the only deviation from the LaSalle lineup, which had Ike Norwood teaming with Twining in that event.

Three men will double for Carolina against the Buckeyes. Norm Sper will go in the medley and backstroke events while Floyd Drew will enter the 50 and the 400 relay. Steve Osborne holds the title of official anchor man for Carolina, swimming the final lap in both relay events.

Mitten to Bears

Bob Mitten, first string guard on Carolina's 1948 varsity eleven became the latest Tar Heel gridder to sign the dotted line when he announced yesterday that he had signed a contract with the professional Chicago Bears of the national league.

Mitten, whose home is in Shippensburg, Pa., was an outstanding performer in the Tar Heel's offensive line.

'Cats Down Durham For Twelfth Straight

Chapel Hill high extended its winning streak to 12 straight games last night by defeating the Durham county cagers, 59-27. The Wildcats, who led at the half, 29-11, were paced by Bob Phillips, high scorer for both teams with 16 points.

AVC Conducting Poll of Veterans On Living Costs

University veterans will be contacted next week by members of the American Veterans committee to fill out cost-of-living questionaires, Henry Adams, AVC publicity chairman, reported yesterday.

Adams said the AVC is now conducting a campus poll to determine the average amount of money veterans have to spend each month. Ten men in each dorm will be given questionaires to fill out in order for the AVC to get a cross-section of expenses for the average veteran.

The questionaires will ask questions relating to food, clothing, rent, and tuition costs. Other questions will ask veterans if they find it necessary to seek employment, or will have to do so in the future.

When the questionaires are completed, they will be sent to the national AVC headquarters where they will be used as information in the present AVC fight to raise veterans subsistence.

Health Officials Schedule Class

The district health office will offer the second in its series of pre-parenthood classes, "Anatomy in Pregnancy," Monday at 3 o'clock in the health office headquarters on Old Fraternity row.

The series is being presented as a community service under the supervision of Mrs. Edith Brocker, supervising nurse, and Miss Dorothy Lunsford, public health nurse, to inform prospective parents in the care of both mother and baby during pregnancy and after birth of the baby.

education, $849,000 for attendance officers to enforce the compulsory school attendance law, and $1,150,000 for supervisors in each school unit.

Bills representing each of those requests already have been introduced in the General assembly.

The parade of educational spokesmen in support of the request was headed by D. Hiden Ramsey, vice chairman of the State Board of Education, Dr. Clyde A. Erwin, state superintendent of public instruction, and Paul Reid, controller of the State Board of Education.

Ramsey told the committee "there is no superfluous flesh in our budget. If you cut it at any one point it will bleed."

He charged that the $167,521,000 recommended was "the smallest appropriation ever made in relation to the proven capacity of the state to support its public school system."

Ramsey said that although the recommended amount was about 30 per cent greater than that of the current biennium, increases recommended for other state institutions and agencies amounted to 47 per cent.

The Asheville newspaperman also charged that "the school plant of North Carolina is obsolete. In a shockingly large number of cases it results in an inequality of educational opportunity."

Ramsey charged that some school buildings were "little better than hovels" and the vast differences between various school facilities were "a monstrous perversion of the very doctrines of North Carolina."

Three separate survey of the state's public school buildings made in recent years have revealed that approximately $160,066,500 and 1 per cent if we are going to give our school system the kind of buildings it should have," Ramsey said.

Tired but Happy Russian Lieutenants Begin First Lap of Tour of Virginia

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(UP)—Two tired but happy Russian army lieutenants, who fled the Soviet Union last fall, arrived today from Germany for a week's tour of Virginia, something they've looked forward to since they heard about its charms two years ago.

Peter Pirogov, 29, and Anatole Barzov, 32, stopped briefly at Washington national airport before Virginia officials whisked them to Richmond where they were to be greeted by Gov. William Tuck and other dominion dignitaries.

The Russians first heard about Virginia on a Voice of America broadcast in 1947 and determined to see it for themselves. Last October they escaped from their base in Poland in a "borrowed" plane and crash-landed four hours after in the American zone of Austria.

Invited by the state of Virginia, they were brought to the United States in a military air transport service plane.

At the airport, they were greeted by President N. W. Kelley of the Virginia State chamber of commerce while they faced a battery of radio microphones and news cameras.

The ceremonies rivaled those extended move stars and other celebrities.

State department intepreters were on hand to assist in the interviews. With their help, Pirogov said he was a professor of Russian literature and would like to teach it in the United States "after I master the English."

Barsov, an automotive engineer, said he really wanted to become a farmer if he could "just find a way to get the money."

Speaking on his own, Pirogov said he and his companion were "very tired" after their journey but "very glad to arrive in America."

"That cannot be done with the speed with which it should be done without state aid," he added.

He said a $200,000,000 surplus was collected during the boom years. "If we had spent it all, schools would have gotten $140,000,000 on the basis of historical division of funds," he contended.

"Children of North Carolina have a certain moral right," Ramsey said, to allocation of money now to improve their schools.

Dr. Erwin warned there was a national shortage of 100,000 teachers.

"Where are other states going to get teachers they need . . . from other states that have them but cannot pay the salaries needed to hold them."

Dr. Erwin said such an exodus already was taking teachers out of the public schools and also out of teacher training colleges where North Carolina taxes had helped pay for their education.

Trial of Reds Ends Third Week By 'Bomb Scare'

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—(UP)—A short-lived "bomb scare" and the witness stand appearance of a Congressman enlivened proceedings today as the Communist trial ended its third week with the defense still seeking to show the federal jury system here is unfair.

The scare "bombs" came during a recess when several of 11 indicted U. S. Communist leaders, their friends and attorneys were talking in a room in the federal courthouse set aside for them. A small brown package suddenly began to tick.

The room was cleared in seconds. Then a guard picked up the brown package, ripped it open and found an alarm clock which Communist City Councilman Benjamin Davis, Jr., had brought with him to have repaired.

The Congressman was Vito Marcantonio chairman of the left-wing New York American Labor party. He was called by the defense to testify concerning the calling of jurors from his east side Manhattan Congressional district which includes part of Harlem and a large Puerto Rican neighborhood.

Kappa Psi Members To Be Feted Tonight

Fifteen newly initiated members of Kappa Psi, professional pharmaceutical fraternity, will be honored at a dance tonight in the Pine room of Lenoir hall.

Those initiated at ceremonies last week include Arthur Brothers, Earl Brown, Loy R. Burris, Harold Day, Reginald Ferrell, James P. Green, James S. Green, Richard Knight, Larry McAllister, Rudolph Pittman, Joe Reese, Bill Robertson, Jr., Harold Sauls, John Thigpen, and Bob Woody.

Mighty Quiet

GREENVILLE, Feb. 4—(UP)—Things were mighty quiet around here today, weary police officers agreed.

Then they looked quickly over their shoulders to the cell where George Raymond Whitfield, 38, Negro, was sitting quietly.

Whitfield was facing charges for disturbing the peace, trespassing at a Negro theater here, assaulting the theater manager, John Warner; assaulting an arresting officer, Policeman George Crawford; using vulgar and profane language; disorderly conduct; resisting a second officer who went in for Crawford, Policeman Norman Little.

read. "The University Will Not Have Saturday Classes."

Editor Louis Graves would not reveal the source of his information, but persons close to the administration said yesterday that everyone at the meeting at which the faculty report was delivered had been pledged not to reveal any of the business which went on at the meeting.

Chancellor Robert B. House said last night that he was not authorized to make any comment on the matter. He said any statement would have to come from Victor Bryant of the Trustees.

Bryant also said he could not discuss the matter until the visiting committee's recommendations are made to the full Board of Trustees. He added, "I am not at liberty to discuss what the recommendations will be."

Kiwanians Hear McCuskey Speak

Dr. Dorothy McCuskey, associate professor of education, spoke at the Chapel Hill Kiwanis club meeting last Tuesday in the Carolina Inn.

She told of her work during the past year as educational adviser in Korea. Dr. McCuskey said that the educational program in Korea has been made difficult because of the previous rule by Russia, Japan, and China.

Storm System Goes Eastward

CHICAGO, Feb. 4—A new storm system developing in the Northwest today and moving eastward with the Army's huge "operation blizzard" was fast shaking the mountains drifts in the states.

Forecasters said heavy was reported in Washington Idaho but that it was "impossible to tell" how much more snow now will be dumped on the hard-hit states farther east.

At Blackfoot, Ida., a bus carrying 12 school children and the driver was reported missing in the storm and snowplows were ordered out to find it. It was believed marooned in the mountains near Riverton.

Forecasters said the storm was expected to hit Montana and Wyoming tomorrow and move eastward, but that the storm may lose some of its force after crossing the continental divide.

Two Quonsets Are Secured For Storage

S&F, IFC to Use Huts for Property

Two student organizations, Sound and Fury and the Interfraternity council, have secured the temporary use of two quonset huts for storage space, J. S. Bennett, director of operations, said yesterday.

Jerry Weiss, president of Sound and Fury, said the organization was using hut 35 to store S and F stage scenery. He added that it had taken him approximately six months to find suitable storage space for the equipment. IFC President Charlie Loudermilk said the inter-fraternity organization intends to use hut 20 as a place to store records and also as a meeting place.

Bennett explained that the arrangement with the two organizations was only temporary. "The huts are primarily housing units," he said, "and will probably be needed to house new students next fall." He explained that the University was releasing the huts only because the organizations had no other storage space. He added that if the huts were not needed for the expected increased enrollment next fall the student organizations could continue to use them.

Asked about the possibility of other campus groups securing the use of huts, Bennett said, "We are not going to keep the organizations out if they need the huts."

According to University housing director James Wadsworth, only eight of the 36 huts are now being used for living quarters, housing approximately 62 students. A few others are being used for storage space by the University.

Recital Tonight Will Precede 'Gorboduc' Play

A recital by the Alden string quartet this evening at 7:30 will precede the Laboratory theater's presentation of "Gorboduc, the Tragedie of Terrex and Porrex," in the main lounge of Graham Memorial at 8:30.

The quartet is composed of Edgar Alden, Dorothy Alden, Frances Simmons and Ernest Peschel. Their recital is the first in a series of musical programs to be presented by Graham Memorial.

Written by Thomas Norton and Thomas Sockville, "Gorboduc" was the first English tragedy written in blank verse. It was revived by the Laboratory theater group for the first time in 387 years.

Veterans Advised To Check on Jobs

All public law 16 veterans who will finish school during this quarter or the spring quarter were requested yesterday by Wilson Honeycutt, P. L. 16 veterans adviser, to check with him in his office in Peabody hall on possible employment.

Also, Honeycutt asks all public law 16 veterans who are in Law school to give copies of their spring semester schedules to him if they have not done so.

The veterans training office in Peabody hall is open on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays only.

Eaton Lectures On Theater-Going

Walter P. Eaton, lecturer on playwriting in the department of dramatic art, spoke Friday night in the Meredith college auditorium on "Fifty Years of Theater-Going." His appearance was sponsored by the Meredith Little theater and the campus English club.

Former professor of playwriting at Yale university and drama critic for the New York Sun and American Magazine, Eaton presented a nostalgic review of events and associations with America's theaters.

'Country Boy'

RALEIGH, Feb. 5—(UP)—The House of Representatives today fixed Rep. William T. Hatch, Wake county's self-styled "country boy."

It pased a bill looping the town around him.

Hatch has frequently emphasized in speeches to the house that he lives outside the city limits of Raleigh and is just a "country boy."

The House today received, passed and sent to the Senate a bill to extend the city limits of Raleigh. The new city boundary, as outlined in the House's practical joke, would follow the west side of U. S. highway 1 to Hatch's home, loop around it, and come back down the east side of the highway.

The Senate dutifully received the bill, suspended the rules and passed it.

That, said House members, should be enough to make Hatch a city slicker.

The catch in the Hatch hoax was that the bill had no official number and therefore was not effective.

Sheps to Address YWCA Committee

Dr. Cecil C. Sheps of the School of Public Health, will speak to the YWCA Public Affairs committee tomorrow at 5 o'clock in the Y cabinet room.

Dr. Sheps' subject will be America's health insurance problems. The talk will be followed by a discussion period.

Dr. Sheps, a native of Winnipeg, Canada, and a public health worker of wide experience, came here in June, 1947. An associate professor of public health administration, Dr. Sheps teaches "Health and Sickness in Modern Society" and "Medical Care."

In addition he is assistant director of the Field Epidemiological Syphilis study for the Rockefeller foundation and the North Carolina State Board of Health.

After receiving his M. D. from the University of Manitoba in 1936, Dr. Sheps had hospital experience and postgraduate training in Winnipeg and at two hospitals in England.

CPU to Discuss Fair Employment Practice Bills

National fair employment practices legislation will be discussed by the Carolina Political union at 8 o'clock tonight in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Edlyn Freerks, sophomore member of the CPU, will introduce the topic with an appraisal of previous attempts to combat job discrimination by state and municipal laws. The introduction will include, in addition, a report on the actions of the temporary FEPC established during World War II.

Several members of the faculty have been invited to participate in the roundtable discussion. All interested students are also invited to participate.

Air Reservists Plan Discussion

Topics for discussion at tomorrow evening's meeting of the Naval Reserve Air unit at 7:30 in Bingham hall will be naval retirement, home study courses, and aviation prospects, Lt. R. E. Simpson, commanding officer, announced yesterday.

The Naval reserve unit will also undertake a membership campaign which will include residents of Durham, Chapel Hill, and surrounding areas. All naval reservists who have served a period of active duty are urged to join the unit.

Student Snatches Purse in Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 5—(UP)—Bobby Wayne Doss, 21 year old Memphis State college student who "couldn't make ends meet" with his $105 monthly GI income, said today that he snatched a woman's purse because his co-ed wife was hungry.

"I didn't have any money," Doss said. "I knew I was violating a law."

Doss, a native of Stephens, Ark., was held on a larceny charge. His 18 year old wife Joanne, a native of Newark, Ohio, was released when Doss insisted that she was not an accomplice, although a passenger when Doss tried to escape in his automobile.

"My wife and I came to town Thursday night and wanted to get something to eat, but didn't have any money," Doss said.

Doss receives a government allowance under the GI Bill. But he said that he pays $30 monthly rent, and $42.50 automobile note monthly.

"My wife and I are just unable to make ends meet," he told police. "I mentioned we were going to have to do something to get money, but I don't believe I said anything to Joanne about snatching a purse."

Mrs. Doss said that she didn't know where her husband got the purse when he raced toward the automobile.

Mrs. Edna Scott was the victim. Her description of the automobile enabled police to apprehend the couple within 30 minutes after the snatch.

Mrs. Scott pursued Doss, but fell down as she grabbed for the automobile.

Uninterrupted Days

Dedmond Hails Advantages Of YMCA Retreat Discussions

By Virginia Forward

"Perhaps the best reason for the annual Y retreat is that it gives students an uninterrupted two days in which they have a chance to discuss thoroughly campus, political, and religious questions," Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, said yesterday in a discussion of the coming YW-YMCA retreat at Montreat.

"At the 1948 retreat at Natural Bridge, Va., I was on the student government panel," he said. "During those two days we laid the groundwork for the fall orientation program. As a result of the retreat and the great amount of energy put out by Bill Miller, the University had one of the best orientation programs ever."

Dedmond said he had very pleasant memories of the 1948 retreat because he drew from the talks there the platform for his winning campaign for the presidency.

Looking over the list of student and faculty leaders who are to travel to Montreat, Dedmond commented, "It will be worth everyone's time just to hear Dr. Frank Hanft speak. His approach to national and international problems of the time are the most practical I've heard."

Registration for the retreat, to be held Feb. 18-20, began last Tuesday and is scheduled to continue through next Friday. Students may register in Gay Currie's office in the Y building. Miss Currie is executive secretary of the YWCA.

Niebuhr Talk Is Scheduled Next Tuesday

Top Theologist To Speak in Hill

Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, professor at Union Theological seminary in New York city and a leading theologian of the country will address students and townspeople in Hill hall next Sunday at 7:30, Dr. Arnold Nash, head of the department of religion announced yesterday.

In preparation for Dr. Niebuhr's address, the Baptist Student supper forum program will hold a discussion tonight in the Baptist church about the career and thought of the theologian.

Dr. Niebuhr, who is a contributing editor of "The Nation," will preach in Duke university's chapel next Sunday morning and will lecture in Durham and Raleigh the following day.

The theologian, who is also editor of "Christianity and Crisis," has received honorary doctor's degrees from Harvard, Yale, Oxford, and Edinburgh university in Scotland. He has lectured at the major universities in North America, Sweden, Norway, France, Switzerland, and Germany.

White's Statement Branded As 'Lie' By Dr. Holley

ALBANY, GA., Feb. 5—(UP)—Dr. J. W. Holley, former Albany State college president, today branded as a "lie" a statement by NAACP secretary Walter White that Holley is "completely without standing among Negroes and intelligent whites."

From nearby Poulan, Ga., former Michigan Governor Chase Osborn termed White's statements "slanderous."

"It (White's statement) comes with ill grace," said the aging Negro doctor today in a speech before the White Kiwanis club.

Dr. Holley blasted the NAACP, the FECP, CIO and Rosenwald foundation for their "deliberate teachings of hate."

He deplored the fact "that Walter White, who has made a fortune exploiting the miseries of his people, would smite a man who has given his life unselfishly and without complaint for their uplift and betterment."

Then Holley attacked the Rosenwald foundation and Georgia's university system for "tearing down" Negro education by not advocating teachings which Negroes could use in making livings. He protested "the rape of his race by the northern press and other organizations."

Foreign Films Planned in GM

Three films on foreign countries will be shown at this afternoon's meeting of the Cosmopolitan club at 4 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial, President Hannes Johnson of Iceland announced yesterday.

South Officials Remain Silent On Board Meet

House Refuses Any Comments

Silence continued to reign in South building yesterday concerning last week's meeting of the visiting committee of the Board of Trustees.

"All dealings with the visiting committee are confidential, and I do not discuss them with anyone," Chancellor R. B. House said.

House refused to comment on the report in Friday's Chapel Hill Weekly concerning a suggested solution by the visiting committee to the automobile parking problem.

The committee reportedly suggested to House that freshmen and sophomore students be prohibited from keeping cars in Chapel Hill. House accepted the suggestion for consideration, the article stated.

The Weekly's report said, in effect, that the trustees suggested the freshman-and-sophomore restriction be inaugurated as an experiment. Trustees reportedly said that if this solution were not satisfactory to University authorities, further measures might be taken, or else authorities might find a better approach to control of student cars.

Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, reported in the article that an official of the University told him he was convinced the parking situation would not be improved except by a decrease in the number of cars.

The report also said that consideration would be given to physically-handicapped students and those who needed cars for practical purposes.

A member of the Safety council said the suggested solution had not been brought before the committee. Steve Millikin, chairman of the council, could not be contacted. The committee, which has been studying the parking problem on campus, has not met in over two weeks.

University officials agreed that the board of trustees had the final word in solving the parking problem.

Pasquier Trio Tickets on Sale

Tickets are on sale in Hill hall for a concert by the internationally famous Pasquier Trio composed of three brothers, Jean, violin; Pierre, viola; and Etienne, violoncello, to be presented Tuesday evening at 8:30.

Admission to the concert is $1 and tickets are on sale in room 103, from 9 to 1 o'clock and from 2 o'clock to 4:30.

Several tours have enabled this trio to make successful appearances in Switzerland, Holland, Belgium, Austria, Italy, Spain, the Orient, and America. Large French towns have also demonstrated enthusiasm, and the international press has praised these artists.

Rebuilding Plans For Service Plant Will Be Submitted

Plans for reconstruction of the University service plant building destroyed by fire in December, 1947, will be submitted to the University Building committee within 10 days, John S. Bennett, operations officer, said yesterday.

WALTER SPEARMAN

Bennett added that the plans for the work are ready and will soon be turned over to the committee for consideration.

Workmen have been busily clearing derbis left by the $60,000 Franklin street fire which destroyed the building a year ago last Dec. 11. Reconstruction is scheduled to begin sometime next month.

Bids on the re-building of the plant are expected to be in by the early part of March.

Plans call for the front of the building to follow the Williamsburg design in keeping with the architectural policy of Chapel Hill.

The Jefferson Standard Life Insurance company will be in its same location next to the alley on the east side of the building. The University laundry will occupy the middle section of the building with the water and utilities office on the west side.

Second floor of the building will be devoted to supply rooms and workshops, Bennett indicated.

Western Union is the only previous occupant of the plant whose offices will take up a new location. The telegraph offices are presently located at No. 7 Old Fraternity row behind the Port Hole restaurant. No word of permanent location for Western Union has been mentioned recently.

If the present plans go according to schedule the new plant will be ready for occupancy sometime in late summer.

Walter Spearman To Be Installed As Faculty Head

Walter Spearman, associate professor in the journalism department, will be installed as president of the Faculty club at a meeting Tuesday at 1 o'clock in the Carolina inn.

Charles F. Milner of the University extension division will be the speaker at the luncheon meeting, describing his recent trip to Japan.

Other newly elected officers to be installed include Dr. W. P. Richardson of the School of Public Health, vice president; and Dr. Clifford P. Lyons of the English department, secretary.

New members of the board of directors are John N. Couch, J. W. Fesler, Rex Winslow and R. H. Wettach.

Carroll Addresses Lambda Chi Alpha

Dean Dudley Carroll of the Commerce school in a talk to the members of the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity last Wednesday night said that an important part of an education, in addition to developing a good body and mind, is to learn how to mingle with people and make friends.

Speaking informally on "Doing A Good Job," Dean Carroll advised, "Master what you find in your books now and you will master your future problems."

Choral Rehearsal Will Be Tomorrow

First rehearsal for the Bach Mass in B Minor, to be presented during commencement week by the Chapel Hill choral club, will be held tomorrow night at 7:30 in Hill hall auditorium.

Kappa Psi Honors 15 New Members

The Kappa Psi professional pharmaceutical fraternity honored fifteen newly initiated members last night at a dance in the Pine Room of Lenoir hall

THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Communist Radio

NANKING, China, Sunday, Feb. 6—(UP)—Chinese peace possibilities nose-dived today when the Communist radio called the government of acting President Li Tsung-Jen a "trouble-making token regime" and Li cancelled the flight of a peace delegation to Peiping.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Feb 5—(UP)—Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty stood tonight before a people's court in the shadow of a possible death sentence and prayed for the court and the Hungarian state.

Accuse Stalling

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5—(UP)—Democratic members of the Senate Labor committee tonight accused their Republican colleagues of trying to stall hearings on the administration's new labor bill.

Bodies Sought

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 5—(UP)—Navy and Coast Guard crash boat crews dragged Lake Pontchartrain in the rain today for the bodies of eight Air Force men who were killed late yesterday when a two-engine B-25 from Keesler Field, Miss., crashed and exploded two miles offshore.

Bomb With a Brain

Chapel Hill Boasts Own Prophet

By Don Maynard

The sage Nostradamus was on the ball when he predicted the world wars, Hitler's coming into power and the jet airplane, considering he lived somewhere in the middle ages.

But historians didn't reckon on a modern Nostradamus of Chapel Hill when they wrote their tomes; evidently they closed the records thinking modern man could never equal old Nosty.

That is where they made a mistake. Chapel Hill can boast of 20th century prophet from Trenton, N. J., Sam Hirsch who predicted the flying atom bomb with a brain! What's more, he added a conscience.

It was last year when the Carolina Playmakers produced "The Atom Cantata," one of three experimental plays given in the early spring. Written by Sam Hirsch with music by Harold Shiffman of Greensboro, the play had as its star an animal-conceived, airborne, thinking atom bomb.

Critics of the cantata who described the plot as "amusing, but fantastic" are now quietly proceding to eat their words. U. S. scientists, following Hirsch's lead, have been reported to have such a bomb.

The press revealed the startling news, "American military scientists appear to be working on the idea of a 'thinking' guided missile that will identify the intended target from a picture, then attack it."

This "thinking" missile is told of as only "one of a number of variations of 'homing' guided missiles," and was discovered within the pages of a glossary of guided missile terms "made public by the government Research and Development board."

After he had written it, Hirsch, a graduate assistant in dramatic art here, described the "Atom Cantata" as the "experimental of experimentals to end all experimentals." He little realized at the time that he was playing the role of prognosticator.

Now understand, scientists are only "toying" with the idea—and it probably won't have a conscience—but students at the University have something more than a third-place-in-the-nation football team to crow over. They have, living in the same town with them, Sam Hirsch, the poor man's Nostradamus.

The Saturday Class Deal

Editor Louis Graves' flat statement in the Chapel Hill Weekly Friday that there will be no Saturday classes at the University was premature, to say the least. Only the complete board of trustees can make the final decision on Saturday classes, and the board has not yet met to act on the matter.

Although Chancellor House refused to comment and other officials declined to be quoted, it was evident that the Weekly's story caused a good deal of embarrassment and agitation in South building. Such a story might leave the impression that the University, or the visiting committee, is deciding in advance what the board of trustees is going to do. Obviously this is not an impression which the trustees would appreciate.

Actually, all that has happened on the Saturday class proposal so far is that the University has made a complete survey concerning its advisability and has delivered a report to the visiting committee of the board of trustees. It now seems fairly apparent that the report was unfavorable to Saturday classes and that the visiting committee decided to so report it to the trustees. Whether or not this is true, any deliberations within the visiting committee should have remained confidential until reported to the trustees. The premature release of the information was therefore embarrasing since it means that someone who was not in a position to release it spoke out of turn.

Instead of refusing to comment, it seems to us that it would have been more to the point had Chancellor House explained simply that a report had been made to the visiting committee and that was all anyone at the University could say; it was now the duty of the visiting committee to report to the board of trustees, and no one could know the final outcome until the board announced its decision.

Frank Graham's Case

The Case of Dr. Graham: Some Republicans are threatening to reopen the fight over the Atomic Energy Commission's loyalty clearance of Dr. Frank Graham, North Carolina University president and one of the nation's most distinguished liberals. A lot of people in the commission—and in the Administration generally—would welcome such a fight as an occasion to clear the Washington air. They believe Dr. Graham's case is a devasting blow against the doctrine of "guilt by association." Dr. Graham doesn't deny that he was associated with some organizations in which Communists wielded heavy influence. But as the commission pointed out in its report:

"From the entire record it is clear in Dr. Graham's case that such associations have neither impaired his integrity and independence, nor aroused in him the slightest sympathy for Communism or other anti-Democratic or subversive doctrines."

Ironically, the furor over Dr. Graham arose after a "leak from the Security Board which serves the Atomic Energy Commission and reportedly blackballed him. How "secure" is the security board?

Bull Session With a Purpose

A successful program presently being promoted by the YMCA and eight campus social fraternities is that of inviting professors, ministers and others who are well informed in various fields to lead discussions in the fraternity houses on questions related to their specialties.

So far the discussions have ranged over such widely varied subjects as "Is Government Control a Menace to Freedom?", "The Relevance of Religion for a College Student," "Problems of Marriage," "Problems of Human Relations," and "Is the President's Proposal for Health Insurance a Threat to Democracy?"

Included in the fraternities taking part in the program under the general direction of Gene Turner, chairman of the House Discussion committee of the YMCA, are Chi Phi, Chi Psi, DKE, Delta Psi, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Chi, TEP, and ZBT. An interesting feature of the program has been the practice of inviting neighboring fraternities, sororities and dormitory groups to take part in the discussions, and members of the fraternities report that the discussions have been arousing much interest.

The present program will continue through the first week of March, but it would be beneficial if it could be extended to include more campus groups. Such organized bull sessions on current and important questions are a valuable adjunct to the more formal scholastic approach to education, and usually are a good deal more interesting than the standard style of the classroom lecture.

Cases Reported

Men's Council Summaries

(The following cases involving violations of the Honor Code were recently tried by the Men's Council.)

A student was reported to the council for cheating on a Chemistry 42 test by erasing another student's name from a quiz paper that had already been turned in. The student not only erased the other man's name and placed his in its place, but also pledged the paper as his own. This discrepancy was of course noted, and the offender was turned over to the council. The boy did not admit his guilt for quite sometime despite the overwhelming evidence against him. However, he finally told h truth and admitted to cheating on the test and lying to the council. Since this student had been suspended from Carolin several years before and had later been readmitted, he was expelled by the council. This means that he can never return to this University as a student.

* * *

A student, who had been suspended from school last fall quarter, applied for readmission for the spring quarter. Since this man had lied continously to the council when his case was being heard, he was denied readmission at this time.

* * *

A student was reported to the council for handing in a theme that was not his own work in an English 3 course. On appearing before the council the student readily admitted his guilt and said that he had not realized the seriousness of his act at the time. Plagiarism is definitely a violation of our Honor Code since it is the handing in of someone else's work as your own. The student was suspended indefinitely—that is, he will not be able to return to Carolina for at least one quarter, and when he does return will be determined by the Council.

Page Harris,
Chairman, for the Men's Council

The Daily Tar Heel will publish, from time to time, additional reports of cases tried by the Men's Council. Students convicted by the Men's Council retain, under the Constitution, the right to appeal to the Student Council, whose rules of procedure for the filing and hearing of appeals were recently made public. Although the trials for violations of the Honor and Campus codes are not open to the public, the Councils hope that through publication of typical cases, names having been deleted, the campus will become familiar with the policies of the judicial branch of student government in carrying forward the Carolina tradition of student responsibility for self-government under the Honor and Campus codes.

Bloodless Revolution

Students' Money Not Wanted

(Reprinted from The Cavalier Daily, University of Virginia)

Every now and then students at the University get involved in a misunderstanding with the city authorities of the thriving metropolis adjacent to which Mr. Jefferson situated his "academic village." You can't walk far without encountering someone in a black knit tie who wants to know why he should have to shell out five percent to the nabobs down at City Hall every time he takes in a flick. Then, on the other hand, there's no doubt that down in the office of the city's Department of Sanitation the boys behind the brooms are wondering how it is that on Sunday mornings several of the more stolid residential boulevards down town happen to be knee-deep in beer cans.

Chances are nothing will ever come of either of these grievances. But whatever does happen, it won't hold a candle to the goings on up in Hanover, New Hampshire, where within a few hours the students of Dartmouth College actually took over legal control of the city government, voted a dozen local statutes they didn't like right off the books, and came within an ace of leaving the city of Hanover the not-so-proud possessor of an architectural atrocity that would have made the tower of Pisa look normal as could be.

It all began around the turn of the century, when the town fathers of Hanover got the bright idea of feathering the municipal nest by levying a poll tax of $2.00 (which was money in those days) on students at the college eligible to vote in town meetings. Meaning everyone over 18, whether they had any interest in voting in town meetings or not. Which they didn't. The burgomeisters gave as an excuse the undeniable fact that the students caused wear and tear on the city's streets by walking on them and further more that they put local merchants under great emotional strain by buying so many things from them. After all, the least the Dartmouth boys could do was to pay a little something for these depredations. Hence the poll tax brainstorm.

The students, however, who had up to this point never showed much interest in politics, were madder than a hatful of wet hornets. At the next town meeting after the fall semester had begun, the entire enrollment of the college, over 700 strong, showed up in a body. It developed that they had a sizable majority over the townspeople, and they didn't waste any time taking advantage of this situation. After each student had come foreward and with a great show of ceremony forked over his $2.00 to the astonished mayor, they got down to voting.

First of all, they proposed and passed a resolution to lay down a two-lane sidewalk eight miles through the woods to the town of Lebanon, the nearest place where a Dartmouth student could get a glass of beer. They further specified that the sidewalk should have no cracks, as a number of those present were roller-skating fans and were out to combine business with pleasure.

Furthermore, they threatened that at the next meeting they would railroad through a proposal to tear down the City Hall and erect a new one 75 feet tall and two feet square to house the mayor (whose salary was cut in half while they were about it) and all the departments of the local government. Naturally, by now the more conservative elements of the community were in a state of enraged befuddlement. The town clerk advised the mayor that the student's proposed sidewalk was frighteningly legal and that unless something was done to get the college off Hanover's neck he would shortly be having to pack his portly frame into an office which was nothing more or less than a glorified chimney.

In the end, the student were persuaded by the humiliated town government to take back their two dollars and relinquish their devastating vote. They thereupon merrily trooped (or roller-skated) back to the campus and rested on their laurels.

Alumni Series

Parker: Outstanding Contributions to Humanity

By "Wink" Locklair

The North Carolina Israelite Gold Medal is awarded each year to "the Carolinian who has made an outstanding contribution to inter-faith amity and human rights." The award has been made four times and won three times by University of North Carolina graduates: Dr. Frank Graham, the University's president; the late Josephus Daneils, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer from 1894 to 1948, and Herschel V. Johnson, our present Ambassador to Brazil.

On February 10, at a dinner in Charlotte, another distinguished alumnus, Judge John J. Parker, Class of '07, will become the 1948 recipient of the Israelite honor.

Judge Parker, who is senior circuit judge of the Fourth Circuit Court, has been in the local, national and international limelight for well over 20 years. He is most recently associated with the international tribunal which tried to top Nazi war criminals at Nuermberg from November 20, 1945, to October 1, 1946. The American Bar Association medal in 1948 went to Judge Parker. He was the first Southerner to receive it.

JUDGE JOHN J. PARKER

When he attended Carolina during the years 1903-07, John Parker found it worthwhile to earn some extra money. So he took a job selling tailor-made suits, a profitable business which netted him about $300 a year. He was very active, very popular on the campus regardless of his time-consuming work, and he was chosen president of his freshman class and the senior class. He was on the debating team and served as president of the Athletic Association. He received his AB in 1907, his LLB the following year. After that he practiced law for awhile. In 1919-20, Judge Parker became president of the State Bar Association. Other honors that have come to him through the years include honorary degrees from Davidson (1940), he University of Michigan (1942) and Tulane (1948) He is a member of the Board of Trustees and his son, Francis, is in the University Law school.

Judge Parker's sincere regard for Chapel Hill is reflected in a gesture he made last year. He turned over his entire file of documents from the Nuermberg trials to the University library. Probably only three or four similar sets as complete as this will ever be available for study and inspection.

Snip, Snip, Gyp

OLYMPIA, Wash.—(UP)—The House of Representatives was thrown into an uproar today when a law was proposed reducing haircut prices for presons "having less than a full head o' hair."

The House was considering a bill regulating barbering when Rep. Vernon A. Smith arose, his bare scalp glistening under the lights, and suggested the amendment.

"Fees charged for haircutting for persons having less than a full head of hair shall be reduced in proportion to the quantity of hair the consumer possesses."

Cries of "Get the hair out of your eyes," greeted him.

Smith, a King county Republican, explained that his measure was strictly not a partisan bill.

Rep. Brigham Young opposed the amendment on grounds that barbers had to look harder when people had less hair.

The vote was against the measure and it was tabled.

Free Speech 'On Probation'

Only a few hours after President Truman extolled American democracy in his inaugural address, three professors at the University of Washington were fired because of their political beliefs. Three others who swallowed their manhood and signed the notorious non-Communist affadavit were put on probation. Probation! Since when do we put people on probation in this country as regards freedom of speech and political opinions? What have we come to that human dignity and common decency can be thus violated?

The rapid development of fascism in our country has become too clear to be denied. Not even an ostrich could ignore the facts. The offensive first drove the liberal commentators off the air and then beat the trade unions into line. Next Hollywood was intimidated by indictments and firings. Then government workers were subjected to the same treatment. Now it's the turn of teachers and intellectuals. When will it stop? There is an obvious answer. It will stop when we stop it. Fascism in Germany, Italy, and Japan began gradually and came to power because no effective resistance was made. It was not inevitable, nor is it inevitable here. Fascism can be imposed on people who refuse to fold up under intimidation.

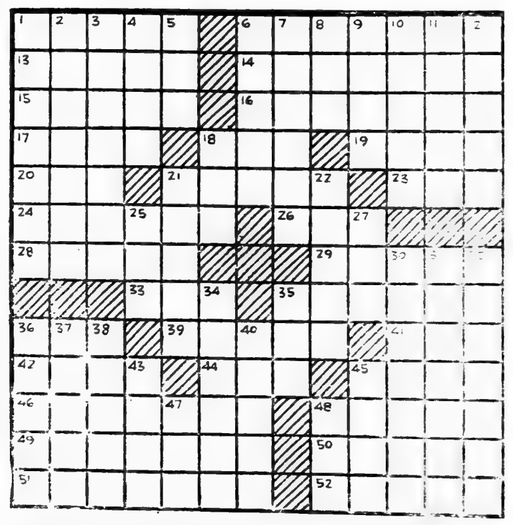
The Fair Employment Headache

By Edlyn W. Freerks

In our modern society of interdependence and division of labor, the "right to work" with fair compensation is continually being given more and more consideration. Yet in this country of supposedly equal opportunities millions of people are being denied this right for reasons other than lack of job qualifications.

The chief victims of job discrimination are Negroes, who constitute about one-tenth of the country's population, although Mexicans, Jews and recent European immigrants are often denied employment solely on account of race, creed, or ancestry.

One field of employment in which there is comparatively little discrimination of this kind is the Federal Government itself employer of around two million persons. President Truman has personally directed the U. S. Civil Service Commission and the Armed Forces to eliminate racial segregation. However, government employees are still segregated in the Southeast, which limits promotional opportunities for Negroes.



The most expensive effort to wipe out unjust discrimination in employment matters has been undertaken by the state of New York, which enacted a law setting up a Fair Employment Practices committee in 1945. The law has worked very well, principally because its administrators have been more intent upon educating employers, unions, and workers rather than obtaining court sentences for anybody.

For a few years during and immediately after World War II there existed a temporary National Fair Employment Practices committee, which assisted to some extent in getting employment in war plants for minority groups and equal pay for equal work. However, attempts to enact a permanent law failed in both the 79th and 80th Congresses, and passage even in the 81st Congress is doubtful as long as Southern senators can filibuster it to death.

An end to discriminatory hiring practices is one of the most controversial of all civil rights proposals. While most minority, labor, and left-wing organizations generally favor such a step, the opposition at the moment seems much stronger. Even middle-of-the-road Southerners are inclined to believe that federal legislation now would be unwise and untimely, although many of the same people heartily endorse anti-lynching and anti-poll tax laws. They and other opponents of anti-discrimination legislation point out that conditions in the Southeast are much different from those in New York, and that good race relations would actually suffer a setback if traditional patterns of employment were suddenly altered.

Proponents of FEPC legislation state that discrimination on the basis of race, color, creed, or national origin is fundamentally unjust, and that its practice also results in a huge economic loss. They say that anti-discrimination laws of certain states and cities have been, on the whole, successful, and, therefore, the entire country should take this step.

Tonight at the regular weekly meeting of the Carolina Political Union these and other views are certain to be expressed while members of the organization and visitors discuss the issue.

Inspired Tar Heel Cagers Upset Blue Devils, 64-34

Kappler, Nearman Lead Scott's Men In Surprising Win

By Billy Carmichael, III

Surprising North Carolina atomized dumb-founded Duke university, 64-34, before 6,000 astonished basketball fans in Woollen gym last night.

The Tar Heels, underdogs and under the fire of criticism from recent debacles, started strong, remained seemingly so through the game and ended with an added flourish that left the Blue Devils and the bookies with no recall or a ball game.

The game was a Miracle of the Sage, Tom Scott who keyed his underlings up to the point that produced numerous points throughout the evening, while the Dukesters, noticeably flat and tired after a week of hard play, couldn't hit the broadside of a backboard.

Team Leaders

The Tar Heels were led at a gallop throughout the evening by Nemo Nearman and Hugo Kappler, the former contributing the high total of the evening—18 points—while the latter contributed both tallies and the supporting drive spark of floor play.

Kappler sent the locals off in their paces hitting a jump, follow-up and set shot in the opening phases of the game to push the Tar Heels to a 6-2 lead after 4:45.

From there the Scottmen moved methodically forward to an 11-5 lead after 10 minutes while the Blue Devils could find little but madness in any of their scoring methods.

The remainder of the first half was a continued monopoly on the part of the greedy Tar Heels, who moved to a 24-16 halftime lead while the hapless visitors stayed on the outskirts of the ball game through some fairly successful efforts on the foul line.

The second period developed into a rout of the first order as the Tar Heels hit the basket whenever they got a good hand or two on the ball, while the Blue Devils had reduced their attack to the procedure of firing away at almost anything that moved.

More Field Goals

Nearman, who had been continually hitting fouls, began opening up with field goals at this point in the act, that brought the fans continually to their feet, and new Blue Devil pivotmen continually into the ball game in an effort to stop the giant middleman.

At 12:10 Nearman fouled out as the Carolina total continued to rise, and three other Tar Heel starters, Coy Carson, Dan Nyimicz, and Charlie Thorne, who had been reaping harvests of baskets, soon followed the center to the bench.

Still Duke could find no relief in the Tar Heels that followed and at the end, it was still all Carolina.

The contest was wild and wooly. The officating was even woolier with two technicals being called on the God-fearing, but sometimes overanxious Tar Heels.

The Tar Heels hit 26 for 60 shots from the floor for a 43 per cent figure, well under par for the course. Duke hit 7 of 74 for a hardly worth figuring percentage of .0904.

One unusual feature of the game was the fact that the Blue Devils were able to make but seven field goals throughout the entire game. And one of these came when a Carolina player touched the basket on a Duke goal attempt and the referee ruled it good.

Albans Paces Carolina Trackmen To Unofficial Victory Over Duke

By Frank Allston, Jr.

Paced by the outstanding efforts of 23-year old freshman Bill Albans, the Carolina indoor track team smashed to an unofficial 76 2-3-28 1-3 victory over Duke in the two-day meet in the Tin Can yesterday and Friday.

Albans scored five firsts and a third for the Tar Heel runners by cleaning up the high jump, broad jump, high and low hurdles and the 60-yard dash. Bill's third place effort came in the shot put.

In all, the Tar Heels captured eight of the 12 first places and registered clean sweeps in the 1½ mile run on Friday and the high hurdles and the broad jump yesterday.

The Carolina freshman, following the example set by their experienced brothers, edged out the Duke yearlings, 37-31 in the unofficial scoring.

Ties Conference Record

In the 70-yard low hurdles, Albans sped to a 7.8 sec. performance to beat out Dick Taylor, Bob Morrow and Jack Moody, all of Carolina. Albans' unofficial time ties the Southern conference record set by Carolina's Corpening in 1940.

Albans' time of 6.4 in the 60-yard dash and 8.6 in the 70-yard high hurdles both were only one tenth of a second off the existing conference records.

Julian MacKenzie, Tar Heel miler, ran the ¾-mile event in 3:05.1 on Friday. MacKenzie's performance was one of the better times in that event turned in the history of track at Chapel Hill.

Other outstanding Tar Heel performances in the two-day meet were registered by freshmen Frank Scott, Gene Brigham, and Gordon Hamrich. Scott turned in a 6.5 time for the 60 while Brigham won with 330 in 39.5 and Hamrich flashed to a 3-24.83¼ mile run.

Frosh Sweep Two

The Carolina frosh registered two clean sweeps and captured five out of eight first places in running up their victory over the Blue Imp runners. Duke, however, registered a clean sweep in the broad jump.

Carolina's freshman sweeps were in the 70-yard low hurdles and in the 660-yard run.

Coach Ranson announced at the conclusion of the meet that there would be a similar meet with Duke here next week-end. The shot put will start at 2 o'clock on Friday and the high jump, relay, middle and distance events will follow at 3:30. The other events will be run Saturday, starting at 2:30.

State, scheduled to participate in the meet yesterday and failing to make it, is tentatively slated to compete this week-end.

Duke Frosh Win Over Tar Babies In 55-54 Battle

By Lew Chapman

Duke's freshmen cagers may have won the preliminary contest last night at Woollen gym when when they barely edged out a fighting Carolina frosh quintet 55-54, but to the Blue Imps the tastes of victory were not as sweet as they had been when they humbled the Tar Babies earlier in the season.

Last night a new Tar Baby five took to the court to do battle with the Blue Imps. The Carolina yearlings were bubbling over with spirit and determination, the only thing that could have overcome the terrific advantage that Duke had in size. This spirit and determination reached its greatest heights in the last moment when the Tar Babies, after hanging on gamely for 39 minutes behind by five to six points, made the supreme effort to snatch the game away from the amazed Dukesters.

With the score 55-50 in favor of Duke with but a minute left to go, Frank Redding, the Carolina center who was a sparkplug in the second half drive, dumped in a two-handed jump shot to narrow the margin to three points and keep a faint hope alive. But after Duke had missed several tries, sly John Bowersox swished a long one-hander with 30 seconds left to reduce the margin to one point as the Carolina fans went wild and the Duke bench squirmed in agony.

Bedlam reigned in the next thirty seconds as the Blue Imps feverishly tried to control the ball while the Tar Babies, when in possession of the ball, unsuccessfully tried to shake a man loose to get a shot at those winning pair of credits. The nerve-tingling fray ended with Duke bringing the ball up-court after a Carolina court length pass went awry.

Except for that last hectic moment, the Tar Babies just managed to keep plugging behind the strutting Blue Imps. The question was when are the Tar Babies going to crack and let Duke turn the game into a runaway. The pepped up charges of Coach Jim Hamilton never did crack.

The lineups:

Carolina		Duke
Eckert (6), f.		(19) Ashley
Harter (12), f.		(6) Groat
Redding (7), c.		(8) Kulpan
Bowersox (12), g.		(7) Allen
Cheek (4), g.		(14) Crowder

Substitutes: Carolina: Barr (6), Slemp (7), Godwin, Smith. Duke: Genberg (1), Fleming, Engberg, Latimer, Broks.

For Duke Game

A limited number of tickets to the next Duke-Carolina basketball game will go on sale at the Woollen gymnasium ticket window tomorrow morning to Carolina students desiring to see the game.

Only 1,500 seats are available for the contest, which will be on Feb. 25. The price per ticket is $1.50.

Bonus Rule Scheduled To Come Before Board

NEW YORK, Feb. 5—The controversial major league bonus rule was expected to be taken up today at a special session of baseball's five-man executive council.

Although the agenda of the meeting was not announced, it was believed that a special committee, appointed last December to investigate the bonus rule, will recommend changes to the council.

One source said that the rule would be changed so that any major league, triple-A or double-A league player who receives more than $6,000 to sign will be declared a "bonus" player. The limit for class A would be $4.500 and for class B, C and D would be $3,000.

Freshmen Matmen Down High Point For 18-12 Win

Coach Irv Zirpel's freshman wrestling crew won victory number five yesterday in Woollen gym at the expense of High Point high school, 18-12. In High Point the Tar Babies had the toughest competition to date, previously rolling over Davidson, VPI, N. C. State and Greensboro.

In a preliminary match Carolina's Bob Pickard decisioned Ward, 4-0.

Bob McGimsey, a 128-pounder who is still undefeated, won the first match for the Tar Babies on a 7-3 decision after 121-pounder Tom Williams was pinned in 1:10 of the second period.

In the 136-pound class Tar Baby Buddy Dotson was credited with a fall, the first of the match, over Hudson in the third round.

Joe Aaron, wrestling in the 155-pound class in place of regular Bill Qualls who is out due to an injury, lost on a fall in the early stages of the second round.

Tom Coxe continued his winning ways in the light heavyweight division by pinning Grady in 58 seconds of the second round.

In what was perhaps the outstanding event of the schedule, heavyweight Bob Lovick earned a 3-2 decision over High Pointer Bragg. Lovick scored his points on a take down and an escape to neutral while the best Bragg could manage was two escapes.

The next match on the Tar Baby matmen's schedule is next Thursday evening when they journey to High Point for a return bout with the Bisons.

The complete summary:

121-Baird (HP) pinned Williams, 1:10 second round.

128—McGimsey (UNC) decisioned Slaydon, 7-3.

136—Dotson (UNC) pinned Hudson, 2:10 of the third round.

145—Farber (UNC) and Foster, 5-5 draw.

155—Seckler (HP) pinned Aaron, 50 seconds of the second period.

165—Coxe (UNC) pinned Grady, 58 seconds of the second round.

Unl. —Lovick (UNC) decisioned Bragg, 3-2.

BADMINTON

7:00—Brittain vs Smith; Crowin vs Council; Stewart vs Rice; Gerns vs Link; Pennington vs Clampett.

8:15—McFarland vs Grubbs; Aldridge vs Kueyk; Wadsworth vs Ebersole; McGinty vs Hayworth; Blount vs Cloyd; Westbrook vs Gordon.

All matches on tonight's schedule must be played tonight or they will be forfeited.

HANDBALL

7:30—Sig Chi 1 vs Chi Psi 1 for fraternity championship.

Ohio State Swimmers Bring Halt To Carolina's String Of Victories

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 5—(UP)—North Carolina's long string of swimming victories came to an abrupt end here today as Ohio State's powerful Buckeyes marked up a 43-32 triumph over Coach Ralph Casey's touring Tar Heel mermen.

The defeat was the first for the Tar Heels since Georgia Tech tripped them two years ago. Over that span they had accumulated 26 victories without loss. However, Ohio State is the NCAA titlist and was runnerup to Michigan State for the National AAU championship last year.

Coach Casey's visitors could manage but three first places against the strong Buckeyes. Norm Sper raced home first in the 150-yard backstroke and the two Carolina relay teams also scored firsts.

The 300-yard medley relay team of Norm Sper, Dick Twining, and Steve Osborne and the 400-yard freestyle medley combination of Jess Greenbaum, Twining, Floyd Drew, and Osborne provided the other two first-place finishes.

Leaders for the champion Ohio State squad were Hirosi and Smith, each of whom captured a pair of firsts. Hirosi edged out Twining to take the 100-yard freestyle and then came in ahead of Greenbaum and Drew in the 50-yard freestyle.

Smith got his firsts in the 200-yard freestyle and the 440-yard freestyle. Harlan and Bartele accounted for the other two Ohio State firsts by winning the diving and 200-yard breaststroke respectively.

The Tar Heels, who still are unbeaten in Southern confenence play, will return to Chapel Hill tomorrow. Carolina still hasn't lost in its last 28 conference battles.

The summary:

300-yd. medley relay—Carolina (Sper, Twining, Osborne). 2:58.5.

200-yd. freestyle—Smith (OS), Thomas (NC), Nakamaous (OS). 2.10.3.

50-yd. freestyle — Hirosi (OS), Greenbaum (NC), Drew (NC). 23.7 sec.

Diving—Harlan (OS) 410.5, Cahoun (OS) 347.8, Crone (NC) 310.5.

100-yd. freestyle—Hirosi (OS), Twining (NC), Congelliere (OS). 61.8 sec.

150-yd. backstroke—Sper (NC), Knight (OS), Rodenbach (OS). 1:37.5.

200-yd. breaststroke—Bartele (OS), Shauer (OS), Breeden (NC). 2:31.4.

440-yd. freestyle—Smith (OS), Thomas (NC). P. Knight (OS). 4:47.9.

400-yd. freestyle relay—Carolina (Greenbaum, Twining, Drew, and Osborne). 3:34.4.

Football Drills Begin Monday

Football practice comes to an official start on Monday afternoon at Carolina as Coach Carl Snavely makes his initial preparations for the Tar Heels' arduous 1949 grid schedule.

All members of last year's varsity, all members of the freshman team, and others desiring to try out for the team are requested to report to Coach Snavely tomorrow.

Winter practice is expected to continue some three weeks until February 26, and Coach Snavely is hoping for good weather during the workouts.

The practice field has been occupied for the past few days with aspiring grid candidates who sought to round into shape early for the workouts.

Coed Cagers Place Second in Sports Day

Captained by Ruth Baine, a selected team of Carolina coeds won second place in the annual Basketball Sports day at Women's college yesterday.

Teams representing Meredith, ECTC, Greensboro college, Guilford and Carolina participated in the all-day double elimination tournament. After the final game a cup was presented to Meredith, who defeated Carolina 12 to 7 to win the tournament.

Carolina posted wins against WC and ECTC before succumbing to the Meredith team.

Playing for Carolina were Jean Cashion, Bootsie Taylor, Carolyn Guthrie, Pat Lancaster, Phylis Furgerson, Margaret Booth, Linda Gillman, Peppy Lucas, B. A. Pope, Mary Ann Happer, Dot Smith, Lib Browning, and Ruth Baine. Miss Dorothy Casey, Miss Frances Kellam and Marilyn Crawford accompanied the team as supervisors.

Chapters Announce Secession From U.S. For KA 'Old South Ball' Held In Raleigh

Kappa Alpha chapters at Carolina, Duke, Wake Forest and N. C. State joined together yesterday in Raleigh for the first of a series of annual celebrations.

Telegrams were sent to President Truman and Governor Scott, announcing the four chapters' secession from the union for a twenty-four hour period beginning midnight, February 4.

The highlights of yesterday's festivities was the KA Old South ball, held in the Memorial Auditorium with Blue Barron and his orchestra furnishing the music. The Confederate motif was carried out with the ladies dressed in hooped skirts, and the men in Confederate uniforms or period costumes. The auditorium was decorated with Confederate flags and banners.

The all-day program began at noon with a luncheon for all KA members at the State college fraternity house, followed by an informal reception at the Bon Air Supper club.

At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the KA's, in costume, staged a parade down Fayetteville street to the auditorium where a Confederate flag raising ceremony was held. Afterwards, members of the fraternity and their dates returned to the Bon Air for a banquet.

Kappa Alpha, originally founded at Washington and Lee in 1865, established its chapters at the four local institutions as follows: Tau chapter at Wake Forest, 1880; Upsilon chapter at Carolina 1881; Alpha Phi chapter at Duke, 1901; and Alpha Omega chapter at State, 1903.

Members of the "quad-chapter" steering committee this year are: LeRoy Martin, Jr., Wake Morest; Carl Sapp, Duke; Robert Dew and John Williamson, State; and Robin Kirby, Carolina.

Sponsor's from the Carolina chapter for the weekend were: Marilyn Strokhorb, with Marvin Lee, president; and Nancy Jane Ansley with Robin Kirby, dance committeeman.

Friday night the chapter here held a barbecue and dance at Turnage's in Durham.

Public Health Dance Held Friday Night

The annual midwinter dinner-dance for students, faculty, and friends of the School of Public Health was held Friday night from 6:45 until midnight at the Carolina inn.

Alpha Gams Initiate Pledges, Party Included

The Alpha Gamma Delta sorority held its formal initiation Wednesday night when seventeen pledges became active members and were entertained at a small post-initiation party.

Newly initiated members are Katharyn Altizer, Jo Ann Armstrong, Pat Chandler, Barbara Nell Crawford, Nancy Curtis, Eleanor Hope Newell, Eleanor de Grange, Svea Ogg, Sally Osborne, Marion Powers, Lucille Reiley, Sandra Sisk, Ellen Smith, Mary Elizabeth St. John, Barbara Thomas, Byra Mitchell, and Allene Warren.

Tuesday night the sorority-fraternity parties continued when the Chi Omega sorority gave a frontier party for the Phi Gamma Deltas, and the Pi Beta Phi's were entertained by a Beta Theta Pi supper party.

Thursday night the Alpha Delta Pi's were given a dinner party by the Sigma Chi fraternity. Tomorrow night the Pi Beta Phi sorority will carry on seasonal parties with a circus party for the Phi Delta Thetas.

Pi Phi members, headed by circus master Gladys Cotrell, will present the proverbial side shows, barkers, and wild animals of a three ring circus. The party was planned by social chairman Jane Pointer.

ADPi Charlotte Wilson is the most recent pin-up on campus. She is wearing the Sigma Chi pin of Bartow Garrette.

Church Groups Are Continuing With Month-Long Discussions

The Wesley foundation will initiate a month-long emphasis on vocation guidance tonight in its regular meeting. Among several guests will be Caxton Doggett, secretary of the student work for the board of missions of the Methodist church.

He will discuss the summer service opportunities and student work camps in Mexico and Cuba. Following the discussion, students are invited to a "coffee hour" at the home of Mrs. Carl Smith.

Other student church groups continue discussions begun several weeks ago. The Canterbury club will hold the third in a series of discussions on Christian Marriage and the Family at its regular meeting Tuesday night at 6 o'clock in the Parish house.

The Presbyterian Friday night group will continue to discuss the topic of a Christian and the University. The Presbyterians will also sponsor a square dance Saturday night upstairs in the Sunday School room.

Members of the Lutheran Student association will meet tonight at 6:30 o'clock in the Y to discuss "Sunday as a Day for Worship" in relation to their study of the Ten Commandments. The Baptist Student Union will study the career, writings, and the thinking of Dr. Reinhold Neibhur, outstanding theologian of today, who will visit the campus next Sunday.

Linewood Blackburn, a missionary to Angola, Belgian Congo, will speak to the Methodist co-op supper group tomorrow night, and Thursday night Dr. M. O. Williams, missionary personal secretary will address the group. Anyone who would like to attend these two suppers is asked to call Brooks Patton at the Wesley Foundation office before 4 o'clock either day.

PiKA Composer Visits Chapter

The Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity had as its guests during the past week Ernest Shields, composer of the national "Dreamgirl of PiKA," and L. A. McCall, Jr., national vice-president of the fraternity. Shields is a former Davidson college PiKA, and McCall hails from Florence, S. C.

The PiKA pledges are now working on a new social room under a part of the fraternity house heretofore unexcavated. This is their year's project.

Tuesday night the Kappa Sigma's entertained the Tri Delts at a buffet supper. After the meal, pledges presented a skit and six of the actives did an old fashioned "Can-Can." The party was brought to a close with some group singing.

Pledges Feted By Sigma Chi's Dinner-Dance

The Sigma Chi's presented their annual entertainment for pledge members last night in the form of a formal dinner dance, when the fraternity's house was decorated to resemble a supper-night club.

As fraternity members and their dates entered the house lighted by blue candles set in silver holders, they passed through a door decked on either side with potted palm plants. Green plants surrounded the candles on the mantle pieces and tables.

With the "Stormy Weathers" playing in the background, the guests were served dinner at 9 o'clock. After dinner, at intermission time, pledge members were introduced with their dates by the master of ceremonies, John Clayton, also a chaperone.

They came from behind the traditional Sigma Chi cross and proceeded to the center of the dance floor to form the outline of the white cross. Following the ceremony, a no-break dance for pledges and their dates took place.

The Sigma Chi pledges entertained are: Bill Rue, president of the pledge class, Rabbit (Robest) Smitherman, secretary, Rodney McKnight, treasurer, John Ingram, Sid Hoots, Julian Albergotte, Ted Riley, Eddie Clement, Herman Moore, and Jim Adams.

Others are Tap Price, Jacy Rush, Ken Tilley, Buddy Bedgood, Ken Wright, Vernon Mountcastle, Allen Johnson, Hardy Hardison, Baird Sills, Doug Berger, Mike Carver, Andy Bell, Jim Caudill, Fred Glover, Lern Smith, Bobby House, Norm Harden, and Jack Thompson.

Chairman of the planning committee was Bill Pruden, and the chaperons were Mr. and Mrs. John Clayton, Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Allen, and Dr. and Mrs. James L. Godfrey.

Kappa Sigs Present Annual Pledge Ball

The Alpha Mu chapter of Kappa Sigma honored its pledges and their dates last night at the fraternity's "Black and White" ball held at the Carolina inn.

The ballroom was decorated as a grape arbor with white vines and silver-black clusters. The pledges and their dates were presented beneath the glistening silhouette of the Stars and Crescent of Kappa Sigma.

From the crescent the couples moved out onto the dance floor where they formed the Greek letters of the fraternity. Roy Cole and his orchestra then played "When the Lights of the Chapter are Lowered" and the pledges and their dates danced in a shower of black and white balloons.

Each of the pledges' dates was presented with a bouquet of roses and each of the actives' dates received a bracelet, as remembrance of the occasion.

Immediately preceding the dance a dinner party was held at the Terrace View supper club. After the dance, pledges, members and guests returnd to the house for a buffet breakfast.

Pledges and their dates presented were: Suzanne Dry, with Thomas Maness, president of the pledge class: Stag Nicolson with William Sanders, vice-president; Betsy Merritt with William F. Badgett, secretary-treasurer; June Faulconer with John Stratford, intramural manager; Phyllis Castner with David Brenegar; Alice Lee with William Warren: Carolyn Andrews with William Spillers; Wrae Harrison with Homer Hudson; Pat George with John Dorch;

Phi Kappa Sig Party Is Held This Weekend

A banquet at the fraternity house this afternoon will conclude the annual Phi Kappa Sigma house party which got underway last Friday afternoon with a buffet supper for members and their dates.

After the banquet this afternoon each girl present will receive a miniature pledge paddle bearing the name and crest of the fraternity and her date's name.

Festivities began Friday when the house was decorated in the French cabaret motif. Saturday afternoon the group had a skating party at the Rollerdrome outside of Burlington.

The climax of the weekend was a formal dance given at the Woman's gym Saturday night in honor of the new pledges. Chic Burroughs and his Carolinians furnished the music.

Fred Mills, social chairman, was in charge of all arrangements for the weekend.

Strong Winds, Drifting Snow Threaten West

Trains Stalled, Livestock Lost

CHICAGO, Feb. 7—(UP)—Shrieking winds shuffled the immense snows of the West into new drifts today, stalling transcontinental trains, isolating towns and threatening some areas with the complete loss of livestock.

For the blizzard-battered West it meant that the back-breaking work to open snow-clogged roads and relieve human and livestock suffering had to begin all over again.

The new storm struck at northern California, Idaho, Oregon, Utah, Nevada and Wyoming and moved east. In its path were the range states of Nebraska and and South Dakota.

Already 616 persons have been counted dead from the bitter weather over the entire nation since the first of the year. The toll includes deaths from exposure and freezing and highway and other accidents attributed to the weather.

The Union Pacific railroad reported that 45 of its trains are stalled in the storm area between Omaha and Pocatello, Ida., with the majority in Wyoming. It said they included a troop train and seven mail trains.

United air lines said its western fields are open but planes are making more than the usual stops at Cheyenne and Rock Springs, Wyo., and Salt Lake city to handle crowds of stranded travelers. It said extra equipment will be put in service if necessary.

Idaho declared a state of emergency because of the new blow and appealed for federal aid to cope with drifted roads and crippled commerce.

A federal expert at Salt Lake city feared the entire Utah livestock industry valued at $40,000,000 may be wiped out unless the weather abates soon.

A member of the Wyoming disaster relief committee said the state's plight "is much worse than can be imagined." Officials also feared for the state's livestock.

The Chicago and North Western railroad canceled most of its crack through trains to the West.

NORTH STATE ROUNDUP

Church Fire

BURLINGTON, Feb. 7—(UP)—Fire sweeping through the Glenhope Baptist church here yesterday did about $75,000 worth of damage before it was checked, Rev. George W. Swinney, pastor of the church, estimated today.

Index Drops

RALEIGH, Feb. 7—(UP)—The index of prices received for all farm products in North Carolina climbed three points during the month ending Jan. 15, the Crop Reporting service said today.

Weekend Deaths

At least 13 persons lost their lives in accidents or violence in North Carolina during the weekend, a United Press survey showed today. Four of those killed were burned to death and two died in a plane crash.

To Stop Rebates

WILMINGTON, Feb. 7—(UP)—A bill to prevent doctors from taking rebates or "kickbacks" of any kind will be introduced in the North Carolina General assembly very soon, the State Medical society said today.

Bond Issue

RALEIGH, Feb. 7—(UP)—The city of Lillington and Pitt County's board of commissioners today announced bond issues totaling $115,000, the state Local Government commission reported.

Bevin Protests Primate's Trial As 'Repugnant'

LONDON, Feb. 7—(UP)—Foreign Secretary Earnest Bevin said today that the Hungarian campaign to create prejudice against Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty is "repugnant" and Britain views the whole case with "grave concern."

Bevin made the statement to members of Parliament who called at the Foreign office seeking assurances that he was doing everything possible to express Britain's dissatisfaction with the treatment of the Cardinal.

As Bevin spoke, Hungary rejceed Britain's protest against the ban on Foreign representatives at Mindszenty's trial. A copy of the Hungarian reply was delivered in Budapest but had not yet reached London.

Six thousand Roman Catholics attended a rally in London's Albert hall tonight to protest the Cardinal's arrest. Another 20,000 who

Co-op Meeting Set for Tonight

The Vets Co-op of Victory Village will hold its annual general membership meeting this evening at 8 o'clock in the Medical building auditorium, Bill Goulding, chairman of the board of directors, announced yesterday.

Nine new members of the board of directors will be elected, the yearly financial report will be given, and all operations of the co-op will be discussed. An amendment to raise the par value of stock from $1 to $10 will be voted upon.

FEPC Gets Nod Of CPU Debate In Sunday Meet

Federal fair employment practices legislation was approved by a 14 to 2 vote Sunday night following the Carolina Political union discussion in the Grail room of Graham Memorial. Several persons present abstained from voting.

The vote recommended legislation by the 81st Congress similar to the measure introduced in 1945 by Representative Norton of New Jersey.

The Norton bill provided for a permanent Fair Employment Practices commission of five members empowered to consider complaints and issue cease and desist orders in specific cases of discrimination.

The Russian "peace offensive" was elected as the topic for discussion at the next meeting, Sunday night, Feb. 21. No discussion will be held next week due to a conflict with the speech by Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr in Hill hall.

Two new members, Henry Adams and Hal Darden, were admitted to CPU membership Sunday night. Adams is a senior in sociology from Lenoir and Darden is a sophomore from Orlando, Fla.

Dental Students Must See Armstrong

Students who have been admitted, rejected, or intend to enroll in a dental school for fall, 1949, are requested to see Roy Armstrong, 208 South building. The North Carolina Dental society requests this information. Students are urged to see Armstrong at their earliest opportunity.

First Female Work

Press to Publish Biography Of Cornelia Phillips Spencer

The life story of Cornelia Phillips Spencer, as written by Phillips Russell, author and professor of journalism, will be published here in the spring by the University Press.

This is believed to be the first biography of a North Carolina woman ever attempted, and the author says of it, "I believe this can really be called a revelation of the heart of a woman."

Mrs. Spencer has the distinction of being the only woman in the state, and possibly in the nation, who has had the honor of having two college buildings named after her. One is Spencer hall, women's dormitory, and the other is at Women's college in Greensboro.

She was the friend and correspondent of statesman and other notable figures both before and after the Civil War, and it was of her that Zebulon B. Vance, war governor of North Carolina, said to his private secretary, R. H. Battle of Raleigh, "I believe she is the smartest woman in North Carolina—yes, and the smartest man, too."

The title of the book will be "The Woman Who Rang the Bell." This refers to the time when at the re-opening of the University in 1875, after five years of silence due to the hostile influences of the reconstruction era, Mrs. Spencer picked up the village postmaster and two little girls and herself came up to the campus to ring the college bell in celebration. She has often been the theme of President Frank P. Graham's speeches.

Budget to Be Big Problem Of N.C. Solons

Final Hearings Are Tomorrow

RALEIGH, Feb. 7—(UP)—North Carolina's lawmakers returned to the capitol today to begin another week of sessions expected to open the showdown on the giant budget recommendations.

The Joint Appropriations committee will hold its last public hearings tomorrow, endjng almost a month of meetings to listen to a parade of state agencies asking for more money. Already state departments have requested a whopping $117,000,000 more than was allotted to them in the history-making record budget.

But before they got down to the business of paring or boosting the recommendations, the legislators were due for another lecture on Gov. Kerr Scott's proposed $200,000,000 road bond issue.

Scott met with newsmen at 6:30 last night for a statewide radio round-table interview on his road program.

Schools still held the center of the legislative stage, although the lawmakers also must act on one of two proposals for a statewide liquor referendum as well as the red-hot secondary road bond program.

Last week, state educators asked for $102,000,000 for public education, as well as enough money to raise teachers salaries to a $2,400 minimum. Education officials bore down on the lawmakers as this week began, determined to see their outsized program through.

Scott indicated that another measure affecting utilities companies was headed for the legislative mill this week. Scott hinted that the proposal would come up in an early session, but did not go into detail on its content.

Polio Epidemic Hit 2,273 in N. C.

GREENSBORO, Feb. 7—(UP)—The North Carolina polio epidemic sent 2,273 victims into Tar Heel hospitals to spend an average 46 days each during the first 11 months of last year, records of the state Hospital association showed today.

E. T. McKeithan, president of the association, said 21 hospitals joined in battling the worst infantile paralysis outbreak in North Carolina's history.

Altogether the job was equivalent to treating the entire population of the state's biggest city for a single day—a total of 106,075 patient-days.

As of Nov. 30—the last day on which figures were available—600 patients were still in hospitals. Many face years of treatment, and hundreds of others are still returning for check-ups.

Two Greensboro hospitals—Wesley Long and the Central Carolina Convalescent hospital which was built during the height of the emergency—handled the largest number of patients—455.

Trailer Home Is Destroyed In Late Sunday Night Blaze

Owners, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rockholtz, Report $2,500 Total Amount of Damage

Flames completely destroyed the trailer home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rockholtz of the University trailer court late Sunday night and caused $2,500 damage, the owners estimated yesterday.

Members of the local department reported that the trailer was a total loss. Rockholtz attributed the cause of the blaze to a stove used in heating the trailer.

The Rockholtzs managed to save some of their personal clothing, but their household equipment went up in smoke along with the trailer. Rockholtz said the loss was partially covered by insurance.

Clyde Brooks, trailer court manager, said quick thinking and work on the part of the residents of the area prevented the spread of the fire.

He said all the fire extinguishers placed in the two service houses by the University were used in an attempt to controll the blaze in addition to several smaller extinguishers owned by trailer residents.

Rockholtz said he and his wife had been visiting next door. At 11:30 he said he went home to light a fire and returned to his neighbor's trailer to pick up Mrs. Rockholtz.

"When I returned to my trailer about 15 minutes later I saw flames through the glass in the door just as Mrs. Rockholtz was about to enter. I drew her aside and yelled for Mr. Ridenhour, my neighbor. He arrived along with some of the other residents of the area and we began to fight the flames."

At present the Rockholtzs are living with Mr. and Mrs. Ridenhour until they can locate another home.

Head of TVA To Give Talk On Thursday

Lecture to Be In Alumni Hall

Gordon R. Clapp, chairman of the board of the Tennessee Valley authority, will give a public lecture on "Working and Living With Our Resources," in the Alumni building at 8 o'clock Thursday night, following a lecture before a graduate seminar at 4 o'clock.

Clapp was invited by the University's institute for research in social science and the department of city and regional planning to speak primarily to graduate students and faculty members in the social sciences on this theme, Dr. Gordon Blackwell, chairman of the Institute, announced.

It is expected that Clapp will discuss the waste and development of America's resources in relation to the welfare of the people, and give his reactions to recent books concerning the dangers of population increase exceeding available resources.

Russian Pilots Find Bit of Home

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Feb. 7—(UP)—Two Red Army pilots who fled from Russia because they wanted to live in Virginia found a bit of home today in a tiny Russian settlement.

There were signs from veterans groups that Virginia's famed hospitality was wearing thin in places for Lts. Peter Pirogov and Anatol Barsov. But on the farm of O. M. Shanko, 61, at Yale, Va., the fliers found tables piled high with Russian-style food.

About 12 families of Russian descent gathered to welcome them, with music, handshaking and much conversation in Russian.

Shanko, a native of Russia but now a naturalized American, praised Pirogov and Barsov for "borrowing" a Russian plane and landing in the American zone of Austria.

Bill to Extend ERP Introduced

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7—(UP)—Chairman Tom Connally, (D-Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee today introduced a $5,580,000,000 bill to continue the European Recovery program until June 30, 1950. But he warned that "Europe must do its part" to make the project succeed.

String Trio Will Appear Here Tonight

Pasquier Tickets Still Available

Among the numbers to be offered by the Pasquier String trio in Hill hall at 8:30 this evening are compositions by Beethoven, Mozart, and Villa-Lobos.

The Pasquiers started their musical education at the School of Music at Tours, France. On continuing their studies in Paris, each one later became affiliated with one of the leading orchestras of Paris. Each of the brothers being accepted at the Conservatory, they were graduated after three years with prizes.

The Pasquier trio made its debut at the Salle des Agriculteurs in Paris on March 18, 1927. This was followed by several tours including appearances in London, Milan, Brussels, and other cities of Europe.

In 1939, they made their first tour of the Orient, meeting with such success throughout the East Indies that they were asked to return, but the war delayed their plans.

In America, the Pasquiers have become favorites in the chamber music field, having made two transcontinental tours and having received acclaim of both the public and the press.

Tickets for the recital, which is sponsored by the music department are on sale in room 103, Hill hall, and admission is $1.

Y Membership Drive Is Over

"The YMCA students membership drive for this year has come to a satisfactory conclusion," Charlie Fox, chairman of the Y finance committee, said yesterday.

Though solicitations have ceased on campus, students who have not had an opportunity to contribute and receive membership in the YMCA may do so at any time, during office hours at the Y office, Fox said.

A faculty fund drive is forthcoming, in keeping with the Y's three-point program to contact students, faculty and townspeople.

Y Planning Group Has First Session

The North Carolina planning committee of the YM-YWCA held its first meeting of the year in the cabinet room of the Y building here Saturday morning to make plans for a state conference to be held sometime in the spring.

Presided over by Chairman John Miller of Davidson college, the committee began discussions to decide upon a general program, speakers, and a location for the conference. Plans will be made more definite at a meeting of the committee at State college March 12.

Among colleges represented at the meeting were Davidson and State Colleges, Woman's college, Eastern Carolina Teacher's college, and Greensboro college.

Members of the committee from the University are Ed McLeod and Patsy McNutt.

Honorary Colonel To Review Cadets

The Air ROTC unit will stage a full dress review on Emerson field this afternoon at 3 o'clock in honor of Gene Hines who was chosen "Miss Honorary Cadet Colonel" at the military ball on Jan. 29.

A feature of the review will be the awarding of medals and promotions to 35 members of the unit. Col. Byron R. Switzer will make the awards and the medals will be pinned on the cadets by Miss Hines.

Di-Phi Debate Is Scheduled This Evening

Series Resumed After War Lapse

By Graham Jones

The first Di-Phi debate since the war will be held in Phi hall, fourth floor New East at 7:30 tonight.

The resolution to be debated states that "a referendum be scheduled for November 1, 1949, to determine whether the sale of all liquor, wine, and beer shall be pronibited in North Carolina or whether the manufacture and sale of all three shall be legalized on a state-wide basis."

Members of the Philanthropic assembly will support the referendum which has been proposed by Senator Tenney of Guilford in the state legislature. The Dialectic senate will oppose the measure.

Chancellor Robert B. House, Dean William Wells of arts and sciences and Dean Ernest Mackie have agreed to serve as judges for tonight's debate.

Both the Phi and the Di have discussed the liquor question in separate meetings this year. Last quarter the Phi went on record as favoring local option.

The Di unanimously opposed a state-wide referendum when it was brought up in January. Meanwhile, the Phi voted against lifting the ban on coed drinking restrictions in fraternity houses.

Peter Gerns, speaker pro tempore of the Phi has invited the public to attend the debate between the two societies, the two oldest college debating organizations in the country.

The Phi and the Di began as a single organization in 1795 but due to diffrences over Hamilton and Jefferson split.

For a number of years the Phi-Di debate was an annual custom.

Experienced Hands

Ritchie, Geiger Get Top Roles In 'Apple Tree Farm' Fantasy

Estelle Ritchie of Boston and James Geiger of Miami, Fla., have been awarded the leading comedy roles in the premiere production, April 4-6, of the Ida Lupino musical fantasy "Apple Tree Farm."

The show will be sponsored by the Laboratory theater of the Carolina Playmakers for the benefit of the Koch Memorial fund, and will be under the direction of Marty Jacobs.

Miss Ritchie, who has acted professionally in summer stock and who has had extensive experience in professional theater work, will portray the role of Annie, a young shoe store clerk frantically in love with Andy, the carefree, horse-playing assistant manager of the store, who will be portrayed by Geiger.

Other leading roles will be handled by Anne G. Martin (Myra) of Cherokee; Elizabeth Stoney (Angela) of Winston-Salem; Sam Greene (John); of Mooresboro; George Grizzard (Vate) of Washington, D. C.

The supporting cast will include Bill Saunders, Roanoke Rapids; Bill Collins, Des Moines, Iowa, Bob Barr, Kansas City, Mo., and Larry Peerce, New Rochelle, N. Y.

Mary Jo Cain of Florence, S.C., and Dick Johnson of Asheville will have the dancing leads in the production. The music director will be Jean Farnoff Smith, who will be assisted and supervised by the composer Bill MacIlwinen. Brad Fearing has been named stage manager.

Y Retreat Is Worth It

We have never been to Montreat, but we have been to a YM-YWCA retreat — last year's which was held at Natural Bridge in the hills of Virginia above Lexington.

Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, said the other day that he greatly valued the discussions he participated in at Natural Bridge. In fact, Jess said several of his presidential campaign platform planks came from ideas which were discussed at the Virginia retreat. One of these which he helped put into operation this fall was the Freshman assembly program. Some of the freshmen may dissent, but most persons will agree that the program was invaluable in orienting the freshmen in the honor and campus codes, student government and other facts and figures of campus life.

The panels conducted last year were on campus political activities, social life, the racial question and other interesting and controversial subjects. A similar set will spark the discussion groups this year.

Members of the Y who are making arrangements say a party and square dance are being planned for the coming midwinter retreat, plus a hike to the top of Lookout mountain and other trips and activities. It's certainly not going to be all work and no play.

The students who go, this year as last, will have a good time and a restful weekend away from the rigors of campus life. And they will bring back to the campus with them a store of knowledge obtained by sitting down with their fellow students and hashing out current campus and farther reaching problems of the day.

It's Human (?) Nature

Once upon a time, two room-mates, Bill and Joe, were returning from a late double-date. Bill was driving his new Buick and, feeling his oats as they passed a darkened row of dorms, he tooted his horn not once but several times.

"Bill, aren't you afraid you'll wake up the whole campus?" Joe gently admonished him. "It's pretty late, you know."

"Naw, who cares?" And to show that he for one didn't, he tooted again.

The next morning Joe, an early riser, decided that Bill might like to attend his nine o'clock class for a change.

"Bill get up. You've got just enough time to eat chow and go to class."

Bill raised his head from under the covers, focused his eyes in a bleary glare and growled at his kindly intentioned room-mate. "You got a nerve, waking a guy up in the middle of the night. I didn't ask you to call feveille, did I? Get out of here."

Joe tiptoed out and closed the door. He'd never understand that room-mate of his, he decided.

Amen Corner

Because Eve Et De Apple

By Charles Joyner

Bretheren and Sisteren, lemme tell you bout Adam.
He had everthing he needed and was happy til he decided he wanted a Madam.
Amen?
Now the Lawd was amused when He heard this but He could take a rib so He gave Adam Eve.
And I guess when He did was laffin up His sleeve.
Amen?
Now all those two had to do was keep His garden neat.
With plenty time left over to eat 'n play 'n sleep.
Amen?
And everything in that garden was theirs scot free except for de fruit from just one tree!
Amen?
Dat was de tree of knowledge, of tellin wrong from right
Dey thought if they ate some dey'd be like gods—
Just like some of you get a little learning and begin to think you're white!
Amen?
So dey eat it.
Can you beat it?
Some snake in de grass come sniffin up to Eve while Adam's back was turned
And asked her whyn't she eat some?—She had a lot to learn,
Amen?
Now woman fell cause she was curious.
Amen?
And man because he was uxorious.
(That's a ten dollar word meanin weakness for wimmin.)
Amen?
Now when dere eyes wuz open they wuz filled with lustful passion.
So dey put em on some fig leaves, and dat becum de fashion.
Amen?
Now when de Lawd saw that deyed done wrong it made Him powerful sad.
But He has tuh punish His chillun when He sees that they bin bad.
Amen?
So He told Adam that he'd hafta wuk
And sweat a livin fum de lan
And Eve would feel bad havin babies
And hafta obey her man.
Amen?
And so dey wouldn't live forever He run em outta th garden.
And give an Angel a flamin sword and set him up as warden.
Amen?
Now dese two folks thought they could be gods
When dey won't nothin but dirt.
'N deres a lot o po' white trash that thinks the same
But there's one thing certain—
Amen?
—Now don't yall set there a lookin so smug
Dis goes for Black as well as White
Deres a lot o difference twixt doing
And jus knowin what is right!
Amen.

Sweden: Key To A Crisis

By Charlie Kauffman

The recent Stalin "peace-offensive" has apparently come, found no one enthusiastic, and gone. After months of silence and mystery, the great doors of the Kremlin cracked momentarily. A proposition, noble and generous in the eyes of some American observers and political theorists, came out.

Actually, the Stalin peace proposals, rather than being the noble and generous attempts of a powerful sovereign to stem the running tide of another war, appear to be the well-polished pleadings of a nation's cornered autocrats, perhaps for the first time honestly concerned about their future position.

Upon looking into the background of the peace moves, we find as their principal motivation the projected North Atlantic security pact. It seems clear now, much more so than a month ago, that this pact is going to emerge as a powerful instrument for the maintenance of the balance of power in Europe. While we see it as just that, the Soviet sees it as a prodigious coalition against her. We cannot expect the Soviet government to view it as the lily-white mechanism for the maintenance of European peace. Even more ominous to Moscow, more and more nations are swinging to the Western powers on the pact idea. Di Gasperi's government has voted in favor of the alliance. Yugoslavia is waiting for Uncle Sam's pocketbook, the sign of the Western cross, to be flashed at her before giving great and all-powerful Mother Russia the final slap in the face.

It is, however, in Scandinavia that the immediate crisis is shaping up. The long-established neutrality there has been completely shattered. Norway and Denmark are almost certain to join the pact powers. Meanwhile, the tremendous pressure on Sweden will not be abated. Sweden wants to remain neutral, but her leaders realize that in any future war involving Soviet Russia and England such would be impossible. Her eight crack divisions may be beautifully trained, but they number eight. Their ability to defend Sweden would bring to mind Holland's brave and futile efforts in May, 1940. The balance of power in the Swedish government still rests with those who want to keep the country out of any and all alliances in the hope that there won't be any war after all. Across the Gulf of Bothnia, Finland, hovering over Russia's largest port, continues to repulse with admirable success all Communist-led internal disorders. Yet the Soviet is no doubt prepared to go to, war against Finland rather than take much of a chance on the Finnish government following in Sweden's footsteps.

The situation developing in Scandinavia may well hold the key to the very peace the U.S. government is now striving for: should Sweden be goaded into signing the pact, one look at the map will show that Finland would be in a lurch of the first order. She would be forced either to jump with Sweden, and record-breaking celerity would be required to forestall the Red Army, or automatically surrender to the Soviet Union.

To date, Secretary Acheson has given no indication of what course U. S. policy toward Sweden will follow after Norway and Denmark enter the pact. Acheson has handled the entire Scandinavian negotiations with care thus far. There is no indication that pressure has been put on Norway. Her decision has been one of a sovereign state. In the handling of Sweden, it is to be fervently hoped that the State Department will act with even greater tact and care, if it need act at all.

The U. S. will display admirable diplomatic maturity, so lacking since the days of Cordell Hull, if it permits Sweden and consequently Finland to retain the neutral positions they both so ardently cherish. This course would make unnecessary Soviet action in Finland, while if Sweden joins the pact, such action would be an absolute defensive necessity in spite of the fact that it would be loudly denounced in this country.

Thus it seems clear that unless the U.S. actually wants a full-fledged show-down with Russia in territory bordering its own front door, the Scandinavian status quo, so thoroughly dependent on Swedish neutrality, will not be interfered with. The course of our policy in this sphere should be revealing to those of us who sometimes wonder what our real intent toward Russia is.

Cries of Discontent

By Vestal C. Taylor

Last week's presentation of "Inherit The Wind" left behind no little controversy between neophyite and would be campus critics concerning plot, characterization and casting of the players. Yet all agreed that, despite the criticism, McClain's play is a well written and entertaining piece of work. To those present for the performance, it spelled the rise of McClain to a status of promising young dramatist. Judging from audience response and the Hollywood feelers reported, it is safe to expect to hear from "Inherit The Wind" again soon.

Mutterings of discontent have been heard from members of the troupe who took "School for Scandal" on tour from January 6-16.

The tour was well planned by John Parker and well managed and directed by Harry Davis. The attendance was satisfactory, drawing 8,000 persons throughout the state, but it was the choice of the play that gave the performers dissatisfaction. They are asking why the selection of "School for Scandal" as a touring show?

Many consider the show an effeminate, stylized production that failed to show the audiences what the group is sincerely trying to do in Chapel Hill. They feel that with another show the group would have made many more friends. As one member put it: "We have done a show to please the women. Next year we would like to do something that will appeal to the men."

But the tour had its lighter moments. One night, midway of the second act, the troupers were taken aback to see a lady in the front row calmly rediapering her small child while keeping one eye on the progress of the plot.

Hats off to the Lab theatre group for its revival of Norton and Sackville's "Gorboduc." This marks the first presentation of the first English tragedy since its presentation before Queen Elizabeth at Whitehall 387 years ago to the month. Originally played by court members in academic robes, the brief play (57 minutes) was a propaganda movement to show the queen the importance of leaving an heir to her throne. The theatre group was able to reproduce the play so accurately as to win the complete approval of students of the period and the Renaissance society.

Another doff of the topper goes to Lib Stoney for her efforts in The Rendezvous room. Assisted by Arnold Wilson and Mark Barker emcee for the Friday night shows Miss Stoney is providing a delightful recreat from everyday campus routine. Just now she is completing plans for a sorority floor show that is not to be limited to the broadcast period alone but is to last throughout the entire evening of February 18. Sounds interesting to those who have witnessed other Stoney projects.

Mystery of the Missing Figures Baffles Senators

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington—Our logical-minded senators were baffled on receiving a copy of a housing bill introduced by Senator Burnet R. Maybank, of South Carolina. The thing read as if a wartime censor had been working on it.

Not since a book, "Mother Goose Censored," hit the stands some years ago has there been such weird reading matter. Where figures on estimated appropriations and expenditures should have been there were only blank spaces.

The mystery finally was solved by Raymond Foley, administrator of the Housing and Home Finance agency. At the request of Senator Maybank he had prepared a rough general outline of a bill and had sent it to the solon with the notation: "Look this over."

Senator Maybank failed to do the latter, either literally or figuratively. He just dropped it in the legislative hopper.

* * *

Reporters, who checked with Administrator Foley, asked if he would supply the missing figures.

"I can't," said Foley. "We don't know ourselves yet what they should be."

Lieut. Gov. James Blair, of Missouri, was in our town recently. Being from a state which is somewhat in the limelight, he was made much of hereabouts. While here he told Barnee, the Old Maestro, he would like to hear from him from time to time. So the other day Barnee wrote him a letter.

Addressing it: "Lieutenant Governor Jim Blair, Missouri." It has just been returned, marked: "Address not, indicated."

This business of aerial transport threatens to bring too many new "lift" words into the language, "airlift," "haylift," etc.

If we don't take care it may get out of hand. Supposing J. Durante takes up flying and the papers refer to it as a "noselift"?

Secretary of Defense Forrestal is given to weighing his words with extreme care. The thin-lipped cabineter is very chary of making off-the-cuff speeches. He explained this phobia the other day.

"I was talking to a prominent Britisher recently," he said, "and asked him how he felt about making off-the-cuff speeches, His reply sums up my feelings in the matter. 'Off-the-cuff speeches are the easiest to give,' he told me. 'They do not require the painstaking preparation. But when one makes an off-the-cuff speech one is apt to make a most fearful ass of himself.' "

The Carolina Forum claims to be interested in bringing before the student body representatives of all points of view. So far, however, their deviations from "normal" have been consistently to the Left.

For the sake of a better balanced ideological diet, I suggest we hear a little from the Right now and then. I would particularly like to hear what Father Coughlin or Gerald L. K. Smith have to say. How about it, Carolina Forum?

Editor:

In answer to one of the bitter complaints expressed by Miss Mary F. Johnston in her recent letter to the Editor, the complaint being that it is time that Carolina gentlemen treat coeds as much like ladies as they do the girls back home, it has been amply answered many times before by the prediction that if and when Carolina coeds start acting as much like ladies as the girls back home they will be treated accordingly.

Country Club Wife?

Editor:

In reply to Mary F. Johnston's burst literary blood vessel in Wednesday's Daily Tar Heel concerning the male attitude at Carolina I give you the following:

(Sing to the tune of "The Girl That I Marry")

I've looked high and low on this campus fair,
The girl that I marry just is not there—
The girl friend that I annex
Will be bashful and barefoot, and sign her name "X."
Her nails may be ingrown, hayseed in her hair,
A busted biscuspid for all I care;
Although rounded—she'll be grounded
In the things that leave these gals dumbfounded—
A doll I can't carry but, boy, she has 'nary a peer.
Oh, why did I ever leave calico
For gowns that surround what is not so?
Oh, why did I leave Gertrude
For a passel of dudes who ain't nothing but prudes?
A spade is a shovel to these creatures gaunt,
A maid and a hovel are all I want;
So I'll go back—to that low shack
Where a woman's a BUDDY though slow, Jack.
The girl that I marry will not be a Country Club Wife.

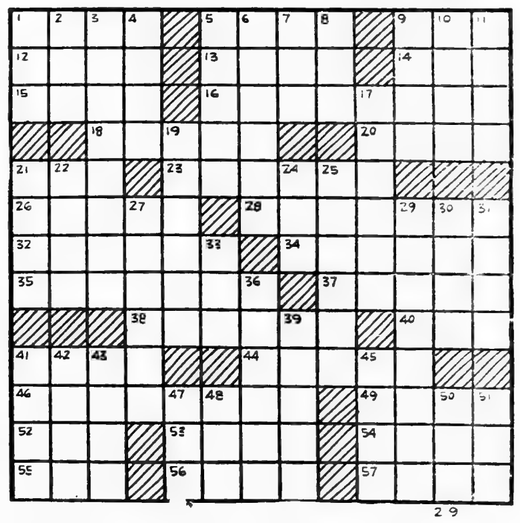
On Raising Tuition

Editor:



The following letter is being sent to campus leaders concerning action on the proposed tuition raise. We take this opportunity to invite all students interested in this issue to attend the meeting on Thursday:

"The raise in tuition is a vital issue. We believe you agree that if the increase proposed by the Advisory Budget commission is approved by the board of trustees, it will set a monetary standard for admission that many students will not be able to meet. Such a financial restriction, extended to the future, will make our University a school for the privileged few.

"We feel that this issue warrants action in addition to that taken by the student legislature. We propose, then, a meeting of all campus leaders to formulate a united program by which the students can take steps to defeat this measure.

"Therefore, we invite you to participate, either as a representative of your organization or as an individual, in forming such a program. This meeting will be held Thursday afternoon, February 10, at 3 o'clock in Horace Williams lounge, Graham Memorial. We hope to see you there."

THE SPORTING PICTURE

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Saturday Night Is

SATURDAY NIGHT, the conventional evening for indoor sports, lived far past its press clippings during the past weekend as far as the basketballing Tar Heels of Carolina were concerned. The local gentlemen, who had been rollercoasting through a dubious sason thus far, were on the upgrade for the evening when they happened upon the Blue Devils of neighboring Duke, moving on the down grade after a hard week at the office.

The result amazed everybody including the scorekeeper, who had about as busy time keeping up with the Tar Heels' 30-point winning margin as Coach Tom Scott did clearing his bench of players. Across the way, opposition leader Gerry Gerard was exerting all efforts to stem the tide, but there just wasn't a thumb on the Duke bench big enough to plug the hole in the Carolina basket.

Nobody could quite figure out what was right with the Tar Heels except that they were both due and primed for their Durham visitors. The explanation for the Blue Devils seemed a little simpler: too much play makes the Dukesters a dull basketball team. After successful stabs over Navy and NYU, the Gerardmen were trying to make it three strikes in four days. Instead, they went down fighting.

Up and At 'Em

THE TAR HEELS proved quite an improved team over previous appearances. They had learned that the way to win basketball was to score points and they had learned some new ways to do it. With Coy Carson forced to play against a bad case of the flue as well as the regular scheduled Blue Devils, somebody had to fill the breech. By the end of the game, that breech was mighty crowded.

Hugo Kappler, the lad with the poker face, was the first to step forward to further the Tar Heel cause as he drew three quick pairs in the first five minutes of play. A full house crowd, dazed but delighted, roared full approval. Kappler next shifted his attention to controlling the backboards, and summoning aid and support from his teammates, the sandy-haired lad soon had both baskets well in the hands of the Tar Heels.

Duke, meanwhile, was not long for the ball game. After the first 10 minutes the visitors were obviously sorry the contest had ever been scheduled. It must have seemed like a bad dream to the Blue Devils, who wished they could have awakened to find themselves still chasing the Violets of NYU in the direction of the New York city limits. The Blue Devils showed the strain of a week of heavy living when many of their first half foul throws couldn't even make the basket. Charity tosses, it would seem, are made at home.

Nemo Spelled Backward

THE LOCAL AGGREGATION showed little sympathy throughout the entire affair. When Kappler ran out of different types of shots with which to please the crowd, whee-high Nemo Nearman took over the money-making and proved to be holding the best hands of the evening. They amounted for some in the neighborhood of 18 points, a location where a lot more Tar Heel shooters would like to be living. Nearman had his best night since Jeff's opened and had Ben Collins and Carl Sapp running all over the floor in pseudo-pursuit.

Nearman is an improved ball player and a living example that people are still learning things in college. If these three eyes were not deceived the other night he went to his left once like a lifelong Communist and ended up scoring in the sole company of a newspaper photographer. After three years in North Carolina Nearman has obtained a driving license and is making full use of it for numerous field goals underneath the basket.

The rest of the Tar Heels were almost equally on hand to join in on the Saturday night fun. Charlie Thorne, who has been coming along all season, still has room to go but from now on it will be at the expense of opposing teams. Coy Carson proved what penicillin can do for a man when he tossed in five field goals between occasional coughs and elongated rest periods provided by the runaway nature of the ball game.

On the Subject of Grandpa's

THE RESULTS OF the whole Saturday proceedings do little more than complicate the most complex thing since the development of ye olde atom bomb. The entire Southern conference is now in gross confusion with the told expression being modernized to read that some days you just can't make a Conference tournament berth. Wake Forest beats State, Duke beat NYU, and Carolina beats Duke all in the same week, proving that the fellow who claims to be his own grandpa, may rightly be so.

If comparative scores are worth the paper they are printed on, Coach Tom Scott now has the figures to prove just how much his Tar Heels can fluctuate in the course of several evenings in a season. Figuring the Carolina debacle in New York against the Violets earlier in the season in comparison with last week's games, the Tar Heels can be 60 points better than themselves. It must be all in the way you hold your mouth.

The Duke-Carolina-NYU triangle, besides proving that all is fair in love and basketball, exploded with many point fury the infallibility of New York basketball teams. A Southwestern cage mentor recently put forth the statement that Gotham teams away from their Garden environment would be just a few more basketball teams. The Violet's, New York's best, gave strength to this theory when forced to hit the road last week.

Tar Heel Five Takes Day Off; To Invade Maryland Friday

Coach Tom Scott gave his never-say-die cagers the day off yesterday, before beginning preparations for the weekend battling in the District of Columbia and thereabouts.

On Friday night the Carolinians will invade College Park, Md. for a return match with the Terrapins of Maryland university, and on Saturday night the Tar Heels will move into Washington for a Southern conference tussle with the Colonials of George Washington university.

The Carolinians have met both opponents on previous occasions this year. In the initial Maryland bout the Tar Heels decisioned the Terps, 55-47, in Woollen gym, but had less luck with the surprisingly-powerful Washingtonians, coming out second best in 64-41 massacre.

Colonials Plenty Tough

Some discount the GW loss with a shrug of the shoulder and a muffled comment about off nights, but it will be remembered that the Colonials made high-and-mighty State sing for its supper a few weeks back when they took the Wolfpack for a bumpy ride before dropping a 60-59 heart-breaker.

In any case the week-end competition will be plenty tough for the Carolinians. Maryland was noticeably off in its shooting game when the Old Liners were here, and should give the Tar Heels a run for their money on their native court.

Carolina, regarded by many as a shoo-in for the conference tournament after its impressive Duke victory will need wins in both of these very important games to retain its position among the elite in Southern basketball society.

The entire Tar Heel team turned in sterling performances last week against the Blue Devils in successfully upsetting the Duke apple-cart.

Chi Psi Wins

Chi Psi retained possession of the fraternity handball trophy by whipping Sigma Chi, 2-1 for the championship of the mural fraternity division handball finals yesterday. The defending champs took the singles match and split the two doubles in racking up their sixth consecutive win of the season.

A play-off between the Chi Psi team and the Town team, dormitory champions, has been scheduled for Wednesday afternoon.

Six Coed Teams To Play Tonight

With six teams expected to see action tonight the coed basketball consolation tournament will get underway at seven o'clock in Woman's gym for another week of play.

Sixteen teams representing sororities, dorms and independents are participating in the double elimination tournament. Games are scheduled for seven, 7:45 and 8:15 each Tuesday and Thursday night. Spectators are welcome.

Tournament officials are Dot Casey, Katherine Durham, Ruth Baine, Marilyn Crawford and Miss Frances Bunn, faculty director. Each team is responsible for a scorer and a timekeeper for each of its games.

Teams entered in the tournament and their managers and captains are Kenan—Dot Casey; CICA—Margaret Booth; McIver—Carolyn Bishop and Martha Moore; Pi Phi 1—Jean Marie Lester and Teeny Royal; Pi Phi 2—Jean Marie Lester; Tri Delt 1—Mintie Cantrell; Tri Delt 2—Mintie Cantrell and Betty Dixon; AD Pi 1—Beverly Jean Smith; AD Pi 2—Beverly Jean Smith; Alpha Gam 1—Becky Holton; Alpha Gam 2 — Becky Holton and Ginny Forward; Chi O 1—Corrine Grimsley; Chi O 2—Corrine Grimsley; Town—Pat Winslow and Carr—Marilyn Crawford and Connie Pate.

Tonight's schedule is as follows: 7:00—Carr 1 vs Pi Phi 2; 7:45—AD Pi 2 vs Tri Delt 1; 8:15—Kenan 1 vs CICA 1.

Southern Loop Scoring Parade Led by Carson

Coy Carson, Carolina's sharp-shooting forward, continued to pace Southern conference scorers this week with a total of 176 points within the loop. Although he hit the basket for only 10 points in conference competition this week, he remained far ahead of Virginia Tech's Dick Sayre, who is in second place with a total of 142 points.

Chet Giermak, flashy high scorer for William and Mary, has tossed in 128 points for third place honors, while Sammy Ranzino, State's snappy Hoosier hotshot has 121 tallies to his credit.

Ranked seventh in conference scoring is Carolina's Hugo Kappler, who finally overcame a scoring slump in the Duke game and registered 13 markers to bring his season's conference total to 108.

Carolina's only other representative in the top 15 scorers is elongated Nemo Nearman. Blossoming out from a period in which he either couldn't or wouldn't hit the basket.

Although in conference play Carson hasn't hit the 200 mark yet, he has a grand total of 314 points for the season thus far. Other Tar Heels who have hit for more than 100 points are Nemo Nearman with 173, Hugo Kappler with 164 and Dan Nyimicz with 121. Carson has an overall average of 16.6 points per game.

DiMag Inks Pact; Is Highest Paid

NEW YORK, Feb. 7—(UP)—Joe Dimaggio, the New York Yankees' star outfielder, signed his 1949 contract today at a figure believed to be the highest ever paid to a member of the ball club, even exceeding Babe Ruth's 80,000 a season in 1931 and 1932.

DiMaggio signed the contract for one year and although neither he nor club officials would reveal the exact amount of the pact, Arthur (Red) Patterson, the Yankee secretary said, "Joe is quite satisfied."

Duke Again

The freshmen of Duke and Carolina will begin a new series of athletic competition Feb. 10 when selected groups of pingpong players begin a week-long tournament.

Sponsored by the freshman council of the YMCA, the University's team will be chosen from freshmen competing in Graham Memorial between Feb. 10 and 17, when the tournament ends. Freshmen wishing to enter the tournament should sign up at the YMCA office or on one of the bulletin boards in freshmen dormitories.

Baseball Schedule Shows 32 Games

The 1949 Tar Heel baseball slate, released yesterday morning by University officials, shows a total of 32 games scheduled for the Carolinians this spring.

The '49 diamond slate will be opened on March 18 with a four-day spring training trip to Florida. The Tar Heels will meet the University of Florida in a pair of games in Jacksonville, and will then move on to Jacksonville for two tilts with the Jacksonville Naval Air Station.

Intersectional battles with Cornell, Michigan State, and Yale have been scheduled for the latter part of March and early April.

The complete schedule:

March 18 — Florida at Gainesville, Fla., 19—Florida at Gainesville, 20—Jacksonville NAATC at Jacksonville, Fla., 21 — Jacksonville NAATC at Jacksonville, 28—Washington and Lee here, 29—Cornell here, 30—Michigan State here, 31—Michigan State here.

April 1—VPI here, 5—Yale here, 6—William and Mary here, 7—Yale here, 12—Wake Forest here, 14 — Virginia here, 15—Maryland here, 16—South Carolina here, 18—Duke at Durham (non-conference game), 20 — Wake Forest at Wake Forest, 21—Davidson here (tentative), N. C. State at Raleigh, 26 — Duke here ,28 — N. C. State here, 30—Wake Forest here.

May 3—Duke at Durham, 5—VPI at Blacksburg, Va. 6 — Washington and Lee at Lexington, Va., 7—Virginia at Charlottesville, Va., 11—N. C. State at Raleigh, 14—Duke here, 16—N. C. State here, 18—Wake Forest at Wake Forest, 21—Duke at Durham.

WILDCATS PLAY

Chapel Hill's high-riding cagers will play host to Roxboro high school in a tripleheader in the high school gym tonight. The first game, a jayvee affair, will begin at 6:30.

The games were originally slated for the Roxboro gym, but were moved to the local floor yesterday. The probable starting for the 'Cats, who have won twelve straight contests, is as follows: Williams and Jernigan, forwards; Perry, center; Phillips and Hill, guards.

Freshmen Cagers Play State Tonight in Capital City Tilt

Carolina's Tar Baby cagers will be out to avenge an earlier defeat when they take on the strong State freshman quint in Raleigh's Memorial auditorium tonight at 6:30 in a preliminary to the State-Wake Forest game.

The local hardwooders will attempt to chalk up their ninth win against six defeats, and their first Big Four victory of the campaign when they take the floor tonight. The West Raleigh yearlings handed the locals a decisive whipping in Woollen gym earlier in the season.

Coach Jim Hamilton's young charges almost duplicated the upset their varsity mates pulled against Duke's Blue Devils Saturday night, before losing, 55-54, to the potent Blue Imps.

The Tar Baby's starting lineup will probably see Frank Eckert and Dick Harter at the forward slots, Frank Redding at the pivot position, and John Bowersox and Larry Cheek in the guard spots.

MONOGRAM MEETING

The Monogram club will hold an important meeting tonight at 7:30. All members are urged to attend the meeting, to be held at the Monogram clubhouse.

Tar Heel Mermen Dominated Relays In Ohio State Tilt

Although outclassed by Ohio State's powerful array of swimming talent, the Tar Heels made a good showing in their meet at Columbus last Saturday and made the favored Buckeyes go all out to sink their Southern opponents.

It was Ohio State's third win and furthered still their prestige as the ranking power in intercollegiate swimming circles. Their olympic-studded tankmen boast such stars as Bill Smith, distance champ and Bruce Harlan, olympic champ.

Norm Sper, who traded the springboard for the backstroke, brought home the only individual honor when he splashed in ahead of O. S.'s Ralph Knight in the 150-yard backstroke event. The Tar Heels completely dominated the relay events as both relay teams came in ahead of the Buckeye teams.

Communist Trial Will Be Speeded

NEW YORK, Feb. 7—(UP)—Federal Judge Harold R. Medina indicated today that the Communist conspiracy "trial-within-a-trial" may come to an end sometime this week.

Medina, presiding judge in the trial of 11 Communist National Board members on charges of conspiracy to teach and advocate overthrow of the government by violence, hinted he is near a ruling on the defense pre-trial motion to quash the indictment on the ground that the jury system in this federal district is illegal.

The judge's hint was in connection with a ruling on a motion by counsel for three CIO unions for leave to file a brief and to argue on the jury challenge motion as "friends of the court."

Medina denied permission for oral argument but granted the filing of a brief.

Legislature Vote Printed in Full

Here is the roll call vote taken at the last meeting of the Student legislature on an amendment to make the Carolina forum's functions largely that of a clearing house nature on questions of dates and sending bids to speakers, so no two Chapel Hill groups would be soliciting the same person for a speech at the same time.

For the amendment, 10 votes (1 UP, 7 SP, 2 CP); against the amendment, 20 votes (14 UP, 4 CP, 1 UP-CP, 1 SP-CP); abstained, 10 votes (4 SP, 3 CP, 2 UP, 1 SP-UP).

For the amendment: (SP) Alexander, Lowenstein, Prince, Kimerling, Bowers, Lineberry, Dees; (CP) Southerland, O'Neal; (UP) Schwartz.

Against the amendment: (UP) Barnes, Duke, Leary, Mitchell, Foley, Williams, Kirby, Clements, Fox, Harris, Roberts, James, Mebane, Fremd; (CP) Bowen, Carnes, Talley, Kerr; (UP-CP) Leonard; (SP-CP) Washington.

Abstained: (SP) Meeks, Horton, Sewell, McNutt; (CP) Smith, Worsham, Best; (UP) Plager, Clewis; (SP-UP) Williams.

School Surveys Being Conducted By UNC Bureau

Surveys of school systems in seven counties and in four towns have been made or are in the process of being made by the Bureau of Educational Research and Services of the School of Education, Dean Guy B. Phillips announced yesterday.

Conducted by faculty members of the school, a building and reorganization survey has been completed in Anson and Montgomery counties. A similar study was done in Richmond county and in Hamlet with the cooperation of the state Department of Education. The University committee completed the Hamlet study.

The Gates county survey was made in cooperation with Duke university, the committee being composed of Dean Phillips and W. E. Rosenstengel of Carolina and A. M. Proctor of Duke.

An extensive survey was made in Columbus county with a staff of 20 representing various institutions in the state, including the State department.

Dean Phillips, Dr. Rosenstengel and Dr. A. L. Hurlburt of East Carolina Teachers College are now working on a survey of the Washington city unit and Beaufort county.

The University staff here has agreed to organize and develop a survey of Johnston county this spring and has also been asked to make a building survey for the Thomasville city unit. The staff will also work with the city school administration in Hickory in making a survey to be a part of the total city-wide planning project.

"The School of Education," Dean Phillips said, "is attempting to make its staff available in discovering the needs and immediate tasks in the various county administrative units requesting help."

Little Symphony Starts State Tour

The Little Symphony of the North Carolina Symphony orchestra, composed of 22 musicians under the direction of Dr. Benjamin Swalin, has just begun its fourth annual tour of the state.

A children's program was given in Hillsboro Thursday afternnoon and a children's matinee and evening concert in Sanford Friday.

Yesterday, after a children's concert in St. Pauls, the Little Symphony will go to Raleigh to the General assembly. This program is a biennial "thank you" to the state for its support of the orchestra. Miss Josephine Cunningham, 17-year-old soprano of Asheville, will be featured in this concert.

During the second week in February the orchestra will also play concerts in Lumberton on February 8, Elizabethtown and Bladenboro on February 9 and 10, and Southport on February 11.

SP Nominates Sper For Re-Election

AS A PART OF A NATIONWIDE day of prayer and protest against the treason trial of Hungarian Cardinal Mindszenty, New York's Cardinal Spellman makes the first appearance in the pulpit of St. Patrick's cathedral since V-E Day. Declaring the Hungarian Primate could no longer be saved, the Cardinal warned that a third World War is inevitable "unless the whole American people" unite to stop the Communists.

U.S. Minister Gets Protest From Hungary

Cardinal Spellman Included in Charge

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Feb. 8—(UP)—The government today denounced Selden Chapin, United States Minister to Hungary, and Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York for their alleged roles in the "treason" of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, 56, who was sentenced by a People's court to life imprisonment.

Undersecretary of State for Foreign Affairs Ivan Boldiszar accused Chapin of leading Mindszenty to believe a third World War was imminent in which the U.S. would intervene in Hungary.

Boldiszar said Cardinal Spellman's sermon in New York was not worthy of an official answer because he was not "an objective observer" and was "implicated" in the Mindszenty case.

Found guilty after a three-day trial, Mindszenty was sentenced to life in a convict's prison, the hardest of Hungary's three grades of prisons. He appealed the sentence to the Supreme Peoples tribunal which has authority either to reduce it or to increase it to death by hanging.

In the past there have been cases where the supreme tribunal increased sentences handed down by a lower court.

Residents Of Trailer Court Denounce Fire Truck Delay

Engine Arrived In 30 Minutes, Say Witnesses

By Don Maynard

Residents of the University trailer court were up in arms yesterday over the apparent "negligence on somcone's part" which witnesses said was a contributing factor in a $2,500 fire loss Sunday night.

Neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rockholtz, whose trailer was totally destroyed in the blaze, were trying to get to the bottom of the delay in the arrival of fire-fighting equipment in responding to calls for aid late Sunday night.

Witnesses of the blaze said that the fire department took nearly 30 minutes to respond to the call. Members of the department stated flatly, "apparatus was there in less than five minutes."

Norman Ridenhour, immediate neighbor of the Rockholtz's, said the first call was made at 11:45. Ridenhour said his conversation with a "sleepy, indifferent sounding fireman," was as follows:

He dialed the operator, asked for the fire department and when connected with fireman J. F. Partin relayed the information, "There's a trailer going up. Come to the upper trailer court as fast as you can. The address is 87-A, across from the Medical building."

He went on to say that the reply from the other end of the line was a "slow," "Well . . . what is your name."

One of the two firemen who responded to the call, J. F. Partin, said it took between three and three and one half minutes for them to arrive. He stated, "They didn't report anything except an explosion in the trailer court."

Mrs. Henry Goodwin, an eye-witness, related the following story: She said she heard Ridenhour reporting the fire "just as he said." Mrs. Goodwin went on to tell how she returned to the phone three times after that, each time finding a different person reporting the fire to the authorities.

"I came back to our trailer and waited around for a few minutes. I heard the roar of the truck in the lower court, not the upper court." One woman residing in the lower court reported the firemen knocked on her door and asked if her trailer was on fire.

Rockholtz said, "If it hadn't been for the boys in the trailer

Cheerleader Gets Unanimous Vote

Norm Sper, present head cheerleader elected last spring, will run for re-election to the post in the coming general elections on the Student party slate, SP spokesmen announced yesterday

Sper, who was almost wholly responsible for bringing card stunts to Carolina cheering sections last year, was nominated for re-election by a unanimous vote which SP officials described as "a vote of thanks for the work he has done this year and a vote of confidence in his ability to improve Carolina spirit even more in the coming year."

The candidate has been a member of the varsity swimming squad for three years and has won the national AAU diving championship. He missed the United States Olympic diving team by only a fraction of a point after he had been forced to lay off practice sessions for three weeks.

In addition to bringing the famed West Coast card stunts to the campus, Sper also was the instigator of the new Victory Bell which will go each year to the victor of the Carolina-Duke football classic. The bell remained on this campus early in the 1948 football season and then taken to Duke to remain for a few weeks until the grid clash between the two schools would decide the owner for the coming year.

The bell, which is used to ring out the score after each Carolina touchdown, is still on this campus.

Gran Childress, Student party chairman, pointed out yesterday that Sper's campaign slogan last year was "Sper rhymes with Cheer."

"This year," Childress said, "Sper is synonomous with Cheer."

Tri-Partisan Board Meets Today in GM

To Consider Applications

The tri-partisan selection board will meet at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the Grail room of Graham Memorial to interview applicants for nominations for the senior class, pharmacy and graduate school positions on the Men's Honor council.

The board will interview senior class applicants from 2 to 3 o'clock. The meeting will continue after 3 o'clock for pharmacy and graduate school applicants.

At 7:30 this evening the board will meet again to interview applicants of both categories who could not be present at the afternoon meeting.

The nominations of five seniors, three pharmacy and three graduate students will be made after the last meeting tonight. The nominees will run in the coming spring elections on a non-partisan ticket.

First formed last spring, the tri-partisan board is now made up of three members from each of the three campus political parties.

The chairman of the Men's council and the chairman of the Student council sit on the board in an advisory capacity, having no vote in the nominations. The chairman of the Men's council serves as chairman of the board.

Freshman Class Dance Rescheduled For April

Freshman class secretary Alan Tate announced yesterday that the freshman class dance originally scheduled for May 9 has been moved up a month and will be on April 9. The class officers and the freshman council decided to move the dance up so the class could plan other dances later in the spring.

The dance will be held in Woollen gymnasium as originally announced. Only members of the freshman class and their dates will be admitted.

Tate also said he wished to clear up a misunderstanding which resulted from the original announcement of the dance last week.

Freshmen may bring their own dates to the dance, but those men not bringing dates will be provided with dates. Girls will be imported from Woman's College, Meredith and St. Mary's. A poll will be taken in the near future to determine the number of men who will need dates.

Members of the recently-appointed freshman council are Bill Prince, Mike Galifianakis, Davis Byrd, Garland Johnson, Fred Blair and Bill Bostic.

The council in other recent action appointed committees to look into conditions in the quonset huts, the installation of additional phones in dormitories and the possibility of coke machines in the dormitories.

The telephone company reported that more phones would be installed in the dormitories as soon as equipment was available.

AROTC Unit Stages Review For Honorary Cadet Colonel

Led by the new field music band, the Air ROTC staged a colorful full-dress review of the unit yesterday afternoon on Emerson field in honor of Gene Hines, coed from Greenwood, S. C. and a member of the Delta Delta Delta sorority who was recently chosen "Miss Honorary Cadet Colonel" at the military ball sponsored by members of the unit on Jan. 29.

The review was marked by the presentation of commissions to nine cadet officers and warrants to 16 cadets as non-commissioned officers, along with ten awards for outstanding distinguished military students.

Col. Byron R. Switzer, commanding officer of the unit, made the presentation of commissions and warrants to the cadets and the awards to the distinguished military students. Miss Hines pinned the medals on the cadets as she congratulated them on being chosen as outstanding students of military science.

Members of the unit who received promotions were; Paul J. English, colonel; Robert M. McAllister, lieutenant colonel; John D. Brown, James W. Geiger, Robert A. Gray, Lester P. Martin, majors; John D. Greene, Wade T. Surratt, captains; C. B. Mendenhall, to 1st lieutenant.

Radio Schedule Is Announced

Future programs and changes in broadcasting time and station for this area were announced yesterday by the Communication division for the University Hour.

The stations for this area and their broadcast times are: WDNC Durham, 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, WNAO Raleigh, 4:30 on Sunday afternoon, and WDUK Durham, 8:30 on Wednesday evening.

For the week of Feb. 6, the hour will present the University Glee club singing The Credo by Palestrina and a story written by Sam Hirsch, entitled "Joe Palmer and the Phillistines."

A documentary drama, "Bandwagon," by George Grizzard will be presented during the week of Feb. 13. "Bandwagon" tells the story of the University School of Public Health.

For the following week of Feb. 20, there will be a 30-minutes radio adaptation of "H.M.S. Pinafore" by Gilbert and Sullivan. The cast, orchestra, and chorus will be the same as that used during the recent campus production.

'Little Foxes' Has Local Thespians In Leading Roles

Local actors hold leading roles in the forthcoming Playmaker production of "The Little Foxes" under the direction of John W. Parker. The village thespians are Louise Lamont (Regina), Walter Creech (William Marshall), Lillian Prince (Birdie), and Pearl Fishel (Addie).

Other Tar Heels playing parts in this popular drama of the South in 1900 are Barbara McIntyre (Alexandra) of Goldsboro, William McIllwinnen (Horace) of Fayetteville, and Charles Morrell (Cal) of Asheville.

The other actors are James Geiger (Ben) of Miami, Fla., Gordon Argo (Leo) of Gardendale, Alabama, and A. E. Westover, III, (Oscar) of Merchantville, N. J.

Frank Echols, Asheville, is the stage manager, and Louise Mustin, Chapel Hill, is serving as assistant to the director.

The set will be designed by Lynn Gault, technical director of the Playmakers, and the costumes will be done by Irene Smart. "The Little Foxes" will be shown March 2, 3, 4, and 5 as part of the regular Playmaker season.

Committee Heads Named By Gerns At Council Meet

Pete Gerns, president of the Interdormitory council, made three appointments in Monday night's meeting of the council.

George Blackwelder, president of Stacy dormitory, was appointed head of the Interdormitory Judiciary board. His committee is studying amendments to the council constitution and clarification of offenses which are to be tried by the individual dormitory. The judiciary will formulate definite election procedure to be precedent for all future dormitory elections.

Harry Aycock, president of C dorm, was appointed to head the interdorm dance committee to work with the Grail in finding a way to give the dormitory students a dance this spring.

Earl Fitzgerald, advisor of Everett, was named chairman of a committee to locate a place to establish a trophy case for exhibiting cups won by dormitories.

The next project on agenda for the council is the establishment of a community chest whose personnel would collect contributions in one drive to eliminate the continuous collection of money from time to time.

J. S. Bennett, director of operations, spoke to the council on problems which his office is confronted in trying to help provide better living conditions.

New Storm About To Hit Northwest

CHICAGO, Feb. 8—(UP)—Army bulldozers dug today into mountainous new snow drifts piled up by a blizzard in the battered West, while still another storm began moving in from the northwest.

Forecasters here, however, said the new blow was not expected to be as bad as the storm which subsided today on the western plains after piling up drifts house-high in some places and marooning 10,000 travelers.

Sweeping in from the Aleutians, the fresh storm already brought rain to the coastal sections of Washington and Oregon and light snow to eastern Oregon and central Nevada.

It was scheduled to follow the well-worn storm groove through Utah and other northern Rocky Mountain states, but forecasters said it did not appear to be as violent as the previous two-day blow.

THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Demo Chairman

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8—(UP)—William M. Boyle, Jr. former director of police in Kansas City, Mo., was named executive Vice Chairman of the Democratic National committee today with President Truman's hearty approval.

Latin 'Coups'

NEW YORK, Feb. 8—(UP)—Romulo Betancourt, former president of Venezuela, said today that recent military coups in Latin America have unleased a "reactionary tide" that is breaking down Democracy and weakening the position of Western nations against Communism.

Commie Influence

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 8—(UP)—The American Federation of Labor today called on all of its affiliates in Canada to fight the "shocking" influence of Communists in the Canadian trades and labor congress.

Pope Is Grieved

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 8—(UP)—Pope Pius XII was "profoundly grieved" today by the conviction of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, and the Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano compared his sentencing to the crucifixion of Christ.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8—(UP)—Nine Hungarian diplomatic officials in the United States, one of them the acting Consul General, resigned today in protest against the conviction of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty in Budapest.

Reveling in Rare Relics

Curator Praises Campus Museum

By Sam Hirsch

A museum is usually a quiet place; an aura of solemn reverence fills it. Nothing lives or stirs. Relics of dead history occupy their proper places, and the movement of students, historians or visiting firemen breaks in upon their repose.

Not so 113 Murphey. The dramatic art museum of the Carolina Playmakers is located there. So is Sam Selden's office. Consequently, the traffic and activity per square yard is equal to any given ten minutes in the Y court between classes in the morning.

There is so much bustle that the history lining the walls of the museum is ignored, and the scrapbooks, old playbills, masks and costumes look down unnoticed. But George Freedley, former curator of the theater collection of the New York public library, considers this collection one of the foremost and most important theater museums in the country, so it should not be overlooked by students of the drama and others interested in the theater.

The Cauldron Bubbles

As happens every year about this time, the campus political pot is beginning to give off bubbling sounds indicating that the boiling point of spring elections is fast approaching. To most students, unversed in political cookery and interested chiefly in the finished product when ready for consumption, the election boiling point is the time to become interested in what is going on. Those who have participated in or observed the process a little closer, however, realize that the bubbling period announces a critical stage in the cooking. It is then that the ingredients are being added—and upon the quality of the ingredients depends the success of the stew.

Ingredients in the campus political stew are the candidates for offices; and, to carry the simile a little farther, since the health of student activities during the coming year—whether they are robust and strong or suffer from acute indigestion—depends greatly upon their leaders, these candidates should be picked with care. The candidates announced so far have been of high quality. They are men of ability and willingness and have proven themselves by past performance. Most of the others under consideration by the three parties are also good men. But, as always, there are exceptions.

Unfortunately, ability, sincerity and industry are not the only factors entering into the nomination of candidates. The parties are interested primarily in putting up candidates who can get elected, and often the less that is known about a man, the better his chances of election. Also, as in all politics, campus parties are prone to bestow nominations upon mediocre men as reward for past loyalty to the party. Sometimes they nominate a candidate for no better reason than that the party can control him.

A few of these men rise above expectations and do a creditable job; others by their short-sightedness and inefficiency do damage to student government and other activities that takes years to repair. Most, however do just about as expected—little harm but no good at all.

On the whole, these men are not of the type that student activities want or need. What they do need are men who are sincere in their desire to serve the University, level headed in their judgment, capable in their fields of endeavor, and untiring in their efforts. In choosing the rest of their slates, the parties should realize that in picking candidates who are good for the University they will be picking candidates who are good for the party.

You Are the Big Wheel

(from the Daily Texan)

A number of people have remarked recently that what this country needs is a "great leader," a strong man to help us find once more the "good old days."

During the war we were tied together by a common cause; we had a goal and each had something to contribute toward reaching it. But now the bonds of common purpose and common danger have been broken. We have what we thought we were fighting for—the right to disagree, the right of each to pursue his own interests—and we don't know what to do with it.

The country is in a state of confusion—where are we to place the blame? Depending upon his interest, the individual blames big business, labor, the government, the Negro, the Jew, or the communists. Never does the individual blame himself. He always considers himself the innocently injured party.

We, as individuals, cannot seem to realize that, in the long run, our interests cannot be separated from those o four fellow man. A democracy posses only those qualities which are the qualities of its citizens. The little things each man does each day together with those of our fellow man. A democracy possesses only those behavior.

We do not need a "strong leader." We need the strength and wisdom to govern ourselves. In a democracy, each of us alone must accept the responsibility of working for the common good.

Perle Gets A Free Trip

By George Dixon

True loyalty always gets its reward. Because of her unswerving devotion to President Truman, Perle Mesta gets a free trip to Philadelphia. Our Perle can use that free trip because she has only 8 or 9 trillion dollars to her name, and what with taxes, and feeding the vice-president, there isn't much left over for traveling. Washington's no. 1 party-thrower won't feel too strange in the City of Brotherly Love because she has been there at least twice before that I personally know of. She was at both the Republican and Democratic conventions.

As nearly as I could gather, however, she went to the G. O. P. thing only to enjoy the soft, cooling, breezes. She got tired of the hardship of her villa in Newport and wanted to relax a bit in the sybaritic luxury of the convention hall.

Now she has another opportunity to get away from the drudgery of entertaining the chief justice and other of her part-time boarders. The change undoubtedly will do her good. She will also see something unfamiliar in Philadelphia — things the rest of us are forced to use for money, namely coins.

The President — so help me —has appointed our Perle to the annual assay commision.

It'll be a remarkable experience for you, Perle. Now you'll know what the rest of us mean when we talk about a "thin dime."

* * *

Mrs. Mesta will meet with her fellow commissioners at the U. S. mint on Wednesday, Feb. 9. The appointment reads:

"The duty of the commission, as provided by law, is to test the weight and fineness of the coins. . . .to secure conformity to the prescribed standards of weights and measures."

* * *

Mr. Theodore Roosevelt Goldsmith, who writes a newsletter from here on U. S. government securities and gold, had the glass door of his office mysteriously kicked in the other day. Workmen came to restore it.

The gold expert was mystified by the vandalism, but it was nothing compared to the shock that followed.

Returning to his office he found this message tied to his door: "We ran out of gold."

He was about to put in a frantic call to Fort Knox when the workmen returned. They explained they had to go for more gold paint to complete the door lettering.

The house committee on un-American activities is very proud of its brochure, "100 Things You Should Know About Communism."

Consequently it was a bit nonplussed the other day at a letter reading, "please send me your booklet, '100 Things You Should Know About The Un-American Activities Committee.' "

Codes Interpreted

The Responsibility Of All

By Fred Thompson
For the Student Council

Much has been said about "Carolina's Spirit of Living" being unique, but the members of the Student council feel that this spirit is only an expression of religious and democratic principles. The judiciary bodies of student government do not wish at any time to assume the position of a police body with the role of frightening students into abiding by the Honor and Campus coeds. We feel that students should abide by these codes not because of fear but because they feel it is the right thing to do.

"To think and act the truth is the heart of our way of life" here at the University. The Honor principle states: "A student is on his honor not to lie, cheat, or steal. This is a personal, living principle that we strive to live, and its practice is its own reward."

The Campus code simply stated is: A student is on his honor to conduct himself as a gentlemen. There are no offenses listed under this code, and its interpretation is left to the individuals, who can rely upon Carolina's long-standing traditions to help mark the channel.

Many students have this idea: I will not cheat myself but I will not turn in anyone else I might see cheating. This attitude can weaken our honor system. Each student must realize that our honor system is self-imposed and that if each of us does not assume an obligation to keep his slate clean and to see that his neighbors do likewise, we run the risk of having to reinstate something similar to the proctor system. We want to keep the freedom which we now know on this campus; therefore, each student must realize his responsibility and fulfill it.

Another factor which tends to weaken our honor system is that some of the faculty think the councils are too lenient, others think them too harsh, and still others think the whole judiciary branch of student government is inefficent and enforcement of the Honor code a farce. Perhaps it is true that in some cases the councils make wrong decisions, but it is our contention that the student courts seek always to get at the truth and render a just decision. We cannot hope to have even a reasonably effective honor system if faculty members do not extend utmost cooperation.

During a recent case heard by the Student council, the defendant, a first-quarter freshman who admitted cheating, said he was under the impression that students found guilty for the first time were usually placed on probation, if they made a clean breast of the affair. We would like to say that usually persons are not allowed to remain in school when guilty of Honor code violation for the first time. However, the honor system here is different from systems in other schools in that any student who has been suspended once, and who has had a good record during suspension may be readmitted and thus given a second chance to show that he is able to live by the Honor code.

We realize that many students come from schools where there was nothing similar to our codes; however, we feel that any person of college age should have a sense of right and wrong, so a defendant's plea of ignorance of the law does not usually help him. A thorough explanation of the Honor and Campus codes has been incorporated into the orientation every student should receive on entering the University. We feel that if, for some reason, any student does not receive an adequate explanation of the Carolina spirit of living during his orientation, he is obligated to find out on his own the simple principles by which our honor system operates.

Wrong Number

Problems of Supply

By Harman W. Nichols

WASHINGTON—(UP)—The armed services have so many duplications in order numbers that some say a supply sergeant can't order a shipment of underdrawers without going through a library of listings.

At Mechanicsburg, Pa., a big supply depot, one single item is said to be listed under 1100 different numbers. At best, a bolt of adhesive tape or a mattress has different order numbers for the army, the navy or the marine corps, although the supplies are identical.

Rep. Jack Z. Anderson, Republican from California thought a long time about this situation. Then he introduced a measure, which would require a single supply catalog for all the services. He figured that ought to help prevent troubles like ordering a washer for a plane and having it arrive after the airship is halfway around the world.

And with things listed like they ought to be listed, we would eliminate the danger of a wrong number.

During the war, a press photographer in the European theater of operations wanted a satchel in which to carry his cameras, flash bulbs and other gear. The press was allowed to order through the army or the navy. This man looked up the number on the little leather bag he wanted and sent it along to the commanding officer at his base. Time passed. The order went from one officer to another and every time it did., eyebrows arched. At length, the lensman was called to the tent of the big wheel in his outfit.

"That will be $1,225,000," the army man said. "But we are happy to serve you."

The photographer had ordered a B-29 by mistake.

Neatest Political Development is 'Operation Long'

By Jess Dedmond

The neatest development on the political horizon may be termed "Operation Long." With some surprise Charlie Long's political friends—and enemies—learned that he had cancelled his registration for this term. He did so, presumably, in order to devote himself to plans for further study in Switzerland. I use "presumably" because the development has a striking similarity to that of a year ago when Charlie retired from politics to live a quiet life on the campus until plans could be completed for the transatlantic journey he had planned for that time. But transatlantic plans take strange turns for Mr. Long. Last year they took him into an independent campaign for the presidency. This year the approach is different but the voyage points in the same direction.

A few weeks ago Charlie and some of his friends took a walk from the Student party. Charlie retired to a quiet life of a Chapel Hill constructor while his friends cast their lot with the Campus party. So, while he built houses and made his plans for Switzerland, his friends went quietly about, petition in hand, securing supporters for Mr. Long's candidacy. Finally, armed with what is reported to be an 800-name petition, his friends have started the push for a Campus party nomination. At this writing it appears—at a distance—that he is a cinch for the nomination. What closer observation will reveal, and what turn the vote will take, will still have to be seen.

For many it is difficult, if not impossible, to see Mr. Long's real objective. He could be aiming at his old friend, but now archrival, Bill Mackie. He could, like Jimmy Wallace in the past, want to determine how much of the opposition's punishment he can take. Or perhaps he honestly thinks he can win. However that may be, he still should not feel too far from Switzerland—a land of ups and downs. Charlie has had his ups and downs, as has the Campus [illegible] shouldn't find the new Switzerland too dissimilar from the original.

Of course the unanswered question for the Campus party is whether it will find Mr. Long on one of his ups or on one of his downs. It might be that it is a long "Long" way to the presidency.

Write Away

Not Alone in Faith

Editor:

For many centuries, alchemists searched for the 'secret' of the transmutation of the elements. The nineteenth century world viewed their efforts with scorn. "The alchemists were trying to do the impossible," they said. "We are much more sensible. We don't waste our time thinking about the impossible." Yet today we find that the transmutation of the elements has become a reality; the alchemists dream has become true.

Mr. Bruton and we have become involved in an argument as to what man can most safely predicate about God. We maintain that it requires much, much more empirical evidence to assert the non-existence of any entity, be it God or thumbtacks, than it does to assert its possibility.

We assert the possibility of God. We maintain that there is not sufficient rational nor empirical evidence to support the proposition "not-God."

Mr. Bruton hastens to point out that my position is an act of faith. I agree, and say that his position requires even more faith than mine. Most people who adopt the atheistic position (I am not saying that Mr. Bruton is in this group) do not seem to realize the scarcity of facts supporting their opinion. The purpose of my previous letter and of this one is not to prove theism right but to point to the shakey timbers supporting the non-theistic position. Too long have people uncritically accepted the view that faith is an exclusive property of religious minded people. Atheistics, agnostics or theists, we all live by a faith that can be supported but not proved.

Ray Mills

Only By Restriction

Editor:

"To argue with one who has renounced the use and authority of reason is like administering medicine to the dead."—Thomas Paine.

The DTH's editorial "Admission of Weakness," has fallen far short of meeting the issue of Communism squarely. The fatal themes of irrelevance, evasiveness and passive resistence resound from beginning to end. You tell us that the solution to the problem lies not in restricting Communism but in the strengthening of democracy. Why didn't you tell us how we may do that without restriction? Was it because you know that it is virtually impossible to strengthen democracy in the two most vital strongholds—educational institutions and government—without restriction?

You must surely know by this time that when an attempt is made to rid those strongholds of reds, many cry out against the ridders to "Stop!" Such names as "troublemakers, suppressers of freedom, liars, red herring," etc. are heaped upon them. Judging from its articles I think it can be safely said that the DTH's attitude is no exception to the attitude just expressed. I repeat—just how do you propose to adequately bolster democracy against Communism without restriction? Answer me sensibly and I'll enthusiastically join your gang of Communist proto-lerationists.

What profiteth it us if in not striking at our adversary we destroy that which we are seeking to defend?

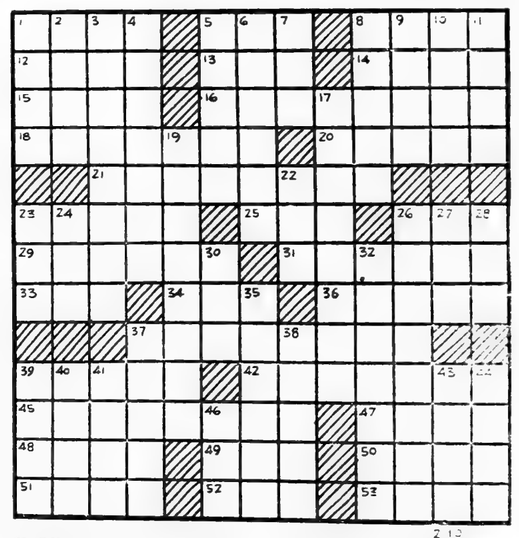
Mills Missed the Point



Editor:

After a rather lengthy discourse on the existence of one connoted by the ambiguous word "God," Mr. Mills draws a most amazing conclusion: "So the only thing we have left on this most basic of all questions is probability and opinion."

I think it only fair to tell Mr. Mills and others who were puzzled as to my purpose, that the former's conclusion was precisely the idea I wished to convey to the readers. Religion speaks in a dogmatic or "matter of fact" fashion—particularly on occasions like "Religious Emphasis week." The Khayyam quotations were submitted simply as a little warning-reminder of that fact.

Sorry Metaphysician Mills missed the point. He could have saved himself about 300 words on a subject which doesn't affect our welfare nearly so much as outlawing Communism in America.

What's Done in Dunn

THERE'S A NEWSPAPER down in Dunn that editorially doesn't like the way the University of North Carolina gets its football players. The Dunn Dispatch, for years standing staunchly as the Editorial Voice of Harnett county, is currently hollering long and loudly about "almost commercial professionalism" existing at the fair state University with a subsequent pleading for more North Carolina boys on the team roster.

Seems the gentlemen of the Dispatch are disappointed over the lack of local talent on current Tar Heel teams and want Mr. Snavely to "get a few more real, honest-to-goodness Tar Heel born, Tar Heel bred Tar Heels on the Tar Heel team of 1949. Otherwise," conclude the Dunnites, "let's advertise that the University of North Carolina is sponsoring a football team composed of the best players that can be imported—with or without tar on their heels."

Now, the gentlemen from Dunn have their case, but they haven't, like many editors, perused both sides of the double column ledger. It's easy for the armchair athletes to call upon Snavely for well-adjectived Tar Heels, if such a quantity of Tar Heels were available. The truth of the matter is that there are not enough good football players in North Carolina to produce a national championship team and the fault in the matter lies with the people and the leaders of the state—some newspapermen—not with a University football coach.

Give Them a Chance

ONE OF THE GREATEST features of Charlie Justice is that he is a North Carolinian. But Charlie is an exception rather than a rule in this state. There have been few approaching him in North Carolina in the past, and under the present trend, there will be few in the future. The youth of the state are simply not getting the chances to become great stars at their own universities. And for those who will not be stars, there is not ample opportunity for adequate physical development.

Poor facilities, poor equipment, and underpaid coaches don't produce great athletes and sound bodies. Remember that North Carolina led the nation in draft deferments during the war. North Carolina boys, given the fields, gear, and expert guidance that boys in Ohio, Pennsylvania and other states receive, will develop into men with strong minds and bodies, and the chosen few into first-rate football material.

The Dispatch goes on to challenge that "it would be inconceivable that a player like 'Choo Choo' would be ruled ineligible no matter how poor his scholastic grades might be." Charlie Justice and his teammates, like any other students, attend class regularly. Until recently, when the entire academic level of the school was raised, athletes at the University were required to maintain a better scholastic average than did their fellow classmates.

All of today's athletes do not indulge in physical education as is the popular conception. Even so, the gentlemen of Harnett county might, by investigation, find this school a great deal more difficult than the journalism department that fosters their newsmen of the future. It is a little known fact that the 1948 Tar Heels in all their travels, did not miss a full school day all season because games.

Big Time Ideas

FOOTBALL AT CAROLINA is meant to be a Big Time proposition. It is the bread winner of the entire athletic program, both varsity and intramural. The Notre Dame game in New York next year has been called a purely money-making venture by some, but the funds obtained from that contest will aid in maintaining one of the nation's finest and most complete inntramural programs that now exists at this University.

No other sport in college with the possible exception of basketball, makes its own way at Carolina. And no one wants to see wrestling, swimming, baseball, tennis and the rest removed from the athletic roster because this state is at present unable to furnish enough top-flight football material. Only if the way is shown at this University will North Carolina secondary athletic program rise to the level of others throughout the country.

What the gentlemen from Harnett fail to realize is that many of these "outsiders" who come to play football, stay to help build the North Carolina athletic program of years to come. And consider the fact that the footballers who have made Phi Beta Kappa in the past few years—more numerous than you think—were all from out of state while North Carolina's leading high school star of last year supposedly couldn't make the entrance requirements at the University.

Pride, gentlemen, sometimes goeth before a football team.

State Freshmen Drop Tar Babies, 50-28

Stoll Tallies 17; 11 for Harter Carolina High

RALEIGH, Feb. 8—Carolina's freshman basketeers took another one on the chin here tonight, bowing to a strong State yearling outfit by a 50-28 score in a preliminary to the Big Four varsity contest between Wake Forest and the Wolfpack.

This was the second loss in a row for the Tar Babies, who dropped a 55-54 decision to the Duke Blue Imps last week.

The talented Wolfcubs have now won two straight from the Carolina frosh, having walked off with a 59-46 victory earlier in the season in Woollen gym. Tonight's game also provided Carolina's seventh loss of the campaign as against eight victories and the Tar Babies will have to step some if they are to finish the season above the .500 mark.

The State frosh played a fine defensive game tonight, permitting only one Carolina man to hit double figures. Dick Harter turned the trick by notching 11 points: John Bowersox was the number two Tar Baby with eight and he and Harter were the only two men to do any appreciable scoring.

Two men did all of the damage against Carolina. Forward Joe Stoll tallied 17 points while center Bob Cook followed with 14. Between them, the two Wolfcubs outscored the entire Tar Baby outfit.

These two boys also stole the honors against Carolina the last time the two teams met with Cook high man wih 21 and Stoll next with 16.

The Tar Babies managed to stay close behind the Wolfcubs during the first half, when they trailed by only four points, 21-17, but the yearlings from the Capitol City soon pulled away and the visitors were held to a total of seven points in the second stanza.

The scoring:

Carolina (28)	Pos.	State (50)
Eckert (4)	f	Stoll (17)
Harter (11)	f	Holt (5)
Redding (1)	c	Cook (14)
Cheek (3)	g	Terrill (5)
Bowersox (8)	g	Mackmowski (6)

Substitutions—Carolina: Slemp, Godwin (1), Barr, Sink, and Holt. State: Anderson, Wiggens (3), Waddell, Lumley, Butts, and Falkner.

Halftime score—State, 21; Carolina, 17.

Cage Club Preps For GW, Terps

Coach Tom Scott herded his Carolina cagers back onto the court at Woollen gym yesterday afternoon as the Tar Heels opened practices for their weekend jaunt into northernmost Dixieland.

The Carolinians will play the University of Maryland cagers in College Park on Friday and then move into the District of Columbia for a Saturday night battle with the Colonials of George Washington university.

The Tar Heels shocked a gymful of Southern conference rooters last Saturday when they pinned a lop-sided 64-34 licking on the high-and-mighty Blue Devils of Duke.

The entire Carolina team turned in topnotch performances in the upset win. Hugo Kappler played the boards better than the houseman at most casinos, Coy Carson crept onto the court to flip in five field goals between coughs although he was suffering from a minor siege of flu, Nemo Nearman snapped to sudden scoring life and made everyone in Woollen sit up and take notice with his amazing 18-point scoring feat, and guards Dan Nyimicz, Charlie Thorne, and Rip Ryan covered the Blue Devil forwards like a blanket.

Handball Championship Today; Cage Winners Set For Playoffs

After five weeks of intensive afternoon and evening activity, the anticipated results of the winter quarter program of the Intramural department is slowly beginning to bear fruit.

The handball tournament is now on its last legs with both the dormitory and the fraternity champions crowned. The Town 1 team won the dorm laurels while Chi Psi 1, the defending campus champs, again annexed the fraternity honors. These two teams have tentative plans to clash tonight for the campus championship.

Meanwhile in its last scheduled week of regular play, the Intramural basketball tournament, the activity that recieves the most support from the students, has its share of already settled winners who are now awaiting the final playoffs.

Of the ten seven team loops in the fraternity circles, five frat quintets have already clinched their individual league's title. Already in the slots for the playoffs, which are to be sometime next week, are the powerful teams from Phi Delt 1, DKE 2, Zeta 1 and Chi Psi 1.

All of the aforementioned clubs have identical records of six victories and no defeats in their restricted competition, records that no doubt will be slightly marred when they tangle with each other in the forthcoming playoffs.

The Chi Psi five copped the first place spot in League 1 of the frat loops when they subdued another unbeaten foe, KA 1, 27-24 in one of last night's feature games. In another standout clash, a good sized crowd watched Zeta 1 wallop Lamba Chi 1, 34-16 thus sewing up League 2 for the Zetes.

On the other side of the ledger, the dorm courtsters are farther advanced than their friendly rivals in the frat leagues. Definitely superior in their own leagues that should make the sparks fly in the playoffs is the word for such dorm quints as the Blackballs, the Unknowns, and the ever potent Grads, who have easily cinched their respective leagues even before the termination of competition.

Other campus powerhouses as the Shotguns, Oakwood Drive, and Medical School are far ahead in their competition and only mathmatically able of being caught.

State Crushes Deacs By 82-39 In Raleigh

RALEIGH, Feb. 8—N.C. State college took ample revenge for its previous 52-49 loss to Wake Forest here tonight by blasting the Demon Deacons to the tune of 82-39.

The Deacs were never in the game as the Wolfpack took an early lead. State led the outplayed Baptists, 42-18, at the half.

The scoring was evenly divided among the 'Pack with Sam Ranzino high man with 19. Vic Bubas tallied 16 to rate next with Paul Horvath and Dick Dickey hitting for 11 and 10, respectively. Stan Najeway did most of the counting for WakeForest with 16 markers.

LUCKY 13th

The Chapel Hill High school Wildcats extended their winning streak to 13 games last night by defeating Roxboro High school, 48-30, in Roxboro.

Track Team Prepares for Duke

The indoor board track in the Tin Can has been receiving heavy poundings the past several days as the Carolina indoor tracksters proceeded with the preparations for the practice meet with Duke and State Friday and Saturday and the Maryland invitational on February 19.

Duke last week fell before the atomized Tar Heels by an overwhelming 76 2-3 to 28 1-3 in their two-day indoor meet in the Tin Can.

Bill Albans, who compiled five firsts and a third against the Blue Devil tracksters, is the Tar Heel on whom coach Dale Ranson is banking most heavily. Albans took firsts last weekend in the 60-yard dash, 70-yard high and low hurdles, the high jump and the broad jump.

Albans and a trio of other outstanding hurdlers, Dick Taylor, Bob Morrow and Jack Moody, are expected to carry many of the Tar Heel hopes for victory in the Maryland meet. Navy has been installed as a pre-meet favorite.

Relief Chunker Main Signs With Pirates

PITTSBURG, Feb. 8.—(UP)—The Pittsburg Pirates announced tonight that Forrest Main, 6'4" right-handed relief pitcher, has signed his 1949 contract, bringing to 28 the number of players who have come to terms.

Main, who came from Delano, Cal., appeared in 117 games last season and was credited with one victory and one defeat.

Infielders Ink Pacts For '49 With Yankees

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—(UP)—The New York Yankees announced today that rookie infielders Jerry Coleman and Jack Phillips have signed their 1949 contracts.

Coleman, a 24-year old utility man, played both thrid base and shortstop at Newark last season, and can also play second. He hit .251 and batted in 62 runs.

Phillips, who played at both Kansas City and Newark, batted .279 with the Blues and .248 with the Bears.

Loop Tournament Ducats Go on Sale At 12 Tonight

DURHAM, N. C., Feb. 8—(UP)—Tickets for the annual Southern conference basketball tournament go on sale at one minute after midnight Thursday, Duke athletic director Eddie Cameron reminded today.

Cameron, host for Dixie's top cage fracas here March 3-5, said this year's tournament is expected to be another sellout.

Since the demand for tickets generally far exceeds the supply, Cameron laid out these rules for buyers:

Orders must be postmarked after midnight, Feb. 9, and should be addressed to Business Manager, Southern conference basketball tournament, Duke station, Durham, N. C.

Priorities on seat assignments will be based on the postmarked time of orders.

Season ticket books are $9 each and limited to four per fan. An extra 30 cents should be tagged on the order to cover registered mailing. Check or money order should accompany each order.

Bill Dole New Coach Of ECTC Grid Squad

GREENVILLE, Feb. 8—(UP)—W. E. Dole, now football coach at Fayetteville High school, will become head football coach at East Carolina Teachers college Sept. 1, Dr. John D. Messick, ECTC president, said today.

Dole, a graduate of the University of West Virginia, replaces J. M. Johnson, who recently resigned after three years here.

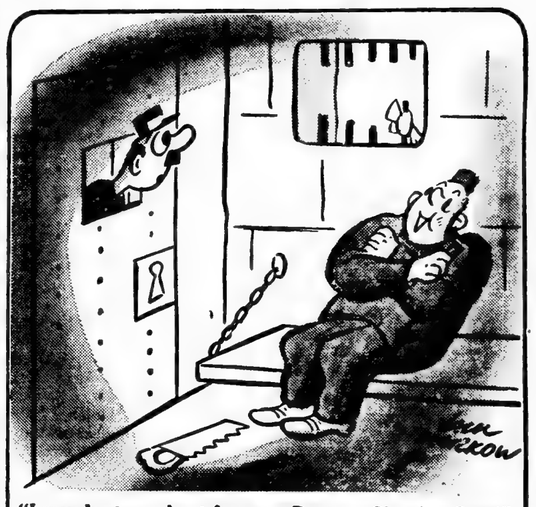
He became coach at Fayetteville in 1946 and his teams won 28 games, lost three and tied one.

Winter Wonderland

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Feb. 7—(UP)—Vince Foster of Chicago, a leading welterweight, was released under $10.000 bond tonight, charged with criminal assault.

The charge was filed on complaint of a Kansas City girl, whose name was withheld by police. She alleged that Foster assaulted her early today after a drinking bout and that she ran bare-footed from his parked car. She went to a farm house, she said, but he carried her back to the car.

Foster said he carried her because there was snow on the ground.



Bentley Leader In NHL Scoring

MONTREAL, Feb. 8—(UP)—Doug Bentley and Roy Conacher, Chicago Black Hawk linemates, still are waging a red-hot battle for the National Hockey league scoring leadership, official statistics revealed today.

Bentley maintained his two-point margin over Conacher during the past week when he raised his season output to 51 points. Sid Abel of Detroit was a distant third with 40 points, while Jim Conacher of Chicago and Billy Reay of Montreal each boasted 37 points to tie for fourth place.

Wild Bill Ezinicki had no close rivals in the penalty parade, sitting out a total of 116 minutes in 44 games.

The goalie statistics showed a tight three-way battle for the top spot. Harry Lumley of Detroit was first with an average of 2.42 goals allowed per game. Right behind were Bill Durnan of Montreal with a 2.45 mark and Chuck Rayner of New York with a 2.52 average.

court, we'd never have gotten the fire out and the rest of the trailers would have gone up with ours . . . the two old men who came out here couldn't have put out a fire alone, and one of them had a cane."

Mrs. Goodwin told of a man in a "light overcoat and brown hat," who had followed the fire truck from the Carolina Inn in his car. He said they stopped twice to change gears, at the caution light in front of the Inn and at the Whitehead dorm light.

She said, "The man in the overcoat asked me what time we had reported the fire.

I answered, 'About 11:45.'

"He replied, 'It's 12:10 now.' "

Spectators said that there were no audible sounds of a fire siren or horn when the engine approached, though the noise of an unmuffled exhaust awakened many of the residents of the trailer city.

Twenty-Seven University Students Are Pledged to Service Fraternity

Recently 27 University of North Carolina students were pledged by the Rho chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, National Boy Scout service fraternity, ending a three-month drive to bring it back to the campus after the war forced it into inactivity in 1942.

Faculty advisers to the chapter are Lee M. Brooks, Fletcher M. Green, Donald B. Hayman, Harold D. Meyer, James E. Wadsworth, and Robert L. Barrus of the Y.M.C.A. staff. Rev. Bernard Munger is the community adviser. Scouting advisers include Douglas Kelley, field executive for Orange and Durham counties; Roy M. Liles, council executive, and Steven Storm.

Officers are William S. Roth of Otten, president; Henry Osinski of Durham, vice president; James Sanders, secretary; Dave Cameron of Southern Pines, treasurer, and Floyd Ellington of Graham, historian.

Initiation services, to be performed by members of the Georgia Tech chapter, will take place after Scout week.

The fraternity is set up to serve the community as well as the campus. Members here are helping Scout troops, participating in Boy Scout week, preparing gifts for the Red Cross, and taking turns pushing the wheelchair of a crippled coed, Iris Kiem. Plans for the future include a book exchange service and aiding the University with orientation and other programs.

Present pledges are Charles Bartlett of Chapel Hill; Joseph Beasley, Randleman; Ray Bond, Guilford; Nathan Bunn, Asheville; Tom Bradshaw, Gastonia; Robert Collins, Ninety-Six, S. C.; Jake Froelick, High Point; Bill Furches, Winston-Salem; Bill Hogshead, Greensboro; John Hough, Washington; Ben Jones, Elgin, Ill.; Louis Lineberry, Asheville; Gray Mattox, Smithfield; John Thornton Long, Winston-Salem; John Morton, Washington; Jack Phelps, Winston-Salem; Bill Prince, Rochester, N. Y.; John Charles Rush, Rocky Mount; Ray Scala, Winston-Salem; Jerry Shuping, Asheboro; Bill Speon, Biscoe, and Vernon Stroupe, Asheville.

of the Waterside theater on Roanoke Island where "The Lost Colony" is staged each summer, and a real country still, once used for the real stuff, now a stage prop.

Distinguished theater visitors have come and gone, leaving their mark on the room. The Abbey theater visited here. Clifford Odets, Lee Simonson, Percy MacKaye, Maxwell Anderson all have talked about the theater and playwriting here. Eric Capon, director of the Old Vic in Liverpool, England, was here. So was Prof. Augustin Sire, assistant director of the University theater, Santiago, Chile. So have theater workers from all over the world. They all found their way to this remarkable museum and center of theater energy [illegible] by the late "Proff" Koch and now by Sam Selden.

The Roland Holt collection of American theater programs and clippings from 1831 to 1931 are kept here. The Roland Holt [illegible] for outstanding playwrights are on display, and every year another student's name is engraved on it.

Here theater lovers will revel in memories of the Playmaker greats; curiosity seekers will satisfy their inquisitive natures and just plain folks can share history for a brief moment or two in Murphey 113.

Gordon Nominated By UP For President

'Resources' To Be Clapp Talk Topic

Social Science Department to Sponsor Speech by Head of TVA Tonight in Alumni

"Working and Living with Our Resources" will be the topic of a talk by Gordon R. Clapp, chairman of the Board of the Tennessee Valley authority tonight at 8 o'clock in the Alumni building.

Clapp is coming to the University at the request of the Institute for Research in Social Science and the department of city and regional planning, and will speak primarily to graduate students and faculty members in the social sciences. Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, director of the Institute, said yesterday.

It is expected that Clapp will discuss the waste and development of America's resources in relation to the welfare of the people, and also give his reactions to recent books concerning the dangers of population increase exceeding the available resources. Two of these books which have aroused public comment are William Vogt's "The Road to Survival" and Fairfield Osborn's "Our Plundered Planet."

"Mr. Clapp, a specialist in public administration, is one of our most capable career men in government administration, with entirely non-political interests," said Dr. Blackwell.

Clapp graduated from Lawrence college in Wisconsin in 1927 and became director of admissions and assistant dean there. After receiving his M.A. degree from the University of Chicago in 1933 he accepted a position with the TVA as assistant director of personnel. In 1935 he became director of personnel for that organization and general manager in 1939. He was named chairman of the Board in 1946.

Mr. Clapp will also speak on TVA and Regional Planning to a graduate seminar at 4 o'clock this afternoon. The public is invited to the evening lecture.

GORDON R. CLAPP, chairman of the Board of the Tennessee Valley authority, who will speak on "Working and Living With Our Resources" in Alumni building this evening at 8 o'clock.

U.S. Official Ordered Out Of Hungary

Given 24 Hours To Leave Nation

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Feb. 9 — (UP) — The Hungarian government has charged a United States legation official with helping Hungarians flee the country and has ordered him to leave within 24 hours, authoritative sources said tonight.

These sources identified the official as Robin E. Steussy, 27, vice consul, from Madison, Wis. Steussy is accused of making use of diplomatic privileges and immunity to aid the flight of Hungarian citizens.

The government acted 24 hours after Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, 56, was sentenced to life in a convict's prison following a three day treason trial in which the state asserted U. S. minister Seldon Chapin had encouraged the Roman Catholic primate to oppose the republic.

Just before the trial began last week the government also expelled a U. S. attache, Stephen Koczak, declaring he had asked for and received political and economic information from Mindszenty and his associates.

Steussy attended Madison West high school and was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1943. He served in the U. S. army from 1943 until 1946 and enrolled at Harvard university for graduate work in 1946. The same year, in November, he entered the foreign service and was assigned to Budapest Dec. 2.

Principal Cast Of Campus Opera Is Made Public

David Samples and Dr. Jan P. Schinhan, directors of the four campus groups' production of The Beggar's Opera, yesterday released the principal cast of the show.

The famous role of the highwayman-hero Macheath will be played by Irvine Noble Smith. Smith has appeared in many Playmaker productions, his most notable roles being those of Governor White (1947) and Sir Walter Raleigh (1948) in Paul Green's Lost Colony at Manteo. Cast opposite Mr. Smith, as Polly, is Barbara Edwards, who appears in the Lost Colony as Eleanor Dare. Miss Edwards will also be remembered for her role of Yum-Yum in The Mikado last season.

The comedy leads of Mr. and Mrs. Peachum will be played by Frederick Young and Catherine Covington. Young appeared as Duke Frederick in As You Like It last summer, and Mrs. Covington will be remembered for her comic lead of Katisha in The Mikado. Other principals are John Brinegar as Filch; Lee Noll as Lucy; John Shearin as Locket; and Pete Strader as the Beggar.

Ashby to Address Freshman Council

Dr. Warren Ashby, philosophy professor and chairman of the YMCA Advisory board, will speak at the regular meeting of the Y Freshman council tonight at 7 o'clock upstairs in the Y building.

Dr. Ashby, who will speak on "Philosophy as a Major or an Elective," will lead the third in a series of programs based on the interests of freshmen as shown by answers to a recent questionaire.

Local Authoress To Make Speech

Betty Smith, author of "Tomorrow Will Be Better," will speak on her book to all graduate education students and any other people who are interested at a seminar in the curriculum laboratory of Peabody hall next Thursday at 4 o'clock.

IN A SPECTACULAR DEMONSTRATION, junior high school students of Los Angeles make a dramatic appeal on behalf of the March of Dimes fund-raising campaign. Rita Adams Is Chosen Coed Handbook Editor

By Emily Baker

Rita Adams, senior from Charlotte, was elected editor of the Woman's Handbook at Tuesday night's meeting of the Coed senate. The handbook, which contains coed social rules and regulations, is mailed to new coeds the summer before they enter the University.

Rita's journalistic experience includes work on the Daily Tar Heel as society editor, reporter, and columnist employment with the University News bureau, and publicity and public relations director of Graham Memorial. Rita is also chairman of the publicity committee for the senior class.

Member of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority, Rita has served as the sorority house president, secretary of the Inter-dormitory council, member of the dormitory house council, secretary-treasurer of the Young Democratic club, secretary of the Charlotte-Carolina club, member of the Student legislature, and serves on the executive committee of the senior class.

While a student at Agnes Scott in Georgia, she was assistant editor of the college paper, Agnes Scott News.

Rita served as co-editor of the Chipley Bugle, American Amateur Press association publication, and has worked on the Montgomery Herald in Troy.

In high school the newly-elected handbook editor served as editor of the Rambler, school paper, as the school's correspondent for the Charlotte News, and as chairman of the high school's publicity committee. Rita also did part time work in the news department of the Charlotte News and was president of her senior class.

In addition to presenting rules to the new students, the handbook gives a historical sketch of the University, describes student government and other activities, and explains Campus and Honor codes

Sally Osborne Named Chairman Of Orientation

Sally Osborne, junior from Jacksonville, Ill., was elected chairman of coed orientation for the coming school year in a meeting of Coed senate Tuesday night.

Active in Y work, Sally is a member of the Y Junior council and is on the Alderman house council, in the University club and a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

She is a transfer from Illinois college where she was secretary of the Literary society, chairman of the inter-society spring formal, chairman of freshman initiation, program chairman of the Freshman society and a member of the honorary psychology society, college choir and social society.

In high school Sally was a member of the Student council, president of a freshman homeroom, on the sophomore class council, junior editor of the yearbook, president of the Music Appreciation club, secretary of the Glee club, and a member of the May court for four years.

Tickets on Sale For Cabin Party

Tickets are now on sale for a cabin party to be given Saturday night by Wesley foundation, a student group of the Methodist church, and may be obtained at the foundation office.

Dimes Cleanup

Dougald MacMillan, co-chairman of the campus March of Dimes drive, yesterday asked all persons who have been making collections for the drive to bring in all contributions to the Daily Tar Heel office.

MacMillan said complete reports on the drive would be released when all contributions and solicitors' reports are completed.

Junior Council Will Hear Nash

A coffee at Mrs. Frank Graham's and a devotional address by Dr. Arnold Nash, head of the department of religion, are planned for the final meeting of the Y Junior council to be held at 7 o'clock tonight.

The Y cabinet is entertaining the Y advisory board in addition to the council in order that the two groups may become better acquainted.

During the past month the Junior council has met weekly, receiving instruction in the work of the YW as a whole and in the separate functions of its committees.

Through this program the 50 outstanding coeds comprising the council will be better able to choose that field of Y work best suited to them.

Maria Davis, vice-president of the YW, is chairman of the council.

Candidate Holds Audit Board Post

Served as Acting Secretary-Treasurer In Kirby's Absence; Ran Yack Finances

By Herb Nachman

Dick Gordon, present chairman of the Student Audit board, yesterday received the University party nomination for president of the student body.

Gordon, a rising senior from Merion Station, Pa., has a long record of service in student government.

He has served in the Student legislature as a member of the Ways and Means committee and served as acting secretary-treasurer of the student body in the absence of Bob Kirby last quarter. At present he is a member of the Coalition cabinet.

In publications, Gordon served as advertising manager of the Yackety Yack in 1947 and was business manager of the Yack last year.

Following the budget rift last spring, Gordon drew up a book of running accounts which indicate the exact month-by-month spending of every organization in the student government budget.

On request of the Coed senate recently, he helped re-evaluate all coed finances and to draw up a coed activities budget which will be submitted to the Student legislature this spring. He also drew up the Coed Visiting agreement now in effect.

Other activities include membership in the Naval ROTC program in which he serves as a company commander. Gordon served in the Navy during the war for 23 months.

He has worked with freshman orientation for three years and has been a member of the executive committee of the Interfraternity council. Gordon is a member of Delta Psi fraternity.

In accepting the UP nomination, Gordon made the following statement:

"The confidence placed in me by the University party is indeed gratifying. During my work this year in the executive and financial branches of student government I have been closely associated with the current problems now facing the student body.

"These problems are now easily solved, nor may all of them be solved this year; however, I shall continue to equip myself in the best interests of student government."

New President Of Prof's Club Is Sworn In

Giduz Chosen As Treasurer

Walter Spearman, assistant professor of journalism, was installed as president of the Men's Faculty club Tuesday afternoon at a Faculty club luncheon in the Carolina Inn.

Spearman was introduced to the faculty members by Phillips Russell, retiring president of the faculty group, in an informal speech. Spearman immediately called for nominations to replace treasurer John Couch, who was unable to take office because he conducts a 2 o'clock class.

Prof. Hugo Giduz of the Romance language department was nominated to succeed Couch and was elected by an unanimous vote of the assembled members. Dr. Clifford Lyons of the English department was installed as secretary.

After elections, Spearman introduced C. F. Milner, assistant director of the communications department and audio-visual expert, who talked on his recent visit to Japan. Milner showed slides in conjunction with his talk and told about his attempts to train Japanese educators by the medium of audio-visual means.

Retreat Delegates Asked to See Y

Students leaving for the Y retreat at Montreat are asked to contact the YWCA office concerning the time they will be able to leave.

Transportation will be by car and groups will begin leaving at noon Friday Feb. 18. It is hoped that all students will be able to leave sometime Friday afternoon since the conference program begins at 8 o'clock that night. However, a few cars will leave Saturday morning if necessary.

Registration is continuing throughout this week in the YW office.

Bost to Preside

College Publicity Men Meet Here for Two-Day Convention

First Session of the fourth annual district four of the American College Public Relations association convention, will open here tonight with a dinner at the Carolina inn.

Chancellor House will speak at the dinner following registration of delegates from Virginia, Delaware, Maryland, North Carolina and the District of Columbia.

Tom Bost, Jr., district director and Wake Forest news bureau head, will preside over the sessions here and at Duke which will continue through Saturday.

Tomorrow morning at 9:30 a radio panel will be conducted at the Communications center in Swain hall. A 20-minute film will be shown on what goes on behind the scenes in radio.

Following the panel discussion, the group will attend a state editors' session to be led by editors of various state newspapers.

Delegates will hear feature editors, attend sports publicity writers' meetings and hear public relations workers of women's colleges on Friday following a luncheon at the Union building on the Duke campus.

Saturday morning will find the delegates back in Chapel Hill to hear members of national wire services lead discussion in studio A of Swain hall. Speakers will be Herb Foster of the United Press, Dick Palmer of the International News Service and Noel Yancey of the Associated Press.

Election of officers and selection of next year's convention site will terminate the meeting Saturday morning.

N.C. Cincinnati Society Grants $400 To W. R. Davie Memorial Scholarship

The North Carolina Society of the Cincinnati has granted $400 to the University for the purpose of continuing the William Richardson Davie memorial scholarship for North Carolina history, Chancellor Robert B. House announced yesterday.

This scholarship will be awarded by the history department and the Graduate school to a student specializing in the history of North Carolina.

The committee of the North Carolina Society of the Cincinnati responsible for making the award was composed of Joseph B. Cheshire, Raleigh; Graham H. Andrews, Raleigh; and Francis O. Clarkson, Charlotte.

Graduate students interested in North Carolina history are invited to make application for the award. The appropriate forms may be secured by writing to the dean of the Graduate school.

Chancellor House said that the scholarship amounts to a $200 increase over the award for 1948-49.

By Two-One Vote

Phi Takes Decision Over Di In Liquor Referendum Debate

By Graham Jones

The Philanthropic assembly, supporting a state-wide liquor referendum, won a two to one judges' decision over the Dialectic senate in the Di-Phi debate Tuesday night in Phi hall.

However, in a straw vote to determine the real sympathies of the debaters Phi members joined the Di to vote down the referendum by a count of 21 to six.

Emily Baker, Herbert Yates, Bill Duncan, Charles Britt, Hugh Griffin, John Giles, and Peter Burks represented the Phi and Sam Manning, Arthur Murphy, Jerry Pettigrew, Bill Foster, Dixon McLean, Charles Gibson, and Dortch Warriner were the Di debaters.

Di members based their opposition to the referendum which has been introduced in the legislature by Senator Penney of Guilford, on the failure of national prohibition, the principle of local self government, the revenues from A.B.C. stores, and the cost of enforcing state-wide prohibition.

Phi speakers described the evils of alcohol, the control exercised by the state over most of the important laws, and the difficulties caused by lack of uniform liquor control.

Chancellor R. B. House, Dean Ernest Mackie, and Dean William Wells judged the debate.

Sam Manning and Arthur Murphy pointed out that the will of the people in a single county is more homogenous than the will of the entire state. In answer to Emily Baker's plea for North Carolina to vote dry like Mississippi, Murphy declared that the road from Oxford, Miss. to Memphis, Tenn., is kept "warm" by the whisky traffic.

No Excuse For Slowness

Almost every fire that does any damage in Chapel Hill is followed by recriminations against the fire department. At least some of the complaints are well founded: the number of full-time firemen is small, the equipment is inadequate to fight a fire of any size.

There are several factors which should be considered by those who condemn the fire department without reservations. The problem of inadequate fire protection is not limited to Chapel Hill; it prevails in almost all towns of comparable size. The tax revenue of small towns is not great enough to provide and maintain the necessary expensive fire fighting equipment nor to pay the salaries of many first-rate firemen. This is a serious problem, for inability to provide adequate protection does not lessen the need for it.

In the recent fire at the University trailer court another factor enters into the complaints against the local department. Residents of the court said at least 25 minutes elapsed between the time the fire was reported and the arrival of firemen. This estimate may well be exaggerated, since it is doubtful that anyone stopped in the excitement of the fire to look at a watch. On the other hand, firemen estimated the time as between three and three and a half minutes. This would have been practically impossible if, as one woman reported, they stopped at the lower trailer court and knocked on a door there in search of the fire.

From the combined testimony of trailer court residents it appears obvious that the fire department was unnecessarily slow in getting to the scene, and no excuse of too few men or too little equipment can divert the criticism on this point. Regardless of whether or not they can do any good after they arrive, there is no excuse for firemen not getting to a fire in a hurry once it has been reported.

It's A Good Idea

This is Boy Scout week. To all boys fortunate enough to have been scouts it brings with it a flood of pleasant memories. There were the dreamy summer camps with canoe trips and camp fires, deeply browned shoulders and bug bitten legs. There were the rowdy troop meetings in the shack with games and steaming mugs of cocoa afterwards. And there was always the signaling test and the life saving merit badge to pass.

Scouting makes a deep impression on boys because it reaches them when they are in a very formative stage. It helps to give them a realistic view of life at an early age. It teaches them to get along with other people. More important, Scouting helps a boy to help himself by giving him worthwhile goals and the enthusiasm to attain them. In return it asks nothing, but rather it tries to show that real self-satisfaction can only come through service to others.

Yes, Scouting helps every boy who will be helped through its unselfish ideals and its wholesome, vital activities. Why don't grown-ups go scouting too?

Lest They Fall For Anything

By Don Shropshire

Charlie Long may try it again, and the news that he may be in the running for the presidency in the spring elections has come to many with a jolt.

Some have already stated that they intend to fight him with all the power they can muster, and even others have become so alarmed that they have already sunk to a new "low" in spreading destructive rumors about him. Men who have been inactive on the recent political scene have once more come into the spotlight in an effort either to defeat him or to give him all the active support that is humanly possible. Evidence of this was apparent in the Campus Party meeting Monday evening when "long lost" faces reappeared with renewed vigor.

These varied reactions are not so hard to understand when viewed in the light of typical Long traits. Surely, of all the over-bearing, stubborn, determined characters, Long without doubt tops the list. Accompanied with this is his notorious habit of "rubbing" people the wrong way because he absolutely refuses to "soft-soap" anyone into his confidence. To friend or foe, he talks and acts in accordance with what he thinks with apologies to no one.

Some people may classify these qualities as "bad," but this columnist stands on the conviction that these are precisely what we need in student government today. If there is anything which our system could use, it is more officers who "have the courage to stand for something, lest they fall for anything."

The traits just stated, however, are not all those which might be expected in an administration with Long at the head. Even his strongest political foes do not hesitate to recognize his phenomenal ability to tackle the hardest of jobs and carry through to a successful conclusion, although others have a habit of forgetting those benefits which they have received as a result of his energies for the welfare of this campus. The next time a person sits in Kenan stadium on the forty or fifty yard line, it might be well to remember that he might still be down in the end zone if Long had not followed through on a determination to see that students received better seats.

Charlie Long is the candidate we need. Long over-due attention to gross inefficiency has been lost in the cloudiness of selfish minds. The difference which will most certainly come with his administration will be the fulfillment of an almost gone hope.

Sally: Unconscionable Ham

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

I am not one to prejudge a case before the bar of justice, but I feel constrained to say this about Axis Sally: no matter what other offense she may, or may not, be guilty of, she stands convicted as unconscionable ham.

I spent a couple of afternoons in U. S. District court with headphones over my pretty, shell-like ears, listening to playbacks of her Berlin broadcasts. I never heard such hammed-up mellerdrama since the oaf who used to get all choked with emotion over a noise-making breakfast food.

To a crochety, old reporter, brought up in the school of the pencil and copypaper, it is a weird experience covering a trial with gadgets.

Sitting there with earphones, listening to performances that went over the airwaves back in 1943 and 1944 you get the feeling of having been caught up in a time machine that has hopelessly jumbled the past, present, and future. In my time you didn't cover a trial with musical accompaniment.

You sat all day furiously scribbling over hundreds of sheets of paper, hoping you'd be able to decipher your notes later.

But I suppose we must not decry progress — even if in this case, it is baffling the daylights out of the courtroom spectators.

Everyone officially connected with the trial of Axis Sally has headphones, Judge Edward M. Curran, the jurors, the defendant, opposing council witnesses, bailiffs, and the ladies and gents of the press. But the spectators don't. They are forced to sit there, hearing nothing at all, while the faces of the ear-phone listeners register varying emotions.

It must be galling to these members of the great American public who stand in line for hours, pushing, shoving and clawing to gain admission, and then find themselves in a soundless vacuum. The other day an old dame behind me broke. She leaned forward, gave me a smart kidney punch, and rasped:

"For heaven's sake, what are they playing now?"

Judge Curran gave me a forbidding glare, although I was the victim, not the aggressor. I didn't want to be interrupted anyway, because the voice coming out of the ear-phone—identified by the witness on the stand as that of Axis Sally, nee Mildred Gillars—had me fascinated. She was screaming: "Oh, turn that d—n thing off, will you? I just can't stand it any longer, Elmer."

I will not make any point of the fact that Axis Sally said a word not permitted over our radio networks by the Federal Communications commission. It would seem, however, that the Germans were somewhat lax; or maybe they didn't know what the word meant in English. Our principles of jurisprudence being what they are, I suppose we must give them the benefit of the doubt.

This shortwave skit, in which the actress screamed and sobbed and shrieked and ranted, was supposed to be about an American mother, listening to an invasion broadcast. The propaganda in it was deadly. Everybody knows the invasion is suicide. . .between 70 and 90 per cent of the (American) boys will be killed, or crippled for the rest of their lives.

Also lines like this:

Elmer (the husband), "Ah, ah, ah, now watch your tongue, Evelyn. Don't forget you are an American mother."

Evelyn, identified as Axis Sally: "Thank God, I am. And I've got a right to say what I think. . . .What about Roosevelt's sons? One of them is down in Miami now sunning himself and when a reporter asked him, 'How can you afford vacationing in Miami in these times?,' he answered, 'Because my old man's got a lot of money.' "

Elmer: "Well, the Roosevelts are right."

Evelyn: "Ah, I knew you wouldn't see the point."

There was one other line that baffled me. Evelyn gets more overwrought than Stella Dallas and Elmer tries to comfort her in a manner that would never be approved by the board of temperance. He asks:

"Can I get you a glass of water. . . .or gin?"

From what goes on after that, it must have been gin—probably a hogshead or two. Evelyn's histrionics almost fractured our eardrums. As I said at the beginning, I am not prejudging Axis Sally. But it would be a mercy if something can be done to prevent her from going back to radio.

A dancer called Zorita was charged with cruelty to animals for taping the eyes of a python with which she danced.

The report added that the lady performed "while clad only in a sheer, filmy gown."

Hum-m, the poor snake couldn't see a thing? I guess that's cruelty, all right.

They Just Don't Want Us Here

Editor:

Well, there can be no doubt about it. They just don't want here. For almost three years the trailer court has felt step-children of the University and the outcasts of the A year ago last fall the Administration expressed their decisively when they said, "We didn't want you here any But we didn't know the Village felt so strongly on the that they wanted to burn us out.

And how else would you interpret it? Last night a s in one of the trailers became a serious fire because the fire d ment didn't come. And it would have been a holocaust exce the quick thinking and action of boys whose families and were threatened.

The fire department was called three times before it came ambling up the hill twenty minutes later (we're all blocks from the station). It didn't know where it was to go had to be stopped before it went to Victory Village. Of it was almost midnight, so it didn't want to wake the vil by using the fire signal or the siren. It was a very law-abidin engine too. It knows you should never go through a red or pass a car on a hill. That's probably why it didn't. And it was a little tired. It carried only two men, one so feeble an he was tottering like a drunk.

Of course, had they arrived before the fire was out, it certain what they could have done. The only fire plug with block was on the other side of the building under constru up here and I don't know whether they could have gotten The pressure in our own little water system was so low tha one could even fill a bucket.

A great tragedy was narrowly averted. The next time we not be so lucky. We're going to be real stubborn, though. W going to stay right here. But it may be a good idea for the versity, whose first responsibility it is, and the village to together and see that this doesn't happen again. Or they may a lot of regrets!

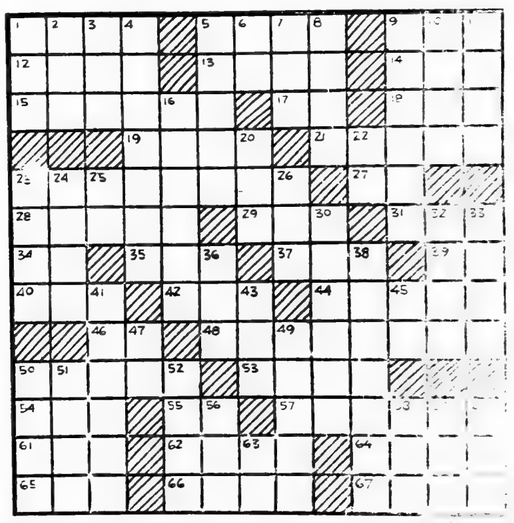
Admire Girls On Pedestals?

Editor:

Replying to the letters in Friday's Tar Heel concerning coeds at Carolina. . . .



It was stated that there is a mass exodus to Greensboro, leigh, and Durham every week-end. Perhaps one reason for is that the girls in girls' schools see boys so seldom that any would be considered entertaining without much effort on his Has the writer of Friday's letter stopped to realize that the jority of the Carolina coeds are transfers from girls' schools, cially those in Raleigh and Greensboro? And why do Duke State boys come to Carolina to date coeds if they are not the of girls that they appreciate?

As for being put on a pedestal, we had always thought American men respected and admired the type of girl who would be put on a pedestal. Another statement mentioned that refrained from "greeting men they met on campus." When could do speak to boys they do not know, they sometimes get either laughed at or a flirty reply instead of a friendly greeting. Perhaps this is the reason that some of the coeds do not speak.

As to the reference to cars and money, it seems to us that many boys on campus who do not have cars and extra spending money are just as much fun to date as boys that do have these advantages. In fact, the boys that the writers of this letter have dated at Carolina have no cars and do not usually spend over $1.50 (if that much) on dates, except for the large week-ends—when all the boys spend a lot on their dates, coeds or otherwise.

About frat and non-frat men: of the girls who were in on our floor, while we were writing this letter and who had dates for Friday night, the night of this writing, 8 were dating non-fraternity men and only 5 were dating fraternity men. Perhaps this will disprove the fake notion that coeds prefer fraternity men.

Assessments of the Roles Filled by Religion and Atheism in Western Civilization

Editor:

Man is the most highly adjustive of all the animals, yet, no one would venture to say that he is also the most adjusted. As human beings, we forego some of the adjustedness and apparent peace of mind of the ant and the cow for a chance at something a little higher-an adjustiveness that allows us ever to climb toward the very rafters of the Universe in constant hope of that perfect harmony which gives this life its fullest meaning! You might say that that adjustedness upon which we judge ourselves happy and unhappy is in reality the criterion of the defunct, for as long as we remain human in nature, sensitive in feeling, and comprehensive in mind, we must sacrifice adjustedness for adjustiveness.

We can never be sure that our conditions of life will not change, even with the most limited activity. Survival requires that we forever be prepared to adjust; we may never completely relax and survive. Yet we all seek peace of mind. What we are seeking without knowing is death! It is the only state in which we can be absolutely sure that we do not have to adjust!

Now, if the reader will think, think along with me into this thing, he will see as I see that it is not this so called "peace of mind" that we must seek, but something far more beautiful, something that even to the end causes us to hang on to this thing called life, even though the end would bring us sure peace of mind.

If I can live, if I can show to myself that life is truly dynamic instead of passive, then I will have made it possible to realize a living peace of mind. It will not be the same peace of mind that Mr. Liebmann refers to. It is not the peace of mind that religion would represent, nor even the peace of mind that most of us seek. It is a state of mind that is not analagous to the usual idea of peace, for it is an active state that feels all the change and flux that life has to offer and enjoys it by actively engaging itself with it and about it. It is the adjustive way of life rather than the adjusted.

Modernized Christianity is the result of a compromise between an adjusted nostalgia and the more dynamic, adjustive elements of man's reason. To a lesser degree it is attempting today, as religion must always attempt, to curb man's adjustive powers, to offer him the peace of mind of adjustment and mental nostalgia that Joshua Liebman would have us seek.

Some will say that my thoughts are anti-God; that I am an atheist, and upon this that what I have to say is rubbish. But I ask you: Can a mind believe and yet deny all? Can one world fill infinity or one God reign forever? Why do we fear death, we who seek religious peace of mind? Are we not seeking the very thing that we fear most? If I am living dynamically, enjoying the very conflict of life, it is not dying that I fear, but the inactive, "peaceful" state of death.

Some hope for further reconciliation of our religion to modern concepts. There is little reconciliation of any truthful nature of religion to modern concepts. Modern concepts, by this I mean those concepts which are the spontaneous offspring of increased human knowledge, can only compromise with those ideas which still more knowledge brings. It is a dynamic thing, this progress. Only the more adjustive can keep its pace. Compromises with the past and present are attempts to remain at "status quo." They are our attempts to "stop and rest," to adjust and remain that way. But mankind as a collective whole cannot stop and rest; it can only push adjustively onward or it can stop and die.

Today the currents of mankind run awry. As in the case of all backwardness, the trouble lies within our way of life. Our way of life is determined by the economic, religious and scientific aspects of our civilization. Just where the decadent element is rooted is the problem of thinking humanity today. All paths lead to somewhere. We have only the freedom of will to choose; we must act. Both faith and reason can put us on the straight and narrow, only one can head us in the right direction.

Editor:

One of the most curious delusions of modern culture is the belief that you can suspend judgment on the basic religious questions. Many people believe it to be possible to be an agnostic actually as well as intellectually. The persistence of this liberal-rationalist prejudice indicates our woeful lack of ability at self-criticism. Analysis of actions and attitudes towards society shows that people always take up some position from which they view life.

That position from which you view experience may be unconscious and unknown to you, but it's there. To suppose that man can interpret life without having an interpretive attitude is like supposing that you can see without an eye.

Of course, religion is dogmatic and matter-of-fact, Mr. Cherry. We have accepted a basic set of presuppositions and we are building on these. Any religion that is worth a hoot has to come down from these philosophical justifications and spill over into life. We live, I hope, not a God-hypothesis but a God-fact. In the realm of actual living, we don't question, we accept. God.

The thing that you can't see, that blinds you to the sensibleness of such a procedure, is that you have accepted a set of basic presuppositions even more blindly than we have. At least we are aware of ours and of some of their implications, while apparently you think it possible to live without implying any view of the cosmos. To say that this subject doesn't affect our welfare is like saying it doesn't matter whether a physicist believes in the experimental method or not.

MONOGRAM MUSINGS

By Bill Pritchard

Portrait of a President

AS PRESIDENT GUS JOHNSTON handed his cloak of responsibility over to newly-elected Laddie Terrell, he was praised by a hearty round of applause for the fine manner in which he had met and handled the numerous problems and responsibilities which accompany the job of President, N. C. Monogram Club style. This was all that Gus received in the way of tangible thanks from the members present, but there can be little doubt of the intangible and heartfelt appreciation of the entire club that goes unspoken for the capable and sincere manner in which he discharged his duties and devoted his energies toward the betterment and objectives of the Club which had elected him its head.

Twenty years from now, Gus Johnston will have very little to show for his efforts as Monogram Club President, with the exception of a few less hairs, (if possible), but not so the Club itself, for even though his name be forgotten, his work and the precedents he set will remain. In opening the field of alumni relationships, with direct respect to the monogram graduates, Gus tapped a hithertofore unused resource of interest and harmony. By establishing the annual Monogram Alumni Dinner, to be held each fall prior to the Duke, or Homecoming football game (if Duke is to be played at Durham), and carrying it out to such a successful extent that dozens of letters of thanks and approval were received from alumni all over the country, some even including checks for as much as $25 to help defray expenses (these checks, however, were returned uncashed with club's sincerest thanks), Gus began one of the finest and most far-reaching projects ever undertaken by any MC President.

In continuance along this theme, through Gus' forethought and direction, original Christmas Cards were made up especially for the Monogram Club and sent to all alumni and friends of the club.

The accomplishments of the stumpy soccer player were far from limited to alumni relations, however. It was the direct cause of Gus' leadership that over $1500 was raised for the local polio fund by the Club, the greater portion of this coming from the benefit basketball game that was held in Woollen Gym last week. Also, in this venture, plus the fall airshow and football movies, the entertainment interest to the general campus was no small factor. Thanks to your interest and attendance, these attractions were all highly successful.

The other details and doings of Gus' tenure of office, and the work entailed, could only be told by Gus, himself, but you can be sure they were many and conscientiously done. Hence, it seems highly fitting and proper that both the campus as a whole, and the Monogram Club, particularly, should take off their collective caps and raise a hearty, "Well done, Gus!"

Initiation – Rendezvous

WITH COACH BOB FETZER as principal speaker of the evening, the Monogram Club will hold its first initiation party of the current school year next Monday night in the Rendezvous Room of Graham Memorial. At this time letter awards for all fall sports will be presented to varsity winners, and men winning their first varsity letters will be formally initiated into the Club. Represented will be cross country, soccer and football, with approximately twenty-five of those men donning the NC for the first time.

Combining business with pleasure, the Delta Delta Delta Sorority has been invited to the affair, to be escorted individually by monogrammers and initiates. A real blowout is on tap complete with emcee, floor show, refreshments and recreation for all. The Club has high hopes of equalling in entertainment value the fine party held by the Tri Delts for the Monogrammers last year.

Cards are being sent out to all initiates, inviting them to the function, but in case some do not receive notice of this sort, be it hereby known that all men who won their varsity monogram for the first time last fall are particularly invited, plus all old members, likewise. It's Monday night, February 14th, at 7:30 in the Rendezvous Room.

Frosh Swimmers Win Over Raleigh High Crew, 45-29

By Larry Fox

With three freshman records falling in the process, Carolina's Tar Baby mermen took a 45-28 decision from the Raleigh High school swimmers yesterday afternoon in Bowman Gray pool.

The Tar Babies collected six first places as they easily downed the Caps, who could gain only three. The visitors, however, were in front after the first three events, as a result of Carolina's disqualification in the 150-yard medley relay and a first [illegible] in the 50-yard freestyle.

The first record of the day was set as Cecil Milton stroked to Carolina's first five points of the meet in the 200-yard freestyle in [illegible]. This was the first time that the distance has been swum in human competition here, and was six tenths of a second under the mark set in the school meet last year.

[illegible]rt until the next-to-last event of the meet with the Tar Babies within four points of Raleigh, the decision that Art [illegible]m turned in a new record mark for the 150-yard medley with a time of 1:[illegible] smashing the old standard of 1:[illegible]2.

The 400-yard freestyle relay [illegible]nded the competition with a bang and new pool and frosh records. The Carolina foursome turned in a time of 1:41.6 to better the old mark of 1:43.0.

One of the closest events was the diving, in which Tar Baby Andy Bell edged out Raleigh's Donnie Thomas for first place.

The next meet for the Tar Babies is Saturday afternoon when they play host to the Norfolk division of William and Mary beginning at 3 o'clock. Unlike yesterday's contest, the meet will utilize collegiate distances and events.

Raleigh will pay a return visit to Bowman Gray pool Tuesday afternoon, but this time the opposition will be furnished by Chapel Hill high.

150-yard medley relay — Won by Raleigh on Carolina disqualification.
200-yard freestyle—1. Milton (C), 2. Veasy (R), 3. Cates (C). 2:09.4. (New freshman and pool record.)
50-yard freestyle—1. Kost (R), 2. Robertson (C), 3. Darr (C). 0:27.5.
Diving—1. Bell (C), 2. Thomas (R), 3. Beamon (C). 49.5.
100-yard freestyle—1. Ambler (C), 2. Cohen (C), 3. Eldridge (R). 0:57.5.
100-yard backstroke—1. Austin (R), 2. Fullwilder (C), 3. Small (C). 1:14.4.
100-yard breaststroke — 1. Raskin (C), 2. Gaddy (R). (Carolina frosh had only one man entered and the second entry for Raleigh was disqualified.) 1:17.5.
150-yard individual medley—Won by Greenbaum (C). 1:53.2. (New freshman record.)
200-yard freestyle relay—Won by Carolina (Marcus, Williamson, Milton Ambler). 1:41.6 (new pool and freshman record.)
Final score—Carolina, 45; Raleigh, 28.

Scottmen to Meet On Northern Tour Colonials, Terps

By Zane Robbins

Tapering-off drills were the order of the day yesterday afternoon in Woollen gym as Coach Tom Scott sent his surprising band of Tar Heels through final drills preparatory to their two-day weekend invasion of North Dixie.

The Carolinians are slated to board the train in Durham at 7 tonight for their invasion of the District of Columbia and nearby College Park, Md. on Friday and Saturday.

The Friday night battle with the Old Liners of Maryland university will be the second meeting of the two clubs this season, as will Saturday night's battle with the Colonials of George Washington university in the Capital City.

In the first Maryland battle Carolina bounced the Terps off the victory road with a 55-47 win on the local court, but dropped a lop-sided 64-41 tilt to the Washingtonians.

Scottmen Drill Hard

The Tar Heels have been pointing for the two important games all week, but most of their work has been concentrated on a defense to throw against the high-scoring Colonials. A win over the GW cagers would virtually insure the Carolinians of a berth in the Southern conference tourney to be held in Duke's indoor stadium March 3-5.

The Terps have been no ball-of-fire at any time this season, but Coach Flucie Stewart's boys always manage to toss a formidable offense at their visitors every time the Maryland court is invaded.

The Colonials have been playing their usual rough-and-ready ball during the past few weeks and in the process have dumped a number of loop foes unceremoniously out of the victory column. They are currently being rated as one of the top dark horses in the race for circuit honors, and will hold a slight edge on the invading Tar Heels on Saturday night.

Ward Selected For Florida Meet

Harvie Ward, leading Tar Heel golf star for the past several seasons, has been named to play in the National Championship of Golf Club champions at St. Augustine, Fla., next month.

Ward will represent the University in the event that will take place beginning February 14 and continue through the 19th.

During the past two years the sandy-haired swinger from Tarboro has proved himself not only one of the leading amateur golfers in the South, but in the nation. Two summers ago, Ward advanced to the quarter-finals of the National Amateur championships and won the coveted opportunity to play in the Masters' tournament at Augusta last spring.

His top performance last season was the capture of the North-South Amateur crown at Pinehurst, the country's third leading simon-pure event.

Eagles Get Top Lineman

Coy Carson Ups Scoring Total To 314 Points for 19 Outings

Latest scoring figures released on the Carolina cagers again indicate that the Tar Heels' most prolific scorer, Coy Carson, is still the man to watch on the squad as he leads his own teammates and, in fact, the whole Southern conference in scoring.

Asheville's gift to Coach Tom Scott's hardwooders notched ten points in the Duke rout last Saturday night and increased his aggregate to a grand total of 314 markers in 19 games, a nifty average of 16.5 per fray.

Although the high scoring honors of the season have been all but conceded to Carson, the battle for the runnerup slot between Nemo Nearman and Hugo Kappler is taking on interesting proportions. Kappler has been slowly moving up on Nearman in the most recent clashes but Nemo enjoyed an excellent night against the Blue Devils and rolled in 18 points while Kappler contributed only 13. Nearman enhanced his total to 173 points to average 9.1 per and Kappler has 164 credits with a per game average of 8.6.

Individual scoring:

Player	fg	ft	ftm	pf	pts
Carson	127	60	36	57	314
Nearman	58	78	42	66	173
Kappler	65	34	21	50	164
Nyvinez	51	19	15	69	121
Tsartes	32	21	21	34	85
Ryan	35	9	8	34	79
Thorne	29	7	8	21	63
Deasy	23	12	20	32	58
Mitchell	5	1	1	4	11
Bennett	1	3	1	5	11
Ferraro	3	0	2	6	6
White	2	0	2	7	4
Terrell	1	0	0	1	2

Frosh Wrestle

Carolina's unbeaten freshmen cagers will be trying for their sixth straight victory when they tangle with the High Point high school grapplers tonight at 7:30 in the High Point gym.

Tonight's encounter will be the second in less than a week between the Tar Babies and the High Pointers, with the locals winning the first, 18-12, Saturday in Woollen gym.

The Carolina squad, coached by Irv Zirpel, will be strengthened by the return of Bill Qualls in the 155-pound class. Two of the frosh wrestlers, Bob McGimsey and Bob Coxe, are still undefeated.

'State Mentioned As Good Prospect In Tourney Talk

NEW YORK, Feb. 9—(UP)—The first rough outlines of lineups for the big basketball tournaments were taking shape today although plenty of scrambling and scrapping for invitations was still ahead in the final month of the regular season.

There were 16 spots to be filled in the choice tourneys—eight in the National Collegiate A. A. whirl and eight in the National Invitational tournament at Madison Square Garden.

Only three teams were almost certain of a bid to one or the other tournament, and that left 13 prize plums still hanging on the tree. And about 50 top teams battling each other tooth and pivot shot for each of them.

The trio nearly sure to be seen in March—barring only the most complete of collapses—were Kentucky, the defending N C A A champion with an 18-1 record; St. Louis, the '48 invitational titlist with a mark of 15-1; and the Oklahoma Aggies, with 14-2.

How They Line Up

Starting with the N C A A dribble derby because those bids are offered sectionally, here's how the tourney contenders looked:

District 1 (New England)—Yale, 14-4, the Ivy league pacemaker, or Holy Cross, 11-6, last year's representative; District 2 (Middle Atlantic)—City College of New York, the metropolitan leader, or Duquesne (13-2); District 3 (South)—Kentucky, naturally, or if the Wildcats decline, Tulane (13-2), or North Carolina State. Southern conference leader with 9-1 in the circuit and 16-8 overall.

District 4 (Big Nine)—Illinois leading with 5-1 in the league and Minnesota hot behind with 6-2, each 14-2 overall; District 5 (Midwest)—A battle royal between St. Louis and the Oklahoma Aggies of the Missouri Valley or Nebraska (10-6) and Oklahoma (9-6) of the big seven.

District 6 (Southwest)—Texas in front with 14-3; District 7 (Rocky Mountains) — Wyoming (17-6) or Utah (16-4); District 8 (Pacific Coast)—Stanford (17-3), Southern Cal (9-7), and Washington (18-3), the first two with one loss each in the conference.

Others Likely

Hamline (15-1) was almost a cinch for an invitational berth and others that looked likely here were Bradley (19-4), Loyola of Chicago (16-3), Tulane (especially if Kentucky picks the NCAA Western Kentucky and San Francisco. Utah, reportedly feeling "slighted" by the NCAA last year, might elect the invitational.

Kentucky marked up its 18th victory last night by crushing Tennessee, 71-56.

Ticket Trade System Stated By Ticket Office

In distributing tickets for the basketball game with N. C. State on February 19, a procedure similar to that used for the Duke game will be followed. All seats for this game will be reserved, and tickets may be picked up at the ticket office in Woollen gymnasium in the following manner:

(1) Holders of passbooks bearing even serial numbers, that is 2, 4, 6, 8, etc., will have a priority on seats for the game with State on February 19.

(2) Individuals who wish to see this game and who have even-numbered books must exchange coupons at the ticket office window on Monday-Wednesday, February 14-16 between 9 and 5.

(3) On Thursday and Friday, February 17 and 18, if there are any tickets left after the above priority period, they will be issued on a first come, first served basis to holders of passbooks bearing odd serial numbers—or to anyone with a passbook.

(4) Any space which is not called for by Friday afternoon, Feb. 18, at five o'clock, claimed by holders of passbooks and will be sold to the general public.

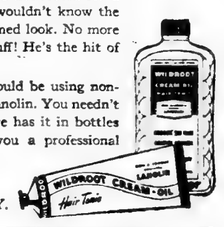
J. Paul Sheedy* Switched to Wildroot Cream-Oil Because He Flunked The Finger-Nail Test



WHEN a camel's hair coat company refused Sheedy as a gift—he went all to pieces. It was a blow that'd break an ordinary camel's back—but not his! He remembered hearing about the Finger-Nail Test . . . tried it . . . and hot-footed for a bottle of Wildroot Cream-Oil. Now you wouldn't know the old boy! His hair has a snappy, well-groomed look. No more of that old dryness and loose, ugly dandruff! He's the hit of every caravan!

Even if you're not a camel—you, too, should be using non-alcoholic Wildroot Cream-Oil containing Lanolin. You needn't walk a mile for it—your nearest drug store has it in bottles and tubes. And your barber can give you a professional application. Get some today!

THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES takes time out from a busy schedule at the White House to greet thirty-three high school students from seventeen countries participating in the European recovery program. President Truman told the boys and girls that he hoped that by the time they were as old as he (64 years), the United Nations would have assured a lasting peace throughout the world.

Archer House Caper

Wild Party Of Students Draws $10 Court Fine

By J. L. Merritt

Wild, wild partying in front of a girls' dormitory at 2 o'clock in the morning proved to be an expensive good time for George Fiske, University student, Tuesday morning in the Chapel Hill Recorder's court.

Fiske, who was charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct, was picked up by police offirer R. L. Blackwood last Saturday morning in front of Archer house.

Blackwood testified he received a phone call about 1 o'clock Saturday morning to quiet a group of men who were "raising the devil" outside Archer house. He said he went to Archer house and five or six men were having "a good old-fashioned cuss-fest there."

The other men ran away and left Fiske holding the bag, Blackwood declared. So he told Fiske to go home and went back to the police station.

About a half-hour later, Blackwood said he received another phone call about the Archer house noise and went back to the same place. Five or six men ran in all directions, and Fiske was left holding the bag again. This time proved to be too much for Blackwood, so he arrested Fiske.

Fiske pleaded guilty to the charges against him and testified that he was not doing any of the cursing Saturday night. But Judge Henry Whitfield, after asking him if he were "too drunk to curse," fined him $10 and costs of court.

Other cases heard were:

Wallace Markham, robbery, bound over to Superior court; H. J. Singleton, parking beside fire hydrant, $10 and costs; Robert Lee Spain, drunkenness, 30 days on roads, suspended; William Henry Gattis, Negro, assault on female, prayer for judgment continued; William O'Kelly, parking on highway, costs; James Snipes, Negro, drunkenness, $25 and costs.

Louise Farar, illegal possession of liquor for sale, six months on roads, appealed; Marvin Norwood, Jr. and John Arthur Foushee, Negroes, reckless driving and damaging University property, $100 and costs; Charlie Edwards, Negro, drunkenness, $10 and costs; Robert Brown Jr., Negro, disorderly conduct, 30 days on roads, suspended; Charlie Farrington, Albert Washington, William Worth, Bernice Farrington, Lucille Ringbee, Negroes, gambling, one-fifth costs each.

Pharmacy Society Taps 14 Students At Tuesday Meet

Fourteen students in the pharmacy school were tapped by Rho Chi, national pharmaceutical society, at a meeting of the student branch of North Carolina Pharmaceutical association on Tuesday night.

The students were: Jarvis Marion Alligood, Donald Leon Bennett, Arthur Etheridge Brothers, Robert Franklin Harrison, Paul Ronald Jenkins, Floyd Edward Jones, John Henry Lowder.

William Warren Northcott, Ralph Peele Rogers, Jr., Mrs. Doris Harrell Sauls, Robert Edgar Scharff, Robert Charles Wilson, John Bennett Woodard, and Robert Richman Woody.

West Is Reeling In Wake of Storm

CHICAGO, Feb. 9 — (UP) — The effects of three storms in a week left the snowbound west reeling today.

Wyoming reported it was in the worst condition of the entire winter. More than 4,000 railroad passengers were stranded at three towns in the state.

A 200-mile long area of Wyoming was locked tight by mountainous new snowdrifts. Ranchers were reported seriously short of food, and officials said nothing could be done about it until the weather improves.

Snow and winds up to 65 miles an hour swept across Idaho, Utah and Wyoming from the west coast last night in the latest of the series of devastating western storms.

But skies cleared over Idaho and northern Utah today as the storm abated, and Nevada escaped its blows.

Toothful Song

ASHEVILLE, Feb. 9—(UP)—For motorist Tom Osborne the song was ended today—but the malady lingered on.

Osborne was driving along an Asheville street merrily warbling, "All I want for Christmas is my two front teeth."

His chorus stopped abruptly when another car crashed head-on into his. Osborne's head thumped sharply against the dash, and he found his two front teeth in his lap.

Minutes later he walked into a hospital, asking for treatment and carrying the two teeth in one hand. He also wanted to know if any other accident victims were brought in.

He found the driver of the other car in the hospital receiving room. It was Mrs. Tom Osborne—who told police she had been out with friends while her husband took a night off with his buddies.

Bogota Meeting Is Lecture Topic Of Gil at Rollins

Dr. Federico G. Gil, assistant professor of political science, delivered a lecture last night on "The Bogota Conference and the Latin American Viewpoint" at Rollins college in Winter Park, Fla.

This lecture was the fifth in the Rollins college lecture series for 1949, which has the general title "The Mind of the Americas."

A native of Cuba, Dr. Gil was educated in Spain and Cuba, receiving the degree of doctor of law and politicad science from the University of Havana. In the years 1945 and 1946, he made an extensive tour of all Latin American countries as a Rockefeller fellow, studying at first hand the political institutions and conditions in those countries.

Tuesday Deadline Set for Signing

Housing officer James E. Wadsworth said yesterday that dormitory residents who fail to sign up by next Tuesday for spring quarter rooms, will lose their assignment for spring.

Wadsworth said that each men's dorm manager has a check-list sheet for each student to indicate his desire to retain or relinquish his room at the end of this quarter.

The housing officer explained that it is urgent for the Housing office to know what dormitory rooms will be available for the spring because of the long waiting list for dorm rooms.

LEAVING ITS RAMP AT THE NAVAL ORDNANCE test station, Inyokern, Calif., is a new type of booster rocket. It is believed to be the world's largest solid propellant rocket yet flown. It will be employed in launching supersonic missiles, relying on the new ram-jet engine of the Navy for a propulsion unit. Note the gap between the rocket and burning gases behind it.

Tri-Partisan Slate Is Released

Names Of 13 Men Will Be On Ticket

Members of Three Political Parties Sit on Board With Sanborn as Head

The tri-partisan board to select candidates for the Men's Honor council yesterday released a slate of 13 students to run for council positions during general campus elections on the first Tuesday in April.

The selection board was composed of four representatives of each campus political party, with the holdover member of the Men's Honor council, Bruce Sanborn, sitting as chairman. This system of selecting Men's council nominees was first used before spring elections last year to take the election of council members out of the realm of politics.

The slate of nominations released by the board yesterday:

Rising seniors: Ward Peacock, Chapel Hill; Richard H. Palmer, Shelby; Ben Jones, Elgin, Ill.

Rising juniors: Charlie Fox, Roanoke, Va.; Arthur G. Murphey, Jr., Macon, Miss.; Robert B. Payne, Gastonia; Noah R. Wilson, Jr., Wilson's Hill.

Rising sophomores: Barney D. Boardman, Augusta, Ga.; Thomas C. Coxe, Jr., Darlington, S. C.; Richard F. Davis, Gainesville, Ga.; Joseph J. Gray, Jr., Wilmington; Garland Johnson, Spindale.

Graduate student: Pete Gerns, Canton, Ohio.

When the candidates' names appear on the ballot in the spring, no party affiliation will be placed beside them, board spokesmen said yesterday. They said the same rule would be in effect for campaign publicity, which the candidates may issue themselves.

More Dormitory Telephones Will Be Provided By Spring

By Margaret Gaston

Nine dormitories in the upper and lower quadrangles will have an additional phone installed on the third floor by April, Frank Kilpatrick, secretary of the Men's Interdormitory council, announced yesterday.

J. S. Bennett, director of operations of the University, authorized the council to announce plans for expanding the communication system.

Dormitories affected include Everett, Lewis, Graham, Aycock, Stacy, Mangum, Manley, Ruffin, and Grimes. Tentative plans call for new telephones to be installed on the third floors of these dormitories. The dorms already have phones on the first floor.

The additional telephones will definitely not be connected to two-party lines, Kilpatrick said.

Telephones are available now and the lines have been installed in the dormitories. The delay is in the date of delivery of coin boxes to be installed with the instruments. Delivery of the coin boxes is expected in April, and installation of the phones will proceed immediately thereafter, according to Kilpatrick.

Plans are underway for installing an inter-communication system in one of the dormitories which is divided into three sections. If the project proves successful, the system will be extended to the other dorms. Those affected would be Old West, Old East, Steele, and Battle-Vance-Pettigrew.

The holdup on the inter-communication system is a lack of phone booths and coin boxes. There is one phone booth available which will be installed in Old East.

The Interdormitory council has been working on the telephone project since November.

Debate Council Position Goes To Herb Mitchell

Herbert Mitchell, sophomore from Asheville, has been named to replace Marcellus Buchanan, who graduated, as a member of the University Debate council, Publicity Director Don Shropshire announced yesterday.

Mitchell, now in his second year of intercollegiate debating for the University, is also chairman of the Carolina forum and a member of the Student legislature, serving as chairman of the Ways and Means committee.

The Varsity debate squad of Herbert Yates and David Pittman, affirmative, and Mitchell and Paul Roth, negative, met the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis yesterday, Shropshire said. No results were available last night.

Tonight, the squad will meet the University of Richmond in Richmond. The debate team then will move to William and Mary at Williamsburg Saturday afternoon.

This is the first in a series of debates to be held during the next few weeks, Shropshire said. Next Wednesday the team will meet Duke, in Durham. Thursday will find the University of Georgia here, and Friday, the team will travel to Elon college, for a return debate. The freshman squad will accompany the Varsity on the Elon trip.

Vache to Head Episcopal Meet During Weekend

Charles Vache will act as president of the 12th annual conference of North Carolina Episcopal college students in Raleigh this weekend at Christ church and the Church of the Good Shepherd.

Other delegates representing the University will be Earle Page, vice president of the conference, Terry Holmes, John Denham, Walling Vreeman, Mason Thomas, Bob Watson, David Rae, Rodney Glasgow, and Edith Winslow.

Dr. Arnold S. Nash, head of the department of religion will be the conference leader. Dr. Nash will deliver three addresses on the theme of the Church, the present position of the Church, and the Church and the ecumenical movement.

Discussion groups led by outstanding clergy of the Diocese of North Carolina and the Diocese of East Carolina will be held on Saturday, following Dr. Nash's second and third addresses.

The Rt. Rev. Thomas H. Wright, bishop of East Carolina and a former Episcopal student chaplain at the University, will be the speaker at the annual banquet to be held Saturday evening. Bishop Wright will speak on the 1948 Lambeth conference which he attended this summer with other Episcopal bishops from the United States representing the Anglican communion in this country.

Prayer Book To Be Studied

A five-session study of the Book of Common Prayer will begin Sunday night in Episcopal churches throughout the nation.

The services at the Chapel of the Cross will begin at 8 o'clock in the church, then will move to the parish house. The studies will end by 9:45.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Feb. 10—(UP)—One of two Soviet flier who deserted the Russian air force in response to the lure of American propaganda, today accused a U.S. Air Force intelligence major of permitting correspondents to question him regarding Russian military secrets.

NSA Meeting Is Scheduled Next Saturday

Region Session To Be Held Here

The Virginia-Carolina section of the National Students association will hold its first session here next Saturday, regional Chairman Jess Dedmond announced yesterday.

Helen Gene Rogers, national NSA secretary, will be featured on the one-day discussion meeting. Miss Rogers is from Mundelein college in Illinois and will be representing national headquarters of the association in Madison, Wis., at the meeting.

Ben Jones, a member of the local NSA committee, will lead a discussion of the tri-nation NSA tours during the one-day meeting. A movie version of the tour will be shown following the discussion period.

Registration will be on Saturday afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock. The discussion session will begin at 7:30 Saturday night in Di hall. A member of the administration will extend welcome to the delegates, Dedmond said.

In addition to the tri-nation tour discussion, a forum will be held regarding a program planned by NSA to place DP students in colleges and universities in the U. S. Dedmond said it is anticipated that DP's from Czechoslovakia will be present to lead the discussion on the issue.

Member schools of the Virginia-Carolina NSA region include: Virginia State college, Lynchburg college, Randolph-Macon Woman's college, Sweetbriar college and the University.

Registration Starts Monday

The green form change period for the spring quarter will begin Monday at 9 o'clock and will end Saturday at 4:30 o'clock.

All students whose winter quarter registration was so changed that their spring quarter registration is no longer complete must make all their changes during this period. All other students must wait until the regular drop-add period before changing any courses.

The general college and the Commerce school will make the changes directly to the green form in the advisor's and dean's office respectively.

All other students who must make the necessary readjustment may see their green forms in the registration office, Venable X, beginning Monday.

Students have their green form change slips prepared by their faculty advisors, then carry them to the Registration office to have them posted to the green forms.

Warriner, Tenney To Attend Session

Dortch Warriner and Ed Tenney, University delegates to the projects committee of the student council of the Greater University, will attend a projects committee tomorrow at Woman's College, Greensboro.

Discussion at the meeting will include further plans for Greater University Day, which is tentatively set for the date of the duel track meet between State and Carolina in the spring. Included on the tentative schedule are a convocation, dance, and date bureau set-up.

Application Time

Summer School Plans Take Shape

Applications for the two University summer school sessions, beginning June 9 and July 20, are now being accepted, Director Guy B. Phillips announced yesterday.

Male students who are planning to attend either or both of these sessions should apply now to James E. Wadsworth for dormitory reservations. Miss Katherine Carmichael, dean of women, is in charge of all dormitory assignments for women.

It is anticipated that adequate housing space will be available in the various dormitories, private homes and in the special veterans units, Phillips said, "but they should apply as early as possible to assure space."

Preference will be given to graduate students, teachers, veterans and residents of North Carolina. Officials urged students "not to come to Chapel Hill without having made some arrangements for living accomodations in advance."

Officials report "approximately the same amount of interest on the student's part this year in the summer sessions as was found last year." Inquiries and acceptances at the present time are slightly more than this same time last winter, they said.

Total enrollment for the first half of the summer session, 1948 was 4,671. Second session students numbered 3,718.

The summer session, 1949, will include a total of 325 staff members, 15 per cent of which will be visiting members. Standard courses for regular students in any of the major subjects will be offered, Phillips said.

The summer session catalogue is on the press now, and will be made available to applicants about March 15.

Plans for the intercultural educational workshop will be made available as soon as final decisions have been reached, and the French house is planned to be in operation during the first term next summer. More complete information may be obtained from Professor Hugo Giduz of the French department.

A folder containing preliminary information has been published and mailed to interested people throughout the country. Extra copies giving highlights of the 1949 summer school may be obtained at the Education department office in Peabody hall.

TOMMY DORSEY AND HIS ORCHESTRA will touch off the mid-winter German club weekend with a formal dance in Woollen gymnasium at 9 o'clock tonight. The dance tonight will be followed by a concert tomorrow afternoon in Memorial hall and another formal tomorrow night.

German Club Weekend Gets Underway Tonight

By Charlie Joyner

The mid-winter Germans will get underway tonight at 9 o'clock when Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra take over Woollen gymnasium for the first of two formal dances to be held this weekend.

Dorsey and his fourteen (count 'em) piece orchestra will present a two-hour concert in Memorial hall tomorrow afternoon from 3 until 5 and the dance tomorrow night will be from 8-12 o'clock.

Appearing with the maestro will be Denny Dennis, sensational British singing star, and Lucy Ann Polk and "The Sentimentalists."

Coeds will be given late permission until 2 o'clock for the dance tonight, the Interdormitory council and Dean Carmichael announced yesterday.

Lucy Ann is a "Sarah Vaughnish" vocalist who sang with Glen Gray before joining TD. Dennis rose to prominence as the number one male singer in Great Britain and his London Decca records have been best sellers for the past several years.

His recent London Gramophone recordings are being distributed in this country and are fast becoming hits. Denny's recordings of "The Bluest Kind of Blues" and "Make Believe World" are being pushed by practically all disc jockeys.

Featured with the band is the tight mute trumpet of Charlie Shavers, who has been named by Downbeat as one of the top three trumpet-men in the country. Downbeat has also given high praise recently to Lou Bellson on the drums.

Shavers is a jazz man who spent four or five years on 52nd Street before deciding to join a name band. He played with the John Kirby and Lucky Millinder bands and then achieved

Dance Rules Are in Force For Weekend

Reminder Issued Regarding Conduct

Rules of the University Dance committee will be in force for the midwinter German dances and afternoon concert, it was announced yesterday.

Rules of conduct include:

1. Any girl desiring to leave the dance hall during an evening dance with the intention of returning must be accompanied by a chaperon.

2. Persons showing signs of drunkenness or bringing liquor to the dance will be dealt with at the discretion of the Dance committee.

3. No smoking or serving of refreshments are allowed on the floor at Woollen gymnasium.

The committee also requests that persons have their tickets ready at the door of Memorial hall and Woollen gym so as to facilitate the work of the doormen.

Avalanche Perils Trapped Persons

BOISE, Ida., Feb. 10—(UP)—Some 500 men, women and children isolated in a snow-bound canyon construction camp at Anderson Ranch dam were endangered tonight by avalanches from the steep canyon walls.

The construction camp is at the bottom of a narrow 1,000 foot canyon, about 80 miles southeast of Boise.

British Note To Hungary Hints Action

May Investigate Cardinal's Trial

LONDON, Feb. 10—(UP)—Great Britain warned Hungary for the second time today that it reserved the right to investigate "any and every" act in connection with the trial of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty which might violate Hungary's peace treaty.

Alexander K. Helm, British minister in Budapest, delivered the warning to the Hungarian Foreign office in a note sent by Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin.

Bevin also called Janos Eros, Hungarian minister here, to the Foreign office, handed him a copy of the note, and rebuked him sharply for his government's attitude toward this country.

Britain warned Hungary Feb. 4, in protesting against the exclusion of a British observer from the Mindszenty trial, that it reserved its rights under the peace treaty.

Hungary summarily rejected the British protest Feb. 7, and charged Britain with trying to aid "Fascist enemies of the Hungarian Republic."

Bevin talked to Hungarian Minister Eros about 30 minutes. A Foreign office spokesman said Bevin called Eros's attention to the "extremely discourteous rejoinder of the Hungarian government to the reasonable and justified request made by the British government to have observers at the "Mindszenty trial."

Bevin said also that the British public and the press had shown "strong feeling" about the circumstances in which the trial was conducted.

Simpson Joins Broughton Staff

John Simpson, who received an A.B. in economics at the end of fall quarter, left Chapel Hill Tuesday night to join Sen. J. Melville Broughton's staff in Washington, D. C.

In addition to his duties with the Senator, John is planning to attend law school at Georgetown University.

He was a PiKA here working toward a B.S. in Commerce just before accepting the job with Sen. Broughton.

Women Athletes Meet Here Today For Conference

Approximately 65 women students from 14 colleges in North Carolina will meet here tomorrow for the annual conference of the North Carolina Athletic Federation of College Women.

Miss Ellen Griffin, national executive secretary of the AFCW, will be the featured speaker, and members of the University facutly, including Dr. O. K. Cornwell, director of physical education, and Mrs. Ruth W. Fink, women's athletic director, will make brief talks.

Randy Hudson, president of the Women's Athletic association, will preside at the conference, and presidents of the associations at Woman's college, Duke and Meredith will lead discussions on financial problems, intramurals and clubs, and stimulation of athletic interests on small campuses.

At the afternoon business session, delegates to the national convention will be elected and the president college for next year's convention will be selected. The president college serves as host to the convention, and the president of its athletic association presides at the sessions.

Assisting Randy with arrangements for this year's convention are Jean Marie Lester and Becky Holton, registration; Margaret Booth, Louise Horner and Carolina Tillet, refeshments; Katie Durham, refreshments; Dot Casey, signs; Caroline Guthrie, Ruth Baine and Pat Winslow, program.

Musical Feature

Campus Sororities To Present Rendezvous Program Tonight

The five campus sororities will present a floor show tonight in the Rendezvous room.

An engraved silver plate will be preseneted through the courtesy of the student union to the sorority which puts on the most entertaining portion of the show.

Judges will be Dean Weaver, Jane Grills and Mrs. Norman Cordon.

Also featured on the program will be a Valentine musical with Sam Green bringing flowers to Ann Martin.

Forrest Covington, who has recently finished a book to be used in a Sound and Fury production this spring, will play the part of a minstrel uncle and sing a collection of folk songs.

Ann is a newcomer to the University this quarter, but she has already made a name for herself by taking a lead in "Apple Tree Farm," along with Green.

After the skit by the sororities, a member of each group will participate in the weekly radio show over station WDUK.

Lib Stoney, entertainment chairman for Graham Memorial, is working with representatives from the sororities staging the presentation.

Northern Ireland Votes on Position

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Feb. 10—(UP)—Voters in the six counties of Northern Ireland went to heavily guarded polls in record-breaking numbers today to decide whether they should remain in the United Kingdom or join the neighboring republic of Eire.

Ameches Are Coming, Hurrah

Now it turns out that maybe, at last, a few telephones will finally be installed in a few men's dormitories—"sometime in the near future," that is.

The complete and infuriating inadequacy of the University-owned telephone system has been a sore spot with students since the year one of Mr. Bell's invention. Probably more committees of more organizations have gone to the administration more times, asked more questions and received more different answers on this one subject than on any other two problems combined. At various times shortage of cable, shortage of switch board facilities, shortage of telephone instruments, shortage of booths, and shortage of coin boxes have been given as reasons for the delay in improving the service.

Now J. S. Bennett, the University's director of operations, has finally committed himself. Only the shortage of coin boxes now stands between dormitory residents and telephones, he says. The coin boxes will be here early in March and telephones will then be installed immediately.

Of course, only nine dorms are on the preferred list for third-floor phones. Eleven of the twenty-three men's residences will still have to use the yell up and run down system. Shower-taking inhabitants of the top floors of well-type dorms—BVP, Old East, Old West and Steele—will still have to gird themselves with towels, scramble down three flights of stairs and dash around the outside of the building through rain, sleet, snow and the curious gaze of passing coeds to answer a call. But for this small improvement for which so many have waited so long, praises be to the powers responsible!

Making Minutes Count

In this day of atom bombs, supersonic planes, and "Hadicol" the normal student may feel the urge to streamline his study habits just to stay in the spirit of things. The chief complaint seems to be that there never is enough time for study in the daily rush of college life. To be practical would be to admit that no one is likely to start studying longer every day, so a better solution must be sought. Probably a more efficient utilization of study hours is the most practical solution to the problem of being prepared for class.

One way to do this is never to study one subject more than 15 minutes at a time, but to rotate the work. For example, with three subjects to study, work on one for 15 minutes and then change to the second subject. After 15 minutes on the second subject turn to the third. When 15 minutes have been spent on each subject, return to the first for another 15 minute attack. In this way you will not tire of studying and start thinking of the next big weekend.

Picking up the thought train in a subject after putting it down for a time is amazingly easy, and interest is maintained at a high level. The improved quality of your work will reflect this to a strikng degree.

This plan is used at the Naval academy as a coldly efficient, time saving method of study. There they have one hour and forty-five minutes to prepare for daily quizzes in five subjects, so time is at an even greater premium than here. True, there is a limitation in that the contemplation of the subject as a whole is impossible. There is time to swallow and chew a time or two but no time to digest the work. However, as a method of squeezing the most out of every minute of studying time, it is worth a trial.

Expansion Would Be Unwise

The situation which is going to develop at Memorial hall tomorrow afternoon will graphically illustrate the reason the German club is looking with disfavor upon a proposal that membership in the club be opened to all 27 fraternities on campus.

The German club has issued to its members 1.250 tickets for the Tommy Dorsey concert tomorrow, giving the possibility that 2,500 men and dates will show up at Memorial hall. The auditorium seats only 1.800 people, and the fire inspector intends to post a police officer to see that no more than that number enter the building. Thus it is probable that a great many people who have paid for tickets will not hear the concert.

Until larger auditoriums and dance floors are built, it will be unwise for the German club to extend its membership.

With Landon, Hard Knox

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

By George Dixon

We got into another of our "Who ran with who?" memory tests at the National Press club the other day. Mr. Bob Litchfield started it off by asking who ran for Vice-President with Alf Landon in 1936.

After much cudgelling and contradicting, we agreed it was the late Frank Knox, who, oddly, became Roosevelt's secretary of the Navy. Then Mr. Warren Francis asked who ran with Willkie in 1940.

This proved to be a stickler until Jack Madden, the learned bartender, leaned across with his bar rag and said: "The late Charles McNary."

The "Who ran with whos?" encompassed Bricker with Dewey and Warren with Dewey, but, by this time, one of our number, Mr. James J. Butler, had become bored with the pasttime.

"Let's bring it up to date," "Who ran with Rita Hayworth?"

A gag that worked out better than the gagsters had planned it was worked on Julius Lulley, the boisterous character whom J. Edgar Hoover has dubbed "the horrible host of Harvey's."

A galaxy of notables was gathered at Mr. Lulley's farm near the racetrack at Bowie, Md. Suddenly Mr. Lawrence Wood (Chip) Robert, former treasurer of the Democratic National committee, held up his hand for silence.

Mr. Robert said it pained him greatly to have to unmask the host but it had just been brought to his attention that Mr. Lulley was a charter member of the Dewey-Warren clubs. While a mob of prominent New Dealers looked on in mock reproach, Mr. Robert produced a membership certificate made out to the restaurateur.

Mr. Lulley tried to snigger it off but he was perspiring so copiously that Judge Edward M. Curran, now presiding at the Axis Sally trial, stepped back, demonstrating: "You're getting my shoes wet."

We were at a loss to understand the victim's concern, because we were aware that the certificate produced by Mr. Robert was a fake. But Mr. Lulley, after loud protests that he had always been a loyal Democrat, catering to Democrats, gave himself away completely.

Seeking out his missus, Birdie, he snapped:

"I told you, right after the election, to burn that confounded thing!"

The old flatbush sourdough, Rep. Andrew L. Somers, of Brooklyn, still can't get used to the fact that he is the king of the wild and wooly wide-open spaces.

By virtue of seniority, the pale prospecter of the purple plateaus of prospect park has become the new chairman of the House Public Lands committee which has to do with such things as the open range, reclamation, and national forests.

Mr. Somers, who has never had much interest in reclaiming anything except possibly the barren wastes of Ebbets field, paid an official visit to the committee's big hearing room the other day. He cast Sheepshead Bay eyes at the scenic pictures adorning the walls.

Finally he came to a dead stop in front of a huge blow-up of Old Faithful.

"For the love of red hock!" he exclaimed. "What the devil is that?"

A staff veteran explained it was a geyser in Yellowstone park, one of our great national reserves, and that it erupted at regular intervals.

"Is that so?" retorted Mr. Somers. "Then take it down!"

The aide protested that it had adorned the committee room for years.

"I don't care!" thundered the flatbush frontiersman. "It reminds me of my ulcer."

Two Sexes Seem Here to Stay

By Jonathan Marshall

There has been a lot of talk recently about the Carolina coeds, and much of it has been on a rather juvenile level. Neither side really has to be on the defensive.

Both the men and women on campus would be quite unhappy if the opposite sex was banned from town. Let's face the fact that both sexes are to be found on campus, and also that the majority of people around here are quite happy about that fact.

When the men begin to justify higher sorority grades by saying, "We take harder courses," it is a weak excuse. There are girls in the Commerce school, and they seem to do just as well as the men. Some history, sociology, psychology, and language courses are just as hard as accounting or statistics.

It is true that many girls have come to college with only one purpose in mind—latching on to a man. Some men have come solely to latch on to a job. The women say that the men are rude, the days of chivalry are gone; perhaps that's true, yet a woman must command respect in order to be treated respectfully.

The whole dispute seems really to boil down to several primary factors. First, the ratio of men to women is unnatural and unhealthy, and the girls tend to take advantage of it and to be a little spoiled.

Perhaps if the student government made more attempts to build up a social life for all students the situation would improve. When one gets right down to it, there isn't much of a social life here. There is dancing in the Rendezvous room, two movies, and athletic events. Not much more, outside of the fraternities and sororities—certainly not much for the people without cars or frats.

If student government tried promoting weekly dances for the students, much could be done. These dances could be run very cheaply and they could be informal. Other colleges have found it quite successful, and we might try it. It would be a good way for people to get acquainted.

When the age-old arguments, "Women are inferior to men," and the answer, "No they're not, when given a chance they're superior," are brought up, we are getting assinine. And that is what most of the noise boils down to.

If, instead of attacking the other sex, we tried to devote the same energies to getting along with all people, we would be a much happier group. This columnist's guess is that the whole battle has come up through our sense of insecurity and our resultant need to assert ourselves at the other fellow's expense.

Luckily, men are a rather large world minority, and it will be rather difficult to oppress them. If we throw women out of Chapel Hill, it will only mean a need for more cars so that we can go where they move.

The existence of two sexes seems permanent. But it's better that we devote our destructive energies toward overthrowing this permanent situation than if we used them in other ways.

Editor:

Having applied a tourniquet to my so-called "burst literary blood vessel" of last week defending the notorious Carolina Coed I should like to step back into the firing line for one last shot.

The gentleman who complained Tuesday that he would treat the coeds like girls back home when they started acting like the ladies back home must care what some lucky coed thinks as he was cautious enough to have his "name withheld by request."

As to Mr. Lyon's deep feelings which moved him to poetry we are ever so sorry we can't supply him with busted bicuspids, hayseeded hair and ingrown nails so with much remorse we will relieve him from active duty and only express our regret that the last line of his poem did not rhyme.

In their letter of last Friday I believe Messers. Collins, Toomes, and Jones are somewhat confused as would be any coed who tried to profit from their pearls. They complained of aloof coeds not speaking to them and then did an about-face with the statement that when coeds did speak to them they were eyeing UNC men only as prospective husbands. It seems we just can't win.

Messers. Newell and Brinegar would like to see the coed's schedule read Statistics, Accounting, Corporation Finance, etc. instead of History, Sociology, etc. before comparing averages. I was not maintaining that our campus was blessed by a thousand coed quiz kids but merely that the girls show interest in the fields they have chosen and don't do just enough work to pass them and remain in this "female heaven." It would take little common sense to realize that women are more suited for social work than managing a dimestore or the like.

I have received many comments this past week from men relating tales of how they, their roommates or a boy they once knew were mercilessly jilted by a coed for someone either better looking or a boy who had a car with more horsepower.

I am not defending the female sex as such. Women are women just as men are men and if you intend to tangle with them you should learn this at an early age. My point is that women on this campus aren't different from women anywhere else—and it's a hard point to make to boys who have had the legend of the Carolina Coed handed down to them as soon as they enter the University and who accept this legend without ever questioning it or considering the situation before forming an opinion of their own.

There are probably girls on this campus who would do justice to the reputation of the coed just as there are boys who help the University live up to the notoriety gained by it and the University of Virginia. I would hate, however, to tag either as the typical specimen of the campus—but it seems this has already happened to the coed. Every girl on campus is a stereotyped member of "coed society" and is expected to account for the actions of every other coed, present or past.

All we ask is that we may once more enjoy the right we forfeited when we stepped on this campus—that of being an individual. Then judge our morals, our personalities and our aims as you would those of any other girl you happened to meet—and we'll abide by the decision.

Coed Debate Waxes Hot

Even the Readers Have Opinions

Editor:

In reply to Miss Jacobi and Miss Root in today's Tar Heel, I would like to call attention to the outstanding fallacy of her letter that really makes it hilarious. She states that "only" 5 girls of third Spencer were dating frat men and eight non-frat men. With only 20% (approx.) of the men at Carolina frat men and the other 80% non-frat men, it is obviously necessary to multiply the number of frat men by four. This leaves the number at twenty to eight. Therefore, with "coeds who know men best its frat men five to two."

Last Sunday I had my noon meal at the Monogram club I was thoroughly delighted with the food, service, and atmosphere. I know of no eating establishment in Chapel Hill or Durham that offers as much for the money. True, the prices are higher than in less pretentious "eateries," but then it was probably never intended to be another Lenoir dining hall.

Here's one vote of appreciation to those responsible for the undertaking.

More from the Great Omar

Editor:

The ridiculous quotation by a member of the Catholic clergy (cited by Evangelist, Apostal) regarding sex is only one of many reasons why that alleged "infallible" body is under heavy fire today by Protestants, non-protestants, and free-thinkers.

In so far as this individual is concerned, sexual love and gratification is the acme of human delight—and I do mean ACME. Furthermore, to be perfectly blunt, any Deity, man, or beast who attempts to convince me otherwise will be beating his noggins against a cold stone wall! However, I don't think that I have much trouble selling me their "bill of goods" in about 1000 odd years hence—or maybe 50 years—how should I know? By changing a word or two in one of Khayyam's gems, we have the crux of the problem:

"Why, be this 'act' the growth of God,
Who dare blaspheme this 'act' as a snare?
A Blessing, we should use it should we not?
And if a curse—why then, who set it there?"

Mr. Apostal seems to bank heavily on what is known as "eternal life." It's a beautiful thought in many respects, I must admit, gents—but for the lack of a single strand of reliable and verifiable evidence, I'm compelled to string along again with the earthly and worldly philosophy of Omar the Persian:

"Some for the Glories of this World: and some Sigh for the Prophet's Paradise to come;
Ah, take the Cash, and let the Credit go,
Nor heed the rumble of a distant Drum!"

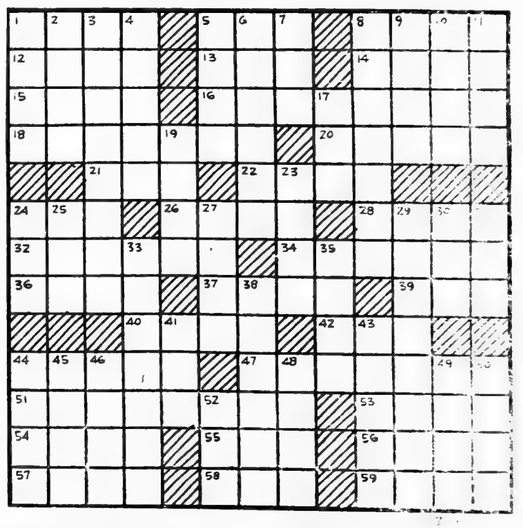
Phi Beta Kappa and Movie Star

By "Wink" Locklair

Whether his name is listed on the screen as John Sheppard as it was with Gene Tierney in "Belle Starr," or as Sheppard Strudwick, as it was in the recent film, "Fighter Squadron," it is still the same fellow who got his start with the Carolina Playmakers and graduated Phi Beta Kappa from this University in 1928.

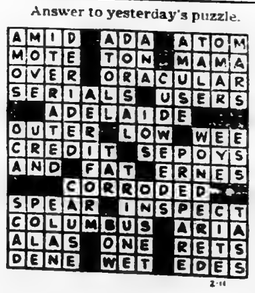


A native of Hillsboro, Sheppard was a member of Professor Koch's playwriting class, but "Prof" was more interested in the young man's acting ability than his improbable future as a playwright. Sheppard took parts in several experimentals and later appeared in Maxwell Anderson's political comedy, "Both Your Houses."

After graduation from the University, he went to New York where he worked as an office boy for awhile. He landed a few bit parts in several plays and eventually he was assigned leading roles.

During the war, Mr. Strudwick served as a gunnery officer in the Navy for three years. Later he was named California chairman of the American Veterans Committee.

The Carolina-born actor has an interesting ancestoral background. He is a descendant of Patrick Henry and John Bunyan, the author of "Pilgrims' Progress." Mr. Strudwick was selected to play the title role in "The Loves of Edgar Allen Poe" with Linda Darnell, by a Baltimore lawyer, who was a great-nephew of the poet.



While in Chapel Hill, Mr. Strudwick pledged D.K.E., and was a member of the Golden Fleece as well as other societies. He and Kay Kyser were classmates here.

Carolina Cagers Meet Maryland Tonight

Strictly Ad Lib

BY ZANE ROBBINS

Another Iron in the Fire

IT SEEMS ALMOST a crime to print any more rumors after the dozens that have already circulated around campus since New Year's day, but a batch of new ones were herded into our office the other day and dumped upon the desk by a sly little character with a twinkle in his eye and a batch of logic under his hat.

We cautiously scooped up one of the tattered bits of paper that had been thrust upon us by the sinister little character and noted that Kentucky's Wildcats are after a 1950 match with the Tar Heels in Woollen gym. The grapevine sez that Coach Adolph Rupp, who recently consented to bring his Blue Grass cagers to the Old North State next year to dedicate the brand-new N. C. State mooselium, wants to negotiate a game with the Carolinians and Dook's Blue Devils on the same trip. Sounds good.

CHUNK SIMMONS

. . . on way back?

And, believe it or not, Carolina might be able to give the Wildcats an action-packed evening regarless of the final outcome should the game materialize. Coach Tom Scott doesn't lose a man by graduation this year, and a crop of seasoned freshman performers will be around next winter to lend helping hands to the veterans. Even so Carolina will be a far cry from the great Tar Heel squad that paced the nation back in 1946. The word is out, however, that added emphasis is to be placed on basketball here once again, and that in two, maybe three years, Carolina will be back at the top of the national heap. It would be nice.

Tar Heel Tid-Bits

A FEW NOTES off the cuff about the Tar Heels, past and present.

Paul Severin, who was an All-American end here in the early forties, has been named freshman head coach at the University of Florida. Severin tutored the Florida ends last season.

Jack Fitch, an All-Southern performer under Carl Snavely, in '46, is back in school after two years with the pros. He is doing grad work and officiating mural basketball games.

Bill "Earthquake" Smith, the two-ton tackle that left school to join the Los Angeles Dons last year is planning to enter the University again at the beginning of spring quarter. "Earthquake" will be joined by former team-mates Hosea Rodgers, Bob Kennedy, and Mike Rubish on the LA pro club next fall.

There is also a rumor that Chunk Simmons, former Tar Heel trackman and Olympic decathlon star, might return at the beginning of spring quarter. He is still eligible for college competition, and would provide the Tar Heel tracksters with a well-timed shot in the arm.

Here's That Man Again

CHOO CHOO CHARLIE JUSTICE has found himself right smack in the middle of another batch of rumors. One is that he is set to undergo an appendectomy this summer, and the other, on the bright side for a change, is that the Asheville Ambler will be roaming the outer gardens for Coach Bunn Hearn's baseballers this spring. The Choo played semi-pro ball last year and turned in a handsome record for the season. He is a shortstop by trade, but his speed is easily adapted to an outfield post.

VIC SEIXAS

. . . to be featured

Vic Seixas, Carolina's golden boy in the national tennis ranks, was assailed by a flock of reporters and photographers before he had unpacked his baggage upon his return to school last month. The newshounds represented Sport magazine, and made Seixas the object of their affections for a couple of days while they took dozens of pictures and crammed their notebooks with pertinent facts about the Philadelphia racquet-swinger. A full-length feature on Seixas with pictures will appear in one of the future issues of Sport.

The interview was occasioned by Vic's return from a tennis tour which covered over 30,000 miles. The roaming racqueteer covered the United States from coast to coast and then went south where he participated in tournaments throughout South America.

He will again be the top man on Coach John Kenfield's tennis club come spring. Had he not made the lengthy tour and continued in school at Carolina, he would have graduated at the end of the winter quarter and thus be ineligible for the tennis team in spring.

Tar Heels Rated Slight Favorite In Return Battle

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Feb. 10—North Carolina's surprising Tar Heels, fresh from a resounding 64-34 victory over Duke, invade the Maryland campus today for an important Southern conference test with Coach Flucie Stewart's Terps at 8 o'clock this evening in Ritchie coliseum.

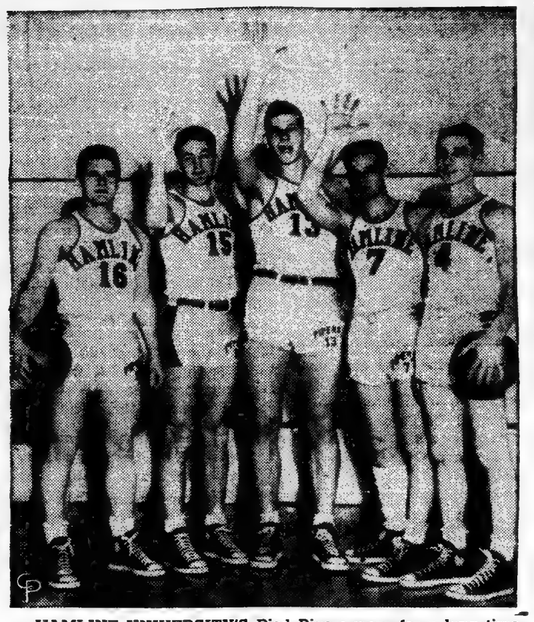
Winners of 14 games in 19 starts, the visitors from Chapel Hill are regarded as favorites in tonight's engagement. But previous Carolina teams which were favored by wider margins, have found the Terps hard to beat on their home court here. Carolina's great 1946 quint, after defeating Maryland by some 30 points in Chapel Hill, had to wage in terrific battle in College Park before winning by 34-31.

In the first meeting between the two teams, Coach Tom Scott's Tar Heels emerged victorious by a 55-47 score. Although the game was close, Maryland was not particularly impressive in Chapel Hill. But they have improved considerably since that time and should give the Carolinians a hard fight tonight.

The Tar Heels arrived here by train today. Tomorrow they will move to Washington, D. C., for a game with the George Washington Colonials. The GW team handed Duke a 51-49 setback in Washington on Wednesday night of this week and also will prove rough for the Tar Heels.

Carolina will have a strong revenge motive against the Colonials. They handed the Tar Heels a crushing 64-41 defeat in Chapel Hill back in January in a game in which the Scottmen were favored.

Carolina's starting lineup in tonight's game with Maryland will probably show Coy Carson and Hugo Kappler, forward; Nemo Nearman, center; and Dan Nyimicz and Rip Ryan at guards.



Carson is the big man in the Carolina scoring parade, having racked up 314 points. He is followed by Nearman, Kappler, and Nyimicz.

Chapel Hill Plays

Chapel Hill's rampaging Wildcats will travel to Hillsboro tonight in quest of their fourteenth straight win in fourteen starts.

Coach Bill Grice's unbeaten quint is the leading contender for the class A conference title. The local five trounced Hillsboro earlier in the season. The 'Cat's starting lineup will probably see Williams and Jernigan at forwards, Perry at center, and Hill and Phillips at the guard positions.

Pied Pipers Pooped Out

HAMLINE UNIVERSITY'S Pied Pipers were for a long time the "Last of the Mohicans" in college basketball circles, but the Minnesota cagers finally pooped out and dropped their first game of the season earlier in the week. The St. Thomas university hardwooders administered the licking after the Pipers had racked up 16 consecutive wins.

Willie Pep and Sandy Saddler Slug it Out in Garden Tonight

NEW YORK, Feb. 10—(UP)—The strangest fight-betting in many a year favored Willie Pep at 6 to 5 today to recapture the world featherweight championship from Sandy Saddler in their $90,000 sell-out bout at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

Less than four months ago, Saddler of Harlem wrested the 126-pound crown from Pep of Hartford, Conn., on a fourth round knockout after giving Wee Willie the worst beating of his career.

On the basis of Saddler's performance that night of Oct. 29, boxing men expected the slender but explosive Negro to be favored over Pep at about 3 to 1 for their return bout. They couldn't understand the screwy betting trend for their return bout.

Saddler, although only 22, has the best knockout record of any featherweight in history—61 kayoes in 99 pro fights. Pep, at 26, indicated in October that he had not recovered his speed and elusiveness after a nearly fatal airplane crash in January, 1947.

Frosh Matmen Lose

After winning over High Point high school with comparative ease last Saturday, Coach Irv Zirpel's Tar Heel freshman wrestlers did a complete reversal last night at High Point and suffered their first defeat in six outings, 21-10.

The Tar Babies were able to win only two matches and both of those came on pins. Barry Ferber, in the 145-pound class and 165-pounder Tom Coxe were the winners for Carolina.

One Tar Heel, Bob McGimsey, suffered his first defeat of the season when he lost a 1-0 decision to Slaydon, whom he beat last week.

High Point won the match on three pins and two close decisions.

Tar Heel Matmen Meet VMI Cadets At Woollen Today

Coach Chuck Quinlan's grappling crew will make its second home appearance on the Woollen gym mat this afternoon when the varsity squad meets Virginia Military Institute at 2 o'clock. The Tar Heels are currently sporting a record of one win, one tie, and one defeat.

Although Carolina won handily over the Cadets last year, they will be lacking the lightweight strength that they carried to Lexington. VMI always a wrestling stronghold, will bring a potent team to Chapel Hill and ought to give the local boys a run for their money.

Three Tar Heel matmen still remain undefeated. Co-Captain Carrol Fisher has won all three of his matches on falls and is the leading scorer with 15 points. Following close behind him is sophomore Phil Kemp, a 155-pounder who has two pins and a decision to his credit. The third member of the undefeated trio is Co-Captain Oscar Gupton. Gupton, however, has wrestled in only two matches and has won both on decisions.

Coach Quinlan is expected to start basically the same team that went against VPI not long ago. One change will be in the 121-pound class where newcomer Kenny Hoffman is slated to start. The remaining seven starters will be the same as in the past two meets.

In past matches the Tar Heels were defeated by State, 21-11, soundly trounced Davidson 21-12, and tied VPI 16-16.

Ticket Distribution To Begin on Monday

Ticket distribution for the Carolina-State game will begin on Monday next week, with holders of even-numbered passbooks having priority on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. Students with odd-number passbooks may obtain ducats on Thursday and Friday, if any remain.

Students must present their ID cards along with their passbook. No student may pick up more than one ticket.

Tar Heels To Run Against Duke In Second of Two-day Meets

Duke's indoor track team will be in Chapel Hill today and tomorrow for the running of the second in a series of two-day track meets between Carolina and the Blue Devil runners of the Tin Can board track.

Action will get underway at 2:30 this afternoon with the shot put event. Odd distance events, including the 330, the 660, the 3/4 mile, the 1½ mile and the eight-lap relay will follow at 3:30. Tomorrow's events will start at 2:30.

Last week the Tar Heel thinclads romped over the Blue Devils, 76 2/3—28 1/3, in the unofficial team scoring. The Tar Baby indoor tracksters also won their division of the competition, 37-31.

N. C. State, originally scheduled to compete in both the meet last week and this week, will not run. State coach Willis Casey said yesterday that his boys were not prepared for competition as yet.

Carolina coach Dale Ranson reported yesterday that his squad is in top shape for competition this week-end.

The meet this week-end will be the last before the two important "big" meets on the two following Saturdays. The Tar Heels are entered in the University of Maryland invitational on February 19 and are to be hosts to the Southern conference indoor meet here on February 26.

Maryland track mentor Jim Kehoe announced recently that the Terps would win the conference meet here and, if recent performances are any indication, the Terps stand a good chance of unseating the Tar Heels from the conference crown which they won at the last meet in 1942.

The pressure will definitely be on the Carolina team in these meets, but the Tar Heels are determined to win both. Navy, however, is picked by the experts to win the Maryland meet.

Carolina's hopes rest with their quartet of top hurdlers, their high jumpers and several strong individual performers.

The Tar Heel hurdlers, who took the first four places against Duke last week and are favored to repeat on Saturday, are Bill Albans, Dick Taylor, Bob Morrow, and Jack Moody. Albans, Moody and Billy Joyner will carry the Carolina colors in the high jump.

Shot putter Bob Seligman, who was ill last week, is expected to compete today and continue his duel with Duke's Jim O'Leary last week tossed the pellet 48 ft. 6½ in. Turk Ogden, Bill Albans and Roscoe Hansen took the next three places for Carolina.

Ward Cards 64

Harvie Ward, Carolina's golfing ace, turned in one of the best rounds of golf ever achieved on the Hope Valley course earlier this week when he carded a seven under par 64. This tied the record for a competitive match score.

Town Board Passes Parking Ordinance

By J. L. Merritt

Several ordinances relating to automobile parking were passed at Wednesday night's meeting of the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen.

The first ordinance prohibits parking on Battle lane, except on the east side from East Franklin street to Hooper lane, and on the west side of Battle lane from Hooper lane to East Cameron avenue. Violations of the parking ordinance are punishable with a $5 fine.

Other parking ordinances stop parking upon sidewalks or any area between the sidewalks and the curb. Also "U" turns were prohibited at the intersections of Columbia and Franklin streets and Franklin and Henderson streets.

A report on the zoning ordinance and Chapel Hill town map by Alderman Collier Cobb was given to the aldermen. Gilbert Ray, town manager, reported to the aldermen that the gas tank at the city hall was 153 gallons short this month.

Ray said some employees were filling the tanks of their cars and not turning in tickets. He promised to do what he could to stop the shortage of gas.

Legion Members Go to High Point For Conference

Chapel Hill American legionnaires attended the post officers conference last week in High Point, legionnaire Paul Robertson reported yesterday.

Robertson said he was appointed sergeant-at-arms at the meeting and reported the legionnaires passed a bill asking Congress to replace the two veterans hospitals that were stricken from the appropriations budget.

He said, "it was the most serious Legion meeting I have attended in years, and everyone who went there did his share of work."

National Legion Commander Perry Brown addressed the convention yesterday. Voiture 1266 of the Orange county division of the 40 and eight will meet tonight in Hillsboro.

Other townspeople attending the conference beside Robertson and his wife were Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Keller, Calvin Burch, and Jack McDade, commander of the Chapel Hill Legion post.

Local Boy Scouts Honored by Club

In celebration of Boy Scout week, the Chapel Hill Kiwanis club presented a program by Scout Troop 39 at its meeting this week.

Brief reports of progress made in Scouting here during the past year were given by Scoutmaster W. L. Hamnett and Scouts Ned Hedgpeth and Allen Williams. The most recently registered Scout in the Troop, Dan Fowler, told why he decided to become a Scout.

Assistant Scoutmaster Bob Brooks rounded out the program by showing color slides on Scouting here and in Hawaii.

country-wide fame on the Raymond Scott and Paul Baron CBS radio shows.

Charlie also plays a hot piano and on vocals he sounds like another Cab Calloway.

Tommy Dorsey, as everyone knows who saw the picture, started playing with a band while he was still wearing short pants (and those pants were generally the ones brother Jimmy had outgrown.) The "Doctor of Swingology" started out as a trumpet player, but had the trombone wished on him because it was needed to fill out his father's band.

Frank Sinatra, Dick Haymes, Jo Stafford, Ray McKinley, Connie Haines, the Pied Pipers and others grew to stardom under his tutelage. For a man who says his ambition is to win at gin rummy, Tommy Dorsey has not only gone far, but he has carried many others with him.

'Joan' Will Play Here on Feb. 21-24

"Joan of Arc" will play at the Village theater February 21-24. Admission will be 74 cents for matinee shows and $1.25 for evening performances. General admission to children will be 50 cents.

Chapel Hill will be the first town in North Carolina to show this picture. E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Village theater, stated that he has received many letters requesting this movie and although he is opposed to going above regular prices, this is one of the pictures that requires advanced admission.

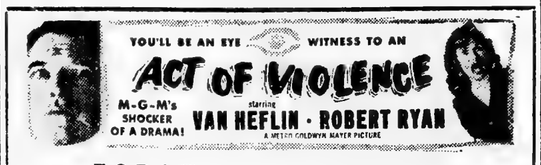
Undecided Vets Under Public Law 16 Asked to Contact Training Officers

All public law 16 veterans who are undecided upon what field to enter should contact their training officers for advice, Wilson Honeycutt, public law 16 training officer, announced yesterday.

He said a study of future job demands has been made by the Veterans administration as an aid in counseling veterans who are taking educational and training courses.



According to the study, college graduates in the fields of medicine, psychology, certain phases of electricity, and elementary and kindergarten teaching will be badly needed in the future. And competition in the fields of engineering, chemistry, pharmacy, law, and personnel relations is expected to grow much keen in the next few years.

Mrs. Arnold Nash Addresses YMCA Fraternity Discussion

By Caroline Bruner

Mrs. Arnold Nash, who was a member of the Association for Family Living in Chicago several years ago, spoke at the fifth YMCA sponsored fraternity house discussion last night.

Speaking on "Creative Living in Courtship and Marriage" in the Delta Psi house, Mrs. Nash spoke for about a half hour and then led discussions on the subject.

"Unless one is emotionally mature, he can't possibly hope to create a successful marriage relationship," Mrs. Nash said in her talk prior to the discussion.

She added that when one becomes mature, he "cuts various apron strings" and gets over forms of moodiness. Until this happens, he said, you can't fall in love.

"When you fall in love," continued Mrs. Nash, "you look for someone to please instead of someone to please you." She said a person can fall in love with one of many people. It is merely a matter of which one you meet first.

She concluded her discussion with "Marriage is not only a bed of roses but also a field of battle. We must learn to quarrel creatively," The house then opened for discussions.

Fraternity members asked such questions as "How will I know I'm in love?", "What do you think about petting," and "What is the proper age for marriage?."

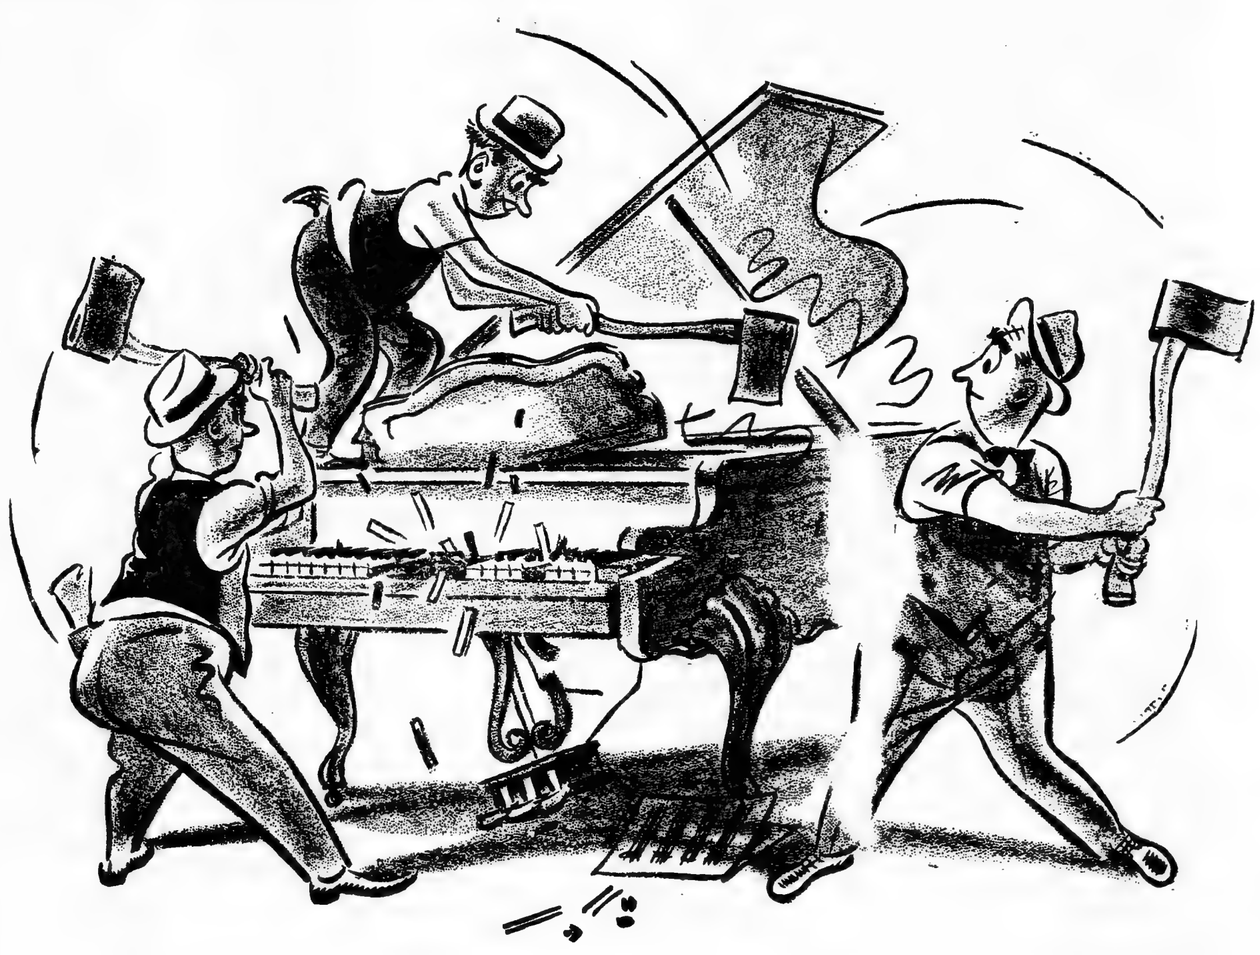
When asked about mixed religions in the family, Mrs. Nash said she disapproved of it. "Religion is the most important force in the home," she said, adding that the wife should join her husband's church.

Other Colleges Are Signing Up For Y's Retreat

Eighteen students from four North Carolina colleges will join University delegates in the retreat to Montreat, Presbyterian conference grounds near Asheville.

The conference, to begin a week from today, will be composed of 125 students and discussion leaders who will leave Chapel Hill by car Friday, Feb. 18.

State, Davidson, Elon, and Guilford colleges are each sending four representatives and Duke university is sending two.



Approximately 100 students have signed up for the retreat thus far and only a limited number of vacancies remain, John Hough, co-chairman of the retreat said yesterday.

How to tune a piano!

The piano is out of tune. So we'll chop it up. Then we'll get a tin horn instead.

Sure, these men are crazy.

But they're using the same kind of thinking a lot of people have been using on the American economic system lately.

Our American way isn't perfect. We still have our ups and downs of prices and jobs. We'll have to change that. But even so, our system works a lot better than the second-rate substitutes being peddled by some countries we could mention.

It works better because of a few simple things. We are more inventive, and we know how to use machine power to produce more goods at lower cost. We have more skilled workers than any other country. We believe in collective bargaining and enjoy its benefits. And we Americans save—and our savings go into new tools, new plants, new and better machines.

Because of this, we produce more every working hour . . . and can buy more goods with an hour's work than any other people in the world.

We can make the system work even better, too: by all of us working together to turn out more for every hour we work—through better machines and methods, more power, greater skills, and by sharing the benefits through higher wages, lower prices, shorter hours.

It's a good system. It can be made better. And even now it beats anything that any other country in the world has to offer.

So—let's tune it up, not chop it down.

Eisenhower Is Called to Duty To Aid Truman

To Preside Over Joint Staff Chiefs

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11. — (UP) — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has been recalled to temporary duty to advise President Truman and to help the joint chiefs of staff decide problems of overall military strategy, it was revealed today.

The White House announced that the former Army chief of staff has been borrowed from his post as president of Columbia university, New York, to take a top role in military councils—second only to Defense Secretary James Forrestal.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11—(UP) —The Board of Trustees of Columbia university has given full approval for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, university president, to spend the major part of his time in Washington in the near future in connection with the national defense establishment, a spokesman said today.

The five-star general will serve as "principal military adviser and consultant" to the president and Forrestal, assistant White House press secretary Eben Ayers said.

In addition, he will "act as presiding officer" of the joint chiefs of staff, consisting of the chiefs of staff of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

Ayers said it was planned that Eisenhower's assignment will be "of relatively short duration" due to his "other commitments." He has been granted a seven to eight week leave from Columbia.

Both the White House and defense officials denied that "Ike's" recall implied any worsening of the cold war with Russia.

A defense spokesman said his biggest job will be to forge agreement among the joint chiefs on strategic problems and to handle accumulated "routine" matters affecting the three services.

The spokesman disclosed that some "pretty basic" strategic problems have not been settled by the joint chiefs, mainly affecting "emphasis as to one area against another." He did not elaborate.

First Impressions

Damyankee Beauties Among Week's Imports

By Don Maynard

A damyankee acquaintance of Tommy Dorsey's, just a damyankee and still another damyankee make part of the weekend's crop of imports for the German club Midwinters featuring the Sentimental Gentleman and his fellow gents at Woollen gymnasium.

Jinx Schwartz, Peggy Strickland and Ann Moser make up the pretty trio of invaders, daughters of the frigid North who claim they came to Chapel Hill and found it "full of Southern architecture," the ideal college town, and "no different from the last time I saw it."

All three seemed in good shape, considering the hazards they subjected themselves to in coming to this "typical" college town, overrun with what an unidentified import was heard to call "that domineering Carolina coed."

Jinx, who hails from Hazelton, Pa., and is a senior at Edgewood Park college in Briercliff Manor, N. Y., was seated attractively on an ATO house couch when she told of the blizzard she left shivering at LaGuardia field, Long Island.

"You know where Briercliff Manor is, don't you?" asked Jinx. Several ATO's nodded "No," so she went on. "Well, if you know where Sing Sing is, then you know the location of Briercliff Manor. We're at the top of a hill, and Sing Sing is at the bottom."

"It was so cold up there," she said, "I thought I'd be glad to land in the sunny South.

"But it was just as cold here," she wailed. Jinx arrived by airliner Friday night.

Jimmie Burns, Jr., the ATO who invited Jinx to this weekend's festivities, had not a thing to say about the weather, but it was the opinion of his brothers that it will be fair and warmer until the pretty, blond, blue-eyed, convenient-sized Jinx leaves the Hill.

Peggy Strickland, also a blond and a brown-eyed choral directing major from Westminster Choral college at Princeton, N.J., smiled when asked what she thought of the label given to dates foreign to the Carolina campus.

"Why, 'import' is the only natural thing to call an out-of-town girl," she said.

Peggy was sitting with the third of the blond Yankee trio, Ann Moser, Nayack High school senior from, of all places, Nayack, N. Y., and their dates, Bud

Southern Ideas

Second Issue of Quarterly Will Appear About March 1

By Emily Sewell

Continuing its policy of presenting the best in Southern ideas and thoughts, the second issue of the Carolina Quarterly to appear before March 1 will contain articles by Walter Pritchard Eaton, Richard Walser, Henry Kamphoefner, M. Jacques Hardre, and Ruth Wolfe.

Eaton, former professor of playwriting at Yale university, has written an article entitled, "The College Theatre." He is serving as guest lecturer in the dramatic arts department this year and is especially interested in college theater. Known as the dean of American playwriting professors, Eaton was co-author of the play, "Queen Victoria," and has written several books on the theater.

Richard Walser, considered a Thomas Wolfe scholar, will be featured in the Southern Writer section of the Quarterly with his article, "Some Notes on Wolfe's Reputation Abroad." A teacher in the English department at North Carolina State college in Raleigh, Walser is author of "North Carolina in the Short Story," a book published last year.

"Contemporary Architecture and the Southern Tradition," dealing with the development of architecture in the South indigenous to this section, was written by Henry Kamphoefner, dean of the School of Design at North Carolina State.

The Quarterly, now being readied for publication, will contain poetry, stories, and reviews. Subscription rates are $1 per year student rate.

Gordon Clapp Talk Concerns TVA Subjects

Power Usage Is Discussed

Gordon R. Clapp, chairman of the board of the Tennessee Valley authority, spoke Thursday night in Alumni building on the record of TVA in harnessing the resources of the valley, making possible their more effective use.

"The Tennessee valley," he said, "demonstrated that a better standard of living can be reached at less expense to its exhaustible resources because the people are learning to build their income on assets that are renewable by developing a new approach to the use of their resources.

"The Tennessee valley's economy has been stabilized; the people have developed farming systems which capitalize on that region's two foremost assets, the partnership of the sun and soil through most of the days of the year and through rainfall," Clapp stated.

"The tremendous power production by the TVA is one of its best known functions. However, new types of water-borne commerce on the river is developing a new affinity between the Southeast and the Middle West," Clapp said.

In mentioning other phases of TVA's program including soil conservation and the processing of phosphate fertilizer, Clapp stressed the fact that this development and expansion had not been a drain on the taxpayers' pocketbooks, "for the power production alone is gradually repaying all that has been spent on the entire program."

The speaker was introduced by Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, director of the Institute for Research in Social Science. The institute and the department of city and regional planning invited Clapp to speak to graduate students in social sciences and others interested in the South's development of its available resources.

Debaters Lose To Annapolis

The University varsity debate team lost in a split decision with the United States naval academy at Annapolis Thursday night, Don Shropshire, publicity chairman, reported yesterday.

Topic of the debate was federal aid to education. The debate team was composed of Herb Mitchell and Paul Roth, negative, and Herbert Yates and Dave Pittman, affirmative. Mitchell was recently appointed a member of the University Debate council.

The debate team engaged the University of Richmond last night and will meet William and Mary tonight. Next week, the debate team will meet Duke at Durham, and on Friday, the team will travel to Elon college for a return debate.

Director Of Mediation Service To Give Address Here Feb. 24

LATE NEWS BULLETIN

CHARLOTTE, Feb. 11—(UP)— Gov. Kerr Scott said tonight he will insist that tuition at the University of North Carolina be raised so it will not compete with the state denominational schools.

Scott addressed the opening banquet of a $2,500,000 fund-raising campaign by Davidson college.

The governor said he would "ask and insist" that the tuition level at the three units of the Greater University be hiked so state-supported schools will not be put at an advantage over church schools which do not receive state funds.

Legislature Gets Bill To Outlaw Communists

RALEIGH, Feb. 11—(UP)—The North Carolina legislature today received a bill prohibiting membership in the Communist party and requiring anti-Communist oaths from all officeholders.

A House Roads committee approved a bill to wipe out the motor vehicles inspection program, and the Senate received a bill to shake up the utilities commission in line with Gov. Kerr Scott's reforms.

The anti-Communist bill, introduced by Reps. Clyde A. Shreve of Guilford county and John B. Regan of Robeson county, prohibits membership in "any political party or any organization of any kind which advocates the control, seizure or overthrow of the government of the United States or the state of North Carolina, or any political subdivision, by use of force or violence."

It provides that no person may hold elective or appointive office in the state who shall fail or refuse to take an anti-Communist oath.

The prescribed oath reads:

"I do solemnly swear that I am not a member of the Communist party, that I am not a member of any party, group or organization, political or otherwise, which advocates or teaches, or both, either directly or indirectly, the overthrow, by force or violence, of the government of the United States, the government of the state of North Carolina, or the government of any political subdivision thereof, so help me God."

Persons now employed by the state would be required to file the oath before next July 1.

Associations Have Banquet, Ladies' Night

Group Singing Led by Cordon

Approximately 300 people, including members of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants association and Chamber of Commerce, Inc., their wives, employes, and special guests, attended the ladies' night banquet of the association, held last night in the ballroom of the Carolina inn.

Entertainment features of the informal evening included group singing led by Norman Cordon, former Metropolitan opera star now living in Chapel Hill; a humorous skit by members of the Chapel Hill Junior Chamber of Commerce depicting achievements of the Merchants association during the past year; a skit by Andy Griffith, University student from Mt. Airy; drawings for a total of 36 door prizes donated by member firms; and a square dance, for which Cary Lloyd and his string band furnished music, and L. B. "Spick" Collins called figures.

Upon entering, each lady attending the dinner was given a red rosebud. These and other favors beside each plate were contributed by University Florist, Rose's 5 & 10 cent store, Danziger's, Bank of Chapel Hill, the Varsity, Colonial Press, and Ledbetter-Pickard.

L. V. Huggins, president of the association, was master of ceremonies during the evening.

He introduced special guests attending the banquet, and recognized officers and members of the board of directors of the Association, including the new full-time secretary, Mrs. Mildred Cartee, who joined the association the first of the year.

Davidson Students Take Over Charlotte

CHARLOTTE, Feb. 11—(UP) —Things got back to normal today after a bloodless revolution that put students in charge of this city and its business.

Yesterday was "Davidson Appreciation day" and the city government and most businesses were put under the command of students from the nearby school.

ADDRESSING a Republican Lincoln Day dinner at a Washington hotel, New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey tells his listeners that the Republican party "is split wide open." Warning of a reactionary group seeking to return the party to the philosophy of the 1920's, Governor Dewey said that its success would mean the death of the Republican party.

Wire Newsmen Will Address Meeting Today

Representatives of three national wire associations will address this morning's session of the annual convention of Southern college publicity and public relations directors in Swain hall.

Herb Foster, Raleigh bureau manager for the United Press associations; Dick Palmer, Raleigh manager for International News Service; and Noel Yancey, Raleigh manager for the Associated Press will be the main speakers.

The three newsmen will conduct a discussion of what the press associations want from college news bureaus.

W. E. Horner, editor of the Sanford Herald, will lead a session on weekly papers, after which officers will be elected and a new convention site selected prior to adjournment at noon.

College publicity men from four Southern states, North Carolina, Virginia, Delaware and Maryland, and the District of Columbia are attending the convention.

Yesterday the delegates traveled to Duke university for luncheon, afternoon and dinner sessions. During the afternoon, a discussion of feature stories was led by Jim Reynolds of the Greensboro Daily News, Jack Riley of the News and Observer and Bob Woods of the Durham Herald.

Cyrus Ching Will Lecture In Memorial

Carolina Forum Sponsoring Talk

By Sam McKeel

Cyrus Stuart Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation service, will speak here Thursday night, Feb. 24, the Carolina Forum announced yesterday.

Sponsored by the Forum and the Carolina Political union, Ching will speak in Memorial hall at 8 o'clock.

Ching, born in Canada in 1876, has been director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation service since August, 1947, when he was appointed by President Truman. He was a member of the advisory council on industrial relations for the National Industrial Conference board from 1925 to 1931, and since 1940.

In 1941 President Roosevelt appointed Ching as a member of the National Defense Mediation board, and he was a member of the National War Labor board from 1942 to 1943.

Ching's background gives him a wide speaking knowledge of the economic and industrial problems of the United States today. He was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1912, and has lectured on industrial relations at Dartmouth, Yale, Harvard, Vassar, and the University of Pennsylvania.

Ching came to the United States in 1900 and was naturalized in 1909. He began his career as a motorman for the Boston Elevated Railroad in 1901, became superintendent of equipment in 1903, and assistant to the president in 1912.

Russian Fliers Gain Amvet Help To Obtain American Citizenship

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11 — (UP) — Two Russian fliers who deserted the Soviet army because they wanted to live in a democracy, today enlisted the support of a veterans organization in their fight for American citizenship.

Harold Keats, national commander of Amvets, told Lieuts. Peter Pirogov and Anatol Barsov that he would ask the Amvet executive council to pass a resolution urging the government to grant them permanent political asylum.

Pirogov and Barsov broke into wide grins when they heard the news and congratulated each other excitedly in Russian.

Then Pirogov, who serves as spokesman for both, told reporters he wanted to explain exactly why they deserted the Soviet air force—a decision they took after listening to the State department's Voice of America broadcasts for months.

He said it was because the Soviet government "does not represent the interests of its people."

Making the Best of It

Dormitory Telephone Service Pays Five Cents Per Message

By Margaret Gaston

Since additional telephones for nine men's dormitories will not be installed until April, dormitory residents are making the best of the present situation.

Last October, students in Mangum dorm decided to do something about the phone problem. Too many times the phone would ring without ever being answered. At a called meeting they decided to contribute five cents apiece each week toward a fund to hire someone to answer the phone.

Monday through Friday any student was paid out of the fund to answer the phone from 7 to 11 o'clock.

At the beginning of this quarter Mangum students extended their phone service from the hours 7 to 11 o'clock four nights a week to include a seven-day service from noon to 1 o'clock at night.

Two students, Steve Rutledge and Jim Blum, work on a permanent basis. They answer the phone, contact the person whom the call is for, and take a message if this can not be done.

In Lewis dorm the student who answers the phone collects five cents from the person who is called.

Last week residents in Steele voted to start down the alphabetical list of those living there to decide whose turn it is to answer the phone. The student is on duty Monday through Thursday, from 7 to 11 o'clock. He collects five cents from each student who is called to the phone.

It Ain't Fair

It looks like somebody is always trying to spoil our fun. It used to be that a fellow could have the biggest time just crossing and re-crossing Franklin street, especially on Saturday morning. You had to be a regular "Choo-Choo" to get across safe and sound. Every trip downtown was an adventure. If a car missed you, it would whip back and try again. But then what happened? They went and put up that dad-gum walk-wait light in front of the Post Office and now it's just as dull as can be, even with a few beers under your belt.

Of course there's always the intersection down at Woollen gym for a fellow that likes to live dangerously. You can see cars coming a long ways off, but if they get you, you're got permanent. Not like the broken-field running you got uptown, but it takes a fast man just the same. The thing is, though, it looks like they might even spoil our fun down there. Any day now they're liable to go and put a light there. Any day now.

Lenoir Is Superior

Is this another editorial blast delivered in the name of freedom? Is the Daily Tar Heel ready to strike again in the crusade for justice? Well, no!

This time we would like to deliver a fond smile and pat on the head to Lenoir. It is not only for their prompt action in heeding the cries of anguish for ketchup on the tables, but for the obvious wish they have of pleasing the students.

We have thrown critical remarks at the campus chow hall before, but now we would like to throw a bouquet. The food is good, the service excellent, and the desire to please is evidenced by the constant changes being made. The extension of serving hours by use of the Green Room, the moving of sauces etc. into the center of the dining halls, and the requests for suggestions that would better conditions show that the right spirit is present.

To detractors, we would like to suggest comparison of our eating facilities with those in any other college of this size. In most cases, Lenoir is by far superior.

Republicans Are Hunting

Truman's victory over Dewey seems to have hurt the Republican party in more ways than a loss of prestige. In defeating the moustached little man, he split the G.O.P. right down the middle. It appears odd, in retrospect, that the outwardly unified party is now cloven, and the "obviously" divided party is water-tight and sound. Of course political victory does things like that.

Mr. Dewey's ability to plead soulfully for unity is proving of as little avail in healing the division, as it was in electing him to the presidency. Liberal and Conservative can only live together in the same camp when political office looms as the reward for their tolerance. When the prize is shown to be out of reach, the factions are liable to act like two kittens with their tails tied together.

Whatever the Republicans are going to do about their division, they had better get started soon. The first round of the come-back fight will be the 1950 congressional elections and a great deal must be done before then. For one thing, a policy must be laid down which will appeal to voters and not old-guard die-hards.

It would not be wise to discount the G.O.P. It has latent strength and some popular men in the background, but these assets must break through traditional conservatism before national success can be achieved.

Fax About Wax

Six 'Fairs,' Four 'Futiles'

By Nelson Taylor

Klassification Key
* Fine
 Fair
 Futile
* Foul

Bing Crosby
 So in Love
 Why Can't You Behave

These two by "Der Bingle" are well worth listening to. The first is a beguine with Bing on the low register and it does click, but it is too low to allow much modulation on the part of the vocalist, and for that reason doesn't add up to a fine rating. "Behave" is a semi-jump with the orchestra doing a vocal background in spots and the thing is good with Bing in good form, but it still doesn't reach the fine level.

Doris Day
 I'm Beginning to Miss you
 Don't Gamble with Romance

Neither of these shows Doris at her best or even her average. The arrangement on both of them is poor and the tunes are nothing to brag about.

Woody Herman
 Ain't Gonna Wait Too Long
 Lemon Drop

"in't" is a novelty number with Woody on the vocal, and he does a good job. But then why shouldn't he? This is his type of song; a scat vocal on a jump number Bill Harris gets away a fine ride on the tram, and the trumpet solo that follows makes a definite bid for "fine" honors. The reverse is a little disappointing, but maybe it is just because I don't like bop vocals; and it isn't even good bop. The trumpet and trombone again come through to keep the side from being a complete flop.

Peggy Lee
 Someone Like You
 You Was (with Dean Martin)

These two are very nice sides. "Someone" features Peggy by herself doing an admirable job on a dreamy platter, and the orchestral work is fine. Yet, the piece lacks that little extra special something that makes a great record. "Was" is the best rendition of this piece that this reviewer has heard yet. With these two vocalists on the same record, it couldn't help but be. This Martin is the greatest thing in male vocalists that his hit the platters in many a moon, and he again proves it on this disk. This time, he sounds like Dick Haymes, but better! The tune is again the only thing that keeps him from getting a "Fine" rating.

'Professionalism' at UNC?

By Jonathan Marshall

The sports page ran an editorial by Billy Carmichael III on Wednesday which admitted and defended professionalism in UNC athletics.

Carmichael, it is true, had several rather good points in his arguments; however, the real question concerns the relative importance of athletics at a state university.

The editorial stated that "there are not enough good football players in North Carolina to produce a national championship team." That seems to be the justification for importing players from other states.

The statement just quoted raises the question of whether the aim of our athletic department is to produce a well-rounded athletic program or a national championship team? From this one might ask whether we can have a well-rounded athletic program without a championship team since football supports the other teams and the intra-mural programs.

Even when these questions can be answered, the basic problem of whether professionalism in college athletics is good or not remains unsolved.

When football is dominant, the academic side of college suffers. One need only to look at attendance and academic records during the past season for proof. Students cut classes to go to games away from home and many were unprepared for Monday classes.

The problem is not one that faces UNC alone, it is something that concerns every large university in the nation. If all large schools expanded their football programs, we would again be just average, and the loss would be ours.

This columnist grants the value of strong football teams supporting other athletics; nevertheless, national championship teams are not essential for this end.

Although athletics were not strong before the war, we did have a sound program. Professionalism is not essential. If football at all universities was on an amateur basis, the good teams would still draw large crowds and make money. We cannot solve the problem alone; the need is for de-emphasis on a national scale.

The new traffic light at the post office has certainly been a big step forward in making Chapel Hill a safer place to live. The danger of accidents isn't completely solved though.

As long as U-turns are permitted at the light, the danger remains. Signs prohibiting U-turns from Columbia street to Graham Memorial would be a big help.

'Reciprocal' A Trick Word

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.) ital. ....

Washington, Feb. 9—"Lookit," said Senator George W. Malone, of Nevada, stabbing a knobby finger under my snoot, "let's employ some sense in this thing. You can't be for both a high standard of living and free trade."

We had been talking about the reciprocal trade thing now agitating Congress and the big fellow from Nevada had been getting himself more and more worked up as he analyzed its possibilities for dumping this country in the soup. He said we seemed to be walking into something like blindfolded idiots.

"They call it 'reciprocal' trade," he snapped, "but 'reciprocal' in this case is just a trick word to sell us the free trade idea. How, in the name of all that is sensible, can you have reciprocal trade with a country that doesn't do business our way?"

The solon, who used to be a box-fighter around the mining camps until he managed to get himself an education, said a bunch of CIO leaders out in his state had come to him a couple of years ago saying they were for free trade. He turned schoolmaster on them.

"How," he asked the unioncers, "can a $10 or $12 a day miner here in Nevada expect to compete against a 40-cent a day miner in Burma? you try it—and you'll be out of work so fast your heads'll swim."

The upshot, observed Senator Malone, was that these unioneers thought it over and reacted by divorcing themselves from the national CIO.

* * *

"We don't want fixed trade agreements for a stipulated time," he continued. "What we need is a flexible import fee, with the Federal Tariff commission given the power to raise or lower as costs of production in the country of origin go up or down.

"Here's what I mean: We base our import fees, or tariffs, or whatever you want to call 'em, on what it costs the country in question to produce. If its standards of living are away below ours we impose a high duty. As it improves its standards of living we lower the duty.

"This discourages the country from the old practice of paying coolie wages because it just has to pay the difference to the United States treasury. It decides it might as well pay it to its own people instead."

* * *

Senator Malone said a fixed tariff doesn't work well because the economy of the various nations is in a continual state of flux.

"If we sign an agreement for a definite period, say three years, we can't change it during that period," he said. "And in that time the nations can change their standards of living by manipulating their currency—and we're stuck with the three-year agreement."

* * *

He added: "I've said this over and over until I'm tired of hearing myself. But I've been all over the world studying this thing. And I am convinced the only way we can get other countries to do anything is to make it in their own interest to do it.

"If we can't make it to their own interest to raise their own standards we can't do business with them—and that's that."

I asked Miss Reid if the above were thoroughly clear to her. She said it would be clear to a child.

"As a matter of fact," she added, "it would be clearer to a child. A kid won't trade unless he thinks he is receiving value for value. But kids seem to have more sense than some of our inter-national thinkers."

Audit Report

6¢ Per Mile, $8 Per Day

By Dick Gordon, Chairman, Student Audit Board

The official student Constitution, as interpreted, delegates to the Student Audit board the power of regulating the travel expenditures of campus organizations receiving such compensation from or delegated by any of the branches of the student government.

At the present time the following resolution is now in effort:

"That all student organizations which receive any appropriations from the student legislature shall receive the same allowances and shall be subject to the same regulations pertaining to travel as now pertain to employees of the State of North Carolina. It shall be the duty of the Student Audit board to see that these regulations are complied with. The state travel allowance schedule is as follows:

1. Regular railway and Pullman fare.
2. Six cents a mile if one uses his personal automobile.
3. Eight dollars a day for rooms and meals for out-of-state travel. (Max.)
4. Six dollars a day for rooms and meals for in-state travel. (Max.) A record must be kept of actual expenditures and travel vouchers submitted immediately after one returns to Chapel Hill. Only actual expenditures are allowed with maxima of six and eight dollars."

During the three regular sessions of the academic year, travel is based from Chapel Hill to the point of destination and return. During the summer months, should any student be requested to travel, he will be compensated from his home or temporary residence to the point of destination and return.

Before leaving on any trip, travel vouchers should be acquired from the Student Activities office, Graham Memorial. Upon return, vouchers should be turned back into the Student Activities office prior to issuance of the check.

A Communist Front, In Fact

Editor:

On page 4 of Thursday's (February 10) Daily Tar Heel there appears an advertisement for a special subscription offer of In Fact, which proports to "go behind the falsehoods in the daily press."

Before any students jump at this opportunity, it might be interesting to note that on September 9, 1946, Glenn Griswold the editor of Public Relations News, revealed the information that In Fact was a Communist front publication, sponsored by Communists.

Funds innocently contributed to In Fact (formerly located at 25 Astor Place) will aid the same people whose leaders are now under indictment, in New York, for plotting to overthrow the Federal Government of the United States.

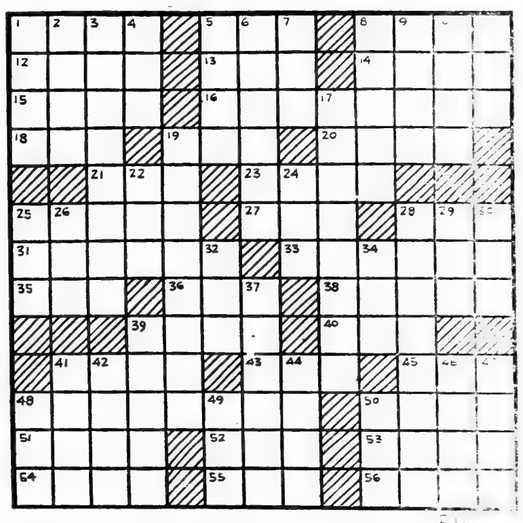
Edwin M. Wess

Peace, at Least in Palestine

Editor:

The following are a few remarks in regard to Mr. Melvin Steinberg's and Mr. Ben Rouzie's "facts," as published in the DTH:

Mr. Steinberg stated, "The League of Nations in 1923 gave Britain the Mandate of Palestine to 'facilitate. . .the establishment of the National Jewish Home.' " So that there will be no doubt as to the authenticity of my words or the meaning derived from the Balfour declaration, the following is the letter that the British Cabinet authorized Mr. Balfour, then Foreign Secretary, to write to the head of British Jewry. This same letter which was later incorporated into the British Mandate for Palestine stated "His Majesty's Government view with favour the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavours to facilitate the achievement of that object, It Being Clearly Understood That Nothing Shall Be Done Which May Prejudice The Civil And Religious Rights Of Existing Non-Jewish Communities In Palestine." The Balfour declaration did not give the Jews the authority to create a state.



Few people realize the important part the Arabs played on the side of the Allies, not only in World War I, but also in World War II.

In World War II, the Arabs once more stood by the Allies though Britain deliberately elected to make the Arab countries passive allies, thousands of Arabs joined the Allied forces. Agricultural products of the Arabs supplied the armed forces in the Mediterranean; their oil served the Navy and the Air Force, and the Arabs co-operated wholeheartedly with the United Nations in giving them all the elbow room desired. The Arabs helped to protect the sea routes in the Persian Gulf and the Red Sea, they strengthened the supply lines to Russia, and finally Arab forces penetrated the citadel of Nazism with the Allied forces.

Forty million Arabs in their strategic lands on the crossroads of three continents could have turned the tide of war in favor of the Axis. After the fall of Crete, the Germans were ready to invade the Arab countries if the Arabs had been friendly. Had the Arabs joined the Axis the African campaign might have been won by Rommel, and all the resources of Africa and the oil of Arabia would have become available to the Axis powers. The Arab lands would have been used as a junction between German and Japanese forces. It is no exaggeration to say that the Arabs did a great deal to help win both World Wars.

In concluding, I would like to state that the Palestine dilemma has from its beginning been a regrettable problem, caused not so much by grievences between the Arabs and the Jews, but by British imperialism and foreign interests. Today, it seems that the situation there has reached its ebb. For the recent elections in Israel, which have raised Israel's esteem in the eyes of many people, will be a factor in favor of the success of present peace negotiations. It is to be hoped that with the present turmoil in the world today there will at least be peace in the Holy Land.

Carolina Stages Comeback To Lick Terrapins, 66-52

Nearman Shines in Victory As Cagers Score Loop Win

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Feb. 11—Carolina's hustling cagers poured on a power-packed attack against Maryland's Terrapins here tonight to win going away, 66-52, after suffering an early deficit.

The hosts put on a sharp-shooting exhibition in the early minutes of the game to edge in front of their Tar Heel foes, but the Carolinians rallied after four minutes to stage a comeback that carried them to an easy victory over their Southern conference rivals.

The Terps came back later in the first period to forge ahead again, however, on Charlie Mark's neat one-hand push shot.

Come From Behind

With Maryland leading, 17-16, Spence Wright made good on a hook shot from the foul line to give his mates a three-point edge. Hugo Kappler retaliated with a lay-up to bring Carolina within one point of their foes, and Nemo Nearman, enjoying the best night of his college career, converted on a foul attempt to knot the score at 19-all.

Don Nyimicz scored on a hook a few seconds later to send the Tar Heels into a lead that they never relinquished. From there on out it was Carolina all the way.

Good Defense

The Scotsmen left the court at half-time holding a narrow 30-26 lead, but threw up an iron-curtain defense at the beginning of the final period that completely stymied the Old Liners for the first nine minutes of the stanza. During that time the Maryland cagers scored only six points, all on free throws.

The game was rough, and hard-fought all the way, but due to the 48 personal fouls called during the course of the battle, the tilt was marked by clean playing throughout.

Nyimicz Stars

Captain Don Nyimicz played one of his best defensive roles of the season in holding the Maryland high-scorer, Brawley, to eight free throws. Nyimicz fouled out after 32 minutes of the game, but chipped in with 11 points before leaving the fray.

Nearman turned in the best performance of his three-year career at Carolina as he ripped the cords for a total of 21 points to garner high-scoring honors for the night, and tossed in a rebounding game off the boards just for good measure.

Coy Carson scored 14 points and played his usual top-notch game, while John Tsantes came in for Don's share of the honors with his great backboard work.

The Tar Heels move to Washington to meet the Colonials of George Washington university in their Southern conference title tomorrow night.

Carolina, Duke Set To Continue Track Meet Today

By Junior Allston

Carolina and Duke will continue their two-day indoor practice track meet this afternoon on the Tin Can board track. Action in the sprint, hurdle, pole vault and board jump events is scheduled to get underway at 2 o'clock.

This meet will be the last warmup for the Tar Heels before they compete in the University of Maryland invitational and the Southern conference indoor meet on the next two Saturdays.

Carolina coach Dale Ranson and Duke mentor Red Lewis agreed that this would be an unofficial meet. No score will be kept.

Five Carolina Firsts

Carolina, however, showed superior strength yesterday when they captured five of seven first places. The Tar Heel firsts came in the shot put, the 330-yard dash, the high jump, the 3/4 mile run and the 1½ mile run. Duke captured the 660 and the eight-lap, 1352-yard relay.

Sam Magill and Julian MacKenzie, the distance aces of the Tar Heel thinclads, both repeated their wins of last week in the 1½ mile and the 3/4 mile run respectively.

Magill's time for the 1½ was 3:15 and he continued for the remaining half-mile to turn in a 9:39.4 two-mile showing. MacKenzie clipped off the 3/4 distance in 7:14.

Joyner Tops Albans

One of the surprises of the afternoon saw Southern conference outdoor high jump champ Billy Joyner jump 6 ft. 1 in. to top both favored Bill champ Jack Moody. Colvin of Albans and defending indoor Duke tied Albans at 6 ft. for second place.

Bob Seligman won the renewal of his shot put duel with Duke's Jim O'Leary. Seligman tossed the iron pellet 46 ft. 8 in. Turk Ogden and Roscoe Hanson finished behind the top runners.

Freshman action saw Gordon Hamrick, Tar Heel distance man, improve upon last week's sensational 3/4 mile victory as he sped the distance yesterday in 3:17.9. Gene Brigham won the frosh 330 for Carolina in 39.1 seconds.

Charlie Gehringer Nearest Choice

NEW YORK, Feb. 11—(UP)—The Baseball Writers' Association of America today failed to elect a single player to baseball's Hall of Fame, but Charley Gehringer, former Detroit second baseman, came within 12 votes of getting in.

His name appeared on 102 of the 153 ballots cast by the writers eligible to vote—those with at least 10 years membership—and he thus became almost certain of receiving the necessary 75 per cent of the vote when a second ballot is taken later in the year.

Attorney Says Court Will Rule Baseball Subject to Trust Law

NEW YORK, Feb. 11—(UP)—A special attorney for the Justice department's anti-trust division today predicted that the U. S. Supreme Court would declare baseball subject to interstate commerce and anti-trust laws.

This would greatly endanger the sport's present structure, both in regards to franchises and the vital "reserve" clause in player contracts.

Taking note of the case in which Danny Gardella is suing organized ball for depriving him of a livelihood, the attornney, John W. Neville, said, "Without venturing a guess on numerical majorities, (in the Supreme court), the odds would be in favor of new law, holding that baseball is commerce, and in its interstate features, subject to the provisions of the anti-trust laws." A federal appeals court took that view Wednesday in ordering a trial in Gardella's $30,000 suit against the New York Giants, which refused to rehire him after he jumped to the Mexican league.

Not a Commerce in '22

Attorney Neville, writing a detailed study of baseball's position for the Fordham law review, the history of baseball's engagements with the law. He recalled that a federal league case in 1922 gave the sport immunity from anti-trust laws because the Supreme Court declared that baseball was not commerce.

However, Neville pointed out, that decision was based partly

Tilden on Road

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 11—(UP)—Former world's tennis champion William (Big Bill) Tilden started a year's sentence in the county road camp today for violating terms of a probationary sentence given him for contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Tilden was committed yesterday on the report of probation officers that he violated probation by keeping company with a juvenile without a responsible adult being present.

The tennis player was also ordered to stand trial Feb. 17 on a new morals charge involving a 16-year-old boy grocery clerk.

Round-Robin Slated For Lambda Chi Frats

For the first time since 1936, the four Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity chapters of Duke, Wake Forest, N. C. State and Carolina will tangle in a Big Four basketball tournament in Woollen gym this afternoon.

The two semi-final games will start promptly at 1:30 and the two winners will play at 3:30 for the championship. Pairings for the opening games will be drawn this morning.

An engraved trophy will be presented to the winner of the tournament and it will be exchanged among the four chapters from year to year.

This renewal of athletic contests will mark the tournament as an annual affair.

Frosh Swimmers Host to Norfolk In Pool Today

By Larry Fox

Carolina's freshman swimmers will inaugurate a busy week for Bowman Gray pool this afternoon at 3 o'clock when they match strokes with the Norfolk division of William and Mary.

Chapel Hill high moves into the spotlight Tuesday afternoon against Raleigh while the local frosh take on Duke in a short four-event meet Wednesday.

A varsity-freshman doubleheader is slated for Friday with the Tar Heels meeting Emory and the yearlings Sewanee Prep. The Southern Interscholastics wind up proceedings on Saturday.

Today's meet will match the Tar Babies against a well balanced squad from Norfolk, which recently dropped a meet to an aggregation composed of the top freshmen and some of the varsity mermen from Duke.

In their last meet, the Carolina freshmen easily defeated Raleigh high, 48-25. The Tar Babies set three freshman records as they churned to six first places against the Caps. Individual records were set by Cecil Milton in the 200-yard freestyle and Art Greenbaum in the 150-yard individual medley while a new standard was set in the 200-yard freestyle relay.

Unlike the meet with Raleigh, today's contest will feature collegiate events. The changes will consist mainly of the extension of distances and the substitution of the 440-yard freestyle for the 150-yard individual medley.

The probable freshman lineup:

300-yard medley relay — Fulwiler, Smith, and Williamson.
220-yard freestyle — Milton and Cohen.
50-yard freestyle—Ambler and Marcus.
Diving—Bell and Beaman.
100-yard freestyle—Ambler and Williamson.
150-yard backstroke — Greenbaum and Small.
200-yard breaststroke—Raskin.
440-yard freestyle—Milton.
400-yard relay—Ambler, Williamson, Marcus, and Cohen.

Fulks Runs Wild; Scores 63 Points

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 11—(UP)—Joe Fulks, towering Philadelphia Warriors sharpshooter, set a new Basketball Association of America record last night by scoring 63 points against the Indianapolis Jets.

The six-foot, five-inch Fulks scored more than half of his team's points as the Warriors topped the Jets, 108-87.

In breaking the previous record of 48 points held by big George Mikan, of the Minneapolis Lakers, Fulks sent 27 field goals and nine free throws through the nets. Mikan had set his mark against the same Indianapolis team last January 30.

UNC Wrestlers Down VMI, 22-10, For Second Conference Victory

Four Decisions, Two Falls Mark Surprising Win

By Buddy Vaden

Coach Chuck Quinlan's wrestling squad looked like it had the makings of one or two Conference champions yesterday as the boys in Blue rolled over the visiting VMI Cadets, 22-10. It was the second win of the season for the Tar Heels, who now have a record of two wins, one tie, and a single defeat.

Lightweight Kenny Hoffman, wrestling for the first time in a varsity meet pulled a fast one in the first bout to pin somewhat surprised Charlie Bragg Bragg, who was gaining time advantage as he was pinned, had a substantial point total edge over Hoffman and was proceeding to give him the once-over. But Hoffman, taking advantage of the fact that Bragg was near the mat, arched his back and put Bragg's shoulders to the canvas for the count of two.

Fisher Wins Fourth

Co-Captain Carrol Fisher kept his record spotless by pinning "Handy Hap" Dashiel in 2:25 of the second round. That makes the fourth pin for Fisher in as many matches. Fisher, who was behind on points, got what looked like a double arm bar on the hapless Dashiel and squeezed him to the mat.

Phil Kemp, Carolina's 155-pounder had a close call in decisioning Pete Meredith. Kemp collected five points on a takedown, a reverse, and an escape to neutral, but at the end of the match Meredith had garnered six points on two reverses and a takedown. But Kemp had enough time advantage to give him two points and the match.

Old Reliable Oscar Gupton, who can always be counted on for three points, had a comparatively easy time in subduing Bill Blackwell. Gupton won the decision on a 5-2 count, but had almost seven minutes time advantage over Blackwell.

Stoioff on Decision

Mitzie Stoioff, Tar Heel 175-pounder took the last match for the Carolinians by decisioning Frank Costello, 3-0. In the last match of the meet heavyweight Joe Augustine was pinned by Dick MacFarland in 1:26 of the second round.

The only other match the Tar Heels lost was in the 128-pound class where Charlie Harless was pinned after 1:35 of the first peri-

John Umstead Backs Scott In Proposal On New Taxes

Legislature Is Violently Split On Scott Move

RALEIGH, Feb. 11.— (UP) — North Carolina's legislators were split nine ways from Sunday today in their opinions on Gov. Kerr Scott's proposal for new taxes to back up increased expense for welfare, health and agricultural services.

Sen. John Umstead, Jr., of Chapel Hill, said he thought Scott's idea was "fine."

"It's the kind of a program you can take to the people and tell them, "This is what you'll have to pay to get the services you want'," he said.

Rep. Shelley B. Caveness of Guilford countered that "this is no time to go into debt."

An Eastern senator felt the people didn't need the services enough to take up the new tax burden except part of it to pay for new school buildings. He foresaw a lot of opposition to the measure, explaining:

"We want counties to have necessary schools, but don't know whether that's the way to get the money or not."

Rep. J. V. Whitfield of Pender pointed out there was no way to get the services Scott proposed "unless we pay for them." He backed the idea, and said he thought Scott's action also would shorten the legislature's session.

"We will either increase taxes or we will say that we do not desire any additional services for the state," he said.

on a previous decision that insurance was not inter-state commerce, either. Insurance now is considered inter-state commerce.

On that basis, Neville presumes that baseball, too, will be declared inter-state commerce by a latter-day court.

Considering Personalities

Then, considering the personalities involved, Neville reviewed various opinions of present justices on the Supreme court. From these opinions, he drew a conclusion as to how each justice probably would feel, legally speaking about baseball's position with the anti-trust laws.

"The Justices Black, Douglas, Murphy, Rutledge block, maintaining a consistent position, would form the nucleus of a majority opinion holding that big league baseball is interstate commerce subject to the anti-trust laws" he said.

He rated Justices Frankfurter and Jackson as probable supporters of the same position. He rated Chief Justice Vinson, and Justices Reed and Burton "unknowns."

The conclusion, however, is almost overwhelming, the Justice department attorney said. Baseball would be declared subject to laws whose control it had evaded for more than half a century.

Ann is a veteran of Carolina dances, having been here for two previous weekends, the last Beneke affair in the spring and the Elliot Lawrence dance on the William and Mary weekend. She concurred with her two Northern sisters, saying "Chapel Hill is so different, it's beautiful."

Jinx, a nine-mile-distant neighbor of T.D., told of her trips to West Point for military dances.

At the Point, cadets have one "Drags." "It you're nice," Jinx "Drags." "It you're nice," Jinx said, "they call you a 'pro.' If you're not so nice, they rate you with a 'D,' meaning you are deficient." But she went on to compliment the Carolina gentleman's adoption of "import."

"It's a cute name," she smiled.

Peggy has attended quite a few dances at Princeton university, but maintains that "UNC is prettier" because "it is spread out. Princeton is so packed together, you feel cramped."

Ann is planning to study nursing at the University of Richmond next fall and Jinx, is a pre-med student who "hopes to be a doctor someday."

The three girls were all impressed with the beauty of the fraternity houses on campus, but Peggy summed up the impression Chapel Hill makes on all new visitors.

"I didn't have any idea before I arrived what Chapel Hill would look like," she said, "but now I see it is the ideal example of what I think a college town should look like."

Professor Avey Will Talk Here Next Thursday

Prof. Albert Edward Avey, chairman of the department of philosophy at Ohio State university, will give a public lecture on "Where is Philosophy Leading Us?" in Gerrard hall next Thursday at 8 o'clock.

Sponsored by the University philosophy department, Prof. Avey will also address a seminar group of philosophy staff members and graduate students from the University and Duke Friday evening. His subject will be "The Present Status of Idealism."

Widely known as a public speaker and civic leader, Prof. Avey studied at the University of Berlin and at Yale university, where he received his Ph. D. in 1915. He has taught philosophy at Ohio State since 1917 and has served as chairman of the department since 1942.

Prof. Avey's philosophical interests have centered in religion, logic and Plato. His publications include "Historical Method in Biblical Study," Rethinking Religion," "The Functions and Forms of Thought" and the anthology, 'Readings in Philosophy."

Town Employes Not Stealing Gas

The shortage of 153 gallons of gas at the town hall gas tank, as reported in yesterday's Daily Tar Heel, does not mean that town employes are stealing gas, Town Manager Gilbert Ray said yesterday.

He said some town employes are getting gas for city cars and merely forgetting to turn in tickets for the gas.

Some Mistake

GOLDEN, Colo., Feb. 11— (UP)—William E. (Butch) McKune isn't worried about the Selective Service questionnaire he received from Jefferson county draft board no. 10.

Butch won't celebrate his first birthday until June. But the draft questionnaire was plainly addressed to him.

Butch posed for photographers today, gurgling and waving the Selective Service paper in the air.

His father, Robert McKune, 25-year-old worker at the Gates Rubber co. in nearby Denver, stood off to the side, puzzled by the whole thing. Even he hasn't received a questionnaire yet.

The red-faced draft board said, "obviously, there's been some mistake."

The story of
A CHEMICAL ACHIEVEMENT

How Du Pont scientists found a way to Moistureproof Cellophane

There's no secret to Du Pont's successful system for making chemical discoveries. It is simply research through teamwork.

As each new problem in research arises, it is tackled by men and women whose training and skill qualify them to master it. Backed by ample funds and facilities, they are continuously extending the field of scientific knowledge.

Take the case of moistureproof Cellophane. Plain, transparent Cellophane was strong, clear and protective. As a packaging material it had eye appeal. Its uses were limited, however. Perishable foods wrapped in this cellulose film were protected from contamination and were good to look at, but they did not retain their freshness. They either lost or absorbed moisture, depending on the nature of the food and atmospheric conditions.

That was a challenge to Du Pont research people. They set out to find materials that would moistureproof Cellophane without materially affecting its thinness or transparency. After developing a basic test to measure moistureproofness, they tried various procedures—adding ingredients to Cellophane dope before casting, impregnating sheets in baths and coating the film.

Coating showed the most promise. Had you been a member of the research team on this job, you might have helped mix and test several hundred different coating formulae over a 10 months' period. With successful coatings in sight, a small pilot operation was set up. Then—to make sure the new Cellophane was right—doughnuts, cookies and cakes were wrapped in it and sent to market. Finally, engineers were called on to design machinery for full-scale operation.

Now everything from chewing gum to porterhouse steaks is being sold in moistureproof Cellophane. Another scientific achievement is helping change the food packaging and food buying habits of America!

Dr. Hale Church, Ph.D., Ohio State '23, reenacts discovery of moistureproof Cellophane film. Bag at far right held water for weeks; other control bags showed evaporation.

Cellophane has become the nation's symbol for modern packaging. Since 1927, continuing research has developed over fifty different types.

Cellophane is made by extruding viscose through a slit into an acid bath where it coagulates into sheets. Moistureproofing follows.

Organic Chemist M. L. Ward, Ph.D., Illinois '42, and Physical Chemist P. E. Rouse, Jr., Ph.D., Illinois '41, conducting research on the permeability of thin membranes, including Cellophane.

Officials Get Latest Attack On Dr. Frank

Pamphlet Is Sent From Washington

An unsigned attack against Dr. Frank Porter Graham turned up yesterday in the mailboxes of members of the University faculty and administration, and presumably of the Greater University trustees and members of the General assembly.

The attack, mailed from Washington, D. C., included the complete text of a speech made on the floor of the United States House of Representatives on Feb. 3 by Rep. F. Edward Hebert, Democrat from Louisiana. Hebert charged at that time that Dr. Graham was being used as a tool of Communists, and that he was loaning Communist-front organizations the name and prestige of the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Graham did not receive a copy of the letter which appeared in the mails yesterday. It was in the form of a four-page pamphlet, with bold lines proclaiming, "If you are an American, if you are a North Carolinian, if you love your country, read this: The case against Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina."

It could not be definitely ascertained yesterday just how widespread the circulation of the letters was. Paul Cheek, employe of the Chapel Hill post office, said a large number of the letters were handled in the early morning mail yesterday.

Cheek estimated at least 40 or 50 letters were sent to Chapel Hill which had to be forwarded to persons throughout the state. He said he recognized the names of state legislators and members of the Board of Trustees. One of the letters was addressed to ex-Governor R. Gregg Cherry.

The prologue to the pamphlet pointed out that the Atomic Energy commission's security board recommended that Dr. Graham not be approved for access to atomic secrets.

After the text of Hebert's speech, the pamphlet continued, "There is no evidence that Dr. Graham is a Communist. No one has charged that he is a member of the party. But it is argued and proved that he has been a dupe of Communist and Socialist revolutionary activities."

Scott Tuition Stand Is Answered By Bryant

Gov. Kerr Scott reaffirmed his stand yesterday that he would "ask and insist" that tuition rates be raised for the three units of the Greater University, but at the same time Victor Bryant, member of the Board of Trustees, pointed out that the North Carolina constitution said benefits of the University should be provided "free of expense for tuition" if possible.

Scott said he would insist on the tuition raise so state-supported schools will not be put at an advantage over church schools which do not receive state funds. The governor said the Greater University should not compete with state denominational schools.

But the state constitutional passage Bryant referred to, article 9, section 7, reads:

"The General assembly shall provide that the benefits of the University, so far as practicable, be extended to the youth of the state free of expense for tuition."

President Frank Porter Graham of the Greater University would make no comment yesterday on Scott's stand on the tuition question.

Scott said the matter "is entirely up to the Board of Trustees. The legislature," he continued, "can take no action. I will make the recommendation as stated before and it will be up to the board to act."

Expanding his remarks, Scott said, "I feel that in the light of the economic situation of state institutions, with a great demand for increased service, it is necessary at this time to provide the funds.

"There is no attitude to penalize these institutions," the governor explained. "It's just the idea that the legislature is giving a big appropriation to carry on their program and it is all under the taxpayers' expense."

Scott pointed out that tuition has not been changed in 25 years "and it should be changed now."

"Certainly the economic situation has changed considerably in a quarter of a century," the governor concluded.

In answer to Scott's tuition stand, an official who refused to be named remarked that a number of state-supported institutions throughout the country are tuition-free to in-state students. Among them he named the Universities of Kansas and Wisconsin.

Theologist Will Address Students, Townspeople

Dr. Reinhold Niebhur, author, professor at the Union Theological seminary and one of the world's outstanding theologians, will speak to students and townspeople in Hill hall tonight at 7:30.

Dr. Niebhur, who is the editor of the quarterly "Christianity and Society" and of the bi-weekly "Christianity and Crisis" will speak this morning at Duke university's chapel in Durham and will lecture tomorrow in Durham and Raleigh.

Born in Wright City, Mo., in 1892, he was educated at Elmhurst college in Illinois and Edent Theological seminary in St. Louis. He received his bachelor of divinity degree at the Yale divinity school and has been given honorary doctor of divinity degrees from Grinnell, Wesleyan, University of Pennsylvania, Amherst, Yale, Oxford, Harvard, Princeton, Glasgow university and New York university.

He has written such boks as "Does Civilization Need Religion," "Moral Man and Immoral Society," "Beyond Tragedy," "An Interpretation of Christian Ethics," and many others.

Time magazine said about Dr. Niebhur, "Reinhold Niebhur's new orthodoxy is the old-time religion put through the intellectual wringer. It is re-examination of orthodoxy for an age dominated by such trends as rationalism, liberalism, Marxism, fascism, idealism, and the idea of progress."

Past History

Dorsey Says It Seems That 'All Is Forgiven'

By Lincoln Kan

"Looks like all is forgiven, hey?" said smiling Tommy Dorsey to the students who greeted him. It was his second night's appearance at the mid-winter German dance set of 1949.

He was referring to the "late unpleasantness" of 1946 when the Order of the Grail brought suit against him for not bringing his complete band to Chapel Hill.

Dorsey said, "It was an unnecessary mix-up in which both of us got hurt. But frankly," he grinned, "by the faces I have seen at the concert and last night's dance everything is swell and is past history. It always has been with me!"

The mellow trombone artist first came to Carolina in 1935. A repeat performance was given in 1936 and in 1938 he was brought back again. A year before the boys began wearing khaki, T. D. showed up bringing the hit parade number "I'll Never Smile Again" to the Tar Heels after its initiation at the University of Georgia, during the fall of 1940.

Carolina contributed to the Dorsey popularity, when Bruce Snyder, a member of Freddie Johnson's band, was hired by T.D. to fill in the then vacant baritone saxaphone spot. Snyder was from Monroe. Dorsey said, "He was really good, I wish he had come back with us after his hitch in the Army."

"Times have changed since the days before the war," Dorsey sighed. "It used to be, a band could be identified with some number and gain prominence that way. Now, the record companies and music publishers are one jump ahead of us. A song is popular before it can be identified with any one band," he complained.

Answering the requests of the many dancers crowded around him, Dorsey said, "See what I mean about the identification? I'm going to have the boys play Marie and Song of India. Those are the two pieces of music that put us into the big time."

Dorsey remarked that he liked the Tar Heel state very much. He said he wanted to spend more time in Asheville so he could improve his golf. "As a golf player I'm a better musician."

His managers, Frank Driscoll and George Thompson, said Dorsey is constantly on the look-out for new talent. At present he is pushing two men. One is his arranger, Louey Belson, whom T. D. calls a Buddy Rich and Gene Krupa rolled into one.

Another man Dorsey is looking out for is his trumpeter Charlie Shaver who has got "one of the toughest lips for a good horn ride I ever heard."

Tables Turned

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 12—(UP)—The University of Virginia got a telegram from Dr. Nathan Van Patten, famous expert on the frozen north, cancelling his speech scheduled here tomorrow night. He was snowbound in Utah, Dr. Van Patten explained.

Naval Reserve Unit Will Meet Tomorrow

The Naval Reserve air unit will hold its regular meeting tomorrow night at 7:30 in Bingham hall, Lt. R. E. Simpson, USNR, said yesterday.

Topics to be discussed are organization, program, planning and individual training prospects.

A membership campaign to include the Durham-Chapel Hill area will be undertaken soon by the group.

'We Mean Business'

Grandmotherly Mother Leads Task Force on Comic Books

By Barron Mills

ARLINGTON, Tenn., Feb. 12—(UP)—A grandmotherly, silver-haired mother is leading a task force of nearly 6,000,000 parents to wipe out comic books which bypass the funny bone and "rely on blood-thirsty violence and scanty-clad females" for amusement.

She is Arlington's Mrs. L. W. Hughes, the national president of the Parent-Teachers association.

The fight, Mrs. Hughes said, is not a new one, but one which was begun in 1941, halted briefly because of the war, and resumed with new vigor.

"And we mean business," Mrs. Hughes said. "If the publishers won't listen to reason, perhaps they will heed their pocketbooks."

It's not the family newspaper comics that are so disturbing to the parent-teacher group, but the unfunny funnies which instead of producing guffaws are "sex horror serials."

The kindly mother explains that every month "one million dollars are taken from the pockets of America's children in exchange for graphic insanity."

For the parents who merely smile when junior planks down his dime for the "funny book," Mrs. Hughes said their hair would stand on end if they only flipped the cover.

"Frankly we were not perturbed when we first heard about the rise of 'action' comics. We imagined, as do most parents, that they were not worse than the 'funnies' in the newspapers."

Mrs. Hughes explained that the P.T.A. board is unanimous in thinking that the time is ripe to "take serious notice of the menace to our children from overstimulating motion pictures, hair raising radio programs and in particular corrupting comic books."

Of the 108 comic periodicals examined they found that at least 70 per cent of the total was "of a nature no respectable newspaper would think of accepting. We found that the bulk of the lurid publications depend for their appeal upon mayhem, murder, torture and abduction—often with a child as the victim."

FORT KNOX, Ky., Feb. 12—(UP)—The Army revealed today that the underground gold depository here was the wartime hiding place of this nation's most priceless documents.

Carter Announces Air Reserve Meet

Maj. C. C. Carter, president of the local Air Reserve association, announced yesterday that there will be a meeting of the 601st Air Force reserve composite squadron at 7:30 tomorrow at 103 Bingham hall.

According to Major Carter, the purpose of the meeting is to complete the organization of the newly-formed squadron, make duty assignments, bring the personnel records of squadron members up to date, and to discuss the reserve training program.

University Book To Be Dramatized

"Dorothea Dix, Forgotten Samaritan" by Helen E. Marshall, published by the University press, will be dramatized on the Cavalcade of America program over the NBC network on March 21, it was announced here yesterday.

According to spokesmen for the E. I. DuPont de Nemours and Co., which sponsors the program, the dramatization will be broadcast originally from 8 o'clock to 8:30, with a repeat performance from 11:30 to 12 midnight the same evening.

Dorothea Dix, for whom Dix Hill is named, has been called one of the great humanitarians of her time.

South Building Clarifies Stand On Green Forms

Students in the General college and the Commerce school whose green forms for spring quarter registration required changing have already been notified and the changes made, registration officials announced yesterday.

Contrary to a previous announcement from South building, General college and Commerce students should not check with Venable X during the readjustment period next week. Any changes these students wish to make must be made during the regular drop and add period.

However, students in the Graduate school and Arts and Sciences whose winter quarter registration was so changed that their spring quarter registration is no longer complete must make the readjustment Monday through Saturday in Venable X.

These students may see their green forms, which are on file in the registration office, beginning at 9 o'clock Monday. The readjustment period ends at 4:30 Saturday, and no changes will be accepted late.

Students in the graduate school and the College of Arts and Sciences go to their faculty advisers to have the green form change slips prepared. The change slips are then carried to the registration office where they are posted to the green forms.

Dickieson Trio To Play Tonight

The Dickieson trio from WCUNC will present the second in a series of Sunday evening concerts under the sponsorship of Graham Memorial in Hill hall tonight at 7:30.

The trio is composed of Professor George Dickieson, violin; Elizabeth Cowling, cello; and Phillip Morgan, piano. Their selections will be Trio in B Flat Major, Opus 11, by Beethoven; Trio in C Minor, Opus 101, by Brahms; and Trio by Piston.

Truman Pays Tribute To Abraham Lincoln

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12—(UP)—President Truman paid tribute to Abraham Lincoln today at an impressive ceremony at the Lincoln memorial.

The president stood gravely with his head bare, as his military aides placed a presidential wreath at the foot of the marble statute of the Civil War president.

The Morning After

Imports Prefer UNC, Six To One

By Don Maynard

With imports who know their universities best, it's Carolina's ratio, six to one. So quoth three of the fair visitors yesterday after their first big evening of TD-style dancing at the Mid-winter Germans.

Peggy Strickland, Jinx Schwartz and Judy Sanford, three "typical" imports, vehemently backed up the statements they made Friday afternoon that the University is "impressive, beautiful and wonderful."

Peggy, from Bayhead, N. J., about-towning with Bud Sawyer, Phi Gam, said one of the things that attracted her was the way Carolina men cut in all the time at the dances. She said, "It was a lot of fun, dancing with all those different boys, and it gives a girl a line on the Southern style of dancing."

Jinx, of Hazelton, Pa., sitting alongside ATO host Jimmie Burns didn't like the custom too well. "It's all right for a man to break a couple if the girl isn't enjoying her date. But when she enjoys her company, it's not such a good idea."

Jinx and Peggy disagreed on the gentlemanly manners of the Carolina male.

Said Jinx, "The men here cut in too fast. They don't give a girl the chance to say yes or no; they just take hold of her and that's it."

Peggy countered with, "Men down here are much more friendly when they cut in. They're just as much a gentleman as those up north. In fact, it seems that a Carolina boy appreciates a girl more than fellows at home."

Judy, of Chatham, N. J., sophomore and psychology major at Woman's college, is looking forward to perhaps attending the University next fall. She said, "I'm a damyankee, and proud of it."

Jinx was overwhelmed by the University buildings. "I just stood looking at the campus buildings like a visitor would stare at the skyscrapers of New York," she said.

And all three said in one voice, "I'm in no hurry to go home!"

Stroud Will Deliver First of Lectures

Dr. William D. Stroud, heart specialist of Philadelphia, Pa., and former president of the American Heart association, will deliver next week the first in a series of lectures by outstanding medical authorities to North Carolina doctors in the Goldsboro area.

The series will be one of a number being sponsored this spring by the University of North Carolina Medical School and Extension Division.

Rotary Plows Chew Into Snowed Valley

ANDERSON RANCH DAM, Ida., Feb. 12—(UP)—Rotary plows today chewed their way through the last few miles of snow clogged roads into this terrorized valley.

New Columnist

Beginning Wednesday, the Daily Tar Heel will carry a bi-weekly column by Miss Adelaide Addle, well-known counsellor on human relations.

Miss Addle's advice column will answer personal problems received from students.

The daughter of a missionary couple, Miss Addle spent her childhood in northern China. She returned to this country for her education and received a B.S. degree in social psychology in 1924 from Nevada Normal, and then went to the Fairfax institute for graduate work. Fairfax is a school which specializes in readjustment problems.

After teaching there for several years, she received a fellowship from Fairfax to study marital problems among Southern tenant farmers. Since that time she has had numerous articles and books published dealing with courtship, marriage and family life.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, where it is issued daily during the regular sessions of the University by the Colonial Press, Inc., except Mondays, examination and vacation periods, and during the official summer terms when published semi-weekly. Entered as second-class matter at the post office of Chapel Hill, N. C., under the act of March 3, 1879. Subscription price: $8.00 per year, $3.00 per quarter.

Read the Constitution, Governor

Governor Kerr Scott made a bid for favor with the religious-education forces of the state Friday night when he addressed the opening banquet of Davidson college's $2,500,000 fund-raising campaign. His play for publicity was in the form of a direct slap at the University and just as directly at the taxpayers of the state.

Scott said that he will "ask and insist" that the trustees raise tuition fees at the three branches of the state-owned University. His reason: So that the University will not compete with state denominational schools.

Actually Scott was making a claim for credit which—if any credit is to be had from such an action—is due to the state's advisory budget commission. That committee has already placed the trustees over a barrel by including the tuition raise in its recommendation budget for the University. Although it is not labeled as such, the raise is included in that the budget is allotting less state money and requiring more money from the University's sources of revenue—said sources being chiefly tuition. The budget commission did the dirty work and Kerr Scott, seeing a chance to curry favor with those who might conceivably approve the action, is now stepping in to claim the credit.

Regardles of who assumes responsibility for the maneuver which so effectively coerces the trustees into raising tuition, the action is disgraceful and reprehensible. The reason given by Scott merely compounds the disgrace.

The constitution of North Carolina in article IX, section 7, states "The Genral Assambly shall provide that the benefits of the University, so far as practicable, be extended to the youth of the state free of expense for tuition." Every citizen of the state pays taxes for the support of the University so that his children may come here with as little expense as possible. If tuition fees are raised to keep the University from competing with denominational schools such as Duke, Wake Forest and Davidson, then the taxpayers will be supporting a university from which they receive no more benefit than they receive from institutions they are not paying to support. This will defeat the whole purpose of the University.

If this happens, the state might as well make an initial endowment to the University and set it up as a self-supporting institution on the same basis as all other schools in the state. North Carolina will then become a state of schools for rich men's children, and most of the state's sons will have to go to other states to get the education which the constitution of their own state tried, and failed, to provide for them.

Dorsey Succeeded

Tommy Dorsey ended his concert in Memorial hall yesterday afternoon by cracking, "Well, I haven't been served with a summons yet, but if one shows up, I hope it summons me to come back again."

For our money, TD's welcome back anytime. He showed yesterday and Friday just what a good sport a man can be. He ribbed himself all through the concert about his legal troubles with the Order of the Grail in 1946, and he had a good laugh at his own expense while doing it.

For those not familiar with the story, the Grail sued Dorsey for $20,000 for breach of contract in '46, after he played a dance weekend for them and allegedly did not bring his full band to Chapel Hill. The case was settled out of court, with a $3,000 sugar lump going into the Grail's coffers.

Dorsey returned to Chapel Hill this weekend to win back the friendship of the student body which had been alienated away from him by the bad publicity which the Grail suit caused two years ago.

We believe he succeeded.

One Column Per Week Enough

Editor:

We used to look forward with great anticipation for Mr. Robertson's weekly column. Now we look forward with great anticipation for Mr. J. R. Cherry's daily letter in the Write Away Section. Our tastes have changed: from radical to a radical reactionary.

To preserve space, and yet give a reactionary a spot on your rag, we suggest that you employ Mr. Cherry as a columnist, restricting him, however, to one column a week.

Is Conflict Inevitable?

By Mary Tomlin

Is armed conflict between the Soviet Union and the United States inevitable? For three years people have been asking that question and trying to find an answer. It might be said to be the most important question in the world today. Every statement that the leaders of the two countries make, such as the "peace offensive" remarks, every incident that occurs, such as the Cardinal Mindszenty trial, leads us to see the question in a different light.

When Stalin talks of the possibility of the peaceful coexistence of Communist and capitalist countries, American newspapers accuse him of trying to create dissension among the western powers and break up the North Atlantic Alliance negotiations. When Cardinal Mindszenty confesses, Americans say that he was drugged or tortured, which, unfortunately, they can't prove.

The Soviet Union's expansionist tendencies seem to us to be imperialistic, and in line with the old theory of world revolution. However, we made certain in the countries which the United States liberated that the governments of those countries would be capitalistic and friendly to us. So it should surprise no one that the Russians made certain in the countries they occupied that the governments of those countries would be Communist and friendly to them.

War and social unrest can give opportunity to local communist parties, which the Soviet Union can help them use to best advantage. Communists seem to believe that the world is historically destined to go Communist, but history has fooled us before.

The Soviet Union seems to be succeeding very well in its objectives without going to war. However, a tense situation, such as exists in Berlin, should not be allowed to exist. We might be better off if we abandoned Berlin and evacuated that part of the population that wanted to leave.

Alliances and non-aggression pacts do not seem to be very good insurance for avoiding war, as the last two conflagrations should have proved. From 1945 until the present, more or less neutral nations have separated eastern from western Europe—the Scandinavian countries and Germany. But with the creation of a Western German State and the North Atlantic Alliance this will no longer be true.

The Russians have gained a propaganda victory from their "peace offensive." Perhaps the United States should call Stalin's bluff and suggest a general European peace conference. Past efforts have not been encouraging, but we must not stop negotiating, we must not stop trying to reach a basis for agreement.

Entertainment Guide

Worthy of Anticipation

By Vestal C. Taylor

The quadruple alliance of campus entertainment has announced the selection of a cast for "Beggar's Opera" with the principal roles being filled by seasoned actors of proven abilities. The inimitable Strader, as usual, has his fingers in several pies and this time is serving two masters. On stage, as the Beggar, he works with the Playmakers, while backstage he works with the Sound and Fury group, as per the agreement. Such a man!

In rehearsal only a week, the opera already gives evidence of being worthy of anticipation, not only as the first of all musical comedies, but as a fine piece of work, enjoyable to both scholar and layman alike.

A great boon to Dixie drama lovers is in the offing when representatives from college and community theatre groups in 15 southeastern states meet here the first week in March to form the Southeastern Theatres Association.

The Association is to become the clearing-house for the exchange of professional personnel, ideas, scripts and technical information. It will also provide leadership for the growth of professional and semi-professional theatres in the area.

Representatives from these groups met just a year ago and selected a planning committee, with our own Sam Selden as chairman, to lay the foundation for the organization.

Highlighting the meeting will be a presentation of "The Little Foxes" by the Playmakers. This drama will be remembered as a Broadway production, as a movie, and will soon be presented as an opera.

The activities of the new Association will bear watching and supporting. Drama in Dixie can use a shot in the arm.

* * *

Another group of dramatists will be with us later in March, the 23rd, 24th, 25th and 26th, when the Carolina Drama Association composed of 40 member groups from state high schools, colleges and communities meet here to hold their annual spring drama festival.

Notes On Some Senators

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Shades of the old triple A and payment for cotton you didn't grow! Now comes Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, with a bill to reimburse mine owners for gold they didn't mine.

The venerable Pat, as smiling and pleasant a gent as you'd ever meet, has introduced a thing numbered S.45, headed as follows:

"A bill for the relief of the owners and operators of certain gold mines which were closed, or the operations of which were curtailed, by War Production Board limitation order L-208."

Reduced to simple terms, it means that mine owners who were forced to curtail operations during the war by WPB edict could file claims against the Government — meaning you, and me, and the baby—for losses due to not mining gold while the order was in effect.

Naturally my heart bleeds for all gold mine owners, wherever they may be languishing among their nuggets, but it would seem that this thing might be setting a dubious precedent.

For instance, we might become a bit chilly if the government started paying for coal that isn't mined or for wool that is left on the sheep. There seems to be a definite danger that the thing would get out of hand.

Of course there are redeeming features. I have squirmed through some movies lately I would have been glad to have paid Hollywood not to make, and I have seen some night-club "entertainers" I would willingly have paid not to "entertain." But I do not suppose we can safely make exceptions.

The McCarran measure, which has prompted Capitol wags to nifty: "Thar's gold in them there bills" nevertheless will receive sympathetic attention when it comes up in committee, no matter what happens to it later.

It comes up before the Senate Judiciary committee. The chairman is Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada.

Refreshing frankness in political life: A postmistress out in Iowa sent the following billet-doux to her senator, the Hon. Guy Gillette:

"I am enclosing a check for $25 as my contribution to your campaign. I regret I couldn't give more.

"P.S.—Naturally I shall expect something in return."

* * *

The United States Senate has been called the "most exclusive gentleman's club in the world." It ain't exclusive to gentlemen no more, but the gentlemen seem to have demonstrated they are gentlemen.

The official diagram of the 81st Congress has just been issued. And Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith, of Maine, our only woman senator, has seat No. 1.

* * *

I am very glad the Senate diagram is out.

It's getting harder and harder to tell the senators without a program.

I am almost sure I would be able to tell Mrs. Smith without the program, even in the failing light of the long sessions we have been having these nights. But there are others I can't identify on sight.

No. 86 in the new seating is Senator Glen Taylor, of Idaho, who would have been Vice President if the country had gone for Wallace. But I don't want to tell him at all.

* * *

I think it says here in my notes that "Little seals don't swim naturally; they have to be taught by their old ladies," but I can't be certain. I had to take the notes in the dark.

A hearing on public lands was being held by the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs committee when Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney ordered the lights extinguished.

It turned out that Assistant Secretary of the Interior William E. Warne had a magic lantern and wished to show us some slides of Alaska.

I wish I could make out these notes. There's something else that little seals do, or don't do, but I'm blest if I can decipher it.

* * *

Attempting flowery sarcasm on Senate Minority Leader Kenneth Wherry, the erudite Senator Charles W. Tobey, of New Hampshire, held forth as follows:

"Mr. President, I have listened to the remarks of my friend, the distinguished senator from Nebraska, with great interest. To me, after listening for some time, I think they form a perfect illustration of Shakespeare's reference to 'linked sweetness long drawn out'."

Mr. Tobey looked around, very pleased with his classical allusion. But he had scarcely sat down when James E. Murphy, the official reporter, sidled over to him and whispered:

"That wasn't Shakespeare, Senator. It was Milton."

Tobey graciously consented to have the correction made in the Congressional Record.

Gov. Dewey spoke at a Lincoln Day dinner here on Tuesday, although it won't be Lincoln's birthday until Saturday. The Governor keeps getting ahead of himself.

* * *

A gentleman of my acquaintance, who piquantly signs himself "Mother of six," writes:

"Dear Sir: I have been looking for some laudatory comment at your hands concerning the spirited defense of our lives and liberties which the administrative branch of our government is conducting.

"As you may have noted there is an outburst of activity against the Nazis. Axis Sally is on trial, the pianist Gieseking has been driven from our shores and they have flown Iin so that he can be given a some Axis Herman from Berpublic trial.

"It is now plain that we are to be protected from Hitler and his kind. I had become a little confused by some of the testimony before the Un-American Activities Committee and those grand jury indictments. It had seemed that we were in some danger from the Communists.

"That's old stuff and probably never did have any potency. Hitler is the man who menaces us. Back of him is the Kaiser. Keep these two monsters at bay and we will continue to enjoy the clean air of liberty.

"So I wish you would give a deserved round of applause to those who are responsible for this big Nazi round-up and a rebuke to all who want to waste time on people who merely steal government secrets and hand them over to the Russians.

"Let us hope this Communist nonsense will be swamped by the publicity about the Axis menace. Thus we will know where the true danger is."

Editor:

There are numbers of people around school here who have complete file on every time their name has appeared in the [Daily] Tar Heel, who speak loud and long about their "work" [in] dent government, and who will have an imposing list [of] in to the "Yack" when they graduate. If some of the[m] would drop into the student government office most an[y] noon, however, they would probably see a quiet, soft-spoken [stu]dent there who they have probably never heard of. Yet, thi[s] dent, Ann Sawyer, a junior from Charlotte, does more real for student government in a day than do most of the bra[g]-a month.

Ann was offered a job as secretary in the office at a fair[ly] salary. She refused to accept the job but instead offered services to keep the files straight, take dictation, do all [the] ing, and take care of numerous other odds and ends a[round] dent Government office. Ann spends an average of a hours a day at the office efficiently doing the work that chosen as her contribution to a better student government at Carolina.

Recently, Ann was presented with the chance of a [trip] to the Legislature. Oddly enough she refused, because she have time." She no doubt would have made a capable [rep]resentative she would have received publicity, gotten her name in the and so forth, but Ann figured she could do more for student government in her unsung capacity as secretary than any place.

If more students would display a similar zeal for work [and] of for publicity, to be useful instead of ornamental, then [the] hazard, lackadaisical student government would be a thing of the past.

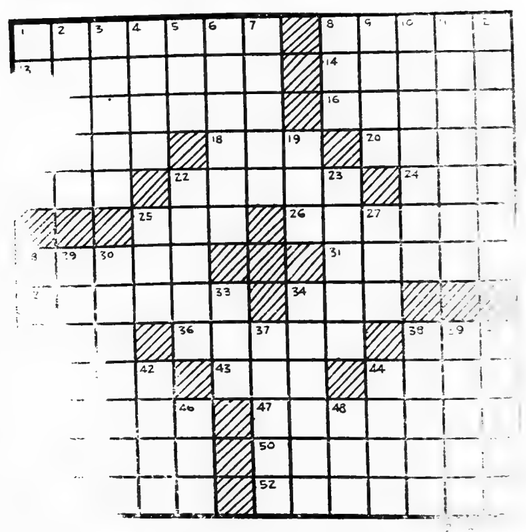
Not Just At Carolina

Parking Problems Become Issues

(Reprinted from the NSA News, official publication of the National Students Association.)



This year the perennial parking problem has become a major campus issue. But common intercollegiate interest ends at that point, as the variety of difficulties vary on each campus.

In a recent editorial the Arizona Wildcat, expressing [col]lectional feelings toward college boards, questions its regents: "Why should a group of men, remote from college life, have the power to override or ignore the thought-out proposals of faculty and student governments?" The Wildcat felt the appointment of an additional policeman insufficient to the pedestrian hazard of students ripping past "Old Main" at 30 miles per hour between classes.

Exhorting its students to "go down to City Hall and talk to traffic officials there, the staid Harvard Crimson pleaded the cause of the harried students who "have been forced to shift their vehicles from one spot to another, and have usually returned up with some sort of summons for their troubles."

Students at Loyola (California) favored by a parking lot of their own nevertheless find the Loyolan warning of "tin cans thrown carelessly around the ground" and "parked cars obscuring the exits." The paper foresees threatened blowouts and bashed fenders resulting from this condition.

Mid-Winter German Parties Prevail During Dorsey Events

The gala weekend of mid-winter Germans ended last night with a formal dance in Woollen gymnasium featuring the music of Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra.

With the party spirit prevailing over the campus, social activities were by no means limited to the Friday and Saturday night dances and the two-hour concert by Dorsey in Memorial hall yesterday. Fraternities added to the gaiety of the weekend with parties, dinners, and all types of informal entertainments.

One of the features of the weekend was a breakfast given after the Friday night dance in the Chi Phi house. Other Chi Phi entertainment consisted of an informal party at Watts grill Saturday night.

Watts grill was the scene of another party given Friday afternoon by the Delta Kappa Epsilon's, who celebrated the weekend as well with a party Saturday night at the Mercury club. Pledge members furnished entertainment for the event which included a skit and group singing.

Alpha Gams Hold Rose Banquet; Sally Osborne Is Model Pledge

Gamma Epsilon of Alpha Gamma Delta held their traditional Formal Rose banquet in the private dining room of the Carolina inn Wednesday evening. The banquet is held annually in honor of the new initiates and yearly awards are made at this time.

Sally Osborne from Jacksonville, Ill., was selected as the model pledge of the year. Eleanor de Grange, Winchester, Va., received the pledge scholarship award. The most active award for the pledge class was given to Nancy Curtis from Roanoke, Va., with the second place award given to Kathryn Altizer, Christiansburg, Va.

The most active award given to a member of the sorority was presented to Emily Baker from Asheville with second place given to Ann Carlton from Atlanta, Ga.

Other newly honored members present were Jo Ann Armstrong, Winchester, Va.; Patricia Chandler, Albany, Ga.; Barbara Crawford, Raleigh; Bayra Mitchell, Woodbury, N. J.; Eleanor Hope Newell, Orlando, Fla.; Marion Powers, Rutherfordton; Lucille Rieley, Washington, D. C.; Mary Elizabeth St. John, Pennlyn, Pa.; Sandra Sisk, Asheville; Ellen Smith, Barnesville, Ga.; Barbara Thomas, Winston-Salem; and Allene Warren, Dunn.

The toasts were given by Beckie Holton, Belmont; Nancy Curtis, Roanoke, Va.; Alice Middleton, Sumter, S. C.; Sally Jackson, Demopolis, Ala.; Jean Snyder, Hagerstown, Md.; and Ruth McCann, Asheville. Lucille Arnott from Persia, Tenn., sang the "Rose Song" and the banquet ended with the singing of "Reverie."

Coed Sympathy Ends In Goodwill Advice To Local Importers

No matter how much coeds may vent their wrath against imports on big weekends, they still have a warm spot of sympathy left in their hearts for the girls back home. So purely out of this sympathy, the society staff offers the following suggestions to the University importers:

Make up your minds what your plans are and write the girl accordingly.

If said date intends to show Chapelina to the girl, tell her to bring sox and saddles so she won't take up infirmary space with a set of broken ankles and aching feet.

If there are to be dances and said date has two sets of bids, tell her to bring TWO formals.

If said date does not like to dance, intends to brave only one night of the mad rush, and has vague ideas about a cabin party, tell her to tuck away a pair of jeans and a warm, woolen shirt —and a last-minute must: a kerchief!

The University of North Carolina is the oldest state university in the United States to admit a student, even though the University of Georgia's charter was given at an earlier date.

Professional Commerce Group, Delta Sigma Pi, Pledges 26

Delta Sigma Pi, professional commerce fraternity, held its pledging ceremony recently and pledged the following men into the chapter:

Ed Bean, East Bend; Allen Thompson, Rocky Mount; Frank Boseman, Rocky Mount; Bill Clodfetter, Winston-Salem; Maurice Talbot, Fayetteville; Sam Wright, Arden; Tommy Smathess, Canton; Gilbert Snyder, Thomasville; Wilbur Harris, Elizabeth City; Buck Rosemond, Chapel Hill;

C. G. Williams, Henderson; Arlie Beale, Greensboro; Fred Adair, Washington; Dwight Moody, Henderson; Gus Karres, Charlotte; Joe Putnam, Cherryville; Hugh McAver, Gastonia; Louie Linberry, Asheville; Eugene Carpenter, Greensboro; Ed Tenny, Chapel Hill; C. M. Adams, Statesville; Don Hames, Cliffside; Jeff Bulluck, Rocky Mount; Ed Duncan, Sparta; Gibbon McNeely, Waxhaw, and Clyde Fussell, Teachey.

Sorority Initiations Continue As Chi O Holds Ceremony for 18

The seasonal initiations continued last week when 18 Chi Omega pledges became active members in formal ceremonies Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons.

Newly initiated members are Armecia Eure, Raleigh; June Fleenor, Charlotte; Helen Eppes, Henderson; Anne Lewallen, Winston-Salem; Estelle Suddreth, Lenoir; Mary Brown Hill, Wilmington; Carolyn Van Sant, Hinton, W. Va.; Nell Lee Greening, Jacksonville, Fla.; and Francis Powe, Durham.

Others are Musette Brown, Scotland Neck; Sara Francis Wakefield, Palm Beach, Fla.; Sara Barbee, Raleigh; Betty Heath, Chapel Hill; Jean Frances Carraher, Clearwater, Fla.; Betsy Ross, Jacksonville, Fla.; Polly Rudolph, Clarksville, Tenn.; Barbara Austin, Rome, Ga.; and Mary Louise Rice, Ashland, Ky.

Among the sorority-fraternity parties last week were the Pi Phi party for the Phi Delta's Monday night and the Sig Chi party for the Tri Delts Thursday night.

Tomorrow night the Pi Phi's will give a gala circus party for the Alpha Tau Omega's. The proverbial fat lady, fortune teller, trained horse, and side shows will appear in the sorority's house. Betsy Tom Lawrence will act as the circus master.

The Alpha Gamma Delta's entertained the Lambda Chi's at a party Tuesday night, featuring a series of skits.

The Alpha Delta Pi's will honor the executive council of the Duke ADPi chapter at a dinner tomorrow night in their house.

The usual Sunday night open houses will be continued tonight when the Pi Beta Phi's will serve supper from 5:30 until 6:15 and the ADPi's will have open house from 7 until 8 o'clock. The Alpha Gam open house will be at 6 o'clock.

Faculty Newcomers Entertained at Tea

Mrs. English Bagby will entertain at tea for the Faculty Newcomers club Tuesday at 4 o'clock at her home in Westwood.

Mrs. Bagby is one of the seven sponsors of the club this year. Other sponsors are Mrs. Frank Graham, Mrs. Robert House, Mrs. R. J. M. Hobbs, Mrs. M. J. Rosenau, Mrs. Albert Coates and Mrs. John Wright.

Those eligible for club membership are full-time women faculty members, or wives of full-time faculty members who lived in Chapel Hill not more than three years.

Minister Burns 'Trashy' Novel

NATCHITOCHES, La., Feb. 12.—(UP)—The Rev. C. N. Green, clutching a bible in one hand and shouting for "sinners to repent," burned the novel "The Midsummer Fires" in the public square today "to try to impress sinners and Christians alike."

Among the sorority-fraternity entertainment given during the week-end was a Sigma Chi buffet supper-party Thursday night in the fraternity house. A quintet composed of janitors for "C" dormitory entertained the group.

Another dinner party was an exchange affair between the Chi Psi's and the Phi Delta Theta's Thursday night.

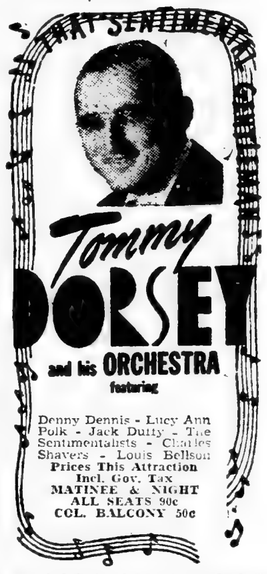
Dr. R. P. Calhoun, professor of personnel administration, spoke to the combined fraternities of Chi Phi and Phi Delta Theta. His topic was "How to Get a Job After College."

The Chi Phi pledge class has started work on its pledge project, which is building a patio to cover the back yard of the fraternity house. Plans for the patio were drawn up by R. S. Sinun and Bros., a New York architectural firm.

Recently pinned Chi Phi's are: C. B. Mendenhall to Tri Delt June Crockett and Ken Archer to Pi Phi Jane Dembo. ADPi Audrey Donnan is now wearing the Chi Phi pin of Dale Evarts.

Town Men's Group Holds Party at TV

The Town Men's association of Chapel Hill gave its first party of the quarter at Terrace View last Friday night when the music was furnished by the proverbial juke box, and additional entertainment given by magician Harry Pendergraft.



Ship Hoyle was the object of the magician's trick and was left with a necktie in many ties, and his shirt torn off his back.

Alex Sessions was chairman of the planning committee, which was composed of Ralph Hebb and John Taylor.

WORK ON THE MOREHEAD PLANETARIUM and art gallery has gone ahead by leaps and bounds during the last few months and officials close to the project say that the building will probably be open for business before commencement this year. The picture shows the exterior of the building as it appeared several months ago. Work on the structure is now practically complete. Interior decorators are busily completing work on the rotunda and the dome of the planetarium is being prepared for installation of the actual planetarium instrument which is now stored in Woollen gymnasium.

Planetarium Nears Finish

(Ed. note: This is the first in a series of articles on the Morehead planetarium and art gallery. The second article which will begin a description of the interior of the building, will appear in tomorrow morning's Daily Tar Heel.)

By Herb Nachman

One sunny September morning in Chapel Hill, a small crew of workmen geared massive tractors and bulldozers to the task of clearing the site for the proposed $1,600,000 Morehead planetarium, the only project of its type ever to be undertaken by an American university.

That was in 1947. Now, less than a year and a half later, the Morehead planetarium and art gallery is entering the homestretch in its construction.

To Be Completed By End of May

The history of the planetarium dates even farther back than when work began in 1947. It all started in February, 1946, nearly three years ago, when the Daily Tar Heel carried a headline which read, "UNC Gets $1,000,000 Grant for Planetarium."

Many students read the headline that morning and shrugged it off. "Who is this guy Morehead?" many of them asked.

John Motley Morehead of Rye, N. Y., is an internationally-known engineer, industrialist, scientist and philanthropist. He is the scion of North Carolina's famous family of builders, a former minister to Sweden and an ex-president of the University Alumni association.

The planetarium is not the first gift Morehead has given the University. The Morehead-Patterson bell tower is half John Motley Morehead's. But his pet project, the planetarium and art gallery, is a gift that will always be held in memory of the name "Morehead." The gift is unique in that it will be the only planetarium in the United States completely owned and operated by a university.

The building was designed by Eggers and Higgins, a New York architectual firm. This same firm designed such famous American buildings as the Jefferson memorial and the Mellon art gallery in Washington.

Work on the project officially got underway with the laying of the cornerstone at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, Nov. 29, 1947. There were many dignitaries and many speeches.

Since that time, students have watched the building pushed through its various stages of growth, apparently unhampered by workmen who seem to take

Noted Theologian

'Faith, Penitence Way to God', Says Niebhur in Sunday Talk

"Faith and Penitence as Our Way to Knowledge of God," was the subject of the address of Dr. Reinhold Niebhur, outstanding theologian and author, Sunday night in Memorial hall.

"Everybody lives by some kind of faith," Dr. Niebhur said. "Few people say that life has a negative meaning and makes no sense at all. But the trouble with most of us is that we make sense too simply."

Dr. Niebhur pointed out the various kinds of religions which explain life in too simple terms. Among the religions that explain life too simply, he classified the frankly idolatrous, the naturalistic, and the idealistic.

The idolatrous religions he dismissed as being a worship of family, nation, or business instead of a God; the naturalistic religion he showed as denying the uniqueness of man's spirit; and the idealistic religion he demonstrated as an attempt to separate the mind from the body.

The real religion of modern man, which has defeated Christianity, is a belief that history makes sense out of life, he said. "History solves many questions," Dr. Niebhur declared, "but not the question of human existence."

Introduced to the audience by Dr. Frank Graham, Dr. Niebhur said he was convinced that the University president is "one of the great contemporary Americans." Following the burst of applause at his statement, Dr. Niebhur declared he was "glad to see a prophet is not without honor in his own country."

Martin Deplores Blast At Graham

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

RALEIGH, Feb. 14—(UP)—The North Carolina house of representatives tonight heard Rep. L. A. Martin, of Davidson County, denounce an attack sent through the mails against Dr. Frank Porter Graham, president of the greater University.

Rep. Martin rose to a point of personal priviledge to "protest" that he had received an unsigned letter "designed as a direct slap and stab in the back against Dr. Frank Graham."

He was speaking of a letter received Saturday by members of the University administration, the General Assembly, the board of trustees and other personnages in the state. The letter attacked Graham as a dupe of Communist and socialist forces and contained the text of attack on Graham delivered in Congress by Rep. F. Edwards Hebert, Democrat from La.

Martin continued, "it is conceivable that men in low places might address such a letter in an anonymous fashion to the General Assembly, but it is almost inconceivable that any man in any high position or place in Washington should make such an anonymous attack upon the highest-toned, purest Christian gentleman in the state of North Carolina.

"There may be some members of this General Assembly who do not agree with me." Martin added, "but I don't think there is a person in this hall who will feel that this is a fair way or an honorable way of stabbing at the president of the University."

SDA to Hold Meet Tonight

Students for Democratic action will meet tonight at 7:30 in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial to discuss further conference plans, and to set some date this quarter for an SDA social meeting.

For the benefit of all visitors, Charlie Sellers will be on hand to explain the activities and policies of SDA. All those who wish to join will be integrated immediately into current SDA activities.

It is imperative that all committee chairmen be present, officers announced.

Retreat Leaders To Hold Meeting

Conference committee chairmen and resource and student leaders for the various commissions of the YW-YMCA retreat will meet in the library of the Y building tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

The purpose of the meeting is to inform all leaders of the function of each of the mechanical aspects of the conference.

Treasury Worker To Aid Taxpayers

A representative of the Internal Revenue service will be in the basement of the Chapel Hill post office building on Feb. 22, 23, 24 from 8:30 in the morning until 4:30 in the afternoon to assist taxpayers in filing their 1948 income tax returns.

Eaton to Talk At Conference On March 4-5

Theatre Group To Hold Meet

Walter Prichard Eaton, prominent theater critic, historian and playwright and at present visiting lecturer in the dramatic art department, will deliver the main address "Regional Theater, Its Opportunities and Responsibilities," at the Southeastern Theater Meeting to be held in Chapel Hill March 4 and 5.

Samuel Selden, Playmaker head and chairman of the committe on organization of the group, made this announcement yesterday, and released the schedule of events for the two-day conference of theater workers in the Southeast.

Representatives from ten states will be on hand: Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, and West Virginia.

The purpose of the Southeastern conference is, according to a plan drawn up by the committee on organization for approval by the membership, "to promote, through cooperative means, a more active theatre of high standards in the Southeastern region." Membership in the Conference will be open to groups and individuals of any race, and will be either organizational or individual.

The conference hopes to be able to offer a number of services to its members in an effort to coordinate the efforts of theatre teachers and workers in the development of dramatic programs in this area, and to encourage regional plays and playwriting.

A quarterly bulletin is part of the plan. Lists of directors, technical experts and business and promotional experts will be available for advice and special help. lists of speakers will be circulated, information on new and old plays and information on scholarships and prizes will be released.

Dorm Residents Must Sign Today

All students who expect to retain their room assignments for the spring quarter must sign with their respective dormitory managers before February 15, James E. Wadsworth, housing officer, said yesterday.

Any student who fails to sign, Wadsworth added, will lose his room assignment since there are many students on the waiting list for dormitory rooms.

Phi Group to Air Views Tonight On Sale of Campus Publications

Voluntary subscriptions to replace compulsory fees for campus publications will be proposed for consideration at the Philanthropic assembly meeting at 7:30 tonight in Phi Hall, New East.

Proponents of the resolution, which states that "all campus publications be financed by subscriptions," claim that the caliber of student periodicals will improve if the staffs are required to "sell" their work.

Tom Wharton, co-editor of Tarnation; Editor Ed Joyner, Managing Editor Chuck Hauser, News Editor Sally Woodhull, and Business Manager T. E. Holden of the Daily Tar Heel; Bill Duncan, editor of the Yackety Yack; and members of the Publications board have been invited to present their opinions at tonight's discussion.

Jonathan Marshall, who in a recent article in The Daily Tar Heel favored voluntary subscriptions, has been asked to lead proponents of the measure.

Debaters Win Four of Five In 3-Day Trip

Will Meet Duke Tomorrow Night

The varsity debate team of Herbert Yates and Dave Pittman, Herbert Mitchell and Paul Roth returned triumphant from a tour of Maryland, Washington, D. C. and Virginia over the weekend, winning four out of five decisional debates, Debate council President Earl Fitzgerald reported yesterday.

The negative duo composed of Mitchell and Roth, won over the midshipmen of Annapolis Thursday night, while the affirmative team of Pittman and Yates lost on a split decision, 2-1. This is a correction of an earlier report which had both University teams losing the Annapolis meet.

Fitzgerald said in praising the two teams, "Carolina can justly be proud of its varsity debaters. "They have done an exceptional job; a real credit to the University."

Following the Annapolis meet, the teams then moved on to the American university in the Capitol city, where the affirmatives took another decision. The negative team was not entered in that debate.

On Saturday, both teams won over the Colonials of William and Mary, thus closing their second northward swing of the season with a record of four wins and one loss.

Last fall, the teams made a northern tour through Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York and Boston, winning four of six debates at that time.

The debaters will meet Duke in Durham tomorrow and the university of Georgia here Thursday night. Friday will find the Varsity squad, accompanied by the J. V. and freshman teams, debating at Elon.

Marriage Series To End Tonight

The last in a series of discussions on "Christian Courtship and Marriage" will be held by the Canterbury club at 6 o'clock tonight in the parish house of the Episcopal church. Lay members of the parish will lead the discussion.

Bi-Weekly Column Starts Tomorrow

Starting tomorrow, Adelaide Addle, well known human relations counsellor, will conduct a column in this paper twice weekly. Miss Addle will welcome all letters or questions from students having problems that they wish help with.

Candidate Holds Legislature Post

Ted Leonard, rising junior from Greensboro, will seek the vice-presidency of the student body on the University party ticket in the spring elections, UP officials announced yesterday.

The candidate entered school in the fall of 1947 from Greensboro high school where he was president of his senior class and member of the Student council.

After entering the University, he served as secretary-treasurer of his freshman class and was secretary of Nash hall. He is a member of Sigma Chi fraternity.

At present, Leonard is a member of the Student legislature and is chairman of the Elections committee of the assembly. He was a member of the freshman Orientation committee last fall.

Leonard's nomination by the UP is the first vice-presidential nomination to be announced for the coming spring elections. Parties are rapidly filling out their slates and party officials hint that nominations for the three student body executive posts, those of president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer will probably be completed sometime this

TED LEONARD, sophomore from Greensboro, will run for student body vice-president as a nominee of the University party. Leonard's nomination is the first to be announced for the vice-presidential post by the three campus political parties.

Oklahoma Negro To Be Accepted By University

NORMAN, Okla., Feb. 14—The University of Oklahoma prepared today to accept its third Negro student, Mrs. Mauderie Hancock-Wilson of Oklahoma City.

Mrs. Hancock-Wilson, second Negro to be accepted in a week, will enter the graduate school of sociology. She will be segregated on the same basis as any other Negro attending the university, the board of regents announced.

Approval of Mrs. Hancock-Wilson's application of enrollment came some three and half months after submittal. The regents said that three months was adequate for Langston university, a Negro school, to set up a graduate school in sociology. Therefore it was time that she was admitted, they added.

Mrs. Orpherita Daniels, Oklahoma City Negro, proceeded Mrs. Hancock-Wilson late last week, while G. W. McLaurin was the first to be accepted at the university.

Y Plans 20-Car Motorcade For Drive to 1949 Retreat

Approximately 20 cars will leave Chapel Hill Friday afternoon and Saturday morning for a five and one-half hour drive through western North Carolina to Montreat, scene of the 1949 Y retreat.

Mina Lamarr, chairman of transportation for the conference, yesterday urged all persons who registered for the retreat to notify the YWCA office of the time they will be able to leave Chapel Hill.

"It is imperative that this be done by Wednesday afternoon in order that a transportation schedule may be arranged," she said.

The retreat, held annually by the YW-YMCA, will get underway at 8:15 Friday night with an address by Howard Wilkinson, pastor of the Haywood Methodist church of Asheville. Wilkinson, one of two main speakers for the conference, will talk on "Knowing Our World."

A talk by Dr. George Heaton on "Knowing Our Faith" will follow a worship program in Gaither chapel Saturday morning. Dr. Heaton, co-leader with Wilkinson, is minister of the Myers Park Baptist church of Charlotte and is regarded as a pioneer and authority in the field of religious education.

Recreation for the retreat will include a party Friday night, a trip to Mt. Mitchell Saturday afternoon, a banquet and square dance Saturday night, and a sunrise hike to Lookout mountain Sunday morning.

Students will leave Montreat for Chapel Hill after lunch Sunday.

NCAFCW Meets Here Saturday

The Women's Athletic association was hostess Saturday for the annual meeting of North Carolina Athletic Federation of College Women.

Attended by 50 delegates from 10 colleges, the all-day meeting featured talks, discussion groups and movies of the Sugar bowl game.

Miss Ellen Griffin, executive secretary of the National Athletic Federation of College Women, spoke to the delegates about plans for the national meeting.

The program also included discussion groups on finances, securing interest in small colleges and clubs and intramurals.

Randy Hudson, president of the organization, presided over the meeting, attended by representatives from Women's College, Carolina, Duke, Saint Mary's Meredith, ECTC, Guilford, Wake Forest and Montreat.

On Fraternity Discrimination

(From the Rensselaer Polytechnic as reprinted in the Georgia Tech Technique.)

The National Interfraternity Conference held its annual undergraduate convention in New York during the Thanksgiving Vacation. Elsewhere in this issue are the accomplishments of this convention.

Perhaps the most significant topic discussed at the convention was racial and religious discrimination in fraternities and we would like to discuss the situation in this editorial. When we mention fraternities, sororities are also implied.

Many national fraternity constitutions contain clauses which exclude members of different races and religions. The biggest question centers around the exclusion of Negroes from all-white fraternities and lesser ones concern exclusion of members of different religious groups.

A fraternity is mainly a social organization whose members form a homogeneous group whose closeness of contact is exceeded only by the family group. Although a family cannot choose the larger portion of its members, fraternity men have the inherent right and privilege to choose their associates.

It is this privilege of choosing one's companions that advocates for the removal of discriminatory bans present as their basis. They argue that if, for example, members of a chapter of an all white fraternity wish to initiate a Negro, they should be allowed to do so. Naturally, a presupposition of this argument is the trend of thinking today which is heading towards an all encompassing civil rights and social democracy program.

It is therefore believed that all the discriminatory bans should be removed from all national fraternity constitutions and that each individual chapter of a national be allowed to decide for itself whom to admit.

There are, however, other facets to the question. Status quo advocates point out that such a policy would in all likelihood spell the end of the national structure of fraternities. This is illustrated by assuming that a northern chapter of a fraternity initiated a Negro. Some Southern chapters of this fraternity would either withdraw from the national, alienate itself from the offending chapter, or not recognize the Negro as a fraternity brother. Such actions would tend to throw the national fraternity into chaos.

Status quo advocates (many of whom idealistically uphold the social rights principle) cite the value of a national fraternity organization in promoting comprehensive spirit of comradeship and in providing necessary funds and nonmonetary aid in the founding and continuance of its member chapters.

Many of the status quo advocates lament the prevalent discriminatory thinking, but feel that it must be accepted. Consequences of it are so far fetched that in the example mention above the Southern chapters could be "discriminated" against to the extent that many persons would actually refuse to enter the chapter house. Thus, the principle that legislation alone cannot change social conditions and thinking is illustrated.

Advocates of non-discriminatory fraternities answer some of these arguments. They acknowledge the usefulness of national fraternities, but believe that they are not indispensible for the flourishment of fraternities. Although, it is convenient to have a national, the members of an individual chapter develop closer friendships among themselves and with other men on their own campus than they do with members of their fraternity in other chapters.

It is also felt that the trend of thinking today is inexorably heading towards civil rights and social democracy for all races and religions. The facts that legislation in itself will not solve the problem and that certain individuals and even some groups would be discriminated against if fraternity constitutions were liberalized are recognized. It is an accepted fact that all of the people cannot be satisfied but it is believed that the large majority of public opinion favors non-discriminatory fraternity constitutions. Thus, it is held, at the present time there is a sufficiently large majority favoring the removal of discriminatory bans from national fraternity constitutions to make such action feasible and mandatory.

This column believes that the basic principles of civil rights and social democracy for all races and religions and freedom of choice are important enough to overcome the valid objections offered by status quo advocates.

Republicans Try Glamor?

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Republican members of Congress are giving serious consideration to a proposal that a high-powered publicity man be hired to glamorize themselves and party.

They are beset with increasing fears that the voters have come to regard them as drab fellows, without any of "that there." They want to be alluring.

The proposal is that some recognized expert on glamorizing be brought to Washington and given reasonably carte blanche on his operations. The idea is that he start the campaign in the House of Representatives and later move on to the Senate if the thing seems to be producing results.

Although they propose to give him carte blanche they don't want him glamorizing senators at the expense of the lowlier representatives. They feel that would be putting the carte before the blanche.

The idea seems to have merit because—to put it frankly—there are many G. O. P. congressmen who are somewhat less than fascinating. And, since the election, they have added lugubriousness to their drabness.

It might prove quite a chore to build them up as bewitching circes, but tougher things have been accomplished. There was a fellow around here a couple of years ago who glamorized potatoes by parading a luscious young doll as the "potato queen."

I don't know just how a drumbeater would go about glamorizing, let us say, Representative Taber of New York. While a sober, industrious legislator, Mr. Taber could hardly be described as enticing.

I bow to no man in my admiration for Representative Clarence Brown, of Ohio, the portly statesman who tried to get the Presidential nomination for Senator Taft. But I could never bring myself to call Mr. Brown seductive.

I revere Representative Runt Bishop, of Illinois, but I have never heard anyone describe him as bewitching. The same goes for minority leader Joe Martin, although he must have something, because he keeps getting proposals of marriage.

Naturally I want to see our splendid G. O. P. legislators made attractive to the voters, if not to each other, but the process of achieving allure is a little out of my line. However, when I wish advice on any subject I go to an authority, so I took this issue to Miss Reid.

I have it on fairly reliable authority that the dizzy damsel uses up the equivalent of twenty hogshead a year, in toenail paint alone. Unexpected visitors to our ratpit have been captivated by the spectacle of her lacquering a tootsie while checking the spelling of U (So) Nyun, the Burmese Ambassador in the Congressional directory.

"I know one build-up stunt that has always proved surefire," said Miss Reid. "Employ a glamor decoy. We could photograph these Republicans shaking hands with a prominent Democrat."

Remembering what was accomplished in the case of Miami Beach, I asked what about having them pose with bathing beauties. Miss Reid reminded me we have been having an unusual cold spell lately.

"But" she added, "I have an idea, although it might require more traveling than they have time for. They could get glamor publicity by chasing Rita Hayworth."

Who Belongs to N. S. A.?

Not Just A Clique

(A meeting of the Virginia-Carolina Region of the National Students Association is scheduled to take place in Chapel Hill this coming weekend. Since most students at Carolina do not know what the National Students Association is, and since almost no students here realize that they are members of the N. S. A., the Daily Tar Heel is reprinting the following statement from the N.S.A. News, official publication of the National Students Association.)

From time to time we hear a student comment, "Someone in my dorm belongs to that NSA" or, "A boy in my French class is a member of the National Student Association."

These remarks give evidence of a prevalent misconception concerning the membership of NSA; a misconception that the National Student Association is an organization of small branches or chapters on campuses and that only a select few really "belong."

On a campus where the student government or student body has ratified the NSA Constitution and the membership dues have been paid all the students are members of the Association and share equally the opportunity to use the Purchase Card system, make application for foreign student tours, and participate in the other NSA initiated programs.

Of course, in an organization of such large membership a smaller functional unit on each campus is necessary. The functional unit of NSA is the student government; however, in most cases the student government finds it necessary to set up a committee whose task is to familiarize students with NSA activity and to insure wide participation in programs.

This NSA committee should not be permitted to become a small clique of individuals who try to be the sole participants in all NSA projects. Rather the committee should constantly work to bring the whole campus NSA—the entire student body—into the activities of the Association.

The widest possible campus participation in NSA is necessary if the broad purposes of the Association are to be achieved; for only when the students of the colleges are really aware of belonging to NSA and eager to exercise the rights and responsibilities of membership will there begin to develop a strong spirit of community among the students of the United States.

Fiery End in View for Planet?

Editor:

Whether you know it or not, God has prophesied (in His scriptures, naturally) that a fiery end would occur to this planet. "All the elements melting in fervent heat" (St. Peter).

Most everyone agrees that unless the social lag catches up with our scientific advance, that doomsday will come anyhow, via atomic disintegration.

All right then, why not turn from your sins to the Lord Jesus Christ and be saved from this and other wrath to come (before the end).

That such a voice should cry in Chapel Hill, that town eminently well-known for its ministers of sin and not the Gospel, does seem strange. However, I fear God and love you all (spiritually speaking, of course). I would like to see you all safe in the "Ark."

Editor:

"Infinite succession of being is no more difficult to believe than a self-existent Eternal Being. We may apprehend both, but can comprehend neither." — Herbert Spencer.

An agnostic Mr. Editor, is intellectually honest. He says: "Although I've investigated and thought to the best of my ability, I can neither affirm nor deny the existence of a creator; therefore, as a matter of FACT, 'I simply don't know'." The agnostic may at the same time, however, have an opinionated answer of his own. Is it really possible that the candor and honesty of an agnostic is a manifestation of "our woeful lack of ability at self-criticism" (as Mr. Mills states)? He clearly admitted the other day that "God" was purely a matter of opinion and "that knowledge fails just at the point where men need it most." Is he not now undermining (in effect) the right of thinking on the side of that opinion which is contrary to his own? Verily, it's all very confusing, Mr. Editor — but isn't it nearly always so when theologians depart from a creed-controlled spiritual realm into the all embracing and infinite philosophical realm?

Mr. Mills can accept without questioning "God" and all the religious dogma that he chooses. If he feels that he must devour the bread of orthodoxy in order to realize a purpose and happiness in life, then by all means let him help himself to the abundance on hand. This writer, on the other hand, feels that blind acceptance of religious and political dogmas and policies would not only be disgraceful, but would surely lead to personal unhappiness.

Don't Raise The Tuition!

By Jonathan Marshall

Campaign promises often fall by the wayside when the time comes for actual policy-making and administration. So it is with Governor Scott.

During the months before November, the governor promised the voters many things; among his promises was one to improve education in the state. A very laudible idea.

One of the most basic principles that underlie any form of democratic government is that the people must be educated. The more enlightened the voters are, the higher the quality of government officials whom they elect.

When men are poorly educated they can be easily led by fiery words, hatred and prejudice is easy to foster, and man is pitted against man because he is not trained to look beyond the mouthings of those who would use him for their own power.

It is quite understandable that Communists can make converts, that the Ku Klux Klan has members, and that those who advocate force and violence have followers. It is understandable because our educational system has fallen down. The blame is largely our own.

One doesn't need to recite facts concerning the low salaries that teachers receive, the poor conditions of many schools, and the inadequate facilities.

Many students, parents, and residents of North Carolina have long complained about the high cost of education for college students. Yet, Governor Scott has asked that the tuition be raised.

The governor says that the tuition has not been raised for many years, and since living costs and the costs of maintaining the University have risen, tuition should be raised. The reasoning is weak and far from conclusive. It denies the fundamental concept upon which state universities have been founded.

For many years a college education was only for the rich; however, that idea has been discarded. We now think of a university as a place to train future leaders for our country, regardless of who they are or how much money they have.

The dream of a college education for those who deserve it has been made a reality. If the governor is successful in obtaining higher tuition levels, a college education will return to the status of a dream that can only be had by the rich. The reason for a state university in North Carolina will no longer exist. It is to be hoped thaat the legislature realizes that democracy is based on education.

Healthy Assumption

Editor:

Despite our healthy assumption that this is a free country, there is a persistent attack on individual liberty in America today. The most noticeable evidence of this attack, except for the constant denial of basic civil rights to racial minorities, is the systematic, government-sponsored, anti-Communist campaign. Some people have always disliked Communists, of course, and it is legitimate for them to propagate their ideas. Until recently, however, the government afforded protection to members of unpopular minorities, in the belief that a healthy democracy does not depend on universal conformity. It is therefore not legitimate for the government, aided by enormous press and radio chains which cannot effectively be answered, to incite, as it is doing, an hysterical hatred and fear of a philosophy which few people know much about.

The result of this campaign is widespread fear, not only of Communists. I know personally a conservative employe of the Atomic Energy commission who, fearing for his job, stopped seeing a girl who was once a member of a blacklisted organization. I know a professor afraid to have Marxist literature in the library, lest his children talk about it and spread gossip at school. Jim Zarichny was expelled from Michigan State college for listening, off campus, to a speech by one of the indicted Communists. A friend of mine was fired last October from a factory because her boss saw her wear a Wallace button. According to the NAACP, 90 employes were accused of disloyalty for urging application of Truman's Fair Employment order. Is that the type of freedom we have for export?

In this atmosphere, the murderer of Communist Robert New can get away with 3 years and a mild chiding from the judge for having "acted unwisely." A goon can force his way into a New York Communist's home to "give him a hard time," commit an act of indecent exposure before his 7 year old daughter, admit his guilt and get away scot free. No quarter is given Gerhardt Eisler, who helped us win the war, while the cases of seven American citizens, who broadcast for the Nazis, are pushed after all, they are fighting Communism. Murder, perversion, treason—are these legitimate means of fighting a philosophy?

Let us hope that the violence of anti-Communist bigotry will arouse enough protest to stop the hysteria and let the question be settled by discussion.

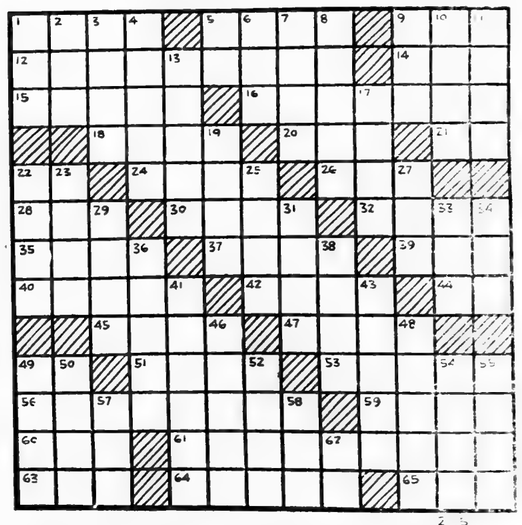
Objective Truth

Editor:



In the Winston-Salem Journal of February 3, we read that W. F. Bennett, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, told a gathering of North Carolina industrialists that "there are no class distinctions in our philosophy."

Now Marxists believe that there is such a thing as objective truth which exists quite apart from the ideas in people's heads. Millions of children for many years have believed fervently in the existence of Santa Claus, but all this mass of human belief offers not a particle of proof that Santa Claus is real. Millions of Americans may DENY that there is a class struggle in this country, others may wish that such an ugly thing did not exist, but all this has no bearing whatsoever on whether or not class struggle does exist.

Class is determined, not by what one thinks about it, but by one's relation to the economic base of society. If a person owns means of production (land, machines, etc.) and is supported by the product of others, working with those means of production, he is a member of the owning class. Those who work with those means of production and support the owners are members of the working class. The wealth produced by the working class must be divided between the owners and the workers. The size of the shares depends on the amount of power each class can exert in the struggle.

The class struggle in America exists, and it will continue to exist, until those who work are also those who own. Only then, under Socialism, can we build a society based on the principle of co-operation, on the principle of the brotherhood of man.

Wake Forest, Carolina Cagers Meet In Woollen Tonight

Deacons Seek to Avenge Loss To Tar Heels Earlier in Year

By Dick Jenrette

Wake Forest's hot and cold basketball forces, who usually manage to turn in at least one upset victory over Carolina athletic teams each season, will be in Chapel Hill tonight at 8 o'clock for an important Southern conference engagement with Coach Tom Scott's Tar Heels.

In the first meeting between the two clubs, Carolina staged a sensational second-half rally to defeat the Deacons, 55-50. That game was played in Gore gymnasium in Wake Forest, and the fact that the Tar Heels were able to defeat the Deacs on their home court makes Carolina a slight favorite tonight.

Wake Forest already has pulled two major upsets this season. Coach Murray Greason's boys edged out both State and Duke in games played at Wake Forest earlier this year. State, however, gained ample revenge by routing the Deacons in Raleigh last week.

No Over-Confidence

Although Carolina ranks as a slim favorite tonight, Coach Scott's men are certainly not over-confident. The Deacs traditionally pull an upset over the Tar Heels each season. Last year Carolina romped to a 56-35 victory in the first game between the two quints, but Wake Forest came back to score a 53-47 win on its home court in the return game.

The biggest upset ever recorded by Wake Forest cage club over Carolina came in 1946, when an underdog Deacon quint stopped Carolina, 31-29, in the semi-finals of the Southern conference tournament. The Tar Heels of '46, who rate as one of the best teams ever to represent this school, went on that year to capture the Eastern division NCAA championship and lose to Oklahoma A & M in the national finals.

The game tonight will have important bearing on the loop standings. Wake Forest is fighting hard for a berth in the annual conference tourney next month and needs a win over Carolina to make the grade. The Tar Heels, on the other hand, are generally conceded to be assured of a spot in the event.

.500 Assured

The locals have a 9-4 record in Southern conference games, and have five contests remaining on their schedule. Even if they did lose all these games, they still would have a .500 percentage which generally is good enough to qualify for the tourney. But the Tar Heels have no intentions of dropping their remaining games.

Starting for Carolina tonight will be Coy Carson and Hugo Kappler at forwards, Nemo Nearman at center, and Dan Nyimicz and Rip Ryan, guards. Charlie Thorne may possibly open in place of Ryan at guard.

The Tar Heels concluded a brief northern swing this weekend by gaining an even split in a couple of games with the northernmost members of the conference. Carolina had little trouble in downing its second straight win over Maryland but succumbed for the second time this year to George Washington in a Washington, D. C., contest.

The Wake Forest and Carolina freshman teams will meet in a preliminary tussle tonight.

Chapel Hill Swims

Chapel Hill high school will play host to the Raleigh Capitols in Bowman Gray pool this afternoon.

This will be the second local appearance for the Caps, who bowed to the Carolina freshman squad last week, 45-29. Raleigh managed to take three first places against the freshmen. Kost captured the 50-yard freestyle while Austin was first in the 100-yard backstroke. The medley relay team also won.

Deacon Freshmen Meet Tar Babies In Woollen Today

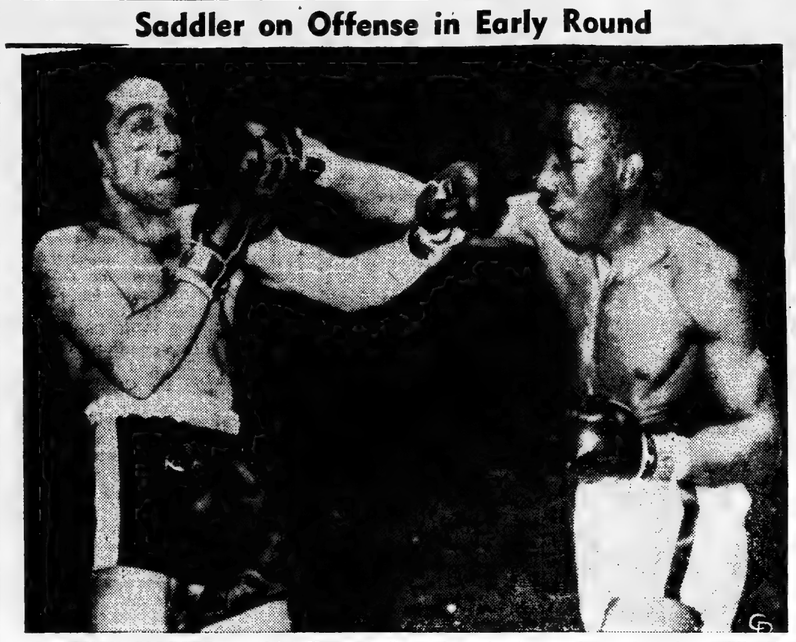
Carolina's freshman basketball team, which has not enjoyed a particularly successful season in competition against other Big Four schools, will have an opportunity to improve its record this evening when it meets the Wake Forest freshmen at 6 o'clock in Woollen gym.

In the first meeting between the two teams, in Gore gymnasium in Wake Forest, the Baby Deacons defeated the Tar Babies by a 43-38 count. At that time Ham Crowder and Buddy Johnson were playing for Carolina. Both these boys are no longer in the lineup, but their absence should be offset by the fact that Carolina will be playing on its home court tonight.

Probable starters for Coach Jim Hamilton's locals are Frank Eckert and Dick Harter, forwards, Frank Redding at center, and Larry Cheek and John Bowersox at guards.

Harter, a Pottstown, Pa., product, is high scorer for the team. He racked up 25 points in a losing cause for the Tar Babies against Duke this weekend. Bowersox, regular guard, also has been hitting the basket consistently.

Wake Forest is not considered among the strongest yearling teams in this state, as both the Duke and State frosh have beaten them. Wake Forest did give State a close battle in both meetings between the two clubs, however.



Sparkplug of the Baby Deacons is Charles (Red) Barham, a scrappy forward. Barham was All-State in high school last season for Needham Broughton high of Raleigh.

Chapel Hill, Oxford Meet in Cage Battle

Chapel Hill high school, with a string of 14 basketball victories, takes to the road tonight for an important contest with Oxford.

"We haven't beaten them on their home court in two years," Coach Bill Grice commented yesterday," and they'll certainly be after us this time." Earlier in the season, Chapel Hill had to come from behind after trailing at halftime to defeat Oxford 38-20.

Basketball Pairings Released For Mural Department Tourney

Pairings for the fraternity and dormitory basketball championships were drawn up in a meeting of all the intramural managers at Woollen gym yesterday. Play in the tourneys began last night and swings into full action today.

In the fraternity division, the mural department has placed the ten league winners in an eight-bracket tourney. Six of the ten teams were given byes in the first round.

Here is a summary of the fraternity tourney: First bracket-winner of Phi Delta Chi-Zeta 3 game gets bye; Second—Chi Phi 3 gets bye; Third—Chi Psi 1 gets bye; Fourth—PiKA 1 gets bye; Fifth—Beta 1 gets bye; Sixth—Chi Phi 1 gets bye; Seventh—Zeta 1 vs. Sigma Chi 2, Wednesday at 4 o'clock, court 3; Eighth—DKE 2 vs. Phi Delt 1, Tuesday at 5 o'clock, court 6.

The second round lists the following games: winners of Phi Delta Chi-Zeta 3 game vs. Chi Phi 3, Wednesday at 4 o'clock, court 4; Chi Psi 1 vs. PiKA 1, Tuesday at 5 o'clock, court 5; Beta 1 vs. Chi Phi 1 (last night); and the winner of the Zeta 1-Sigma Chi 2 game meeting the winner of the DKE 2-Phi Delt 1 game.

A similar arrangement has been set up for the dormitory division. The seven loop winners will participate in a four bracket league. First bracket—Unknowns, bye; Second—Blackballs vs. Panthers, Tuesday at 5 o'clock on court 7; Third—Grads vs. Shotguns. (last night); Fourth—Oakwood Dr. vs. Med School 2 on Wednesday at 5 o'clock, court 4.

The second round of dormitory play will be announced later.

Baseball Drills

Coach Walter Rabb, Carolina baseball coach, has issued a call for all varsity candidates for pitcher and catcher to report to him this afternoon at 3 o'clock on Emerson field.

Only those who are trying out for pitcher and catcher should report today. Other candidates for the team will not be called out until later.

In the event of rain, the workout today will be held in the Tin Can.

Tar Heel Grapplers Meet Citadel Here

Coach Chuck Quinlan's wrestling squad will meet The Citadel here tomorrow night at 7 o'clock on the Woollen gym mat in their third home match of the season. The Tar Heels will be gunning for their third win in five outings.

In previous matches the Carolinians have been defeated by N. C. State, tied Virginia Tech, and defeated Davidson and Virginia Military Institute by wide margins. In their match against VMI last Friday the Tar Heels looked surprisingly good and showed several potential Conference champions.

Carolina Mermen Begin Practicing For NCAA Event

With only two dual meets remaining on the schedule, Carolina's once beaten swimming team has already begun preparations for the NCAA tournament to be held here next month.

Three Tar Heels have commenced getting into condition for the grueling 1500-meter event that will be a part of the nationals. Distance men Ronnie Basescu, Bob Hutton, and Sam McCauley will probably be Carolina's entries.

The NCAA competition will also give the Tar Heels a chance at a rematch with Ohio State, which ended their five-meet winning streak last week in Columbus. The Buckeyes are expected to send a full team down in hopes of winning the title they lost last year to Michigan by only three points.

Carolina was far from disgraced against OSU although the final score of 43-32 wasn't too close. The Blue and White mermen took first places in both relays and the backstroke and were only narrowly edged out in the sprints.

The Tar Heels don't return to action until Friday afternoon when they play host to Emory in the nightcap of a doubleheader, which will also pit the freshmen against Sewanee prep. The final dual meet of the campaign is scheduled for the following week when the local mermen travel to Raleigh to meet N. C. State.

A group of about eight Tar Heels will not wait until Friday to get into action. Assistant Coach Mike Morrow will take a group of swimmers including Captain Dick Twining, Norm Sper, Bob Hutton, Sam McCauley, Johnny Wichard, and Gil Beam to Greensboro tonight to participate in the Greensboro college water festival.

Justice Given Another Award; Wins Teague Memorial Trophy

Choo Choo Charlie Justice tacked another feather in his already-packed war bonnet a couple of nights ago when he walked away with the Teague Memorial award, which is awarded annually to the best amateur athlete in the Carolinas. News of the award, announced in High Point, included the name of Nancy Merki Lees as the award winner in the women's division.

The Carolina Choo Choo was given the award on the basis of his all-American grid feats for Coach Carl Snavely's Tar Heels during the past season. Mrs. Lees an Asheville native, honored because of her brilliant swimming feats.

Justice is the first native-born Tar Heel ever to win All-American honors here. He was followed in the balloting by Henry (Pappy) Gault of Spartanburg, S. C., a national flyweight boxing champ; and Dick Dickey, N. C. State All-American cager.

Trailing Mrs. Lees were Jackie Swaim, a basketball standout on the Hanes Hosiery team of Winston-Salem; and Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page of Chapel Hill. Mrs. Page won the women's award for the second time last year, and Duke's Ed Koffenberger won the men's trophy.

The award was announced by the Carolina Amateur Athletic union, which originated the trophies in honor of the late Judge Lewis E. Teague of High Point

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 14 — (UP) — Former middleweight champion Tony Zale predicted tonight that he will regain the title from Marcel Cerdan of France.

"I am out to regain my title," Zale said. "Physically, I just wasn't there in my last fight with Cerdan but I'll be there this summer."

Zale was here to speak at a banquet for Southern Golden Gloves champions.

It was announced last night that Zale, instead of retiring, would attempt a comeback against Cerdan in a Chicago title fight to be held sometime in April or May.

Fellowships, Equipment Given Pharmacy School

Five graduate fellowships and additional equipment for research in the School of Pharmacy have been provided by the directors of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Research foundation, who met here this week, it was announced yesterday.

The directors appropriated $8,000 for graduate research in the School of Pharmacy, available in September. This brings the funds granted to the University by the foundation for graduate work in pharmacy to a total of $18,000.

These grants, Pharmacy Dean M. L. Jacobs said, will enable the Pharmacy school to double the number of research students by September and will make the graduate department of the Pharmacy school one of the four largest in the United States, he said.

Secretary E. A. Brecht of the foundation reported the establishment of memorial funds in memory of the late Dean E. V. Howell, the late Dean J. G. Beard, and the late Frank W. Hancock, secretary-treasurer of the state board for 50 years.

Roger A. McDuffie, Greensboro, vice-president, and other officers re-elected were: P. A. Hayes, Greensboro, vice-president; E. A. Brecht, Chapel Hill, secretary, and Paul B. Bissette, Wilson; I. T. Reamer, Durham, and C. T. Council, Durham, members of the executive committee.

Others re-elected as directors were E. C. Daniels, Zebulon; Alfred N. Martin, Roanoke Rapids; B. Frank Page, Raleigh; D. L. Boone, Durham, and H. C. McAllister, W. J. Smith and Carl T. Durham, all of Chapel Hill.

But work has not been as slow as it seems. The riveting and hammering is over. The building itself is up. Outside it is practically complete. Inside, work is going rapidly forward toward completion of the many exhibits and displays that will make up the planetarium and art gallery.

Officials close to and working with the Morehead project conservatively estimate that the building will be ready for use sometime in May, or at least before commencement time.

They say, "It all depends on these busy men you see scurrying around here."

FROM "OF TIME AND THE RIVER": "For the rest of them that old bleak house had now so many memories of grief and death and intolerable incurable regret that in their hearts they hated it." Tom Wolfe's home in Asheville, "Dixieland," will stand as a memorial to the famed University of North Carolina alumnus.

Wolfe Home Memorialized

By Donald MacDonald

ASHEVILLE—"Dixieland, that bloody barn," will stand as a memorial to its genius son, Novelist Thomas Wolfe.

The Thomas Wolfe Memorial Associates, Inc., purchased the 22-room house for $15,750. Heirs of the late Mrs. Julia E. Wolfe, Tom's mother, deeded it over to the foundation for use as a museum.

The Wolfe house—which actually was always known as "Old Kentucky Home"—was made famous when Tom Wolfe wrote of it as "Dixieland" in his tremendous volumes. Visitors to this city today always catch their breaths before asking directions there, for calling it "Dixieland" comes too natural.

For a description of the immense Victorian dwelling, one need only re-read "Look Homeward, Angel." There Wolfe wrote of the house . . . situated five minutes from the square on a pleasant sloping middle-class street of small homes and boarding-houses. Dixieland was a big cheaply constructed frame house of eighteen or twenty high-ceilinged rooms; it had a rambling, unplanned, gabular appearance . . . It had a pleasant green front yard, not deep, but wide, bordered by a row of young deep-bodied maples . . . ."

Tom Wolfe's brother, Frank, has been living at the boarding-house since the death of Mrs. Julia E. Wolfe in 1946. Wolfe has kept no boarders but has lived in the 22-room house alone most of the time.

Sister Mabel (Mrs. Ralph Wheaton of Washington, D. C.)

Foundation Buys House for $15,750

has been at the home recently to help with the plans. She is a large, big-boned woman who talks as rapidly as did "Eliza Gant" in the novels. She invited me inside Dixieland by saying:

"Come on inside now. This may be the last chance you'll get to see it free. It'll probably cost you next time."

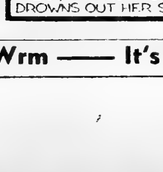
Inside, things haven't changed. On the wall in the spacious hall-way is a framed picture of three angels with the inscription: "Peace Be Unto This House."

The living room, dark and drafty, is a veritable gallery of photographs of favorite son Tom, the late Mrs. Wolfe, old Mr. W. O. (the stone-cutting "Gant") and all the members of the family. The piano is there, the piano on which Mabel used to play such songs as "Just a Baby's Prayer at Twilight."

Frank Wolfe showed me the room where Mr. W. O. bled to death. He accompanied me upstairs to Ben's room, where Ben died of pneumonia: "that bleak front room upstairs, with its ugly Victorian bay-window.' It is next to the sleeping-porch where Ben and Tom slept one night three weeks before Ben's death, when "Ben had hurled into the darkness his savage curse at life."

Everything about the house reminded me of the '90s. There was something about the old wash-stands in the rooms, the cast-iron bedsteads, that brought back the days of derby hats, bustles, little boys in Fauntleroy curls.

Dixieland will become that "unbroken spinet" Tom wrote about when he cried out for some form, some manner, some way in which to hold on to passing time:



"By the waters of life, by time, play us a tune on an unbroken spinet, and let us hear the actual voices . . . . let us move backward through our memories . . . . let us relive the million unforgotten moments of our lives. . . ."

Powder Bowl Tilt Set For Gamecock Coeds

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 14. — (UP) — A gruelling, head-banging scrimmage today helped put comely Pi Phis and cute Delta Delta Deltas in shape for Friday night's Powder bowl game at University of South Carolina.

The sorority pigskin toters are playing in the grid classic to raise cash for the Carolina orphanage.

Two college bands will blare at half-time and team members will have sponsors—male counterparts of the flower-laden ladies so familiar at a varsity game.

Joe Patrone, former Gamecock lineman, and Steve Wadiak, backfield flash of last season are tutoring the Pi Phis, who will use a Notre Dame shift.

The Tri Delts, coached by former South Carolina back Ed McMillian, will run from a single wing.

The ladies will have eight-member teams and will use two-handed touching instead of the cruder form of tackling. Otherwise, barring hair pulling and makeup smearing, they will play under conventional football rules.

Trio Concert Is Scheduled Sunday Night

Robertson to Be Program Feature

The Vielle-Trio, featuring Du Bose Robertson, will give a program of music of the Middle Ages and Renaissance in Hill hall Sunday night at 8:30, under the auspices of Graham Memorial with the cooperation of the University music department.

The trio is composed of Franz Siedersbeck and Beatrice Dohme, altovielle, and Werner Landshoff, tenor-vielle.

Organized in 1947, the trio is the only ensemble in the United States specializing in the interpretation of the music of the Gothic and Renaissance and in the playing of some of the instruments of those periods.

During the first half of that season, the group was introduced in its present form to a number of well-known musicians and scholars in New York, Washington, and Baltimore. A number of public appearances resulted from these private concerts, the first of which was a concert during the annual convention of the Music Teachers National association in Boston. Among others, the ensemble was acclaimed at the Metropolitan Opera club in New York and at Harvard university.

The vielles were the string-instruments of the Middle Ages and were used until about the middle of the 16th century. During the Renaissance they were succeeded by the viols and the viola de gambo, direct predecessors of the modern violin family.

THE GENEVIEVE MOREHEAD ART GALLERY will be located in the rotunda portion of the Morehead building, a portion of which is shown above. The two workmen in the picture are completing work on the plaster designs which top the 16 marble columns. One of Genevieve Morehead's collection of famous masterpieces will be placed between each column.

The Inside Story

Planetarium Arranged Like Ordinary Theater

(Ed. note: This is the second in a series of articles on the Morehead planetarium and art gallery. The third installment, which will be a description of an actual demonstration, will appear in tomorrow morning's Daily Tar Heel.)

By Herb Nachman

"What is a planetarium and how will it benefit the average University student?"

This is the question that has been turning over in the minds of a student body which has watched and wondered for a year and a half.

Watched the construction of the exterior of a project that started out at a conservative $1,000,000 and has soared to more than $2,000,000 since it was begun.

The riveting and hammering are over. The bricks and mortar have taken shape. A building has emerged and students are ready to know what will make the John Motley Morehead planetarium tick.

Imagine yourself an average student who has decided to visit the planetarium for a scheduled demonstration. The demonstrations usually begin about 3 o'clock in the afternoon and since the room only seats 500 you go early.

Waiting in line to enter the planetarium room may be compared to waiting in line at the Carolina theater for the late show on Saturday night. There are many people, however, who will not be admitted. When the 500 mark is reached the doors will be swung closed.

Joint admission to the art gallery and planetarium involves about 60 cents in cash, including tax. A sign above the ticket office indicates, "Special admission rates for groups."

Your guide explains that the reason for the entrance fee is for upkeep of the building so that the state legislature will not be forced to appropriate for the purpose.

As you approach the blind corridor leading into the planetarium room itself, you glance about the entrance lobby. Everything is highly polished marble. Behind the small ticket window is a business office where accountants are busily administering the upkeep of the building.

Everything is finely decorated, not lavishly, but in good taste.

The usher at the door takes your ticket and tells you to please watch your step while in the "blind corridor." There are three doors in the corridor. The middle one is a swinging

McLeod Elected To Y Committee

Ed McLeod, junior from Maxton, was elected to fill a seat in the YMCA executive committee at the regular YM cabinet meeting Monday night, Pete Burks, president of the YMCA announced yesterday.

McLeod replaces Fred Thompson, who resigned his position several weeks ago.

Members of the nominating committee, also chosen Monday night, are Coy Rogers, Charlie Britt, Ed Strain, and advisory board members Warren Ashby and the Rev. Charles Jones.

Just Too Many Keys

Versatile Miss Godbee Searches For Owners of Homeless Articles

By Don Maynard

"We'd rather have the car than just the keys we have to a new Chevrolet," said Miss Mary Godbee as she proudly exhibited her efficient YMCA Lost and Found department located in the Y building.

And she wasn't speaking of just one key, nor of just one car. The Lost and Found office has in the filing cabinet that serves as home for errant properties well over 100 keys—of all sizes and shapes, from a locket key no more than an inch long to a comparatively huge four-inch house key.

Miss Godbee is a graduate of Georgia State College for Women capable of wedging a telelphone betwen her head and shoulder, at the same time carrying on a conversation with the party at the other end, sorting mimeographed sheets and stapling them together, and beaming her sparkling smile in any direction.

In addition to all this charm, she manages one of the gears that keeps the Carolina student's semi-mechanical life running smoothly. Have you lost your keys, glasses, cigarette lighter; your fountain pen, pipe or auto rear-view mirror? Take a look in the Y Lost and Found cabinet. Chances are you will find it there.

Yes, all that miscellany, and more too. There are varied

Di to Debate Driving Plan For Schools

Hearing Planned Tonight in Hall

Automobile driving courses and yearly physical examinations for students in the North Carolina public schools will be discussed o'clock tonight in the Di hall on the third floor of New West building.

The discussion will be based on two separate resolutions introduced by Tom Mayfield and approved by the Di ways and means committee. The resolutions are,

1. Resolved, that the Dialectic senate go on record as favoring the passage of a bill by the North Carolina legislature providing for and financing a course in driving to be given in all public schools. Only students old enough to receive licenses may take the course, which shall be required for graduation from high school.

2. Resolved, that the Dialectic senate go on record as favoring the passage of a bill by the North Carolina legislature requiring all students in the state public schools to have a physical examination once a year by a qualified doctor. The state shall finance all of these examinations.

Three Speakers Are Featured In House Talks

The YMCA-sponsored fraternity house discussions will continue with such noted speakers as James Street, author and resident of Chapel Hill, Gene Turner, chairman of the house discussions committee announced yesterday.

Street will speak to members of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity next Tuesday on "Alcoholics Anonymous."

Dr. O. K. Cornwell of the University's physical education department will lead discussions on the "Tthletic Outlook for 1949" in the Tau Epsilon Pi house. The same topic was discussed by Crowell Little, also of the University's physical education department, last night in the Zeta Beta Tau fraternity house.

Mrs. Arnold Nash, who has addressed membres of five fraternities since the beginning of the house discussions program, led discussions on "Creative Living in Courship and Marriage" last night n the Chi Psi house.

Highway Route Plan Approved

DURHAM, Feb. 15—A new plan to change the original route of entry of the proposed new Durham-Chapel Hill boulevard was studied and approved individually, today by representatives of the city of Durham, the Chamber of Commerce, Duke university, and the state Highway department.

The proposed changes would give the boulevard an entirely new route of entry as it approaches Durham. R. Getty Browning, chief locating engineer, drew up the plans after residents of the Duke section offered considerable opposition to the first proposal which called for an entrance at the intersection of route 751 and Duke University road.

The almost straight stretch of road from Chapel Hill to Durham, as was presented today, would have the following changes:

From the New Hope sewage treatment plant eastward to a point of connection with Chapel Hill road (US 15 and 501) near Cornwallis road and then with University drive.

Trustees to Meet

Chancellor R. B. House yesterday said his report to the Executive committee fo the Board of Trustees would include change in personnel and faculty. Parking restrictions will also be brought up before the committee.

The 12-man Executive committee meets today at 11 o'clock in Gov. Kerr Scott's office in Raleigh.

Those attending from the University include Dr. Frank Graham, W. D. Carmichael, Jr., Claude Teague, and Miss Billy Curtis, assistant secretary of the committee.

In addition to the 12 representatives from the Board of Trustees, the committee includes Arch T. Allen, secretary, and Governor Scott.

Four Sororities To Hold Show In Rendezvous

Four to Compete On Friday Night

Four campus sororities will present a competitive floor show and radio program in the Rendezvous room Friday night, Lib Stoney, entertainment chairman, said yesterday.

An engraved silver plate will be presented through the courtesy of Graham Memorial to the sorority presenting the skit judged the most entertaining. Judges will be Dean Fred Weaver, Jane Grills, and Mrs. Norman Cordon.

Sorority chairmen for the programs are Gayle Hancock for Alpha Delta Pi; Gene Hines, Delta Delta Delta; Becky Holton, Alpha Gamma Delta; and Anne Knight, Chi Omega.

A representative from each of the sororities will also appear on the weekly Rendezvous radio program at 9:15, immediately after the floor show.

Jim Byrd, electrician for the Carolina Playmakers productions, will control the lighting for the program.

Eaton to Speak At Bull's Head

Walter Prichard Eaton, former professor of playwriting at Yale university, will speak on "Sixty Years of Theater Going", at a tea to be given in the Bull's Head book shop this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Eaton, who is known as the dean of the American playwriting professors, is serving as guest lecturer in the dramatic arts department for this year. He has been interested in the theater for over sixty years, and was the dramatic critic for the New York Times for a number of years. He was a member of the Pulitzer prize committee when Paul Green's Abraham's Bosom was named as the outstanding play of 1927.

Planetarium Fire Damage Is 'Negligible'

Sparks Cause Blaze in Dome

A fire yesterday morning among the folds of acoustic materials hanging behind the Morehead planetarium dome caused "inconsequential damage" to the $2,000,000 structure, Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., reported last night.

Carmichael said the fire was started by a welder working with a blowtorch behind the stainless steel dome of the planetarium chamber. Sparks from the torch ignited a pocket in the acoustic material which he said "had not yet been fireproofed."

Workmen who witnessed the blaze said the Chapel Hill fire department responded to the call and fought the fire, but that it burned itself out before the department could extinguish it.

Dr. Roy K. Marshall, who is working closely with the planetarium chamber, said the damage "was not serious" and that "the steel of the dome was not at all damaged. It is only now a matter of drying and airing the planetarium."

Carmichael reported that the "negligible" damage would not delay the opening of the planetarium which is tentatively set for early in May. He said the main damage resulted from water.

Firefighters had a difficult job in attempting to reach the flames behind the dome which is suspended by steel cables from the roof of the chamber. Consequently, witnesses reported, the firemen were forced to use an excess amount of water in an attempt to gain control of the flames.

No official estimate of the damage was available last night. However, Carmichael said that insurance agents would be in town today and the figure would probably be available sometime late today.

Seniors to Plan Class Activities

Senior class officers and newly appointed committee chairmen will meet at 2 o'clock today in Graham Memorial to begin plans for class activities.

The executive committee, which is composed of the officers and committee chairmen, includes Ed Davenport, president; Wayne Brenengan, secretary; Mintie Cantrell, treasurer; Nat Williams, social committee; Bob Kirkland, invitations committee; Gene Turner, finance committee; and Rita Adams, publicity committee.

The committee assistants are Gray Sanders, George Grizzard, Peppy Lucas, Bob Kirby, John Rosser, Miles Smith, Virginia Nash, Steve Millikan, Moo Yancey, Sally Woodhull, Martha Davenport, Tom Holden, and Don Hanes.

Wins Nomination On First Ballot

Presidential Nominee Defeats Gordon, Brenengan After Raging Party Debate

With a promise to "show the student body and the other political parties that we can have a government serving the students," Charlie Long entered the presidential race Monday night on the Campus party ticket.

Long received a majority on the first ballot to defeat Dick Gordon, already nominated by the University party, and Wayne Brenengan for the nomination. The vote was taken by vocal roll call of the party membership, resulting in 25 for Long 10 for Brenengan and 9 for Gordon. Three persons abstained.

The CP presidential nominee debate raged for approximately two hours before a vote was finally called. Observers called the meeting "the hottest political circus on campus in a long time." The party, scheduled to nominate its candidates for vice-president and secretary-treasurer the same evening, postponed its next order of busines until tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Long, the CP candidate for the presidency, first came into the political scene this year when a petition supporung him for the presidency was signed by "around 800 students," as estimated by President Jess Dedmond Monday night.

The candidate served for nine months as the first chairman of the Carolina Forum. During his term of office, which lasted through the end of last fall quarter, the forum brought such speakers as Sen. Robert Taft and Gov. J. Strom Thurmond to the campus to speak.

Long was a member of the coalition cabinet last fall, and was elected to two one-year terms as a member of the Student legislature. As a member of the legislature Finance committee, he helped draw up the first student budget under the new constitution. He served on the Ways and Means committee, and as chairman of the special committee on seating arrangements in Kenan stadium, he helped give students 1,000 additional seats between the 40 and 50-yard line at football games.

He was elected speaker pro tempore of the legislature in the spring of 1947 and served in that post until the following December. Two issues he consistently fought for in the legislature were redistricting and the retention of appellate power in the Student council.

He introduced the first redistricting bill into the legislature. After it was passed by that body and then vetoed by President Dewey Dorsett, Long introduced a new 16-district bill which was finally passed as the nine-district bill which is now in effect.

The CP presidential candidate was president of the Dialectic

CHARLIE LONG was nominated to run for the presidency of the student body at the Campus party meeting in Graham Memorial Monday night. Long was nominated on the first ballot over Wayne Brenengan and Dick Gordon.

Girl Hitch-Hikers Tour For DP's

By Margaret Gaston

Two attractive blond hitch-hikers from Bennington college, Vermont, stopped over in Chapel Hill this past weekend. They are Sylva Mardiste, 23-year-old Estonian, and Dusty Hutton, her 18-year-old American classmate.

This month the girls started on a tour of the country in hopes of obtaining 360 scholarships in American schools for displaced persons.

William Suddeth, former UNRRA director for DP's in Heidelberg, Germany, interested the girls in the scholarship scouting plan when he lectured at Bennington college last December. The girls chose to devote their two-months non-resident term to obtain the scholarships.

When they began the tour their funds were limited to $65 raised by students the day they left campus, and $150 which Frederic Burkhardt, president of the college, gave them. Later the Woman's club in West Hampton, Long Island donated $60.

Two ladies from New York offered the hitch-hikers a ride to Texas, but on reaching Chapel Hill last Saturday were called home. Sylva and Dusty said they were going to trust to luck that they would be able to complete their tour on the $275.

They left Chapel Hill yesterday by bus for Texas. The girls agreed that they may have to work as waitresses some time during the journey, and that they would probably have to hitch-hike back to Bennington college.

Dusty and Sylva hope to visit more than 100 colleges and interest faculties and student groups in a plan for providing free schooling for DP's. During this past

Communism in Oklahoma

(From The Oklahoma Daily)

The Oklahoma legislature has been asked to enact a law requiring all college students and all teachers to take an anti-communist oath.

If the law is enacted, Oklahoma will have its own little un-American activities committee and thousands of taxpayers' dollars will be spent to put on a 3-ring circus similar to the one produced by the national government.

The idea isn't new. During the summer of '48, the University of Washington was the target of a witch-hunting state legislature. The proceedings revealed that out of a thousand faculty members, five were former Communists. Three refused to answer on constitutional grounds.

The tactics used by the Washington legislature were to prove guilt by accusation. No great Communist ring was revealed. In fact, the information unearthed had little or no meaning.

Harry D. Gideonse, LlD., president of Brooklyn college, says that it is too easy to accuse a teacher or a textbook of "communism" because, say, a federal control of money is urged. He emphasizes that by such a standard Abraham Lincoln and Woodrow Wilson were both communists. Freedom of thought and speech is one of the basic rights of our democracy.

Perhaps there is a danger of communist infiltration in our schools and colleges. But the problem must be met by counter-attack and in accordance with our own rules of the game.

If democracy is not strong enough to meet the arguments of communism, perhaps it is just as well that the Communists take over.

There is nothing to be gained by a witch-hunt in our schools. Those dollars which are spent for investigations could be spent for constructive literature on the advantages of capitalism and democracy.

The Same in North Carolina

(From the Raleigh News and Observer)

Their bill, say Representatives Clyde A. Shreve and John B. Regan, "outlaws Communism in North Carolina." What is needed in North Carolina and everywhere else is not to outlaw Communism but to effectively meet its menace.

Of course, its menace among the citizenship of North Carolina is trivial but the problem is the same as elsewhere. And in the Congress of the United States which deals with the greater problem in the United States, proposals to "outlaw Communism" have been rejected. This was certainly not done because of any love for Communists. Indeed, it was based upon nothing but good sense in our security efforts. J. Edgar Hoover, head of the FBI, opposed the plan as one which would only drive Communism underground and make more difficult efforts to deal with it. Governor Dewey of New York, who talked much of the dangers of Communism in his campaign for the presidency, opposed any plan to outlaw communism by law and push its menace out of sight and underground.

Making everybody sign oaths that they are not Communists will not keep real Communists from lying. They are more adept at deception than any other people. They will gladly and quickly take any oaths suggested. The only result of the oath requirement would be unnecessary expense in dealing with the overwhelmingly non-Communist people of North Carolina.

The best way to deal with Communism in North Carolina is to act with confidence in dealing with North Carolinians. If we set up an official system of suspicion here, we will not hurt Communism but we may add unnecessary harassments in a democratic state where no real danger exists.

Congratulations, Firemen

As Controller Carmichael said yesterday, the Chapel Hill fire department is to be commended on its quick action in the community's latest fire—the one at the Morehead planetarium yesterday, in which the only thing that burned was material that was supposed to be fire-proof.

Of course the two fire trucks drove over their own hose lines in maneuvering, construction men at the planetarium said the fire burned itself out before firemen succeeded in putting it out, and the quantities of water sprayed around did more damage than the fire, but at least the fire department got there quick.

Warning Note

Get Taken For a 'Ride'?

By "Wink" Locklair

Reports of investigating officers into the murder and robbery of a well-dressed, hitch-hiking Duke law student in Florida should be read with more than routine interest by the hundreds of well-dressed, hitch-hiking Carolina students who each Friday and Saturday line all highways leading out of Chapel Hill.

The circumstances surrounding J. B. Lattimore's death are not unlike those in which local men find themselves from time to time. He had been home for a short, after-exams vacation. He was on his way to visit some relatives. He thought the best, the cheapest and quickest way to get there would be to thumb a ride. Following the premise that a well-dressed, neat young man stands a better chance of getting a lift, J. B. wore, reports say, "expensive clothes."

He got a ride, it seems. But the person or persons who picked him up wanted more than just somebody to talk to. J. B. Lattimore was shot in the neck and heart with a .38 caliber pistol and his body was found in a two-foot deep canal, 10 miles from Fort Myers. Missing from his effects were two watches, a suitcase and $50 in cash.

Saving money is usually the last reason many students give for resorting to thumbing. Like Mr. Lattimore, a majority of college students have sufficient funds to get them home for a visit every few weeks, and in the case of University students, a great number live within a 150 mile radius. But it seems foolish, almost extravagant, some say, to take that beating-of-a-bus ride over to Greensboro when, if you're lucky, you can nail a ride in a new Ford and be at W. C. in little over an hour.

Any number of reasons are given for thumbing. "You meet all sorts of characters when you bum a lift." "If I take a bus home, I gotta change twice with a half-hour layover." "Traveling salesmen are headin' for home on Friday. Lots of 'em are college grads, and they like to pick up students and find out what's going on in the world."

No doubt dozens of local students returned to this campus recently with an urgent plea and warning from the folks to "don't hitch hike, son. See what happened to that fellow over at Duke."

As long as the Lattimore case remains unsolved, college students will be inclined to give some thought to their weekend transportation. Better still, it would be a wise and sensible policy to plan rides with students who have automobiles and are going to the same town. A list of such rides is available in the Y building every day. While nothing very admirable can be said about bus service in the Carolinas, there is a good chance that you'll arrive at your destination with full baggage and not too much delay.

Soft Coal Fodder For Porkers

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Senator Harley M. Kilgore, of West Virginia, has a hog-raising constituent who claims to have advanced farther in the matter of pig culture than the Department of Agriculture. This voter avers he is fattening his porkers on a diet of soft coal.

I thought Senator Kilgore was kidding at first, but he assured us he was deadly serious. He had personally witnessed the hogs feeding on soft coal, and had eaten some of the pork thereof, which he described as delicious.

"This constituent of mine," he said, "uses a diet of native West Virginia bituminous coal and whole milk to fatten his pigs for market. They receive no other fodder. He claims his hogs simply dote on soft coal, and wax fat and saucy on it."

"Don't the pigs get a little sooty?" interjected Senator Millard Tydings, of Maryland. "What's your constituent fattening them this way for—the black market?"

Senator Kilgore ignored the sally, saying he intended to ask the Department of Agriculture to investigate the situation, when he found time. But I was so fascinated by the idea of hogs eating their way through a coal bin that I called Agriculture myself.

Preston Richards, associate chief of the Livestock division, proved a bit cagey.

"It is possible, of course," he said. "Many things seem to be possible with coal, even nylons. But you may state that the Department of Agriculture has not yet gotten around to recommending it as a diet."

Dr. Clifton D. Lowe, of the Animal Husbandry division, said a hog has a digestive system very like man's. He said he supposed a man could eat some soft coal without expiring on the spot, but that he wouldn't thrive on it.

"There may well be some nutritional element in soft coal," added Dr. Lowe, "but we have no official data on that here. Of course, coal has a high caloric content—it burns. There is also a theory, which has never been supported, that minerals in the diet help to keep down parasites."

I asked Dr. Lowe if it mightn't be true that the bituminous baconeers were, in reality, getting all their nourishment from the milk part of their diet.

"I wouldn't think so," he replied. "We don't recommend an exclusive milk diet; moreover it would cost the raiser too much these days to fatten entirely on milk. It would be neither practical nor profitable."

* * *

I sort of wish the subject of the sooty swine had not come up in the first place because of the way it must have sounded to an innocent bystander.

I was taking Leo Fischer, sports editor of the Chicago Herald-American, on a tour of the Capitol, and he was much impressed by the solemn dignity of it all. That is, he was impressed until we dropped into the office of Secretary of the Senate Leslie Biffle, and Senator Kilgore began discoursing on the peaty pigs.

Sports Editor Fischer opened his mouth, and never quite succeeded in getting it closed again, particularly after Senator Tydings began a gentle needling of his colleague.

"If there is any increased demand for coal as a result of this," Senator Tydings told Senator Kilgore, "we should be entitled to a cut-in. But our royalties should be reasonable; we shouldn't demand too much."

Senator Kilgore said it was nevertheless worth looking into. Senator Tydings asked if he had given consideration to the possible ramifications.

"If we succeed in obtaining bituminous coal status for the Nation's pigs," continued the Marylander, "What is to stop them from making greater demands? The upshot may well be that they will demand social security, the pension plan, the 7-hour day, 35-hour week, and pay on a pigpen-to-pigpen basis."

* * *

Senator Tydings, who is now chairman of the powerful Armed Services committee, further nonplussed the visiting sports editor by saying he had a plan to advance unification.

"I am slipping a suggestion to airplane designers," he said, "to devise a plane that will function in the air, on the land, and on the water. This will make it of equal use to the Air Force, the Army and the Navy.

"Moreover, it will have a ladder dangling from it so the Marines can land and have the situation well in hand."

First Advice to the Lovelorn: Don't Let Him Get Away!

By Adelaide Addle

Dear Miss Addle,

I have been going "steady" with a boy who was, I thought, very nice. Ever since we first met three weeks ago, we had planned to attend the German club dances together. Two days before the dance he called and "begged off," saying that an important matter had come up, which he would explain later.

Such a blow was naturally a shock, especially as I had turned down another boy only a few minutes earlier.

Fortunately, another boy called the following evening for a definite answer to his invitation, which needless to say, I accepted.

At the dance I ran into my boyfriend. He was with some bleached blonde import. Just the thought of it makes me furious. It ruined my whole evening.

Please tell me what to do about this, Miss Addle. We had promised, ever since our second date, to be true to one another. Now I find he has not kept his word. Will I ever be able to trust him again?

A McIver Coed

Dear McIver Coed

Your boy friend may have a plausable explanation for his actions—they usually do. Listen to his excuse and judge him on its merits. While you are waiting for him to call, you would do well to think up an excuse of your own. You two seem eminently suited for one another - to judge by your letter - so don't let him get away.

* * *

Dear Mis Addle:

I am a 36-year-old graduate student. When I was young, 11 to be exact, oh those good old happy days, my mother said that I should never kiss a man. I don't like to argue, but everyone else seems to do it. My boy friend has wanted to kiss me for six years, and for two years he has threatened to leave me if I won't let him. Should I?

Lovelorn.

Dear Lovelorn:

There are pros and cons to all questions. If you feel you are still too young, you should not. But remember, you are not as young as you were when you were 11.

* * *

Dear Dr. Addle:

After I had been married for four months I discovered that my wife was allergic to shaving cream. I tried to use soap for shaving, but my beard is too tough. Then I tried letting my whiskers grow, but they itched.

My beard and my wife's allergies, threaten our happy marriage. We are desperate, we have tried everything. Only you can help us now. Please help us.

Peach Fuzz

Dear Peach Fuzz:

I sympathize with you and your wife. I once knew a sailor who had the same problem. His face was so hardened by brine that he solved it by plucking his whiskers every day.

In your agitated condition, you seem to have overlooked one possible solution—electric razors. Although I don't use one myself, I have heard many favorable comments concerning electric razors. Of course, one must always be careful when using these modern gadgets; however, it might be your solution.

The arguments used in rejecting Stalin's bid to end cold war appear to be rather superficial.

Sudden scruples about by-passing the U. N. cannot be taken seriously, coming from the administrators of the [illegible] ious by-pass around the U. N. known as the Marshall Plan. We can also wonder about a State department which intervened in the Italian election and the composition of the French cabinet having qualms of conscience about "making decisions for other nations" when the decision is to be peace. That the North Atlantic alliance is "purely defensive" it is difficult to understand why peace should disrupt its unity.

To find out if Stalin is sincere, there is no way like taking him up on his offer; if the offer is genuine, we can have lasting peace. If not, the publicity for Stalin would be very unfavorable.

Is not peace worth a trip to the President? What more pressing problem can claim his attention? The war threat is quite real, and those who suggest even unconventional methods to alleviate it are not "playing politics with the hopes and aspirations of mankind" but helping mankind realize these hopes and aspirations.

Could it be that certain concerns rather influencial in the State Department (Dean Acheson himself is a former Standard Oil man) find the cold war profitable (about $20 billion of war contracts are expected for 1949) and are not anxious to end it? The ordinary people of our country, however, have no stake in these profits; on the other hand, the cold war is costing us an average of $400 a year per family, not to mention the resulting insecurity, fear of a hot war, and infringement on civil liberties at home, on which no price can be set. It is in the best interest of all ordinary Americans that the cold war be stopped while there is a chance.

Tar Heels Wallop Deacon Cagers, 69-54, In Loop Contest

Hearn Returns to Chapel Hill; Batterymen Continue Workouts

Carolina baseball coach Bunn Hearn arrived back on campus from Wilson yesterday to assume the direction of the Tar Heel diamond hopefuls.

Coach Hearn, leaning on his cane, eyed the remnants of last year's championship team, candidates for the vacant positions and the numerous freshman with hopes of becoming members of the Tar Heel team.

"I can't tell much because I just got in today," Coach Hearn said. "I'll know a little more about the team after I've been here for awhile."

As Coach Hearn stood around reminiscing with some of his old pupils, consulting with the other coaches and meeting the new boys, approximately fifty candidates for varsity battery positions were working out in sun-baked Emerson stadium.

Another distinguished personality in Emerson stadium yesterday was Tar Heel alumnus George "Snuffy" Sternweiss, second-baseman for the New York Yankees. Sternweiss, who was on his way to Florida where he will join the Yankees for spring training on March 1, donned a sweat suit and proceeded to give some of the infielders a few pointers on the fine art of playing the keystone sack.

Sternweiss attracted quite a crowd as he exhibited different positions and pivots at both the second base and shortstop positions.

One of the points the former Tar Heel star emphasized was the importance of getting the ball off as quickly as possible on double plays.

Charlie Crocker, former Tar Heel hurler and now the property of the Brooklyn Dodgers, spent several hours giving pointers to prospective pitchers.

The batterymen will continue to work in Emerson and the infielders and outfielders will be called out for official practice in the near future. The definite date is dependent on the weather and progress of the battery candidates.

Chi Pi, Dekes Win Close Tilts; Blackballs Romp

The Intramural basketball playoffs got into high gear yesterday afternoon, with two hotly contested fraternity games and one dormitory league tilt marking the second day of the championship series between the winners of the ten frat and the seven dorm loops.

The fraternity division witnessed two nip and tuck ball games, both decided by two points. The Chi Psi 1 quint came back strong in the last half to stop PiKA 1, 38-36, while the DKE 2 cagers outlasted Phi Delta Theta 1, 23-21.

Dick Jenrette racked up 17 points to pace the Chi Psi five, and Vic Sexias followed him with 13 markers. Chan Pegram was high for the PiKA hardwooders, with 12, and Dave Mackie dumped in eight for the losers. The winners were trailing, 12-17, at the half.

Scoring for the DKE cagers was evenly divided. B. Wright was tops with seven, Deans had six, and Huske accounted for five. Phi Delt center Harry Watkins captured high scoring honors for the game as he poured 12 points through the hoops.

The powerful Blackballs went on a scoring spree in the day's only dormitory division scrap, swamping the Panthers, 67-39. Art Weiner notched up nine field goals for a total of 18 points to lead the way, while Purcell Jones scored 13, and Fred Fussell 12 for the Blackballs. High men for the Panthers were Fred Lourie, with 12, and Bill Sinpson, who had nine.

As in most other mural sports, the champs in the fraternity and dormitory divisions will meet for the campus crown.

Wildcats Defeat Raleigh Mermen

Chapel Hill High school took a closely contested decision from the Raleigh Capitols here yesterday afternoon by a 38-36 score.

The Wildcats had just as close a margin in the matter of first places with five to the Caps' four and it was Chapel Hill's greater depth that cemented the victory.

Bill Grice Revives Athletics At Local High After Lean Years

With Chapel Hill high school's Wildcats currently in the midst of their second hot win-taking win streak of the year, the man of the hour at the Franklin street prep school is Bill Grice, amiable mentor of the Black and Gold-ers.

The Chapel Hill athletes floundered around in the cellar of the Eastern Class A conference for a number of years, reached the point where the situation was no longer a laughing matter, and then brought Grice upon the scene. The remedy was swift, simple, and effective.

This is Grice's first season here. He assumed his post as director of physical education at Durham's YMCA to become head of the local high school athletic program. Just how well the former Guilford college football captain has succeeded in his new assignment is reflected in a defeatless 1948 football season and the current series of victories which will unless some unexpected chiropractic malady crops up, land Chapel Hill in the playoffs for the Eastern conference Class A championship.

Bob Phillips and John Jernigan are co-captains of the team which, by next season will have lost five starting players. But since the jayvee team, coached by Hardy Henry, has some good material, Grice is not too worried.

Grice will coach baseball also, but he isn't sure when the first day of practice will be. There are several cage tournaments coming up in March, and if Ivalee Hill, Hilbert Williams, Russell Perry and the others continue to play their present brand of ball, Chapel Hill will be in the thick of competition.

Dan Nyimicz Paces Carolina To Tenth Conference Victory

By Zane Robbins

A hustling gang of Tar Heels ran hog wild during the first half of last night's Woollen gym thriller, cooled off considerably at the beginning of the second half, and then hit their normal stride to rack up a 69-54 Southern conference win over the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest.

The Carolinians played a great game the first half, controlling the boards with mechanical ability and hitting for an amazing accuracy percentage of .487. The boys from Baptist Hollow were completely bewildered by the lightning attack thrown at them by Coach Tom Scott's white-clad disciples.

Diminutive Jack Mueller grabbed the ball after the opening tip-off, dashed down court, and dumped the first field goal of the game into the basket to give the Deacs a short-lived 2-0 lead.

Carolina Moves Ahead

Stan Najeway ripped the cords with a set shot a moment later, and then the Tar Heels went to work. Dan Nyimicz, who was the leading Carolina scorer with 14 points for the evening, drew first blood for the Scottmen with a quick set shot. Hugo Kappler followed with a pair of push shots and the Tar Heels were off running.

A flurry of wild playing and frequent fouls cropped up at this point in the loosely-officiated game and brought cat-calls from the crowd and dissension from the players. After things cooled off a bit, the Carolinians came roaring back to score almost at will and rolled up a comfortable 40-23 half-time lead.

Deacs Ride High

The Deacs were riding high at the beginning of the second period, and proceeded to outscore their hosts in the opening minutes of the frame. The Tar Heels soon regained their form, however, and went on to "ice" the game with a minimum of effort.

At one point the visitors held the Carolinians scoreless for four minutes and 15 seconds before Howard Deasy broke the scoring famine with a free throw.

The Deacs' Buck Geary monopolized the scoring for the visitors by dropping in a total of 20 points during the course of the night.

Nyimicz, Thorne, and Kappler engaged in a dog-fight for Carolina scoring laurels throughout the game, and the two guards came out on top. Nyimicz, who has hit an amazing scoring streak in recent games, topped the lot with 14 points.

The Tar Heels next game is with league-leading State college in Woollen on Saturday night.

Tar Heel Matmen Meet The Citadel In Fifth Contest

Coach Chuck Quinlan's Tar Heel grapplers will face The Citadel here tonight in their fifth Conference engagement of the season. With a card of five preliminary matches preceeding the varsity meet, the first match is slated to start at 7 o'clock.

In the preliminaries five of the top freshmen wrestlers will tussle with the Citadel reserves. Wrestling for Carolina in the exhibitions will be 128-pounder and once defeated Bob McGimsey, Barry Farber, currently undefeated Bob Pickard, Bob Lovick and Tom Coxe.

The varsity meet will open at approximately 7:45 with the 121-pound match. Kenny Hoffman, who wrestled for the first time in a varsity meet against VMI and won a fall, will open for the Tar Heels in the lightweight division.

Following Hoffman will be 128-pounder Charlie Harless, and 136-pounder Ed Turnley. Carrol Fisher, who has a perfect record of four pins in as many matches, will be gunning for win number five in the 145-pound class.

In the final two weight classes the Tar Heels will enter John Stoioff and Ray Swigart. Swigart has wrestled in only the match with N. C. State, but last week won over Joe Augustine in trials so will be given the starting nod.

Ku Klux Can?

ATLANTA, Feb. 15—(UP)—A committee of the Georgia legislature today began consideration of a bill that would prohibit white and Negro athletes from participating in the same contest.

The bill, turned over to the committee on the state of the Republic, was entitled: "An act to prohibit the white and Negro races from participating together in any athletic contest, exhibition or practice, or to otherwise intermingle in any such contest."

The Brooklyn Dodgers announced recently that their Negro stars, Jackie Robinson and Roy Campanella, would be included in the lineup when the National league club plays an exhibition game at Atlanta this spring. The game was denounced by the Ku Klux Klan, although it was pointed out there was no state law against Negroes and whites playing in the same game.

Anti-Trust Aspects Checked In Dan Gardella Baseball Case

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15—(UP)—The Justice department is looking into the anti-trust aspects of the Danny Gardella baseball case, it was disclosed today.

Officials of the department's anti-trust division said that although no final decision has been reached, the government will have no alternative but to intervene in the case if it involves the status of baseball under anti-trust laws.

At present, they said, department officials are merely discussing the situation informally. A decision to enter the picture very likely would be preceded by an FBI investigation.

These officals said that if the government intervened, it presumably would advise the court hearing the Gardella trial that it believes the radio and television activities of baseball clubs put them in interstate commerce.

As such, the clubs would be subject to Federal anti-trust laws. Such a position, however, would be contrary to a 1922 supreme court ruling that baseball was not interstate commerce within the meaning of the anti-trust statutes.

If the government were to enter the case, the Justice department could file briefs and arguments with the court, spelling out its position on the matter.

He filed suit last year for $300,000 damages against the top officials of organized baseball. His contention was that they were illegally depriving him of the right to make a living.

Harter, Eckert Shine As Frosh Beat Baby Deacs

By Lew Chapman

Sparkling performances by a pair of Tar Baby forwards, both of whom are transplanted Northerners, paced the Carolina frosh five to their first Big Four victory last night at Woollen gym as the Tar Babies trounced Wake Forest freshmen, 48-38.

It was by far the best showing by the Tar Babies of the year as their victory avenged a previous setback suffered at the hands of the Baby Deacs last month in a game played over at Deacon Hollow. The triumph also put Coach Jim Hamilton's lads over the .500 mark for the season with a present record of nine wins and eight losses.

The outstanding pleasure of the evening for Mentor Hamilton was the emergence of a one-two scoring punch that easily kayoed the Deacon frosh. Of the total of 48 points that the yearlings tallied, 39 were scored by the Tar Baby forwards, Dick Harter and Frank Eckert.

Harter high man

Harter, the Pottsdown, Pa. gift to Hamilton, again charmed the assembling crowd with a neat performance under and around the hoop as he utilized tap-ins and layups from the pivot to lead the yearlings with 21 markers. The other half, Eckert, lanky six-footer from Union, N.J., came

Final Day for Ticket Exchange; Priorities Void Rest of Week

Today will be the last day that holders of passbooks ending with even numbers will have priority on a ticket to Saturday night's basketball game with N. C. State here.

Tomorrow morning any passbook holder will be able to exchange his coupon number 21 for a reserved seat ticket to the contest. Students who have not exchanged their coupons will have until Friday at 5 o'clock to do so.

Any of the 6,000 tickets not called for by that time will probably go on public sale Saturday. If students take a chance on waiting until Saturday to get a ticket, they will have to pay the public price of $1.50 if any are available.

More Beards Wanted

Fad Of Forsyth May Hit Campus

By Wink Locklair

If the Winston-Salem Chamber of Commerce has its way about it, the local campus, in a couple of weeks, will look like spring training headquarters for the House of David!

A movement is underway here to encourage all male citizens from Forsyth county (about 300 strong) to grow beards as part of the county's 100th anniversary celebration. The beards are supposed to be worn in honor of their forefathers who founded the county.

Fancy certificates, showing a gentleman with a handsome goatee and mustache, are being distributed in dormitories by representatives of the Forsyth County Bush Growers league. Drawings of rusty razors and shaving mugs decorate the diploma-like pledges which state that: "Being a good civic-minded citizen of Forsyth county, I do hereby agree to do my civic duty and grow a (1) mustache (2) full beard (3) goatee or (4) side-burns as a part of the celebration to be held in May, 1949, in honor of the pioneers that built our great country that we now enjoy."

It's too soon right now to predict what the local response will be to the campaign. But Forsyth and Winston males are pretty patriotic people and whether they are athletic or not, they'll probably bat 1000 in this Bush league.

Naval Officers Offered Billets By Local Unit

Capt. D. W. Loomis, U.S. Navy, professor of Naval science, announced today that extended duty billets for approximately 100 officers of the organized or volunteer reserve are now open.

The billets are for duty as instructors in the reserve officers candidate schools in session this summer from June 20 to August 22 at Newport, R. I., and San Diego, Cal.

Qualified officers may apply by letter to the chief of Naval personnel via the commandant of their naval district. Officers must be lieutenant commanders, lieutenants and lieutenants (junior grade) well equiped to teach navigation, gunnery, communications, seamanship or naval orientation. The letter should include a brief outline of qualifications.

Two reserve medical, dental and supply officers will also be needed. Candidates should apply in the same manner as officers of the line.

Applications must reach the bureau of Naval personnel by May 15. Duty will be limited to the full prescribed periods and no consideration will be given to requests for shorter assignments.

senate for two terms. At least two speakers Monday night pointed out that Long "revitalized the Di senate when it had one foot in the grave." as chairman of a special Di committee, Long organized the first legislature lobby on University budget appropriations. A similar lobby is working now on appropriations and the question of raising University tuition.

Last year Long was elected interim council president for the State Student legislature, and then was elected to the post of speaker of the legislature House of Representatives after the University took over the legislature, which was considered killed by the State college students who were in control before Long was elected president.

Long also served on the varsity debate squad which placed the University third in a 100-team field of international competition at the Tulane university debating tournament more than a year ago.

When Long accepted the CP nomination late Monday night, he told the party he expected to wage "the hardest campaign this campus has ever seen."

He continued, "We will take the issues to the student body and let them have the opportunity of deciding whether they want a government in name or a government in action."

weekend, the girls spoke to the University scholarship committee, to the presidents of the sororities, and to a group from the Interfraternity council.

"The scholarship committee was extremely interested," Dusty said. "They are going to let Mr. Suddeth know their final decision." She added that the sorority and fraternity presidents displayed enthusiasm, too, and that they would talk to their individual chapters about the plan.

The girls suggested to the presidents that their chapters finance, aid, and assist through employment the DPs who might come to school here. The self-help plan is now effective at Dartmouth college and at the University of Michigan, Dusty added.

Sylva, the first DP girl student from Europe to receive a scholarship to an American college, is now working on her citizenship papers.

Talented Musicians

Symphony Has Two Woman Soloists

"Music hath charms," 'tis said, and so do the women members of the North Carolina little symphony now touring the state.

Featured in this year's orchestra are Miss Beth Sears, oboist: and Miss Mary Frances Vaughn, cellist. They will have parts on many programs the little symphony will present in the 35 communities to be visited this season.

Miss Sears plays both the oboe and the English horn. The oboe is one of the most difficult instruments to master, and also one of the hardest on the player.

Tall, blue-eyed Beth received her bachelor's and master's degrees in music from Northwestern university, and she also studied at the University of Illinois and the American Conservatory of Music. For several years she has been the pupil of Robert Mayer, oboist and English hornist with the Chicago symphony.

She has had experience with many civic symphonies in Illinois, including the Chicago Civic orchestra. She knows the little symphony tour schedule practically by heart, since this is her third season.

The haunting, shepherd's pipe strains of Miss Sear's oboe are being featured in two compositions this season. They are Handel's "Concerto No. III in G minor for Oboe and Strings and Barlow's "The Winter's Passed."

Trustee Committee Backs Tuition Raise

THE STAINLESS STEEL DOME of the Morehead planetarium will represent the heavens when the chamber begins actual demonstrations. The workman in the picture above is touching up the welded joints of the dome. When the building is open, the stars will be projected on the dome through the revolving instrument placed in the center of the floor.

Curtain of Stars

Planetarium Chamber Holds Many Wonders

(Ed. note: This is the third in a series of articles on the Morehead planetarium and art gallery. The fourth article, which will take the reader on a tour through the other high spots of the building, will appear in tomorrow morning's Daily Tar Heel.)

By Herb Nachman

An actual demonstration in the Morehead planetarium chamber will be an experience never to be forgotten.

You buy your ticket and enter through one of the "blind corridors" leading from the entrance lobby to the interior of the chamber. You take one of the 500 plush covered seats arranged in circles about the room and wait for the show to begin.

A soft purple light prevails in the chamber giving the effect of early twilight. The first thing you notice about the room is the huge mass of machinery resting in the absolute center of the room under the apex of the dome.

Although not visible at first, the dome itself is made of stainless steel plates welded together. To the left and behind the dome as you enter the room is a large stage which will be used in some phase of the demonstration.

Directly opposite the stage on the northwest side of the room, there is a series of peepholes below the "horizon line." Behind these holes is the control room which is equipped with turntables and recording machines for use during the demonstration.

Finally, to the right center of the room is a semi-circular, raised pulpit affair called the "control panel." This board contains all the operational controls that will be used in the demonstration.

The man who will conduct the demonstration mounts the pulpit.

He goes at once into the preliminaries of the demonstration. "Here are the facts on this room. I am speaking to you through speakers in the apex of the dome. The dome is 68 feet in diameter and 34 feet high from the horizon line which is nine feet, ten inches from the floor.

"The dome is 10 percent perforated and is made of stainless steel throughout. There are approximately 25,000,000 perforations in the dome, which costs $115,000. It is within 1/4 inch of the porifera, or only 1/4 inch from being perfectly symmetrical.

"This demonstration will be projected on the dome with perforated metal plates inside the revolving $75,000 instrument. In actual definition, a planetarium is essentially a multiple projector with which it is possible to reproduce the appearance of the sky for any moment of the past, present, or future, as seen from any spot on the earth's surface.

"The phenomena is not a mo-

Planetarium Will Be Run By Marshall

Has Experience From Adler, Fels

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

RALEIGH, Feb. 16—Dr. Roy K. Marshall, former director of the Fels planetarium in Philadelphia, was approved by the executive committee of the Board of Trustees yesterday as new director of the Morehead planetarium at the University of North Carolina.

A native of Illinois, Dr. Marshall graduated from Ohio Wesleyn university and in 1930 received his M.A. in astro-physics from the University of Michigan where he received his Ph. D. in astronomy in 1932. That year he accepted appointment as guest demonstrator-lecturer at the Alder planetarium in Chicago in the absence of the director.

Two years later he went to the Yerkes observatory at the University of Chicago to measure spectrograms of Class A stars. The results of his work were published in Astrophysical Journal.

Young GOP Club To Meet Tonight

The Young Republicans club will hold a brief meeting in Roland Parker lounge 2 of Graham Memorial tonight at 7:30, President Bill Hipple announced yesterday.

The purpose of the meeting will be to adopt a program "by which the aims of the Republican party in North Carolina can be adequately and forcefully presented to the student body," Hipple said.

Plans for conducting public forums on current national and state political issues will be the major item on the agenda. The possibility of bringing a series of prominent Republican speakers to the campus will also be considered.

Speech by Avey Planned Tonight

"Where is Philosophy Leading Us?" will be the topic of a lecture to be given by Prof. Albert Avey, chairman of the department of philosophy at Ohio State university, tonight at 8 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Prof. Avey will also address a seminar group of philosophy staff members and graduate students from the University and Duke tomorrow evening on "The Present Status of Idealism."

Education Meeting To Be Held Today

The Education department will present the first in a series of meetings this week at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the curriculum laboratory of Peabody hall.

The featured speaker will be authoress Betty Smith who will discuss her latest book Tomorrow Will Be Better.

Legislature To Consider Eight Measures Tonight

The Student legislature will consider seven bills and one resolution at tonight's session in Di hall. The measures include three amendments to election laws, and one constitutional amendment.

Election law amendments include:

1. A bill providing for the location of six polling places, and outlining proper places for students to vote.

2. A bill to make the Elections board responsible for printing and proofreading election ballots.

3. A bill setting forth the responsibilities and duties of election monitors.

The constitutional by - law amendment provides that amendments will be added to the end of the constitution.

Other bills include appropriations to the Student Entertainment committee for $1160.60 and to the National Students' association for $227.

The resolution would put the legislature on record favoring soft drink vending machines in men's dormitories and providing for the appointment of a legislative committee to work on the project.

Authorities Say Nylon-Destroyer Could Be Worse

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 16—(UP)—An airborne irritant cost a few more Jacksonville lasses their nylons today but authorities said they were lucky they still have their health.

Dr. W. W. Rogers, city health officer, said that the conditions may be similar to those in Donora, Pa., recently when a "death fog" seared lungs and caused death in asthmatic victims.

The soot particles that apparently carry sulphurous, nylon-attacking acid here fortunately cannot be inhaled, Rogers said.

A certain degree of moisture in the air converts the sulphuric waste into acid in a rare combination of conditions such as that at Donora, he added.

"It probably won't happen again in a coon's age," Rogers said. "But if it does it won't be a tragedy because there is so much dilution here. But it ought to point out to people in a congested community to be careful about what they turn loose into the air."

The state board of Health's industrial hygiene division examined some of the shredded stockings under a microscope today and found a tiny soot particle at each hole in the texture.

Survey to Ascertain Local Interest In Thomas Wolfe Memorial Is Taken

A survey to find out if interest in Thomas Wolfe, famous writer and former University student, is sufficiently strong to warrant a memorial to Wolfe is now being conducted by a New York firm for the Thomas Wolfe Memorial association.

A representative of the firm, Leonard Wood, left Chapel Hill yesterday afternoon after a two-day visit here during which he spoke with many prominent Chapel Hill residents.

Questionnaires which Wood gave to persons he spoke to asked such questions as: "Are you willing to contribute to a Thomas Wolfe memorial? Do you think interest in Wolfe is increasing or decreasing? What kind of a memorial would be preferable to commemorate the name of Wolfe?

Wood has travelled extensively in the western part of the State and has visited Charlotte, Asheville, the home town of Wolfe, and Chapel Hill. At the present time, he is carrying on his survey work in Greensboro.

Board's Executive Group Casts Vote Unanimously

Resolution Looks Forward to Time When Conditions Will Permit Drop

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

RALEIGH, Feb. 16—The Executive committee of the Board of Trustees today unanimously went on record as favoring an increase in tuition rates at the three branches of the Greater University of North Carolina.

The 12-man committee chairmanned by Gov. Kerr Scott, met in the governor's office here. The resolution to support the tuition hike recommended by the Advisory Budget commission was introduced by Mrs. Laura Cone.

Mrs. Cone's resolution read:

"Moved that it having become apparent that in order to maintain the standard of excellency of instruction at the three branches of the University than an increase in tuition as recommended by the commission is necessary, this committee goes on record as favoring the increase recommended by the commission."

Dr. Clarence Poe introduced an amendment to the bill which was accepted by the committee. It read:

"This action is taken by the Executive committee with the belief that this increase represents no greater increase than the increase during recent years in the value of hours of labor and the prices of produce. We look forward to the time when economic conditions will permit a return to the present tuition rates."

The only member of the Executive committee who could not be present at today's meeting was Judge John J. Parker of Charlotte.

Immediate comments were not available from administration or student leaders at Chapel Hill, but the action of the committee was denounced by those members of the student body who heard the report of the trustees' meeting.

Debaters Hold Meet at Duke; Georgia Today

Squad Schedules Elon College Next

Following up a non-decision debate with Duke university yesterday afternoon, the varsity debate squad will meet the University of Georgia at 7:30 tonight in Phi hall in New East building.

Tomorrow the squad will go to Elon college, accompanied by the junior varsity and freshman debate teams.

The varsity squad is composed of Herbert Yates and Dave Pittman (affiirmative) and Herb Mitchell and Paul Roth (negative). Emily Baker substituted for Mitchell in yesterday's tangle with Duke.

Chairman Earl Fitzgerald of the debate council yesterday announced an innovation in intercollegiate debating with the selection of a faculty panel of judges to sit at varsity debates.

The permanent council consisting of 24 heads of departments and leading professors from those departments was picked with an eye toward "outstanding debating interests and abilities," Fitzgerald said.

The permanent panel members, and their departments are: Dean C. P. Spruill, economics; Dean Fred Weaver, general administration, Dean Robert Wettach, Law school and Dean E. L. Mackie, mathematics.

Dr. A. G. Engstrom, french; Roy Armstrong and C. E. Teague, general administration; Dr. C. B. Robson and Donald Whitehead, political science; Dr. C. C. Dr. A. G. Engstrom, French; Earl Wynn, radio; N. W. Mattis, speech; Drs. W. C. Ryan and Guy Phillips, education.

The entire force of the Institute of government also is included. Dr. Albert Coates, W. M. Cochrane, George H. Esser, Donald B. Hayman, Henry B. Lewis, Donald W. McCoy, J. A. McMahon, David G. Monroe, Clifford Pace and J. Dickson Phillips.

Voluntary Subscription Bill Voted Down by Phi Assembly

A proposal to finance student publications by voluntary subscriptions in place of compulsory fes was voted down 12 to 6 in the Philanthropic assembly meeting in Phi hall Tuesday night.

A substitute resolution by Jonathan Marshall which would have provided that the student legislature appropriate no more than 50 per cent of the publications' funds was defeated 18 to 1.

Bill Duncan, editor of Yackety Yack, favored voluntary subscriptions. He contended that money passing through South Building had a tint of socialism.

Tom Wharton, co-editor of Tarnation, speaking of the difficulties of solicity advertisements, expressed the opinion that his magazine would either have to get as "dirty" as State's Wautaugan or pass out of existence if denied appropriations.

Tom Kerr of Tarnation pointed out that a magazine like "Holiday" operated at a deficit for two years.

While Marshall's substitute resolution was under consideration, John Giles asked that if the legislature provided up to 50 per cent of the funds for publications that would go only to subscribers, would not non-subscribing students be paying "50 per cent for nothing instead of 100 per cent for something?"

Dave Sharpe called for continuation of the present yearly fee system using Machiavelli's dictum: "If you have to hit 'em, hit 'em all at once."

Charles Britt thought that if he were allowed to exercise the veto power of cutting off his subscription, he would get better service.

Letter Is Sent To Kerr Scott On Tuition Hike

President Condemns Stand on Tuition

Student body President Jess Dedmond said yesterday that he has sent a letter to Gov. Kerr Scott protesting the tuition raise which Scott said last week he would "ask and insist" of the Board of Trustees.

Dedmond's letter said, "In view of this statement I must express, in the name of the students at the University of North Carolina, my disagreement with your stated position."

In his message to Scott, Dedmond pointed out that the recommendation does not "appear consistent with your go-forward' program.

The letter continued, "It is at the same time, it seems to me, a desertion of the stated principle of the North Carolina constitution and the basic principles of public education.

"Is not the purpose of public higher educational institutions to make educational opportunities available to all the qualified youth of the state? Is it not possible, in line with your apparent stand, that the youth of tthe state will be sacrificed for the state's private schools?

"Here at Chapel Hill we like to feel that the sons of the farmers and of the common men, whose cause you have espoused, have an opportunity for training to serve their state and nation.

"We feel that any increase in tuition tends to close the door which should be opened wider for all the state's qualified youth."

Lecture Slated On Jurisprudence

The first of two lectures in the field of historical jurisprudence will be delivered tonight at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of Bingham hall by Dr. Jerome Hall, professor at Indiana University.

"The Value Problem in Jurisprudence" will be the topic of Hall's speech. Tomorrow at noon, in 105 Caldwell hall, he will speak on "Law as a Cultural Fact."

During his visit here, he will be the special guest of the political science department.

Holding degrees from Chicago, Columbia, and Harvard, Dr. Hall served the law faculties at North Dakota and Louisiana State university, and has since 1939 been professor of law at Indiana university.

Richard Lyman To Talk Tonight

Dr. Richard S. Lyman, chief of the neuropsychiatric service of Duke hospital and professor of psychiatry at Duke School of Medicine, will speak tonight at 8 o'clock in New West under the sponsorship of Alpha Psi Delta psychological fraternity, President Al Branca announced yesterday.

Nash to Address Freshman Council

Dr. Arnold Nash, head of the University's department of religion, will speak to the YMCA freshman council tonight at 7 o'clock in the Y building.

His topic will be the "Place of Religion in Life."

Get Ready to Pay

North Carolinians who intend to study at any of the three branches of the University next year might as well start hauling out their pocket books or writing home to have dad haul out his. The executive committee of the board of trustees yesterday went on record as favoring the increase in tuition as recommended by the advisory budget commission.

This does not mean the tuition raise is a fact as yet, but it does put a pistol to the head of any hopes that the raise will not be made. The increase still has to be acted on by the complete board of trustees, but a recommendation from the executive committee is almost as good as a guarantee that the measure will pass—that is unless a great many more trustees rapidly become aware of the situation and its ramifications.

The resolution passed by the executive board states that the increase is necessary "to maintain the standard of excellency of instruction at the three branches of the University." The resolution adds that the committee takes its action in the belief that the increase (from $81 to $150 a year for in-state students) "represents no greater increase than the increase during recent years of the value of hours of labor and the prices of produce."

If the committee actually means this, then the faculty of the Greater University may look forward to substantial salary increases or else to the reduction of their work load through the hiring of additional teachers. It is readily apparent that if the increase in tuition is no greater than the increase in the value of hours of labor, then our faculty is grossly underpaid. In a national average the cost of instruction has risen only 30 per cent in the last ten years, while the recommended increase in tuition amounts to approximately 85 per cent. The trustees should not confuse themselves in talking of the "prices of produce." Tuition, by the very meaning of its name, is meant to cover only the cost of instruction, and "prices of produce" enter into the picture only as they affect the "value of hours of labor" of the instructors.

In concluding its resolution the committee said, "We look forward to the time when economic conditions will permit a return to the present tuition rates." Gentlemen, we are afraid you are like the taxpayers. Ever since the first taxes were imposed, people have been looking forward to the day when they would be lowered.

Some People Never Learn

It looks as if politicians never learn.

Yesterday the University party nominated two men to run for the co-editorship of Tarnation. This is not saying anything against the candidates. Either of them might be fully capable of editing the magazine. But if they are elected as co-editors they will run into trouble.

Everyone who has worked in or with a co-editorship has found the arrangement inefficient and unsatisfactory. Two members of the Publications board, which has dealt with the same situation twice in the last two years, tried to explain the difficulties to the party caucus. Others who have worked with publications also spoke against co-editorship. But party politics overruled common sense.

The objections were well founded in experience.

At the beginning of fall quarter last year, purely as a matter of expediency, three people were nominated and elected to serve as a board of editors for the Yackety-Yack. Any one of them would have made a good editor, but with authority split three ways they ran into trouble. None could make a decision without consulting the other two, and at least one of the three was always unavailable. As a consequence the Yack staff did not meet a single deadline the whole year, paid penalty after penalty for failing to meet the terms of its contracts with printers and engravers, exceeded its budget and finally got the book out in the summer after students who had paid for it had gone home.

Last spring co-editors were nominated and elected for Tarnation. Either of them could have done a capable job, but together they have run into trouble. With more than half of the school year gone only two of seven proposed issues have appeared and the magazine is well over its budget.

The trouble is not with the people who are elected as co-editors. The trouble is with the system. Unless responsibility is specifically fixed, it is too easy for one member of the firm to assume that the other is attending to the small, anoying, but important details. Too often it is discovered too late that the other partner was acting under the same assumption in reverse.

Endorsement For Talley

By Don Shropshire

One thing that most political parties seem to have forgotten these days is that there is more involved in the office of vice president than mere presiding over the student legislature. Indications of their choices for this post tend to point out that their candidates are simply misplaced. The presence of these men on the floor would be invaluable, but it would be unfortunate to tie up each man's abilities in the administrative, and neglected, function of the office they seek.

There are several considerations one must take into account when selecting a man for this important position. First of all, he must have a wealth of experience to draw from in these difficult situations that tie up efficient handling of legislative affairs. The Legislature continually stands in need of a leader who can pull the opposing faction together for valuable action. Respect and unquestioned integrity must be accompanied with an eye for efficiency, an ability for leadership, and a disgust for pettiness.

The support that this man can give the president is also of great importance: they must act as a team. To act, one must first possess a strong will to hold a conviction, and an absolute determination not to be over-run by the threatening powers "behind the throne." We've seen enough of "rubber backs" in our government who serve only as a tool in the hands of scoundrels who should have been run away long ago.

For experience, integrity, capability, willingness, and unusual initiative, this column would like to place in nomination a man whose services would be a real credit to his office and an outstanding feature in student government—Banks Talley. This man's careful consideration and resulting conviction on those problems which have confronted him in campus life is something that should be known and respected by every student. These rare qualities have been observed as Talley served his party as Chairman, his fraternity as pledge class president, his debating colleagues as president pro tem of the Dialectic senate, and his fellow-students as an unselfish, hardworking member of the student legislature, the Tri-partisan board, the coalition cabinet, and the Carolina forum.

Banks Talley knows student government—its merits, and most important of all, its shortcomings. If he were serving as vice-president of this student body, the campus could rest on the assurance that it had a man in office who refuses to be blindly led, and a man who would firmly "tan the seat" of disgusting incompetence.

American Diplomatic Immaturity

By Charlie Kauffman

Just at the time when the negotiations for the North Atlantic pact seemed to be shaping up in the minds of not only the diplomats but the peoples of the proposed signatory nations, just at the time when Western Europe was feeling the first precious tinges of national security since the days following the Kellogg-Briand Peace pact, at the very time when this promise of military security had become linked so closely with the indications of continued American support for the economic recovery of Europe, all the capitals of the North Atlantic powers, save those in Washington with its indomitable fetish for unilateral action on questions of American foreign policy, had their hopes for effective military unity shaken to the very foundations by the realization that the United States Department of State had, all along, been conducting the negotiations for a military pact without the all-important Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs even being familiar with the provisions of the pact, much less having indicated approval of these provisions.

This means that the State department acted almost independently, and of its own accord, proceeded to prod the Scandinavian countries into important long-term policy commitments on the basis of not-yet-agreed-upon pact provisions which the U.S. Senate could not possibly ratify without surrendering its power under the Constitution as the sole war-making body in this nation.

Lange, the Norwegian foreign minister, quickly discovered what the situation would be between the State Department and the Senate when the pact would be submitted for ratification during his parleys with Secretary Acheson in Washington last week. It became clear to Lange as the position of the U.S. under the proposed pact commitments were spelled out to him, that important U.S. policy negotiations were being carried on in full knowledge that the U.S. Senate had not seen the tentative proposals of the pact, particularly that proposal wherein it was indicated that, if ratified, the pact would place a moral obligation on the U.S. to come to the direct aid of any signatory if she were attacked.

Upon his return to Norway, Lange immediately got into contact with the foreign ministers of Denmark and Sweden, and with Danish Gustav Ramussen acting as spokesman, it was made clear that these countries believe the U. S. State department is responsible for the mess the entire negotiations are now bogged down in as they (all the European pact powers) took it for granted that "the State department had thoroughly discussed every proposal of the projected pact with leading senators of both parties, for the assurance that such provisions would meet the requirements of the Senate The State department may also be held responsible for so beclouding the U. S. stand on the pact provisions that even the original Brussels pact signatories, particularly France, frightened by overt signs of American infidelity, are attacking Washington through every diplomatic channel available. They want to know what the devil our policy is; they are desperately concerned by the further evidences of "cloak and dagger" diplomacy on the part of the Truman administration.

Monday afternoon in the Senate, the entire odious affair was aired, and by the time Senator Connally finished saying, among other things, that: "We are not responsible for the disagreements that might grow up in the countries of Europe. Any European nation might be attacked by another nation. . .," "Not only was there no legal commitment to go to war in the event of an armed attack on one of the pact signatories, but there was no moral obligation to do so," it became clear that indeed the Senate saw itself as having its "war-making powers," the most precious legislative reservation of that august body, snatched away by the executive branch of the government. The reaction in the Senate when the pact is finally presented will, of course, be violent.

It is the opinion of this writer that, in due regard for the future peace of the world, and in recognition that the future etao etaoietaeoaointiee entire power of the proposed pact moves on the action of the United States, that a moral obligation for defensive action on the part of each signatory should be included in the pact. That the Senate would not ratify a pact as such was by no means so certain a month ago as it is foregone conclusion today. Further, that the U.S. State department, now having disrupted all negotiations on both sides of the Atlantic, has done irreperable damage where the very pact itself was designed to play the leading role: the creation of military security, of unity of purpose and action in the maintenance of European peace. What long-range consequences the events of the past week will have on the diplomatic circles are difficult to estimate. What is very clear to assess is a continuation of the bungling which has so marked the conduct of American foreign relations for the past two years, and the realization that the U.S. Senate has not the vaguest intention of surrendering one shred of its Constitutional power of free and unlimited interpretation of any and all pact commitments in the light of conditions at any given time.

U.S. Is Heading Right into The Poor House?

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Don't try to read this out loud because your tongue may get twisted, but the rich Mr. Rich declares we're statisticising ourselves into the poor house.

"There are 65 separate and distinct government agencies engaged in gathering statistics," he thunders with rich invective. "They are forever pestering the life out of the people."

Rep. Robert F. Rich, of Pennsylvania, ought to know because he is in more businesses than you can shake a Victor Emanuel at. In addition to being a member of Congress he is up to his G.O.P. ears in textiles, banks, manufactures, and colleges, being trustee of about half a dozen of the latter.

Since coming to Congress 20 years ago he has been known as "Where are you going to-get-the-money Rich?" Because his speechmaking on the floor of the House is confined mainly to that one interrogative sentence. His "Where are you going to get the money?" is almost as much of an identifying theme song as Carl Brisson's "white gardenia."

Rich Rich says the government isn't growing, but is busting. To prove his point against satisticising he did some statisticianing of his own which he thrust under the austere nose of ex-President Hoover at a House hearing on the Hoover Commision report the other day.

In addition to the 65 statisticbureaus, he statisticked, there are 29 agencies dealing with lending of government funds: 34 with acquisition of land; 16 with wild life preservation; 10 with government construction, and 12 with home and community planning.

Looks as if we're loaded with statistocrats.

* * *

Mention of the Hoover Commission reminds me that a dumb joke is being circulated around the Capitol. It is usually hung on the secretary of some congressman, but I have heard so many secretaries named that I'm sure it's just one of those things.

Anyway a Congressman is supposed to have informed his secretary that the Hoover commission planned to do a thorough housecleaning. Seeing her blank look, he said: "You know what the Hoover commission is, don't you?"

"Certainly," replied the dame. "What do you think I am—dumb? It goes around selling vacuum cleaners."

Write Away

The Reds Want 'Peace'

Editor:

In reply to the enthusiasm of your writers for Mr. Truman's Inaugural address and program, let me first quote a few lines by I. F. Stone, now of the N. Y. Post, who supported Truman in the election It("Truman's speech) was shallow, naive, childishly arrogant and self-righteous, a call for war thinly masked as a pledge of peace. . . . Only naivete and ignorance can accept Mr. Truman's pharasaical self-portrait of American policy. A country which constantly by-passes the U. N., curries favor with Peron, does business with any number of military dictators in Latin America, deals under the table with Franco, interferes in Italian elections and supports reactionaries in Greece has too many motes in its own eye to preach a dubious freedom in Eastern Europe and China." (N. Y. Star, Jan. 21)

Truman wants to put the "old imperialism" behind. It is late. We did that after the Spanish-American War. Since then we have become the world leader in the new imperialism, which appears in a rank form in Truman's speech. Already it is easy for those who will look to see that this policy of Truman's corrupt corporation cabinet is failing not only to improve the lives of the people of the world (which it was not intended to do), but also to support reactionaries in Greece, China, Italy, etc., etc. Even Turkey is boiling under the surface. Western Europe experiences increasing unemployment and falling living standards for the masses of the people. Dulles and friends intended, of course, that the Marshall plan should export unemployment, but even there theyl fail. U. S. unemployment increases daily, along with speed-up, stretch-outs, and short weeks.

The briefest review of what the Administration and Congress are doing domestically today will show that they know that this foreign policy of arming reactionary exploiters all over the world makes it impossible to fulfill Truman's promises to the American people. We are to have depression and suppression to match our foreign oppression. . . .

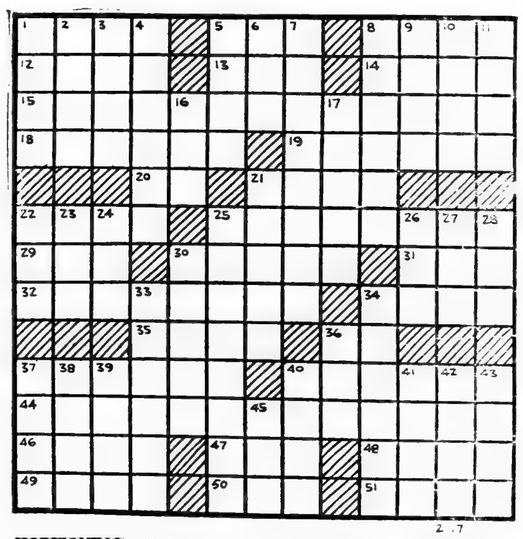
Editor:



Mr. Charlie Kauffman's recent column is a reflection of the cause which he supports; it is utterly contradictory. Clearly, Time and Life, which furnishes the intellectual pablum of our time, gave our columnist the "facts" but not the conclusion. Hence his conclusion fails to make deductions from the facts. In every paragraph, Mr. Kauffman makes clear that the intent of the North Atlantic "security pact" is war—he mentions divisions, etc.—but he, in his final sentence, still wonders "what our real intent toward Russia is." The price of naivete in politics is rather terrible. Daily our true intent is becoming so plain that even the least politically aware persons are beginning to sense that something is wrong. For the intent of all our policies, Mr. Kauffman, is war.

Someday men will look back at this period and say, "Why didn't we listen to Wallace!" Wallace resigned from the cabinet over two years ago because it was plain to him then that our foreign policy was heading us toward war. Each day, each action, makes brutally clear the logic of Wallace's position. Wallace has said all along that the Marshall Plan, which could never succeed, was in reality a war-plan. Does anyone doubt this now? Wallace has also said that the cold war would lead to a real war, suggesting that a country does not spend $20,000,000,000 annually for armaments and then not use them. Nor does a nation build 70-group air forces, recruit an army, erect its whole economy upon war—if war is not its eventual aim!

Remember the Vinson "affair"? What has happened to Truman's intention to reach an agreement with Russia? It seems to be still another one of his demogogic promises. For do we want peace? The truth is that peace would smash our economy. It would blow up our "prosperity." It would throw out the props beneath our "white man's burden" of saving the world from the feared Bolsheviks.

Yes, Mr. Kauffman, each day the truth of our policies are becoming clear, crystal clear. They are after your life, Mr. Kauffman, the men in the State department, your life, your family's and mine.

Stars of Southern Indoor Season

Maryland Meet Entries Listed

By Frank Allston, Jr.

Carolina track coach Dale Ranson announced yesterday that nine Tar Heel thinclads had definitely been entered in the University of Maryland Invitational meet at College Park this Saturday. There is a possibility of three other Carolina men running this weekend.

According to pre-meet figuring, the Naval academy and the host Terp team are the favorites. Maryland copped the team crown in '48 and Navy finished in the runner-up spot.

Carolina, third last season, has a good chance of upsetting the favorites this year.

The Tar Heel tracksters will be strongest in the hurdle divisision. Coach Ranson and assistant Coach Joe Hilton have entered three men in each of the 70-yard highs and lows.

Veteran timber-toppers Dick Taylor and Bob Morrow will be joined by speedy first-year man Bill Albans in the lows and Taylor, Morrow and Jack Moody will run the highs. Mario Salvanelli of Maryland is one of the many top men who will oppose the Tar Heels in the hurdles.

In the 60-yard dash Carolina has Albans entered. Bill ran a 6.4 dash in a practice meet recently and might turn in a winning performance in the meet Saturday.

The high jump also finds Carolina very well represented. Both Jack Moody, '48 Southern indoor champ, and Billy Joyner, outdoor title holder, are entered in the Maryland games. Albans, who has also turned in some fine high jump performances, will not be entered in the high jump event.

Julian MacKenzie and Sam Magill, Carolina's top distance men, will run the half-mile and the two mile event respectively. Both men will be competing against a star-studded field.

Bob Seligman, conference indoor shot champ, and Turk Ogden will carry the colors of the Blue and White in the shot put.

The doubtful entries for Carolina in the meet Saturday are Clarence McLain in the 660-yard run, Ralph Marshall in the 60 and Laddie Terrell in the 660.

Maryland, picked as the conference team likely to give Carolina's defending champions the most trouble this year, has an equally strong team in the meet. In addition to Salvanelli, the Terps have three other entries who could gain first places.

Coach Jim Kehoe's top-knotch mile relay team of Salvanelli, Paul Ostyre, George McGowan and Ed Matthews turned in a fine 3:23 showing in Madison Square garden recently and is picked to win this week-end. Sprinter Bill Alexion and Paul Ostyre, a 660 entrant, are two other top-rated Terps.

Duke will probably enter shot putter Jim O'Leary, hurdler Bill Reeves and their relay team which captured second-place behind Maryland in the recent Washington Evening Star games.

Tar Heel Wrestlers Down Citadel

Ray Swigart Wins Unlimited Match In 19-13 Victory

By Buddy Vaden

A 10-6 decision by Ray Swigart in the final bout of the match gave Coach Chuck Quinlan's varsity wrestlers a 19-13 decision over the Citadel in Woollen gym last night. It was the third win for the Tar Heels in five outings.

Kenny Hoffman, in the opening match with Citadel's Tommy Maddox, was ahead by two points halfway through the second round when Maddox caught him unawares and put his shoulders to the mat at 1:29. In the next weight class little Charlie Harless was given a big order in Conference runner-up Bob Scarborough and he was unable to do anything with the more experienced wrestler.

After Ed Turnley lost a 7-2 decision in the 136-pound class, Carrol Fisher added five more points to his personal total by collecting his fifth pin in five meets. He pinned with comparative ease Citadel's Vail in 2:29 of the first round to start the Tar Heels on their winning ways. . Phil Kemp followed in the 155-pound weight with a 9-1 decision over Scott and put the Tar Heels only five points behind the Cadets.

Oscar Gupton won his first pin of the year when he got a cradle on Citadel's helpless Cannon in 1:52 of the opening round. Gupton was in complete control throughout the shortened period and was ahead on points at the time of the pin.

John "Mitzie" Stoioff put the Tar Heels three points ahead with an 8-4 decision over Jack Huddle in the 175-pound division, but the Citadel still had a chance to win the meet with a fall in the final period.

That was when Swigart came into the picture. This year he had wrestled only one varsity meet and lost that on a fall. But last night he appeared much improved in his 10-6 win over Private Riddle. Swigart got the first takedown and then reversed Riddle in the opening of the second period. Riddle escaped to neutral and Swigart took him down again and maintained the advantage.

Carolina's grapplers will get their hardest test of the year when they meet Washington and Lee,

Unknowns Stun Champ Blackballs

The Unknowns' stunning 62-42 victory over the Blackballs, last year's campus champions, featured yesterday's Intramural basketball playoff games in Woollen gym, while Sigma Chi 2, Oakwood Drive, and Chi Phi 3 emerged as victors in the afternoon's other contests.

Picked by many as the team to beat in the dormitory division, the Blackballs easily won the league 1 title and advanced to the semi-finals by defeating the Panthers, 67-39, Tuesday night. After a close, low-scoring first half, the Unknowns, led by Jim Landis, Andy Tranavitch, and Jack Hobbs, got red-hot and made the tilt a runaway in the final stanza.

Landis amassed a total of 18 points to lead the Unknowns, while Hobbs and Tranavitch tied for runnerup honors for the winners with 12 apiece. McKiernan was high for the losers with 12 markers.

Oakwood Drive, making its first appearance in the playoffs, earned the right to meet the Grads this afternoon in the semi-finals by stopping Med School 2, 43-38, in a well played quarter-finals contest.

The Oakwood quint held a 21-18 advantage at intermission and managed to hold on to the slender margin throughout the second half. Willian Lee was tops for the winners with a neat total of 18 points, and Sam Stallard led the Med Schoolers with 14.

On the fraternity side of the playoffs, Zeta Psi saw two of its teams meet defeat. The Zeta 1 cagers, who came out on top in league 2, were nosed out by the Sigma Chi 2 five, 30-28, in a nip and tuck affair. The count was deadlocked at 14-all at half-time, and the issue was in doubt until the final gun. R. L. McDonald racked up 15 markers to pace the Sigma Chi hoopsters, and he was followed by E. Martin, who accounted for nine points. Bud Ruffin had nine for the losers.

Chi Phi 3, paced by Joe Hamilton and Dale Morrison, posted a 53-36 win over the Zeta 3 aggregation. The winners were out in front, 28-10, at the end of the first half and were never seriously threatened. Hamilton had 18 points to his credit, while Morrison had 15. Brack Schell hit for 13, and Edgar Betty had eight for the Zetes.

Cagers, Swimmers Hold Stiff Drills For Weekend Tilts

The Carolina basketball and swimming squads both got in an afternoon of hard practice yesterday in preparation for important outings this weekend.

Coach Tom Scott's cagers, 69-54 victors over Wake Forest already this week, face perhaps the biggest assignment. The Carolina quint tackles N. C. State, currently far ahead in the Southern conference standings, in an all-important game in Woollen gymnasium Saturday night.

Local swimming enthusiasts will be able to get their fill of tank competition this weekend with both the varsity and freshman squads in action in a doubleheader tomorrow and the Southern Interscholastics here all day Saturday.

Opposition for the varsity will be furnished by Emory and the meet will begin at 4 o'clock. The Tar Babies will open the festivities two hours earlier against Sewanee Prep.

The Tar Heels, holders of a 5-1 record for the season, will be engaging in their first meet since bowing to Ohio State.

Frosh Submerge Duke

The Carolina freshman swimmers turned back the Duke frosh natators, 24-12 in a practice meet here yesterday afternoon. Each team copped two first places.

Carolina's Kirby Ambler won the 50-yard freestyle which was run in four heats and the winner picked on the basis of time. Cecil Milton copped the 220-yard freestyle.

A total of 215 students have notified their dean that they expect to complete the required work this quarter for a degree. Miss Josephine Prichard, recorder in Central Records office, said yesterday.

These students will not be awarded the degree until commencement day June 6. However, as soon as they clear all required work and all fees with the University cashier, T. H. Evans, they will be given a certification card showing that everything is clear for the degree.

tion picture in sense, but rather a moving picture. A grand total of about 9,000 star images are projected.

"Colored lights in troughs below the horizon will add color to the demonstration and music from the control room will add realism. The lights in the troughs are on three-color circuits and can produce colors from warm-white to bourbon blue.

"This is the first dome of its type in the world to be put under a gabled room and suspended with steel cables. The engineer of the dome, W. F. Bleidenbach of the construction department of Johns-Manville has engineered three of the four stainless steel domes in the United States.

"The entire room is air-conditioned and the dome is soundproofed with rock-wool insulation. There is no reverberation and almost no echo. The four emergency exits are placed at the three cardinal points. They will be opened at the conclusion of the demonstration to clear the hall for the next show."

After this introduction, the demonstration begins.

First the powdery, irregular path of the Milky Way is reproduced on the dome. This consists of the blended light of millions of stars too faint because of distance to be separately distinguished.

The next phase of the demonstration features the sun, moon, and planets. This picture which includes the phases of the moon and sunrise and sunset, is projected against the skyline of metropolitan New York.

Completing the demonstration is a magnificent meteor shower, the northern lights, several constellation pictures, Halley's comet, and an eclipse of the moon.

A small projector held in the demonstrator's hand is used to project the image of a luminous arrow on the sky, to point out any specific object. During the demonstration the motors of the machinery hum softly and as if by magic the stars roll overhead.

The grand finale to the demonstration is a trip to the moon, during which you sit in a startlingly realistic reproduction of a lunar crater. Demonstrations of this type are made possible by arranging tableaux behind the projection surface, especially at the Christmas season.

By changing the topic, usually at the beginning of the month, the whole field of astronomy can be explored with little repetition, the lecturer explains. This completes the wonders of the planetarium chamber.

In describing the Adler planetarium in Chicago, its first director, Dr. Philip Fox, said, "The visitors come to see a stirring spectacle, the heavens brought within the confines of museum walls. Not a trivial plaything, a mimic aping firmament, but the heavens portrayed in great dignity and splendor, dynamic, inspiring, in a way that dispels the mystery but retains the majesty."

DURING GRADUATION EXERCISES at the Chicago Park District Dog Training association, registered samoyed "Tibeliviosdi of Sannar" sails gracefully over a hurdle in front of an admiring audience.

Eating Some 'Crisses'

One Little Piece of Chicken Can Cause One Lots of Trouble

By J. L. Merritt

One little piece of chicken caused Willie Page, local Negro, a lot of trouble Tuesday afternoon in the Chapel Hill Recorder's court.

Page, who was charged with assaulting his wife, told Judge Henry Whitfield that he went home two Sundays ago expecting a good home-cooked meal.

He said he began his dinner by eating some "crisses" and he asked his wife for a piece of chicken. But instead of giving him the chicken, she threw the pot containing the chicken on the floor. Then Page proceeded to work her over.

Mrs. Page exhibited a badly-bruised eye to the court as proof of his handiwork, and testified he had badly beaten and kicked her until she lost consciousness. She admitted she had thrown the chicken on the floor when he asked for it. But Judge Whitfield ruled that her action was not sufficient to warrant the beating Page gave her, and he sentenced him to six months on the roads. Page immediately appealed and his bond was set at $500.

Other cases heard were:

Jack Robertson, Negro, drunkenness, $5 and costs; Joshue P. Flowers, Jr., failure to stop at stop sign, costs; Pip Huskey, drunkenness, $5 and costs; John Henry Cates, speeding and reckless driving, prayer for judgment continued on payment of damages and revocation of drivers license for 90 days; Joseph Wilson, speeding, costs.

Raise In Tuition Going Toward Salaries

Trustee Committee OK's Parking Restrictions

GRACING THE CENTER of the Dartmouth college campus at Hanover, N. H., a grinning imp appears over the edge of a ski boot, representing the spirit of the winter carnival. The original statue was designed by Stephenson Flemer, class of '50, of Princeton, N. J.

Group Passes New Rulings Recommended

Spring Quarter Marks Beginning

Parking regulations which will restrict virtually every campus parking area within the "walking zone" were passed by the executive committee of the Board of Trustees in Raleigh on Monday, Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., announced yesterday.

The recommendations of the University Safety committee were approved by Chancellor House Jan. 24 and were held over for approval by the executive committee.

House said the recommendations, as passed by the executive committee, are:

1. Restrictions on all parking lots will be effective between 7 o'clock in the morning and 2 o'clock in the afternoon, Monday through Friday.

2. In addition to the parking areas already reserved to red sticker parking, the following lots will be restricted: (1) The road leading from Cameron avenue to Emerson stadium, west side; (2) The road leading from Cameron avenue to Alumni building; (3) The small parking areas adjacent to and south of Lenoir hall and Venable hall; (4) The parking area around Swain hall, Smith dorm and Hill hall; (5) All developed parking lots behind the library.

3. The following areas will be reserved for faculty and staff parking and physically-handicapped students under the new rulings: (1) The parking area adjacent to Steele dormitory, Carr dorm, Bynum and Caldwell halls; (2) The parking area on the road leading from Cameron avenue to Alumni; (3) And the parking area between Phillips hall and the Buildings department.

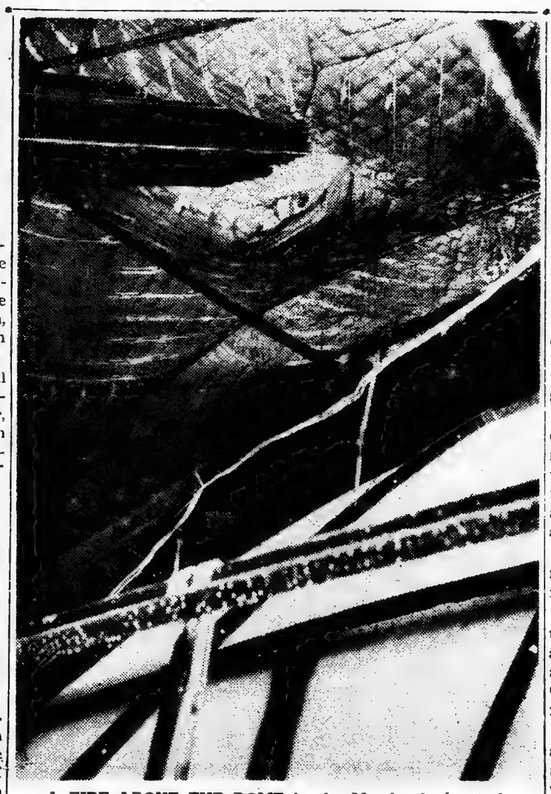
Carmichael said that the new restrictions will go into effect on March 22 which is the first day of spring quarter classes. Another official said the reason for the date is to allow plenty of time to issue necessary stickers and erect the necessary signs.

Di Protests Tuition Hike In Resolution

Requests Rates At Present Level

The higher tuition fees approved by the executive committee of the Board of Trustees yesterday, on recommendation of the Advisory Budget commission, drew a protest yesterday from the Dialectic senate.

Arguing against the proposal to increase the fees for state students from $81 to $150 a year, the Di released a resolution which "strongly disapproved" of the proposed increase and "called upon the people of the state, the General assembly, and the Board of Trustees to take action to maintain tuition at the present level.



RALEIGH, Feb. 17—(UP)—North Carolina State college students today urged the state legislature not to raise tuition rates throughout the Greater University of North Carolina. The State college campus government adopted a resolution suggesting that the money needed to maintain University standards at present levels come from other sources than higher tuition rates

The senate adopted by a vote virtually unanimous a resolution which said in part:

"The constitution of the state states that the General assembly shall provide that the benefits of the University, as far as practicable, be extended to the youth of the state free of expense for tuition.'

"Any increase in tuition is a departure from the constitutionally-stated principle and will work an undue hardship on many present students and would assuredly deny higher educational opportunities to many potential students.

"It is not the purpose of the University to compete on a financial basis with the denominational colleges, but instead to provide educational opportunities for all the qualified youth in the state, regardless of their financial status."

Faculty Will Get Benefits --Carmichael

Says Non-Staters Are Also Affected

By Margaret Gaston

"Virtually all" money gained through the raise in tuition recommended by the executive committee of the Board of Trustees will be used to increase faculty salaries, Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., said yesterday.

"Any person who realistically examines facts that exist today must reluctantly resign themselves to University students paying more if University standards are to be maintained," Carmichael said.

The proposed increase would raise tuition for in-state students from $81 to $150.

Carmichael pointed out that the proposed increase in tuition applied to out-of-state students as well as North Carolineans. Out-of-state tuition would rise from $288 to $357.

Referring to trustees, faculty and administration, Carmichael added that "everybody regrets that a raise in tuition is necessary."

President Frank P. Graham of the Greater University said yesterday the administration and trustees are determined that no student will be deprived of admittance to any of the three branches of the University for financial reasons.

Dr. Graham said that loan funds, escheats funds, and opportunities for work will be used to enable students to attend the University. In cases where none of these suffice, alumnae in various towns and communities will be asked to come to their aid.

"Mr. O. Max Gardner, Jr., graduate of State college and a student in Law school, made a splendid case against any raise in tuition whatever," Graham said.

Graham pointed out that the Greater University was already short $1,575,070 which it is seeking to have added to the budget to make up for an overestimate of receipts. He said the overestimate by the Advisory Budget commission was made even with increased tuition included.

Money appropriated and recommended for the University's large building program is under

Shreve Blasts Scales' Letter In Legislature

Anti-Red Measure Topic of Message

RALEIGH, Feb. 17—(UP)—Rep. Clyde E. Shreve of Guilford county said today in the North Carolina legislature he had received a letter from the "Carolinas district of the Communist party" attacking him for introducing an anti-Communist bill.

Shreve said the letter was signed by Junius Scales of Greensboro and was mailed from Chapel Hill.

He said it was a personal attack on his integrity and character.

"The Communists will creep into our foundations like termites when the time comes, we will fall from within, and not as a result of any pressure from without."

Shreve and Rep. John B. Regan of Robeson county recently introduceld a bill making it a felony to be a member of any organization advocating the overthrow of the government of the United States or North Carolina by force or violence, and requiring non-Communist oaths from all state employes.

Shreve said the bill was not aimed at any group "except such group as advocates and teaches overthrow of the government of the United States or North Carolina by force or violence."

He said he resented the attcak upon him.

He said the letter called the bill a rehash of the Mundt-Nixon measure which failed to pass Congress last year, and charged that he could have done more good by backing a state Fair Employment Practices act or supporting admission of Indians and Negroes to the University of North Carolina.

Test Professors

RALEIGH, Feb. 17—(UP)—Wicked glee lighted the eyes of some 5,000 North Carolina State College students as they faced their slightly-nervous faculty today.

Armed with specially-prepared forms, the students were out to evaluate and grade their professors on a fiendish scale known as the Faculty Merit Rating system.

Furthermore, the idea had the blessing of State College Chancellor J. W. Harrelson.

The Faculty Merit Rating system was set up to help State College's administrative officials "maintain the school's high standards of instruction," Fred Kendall, Jr., president of the student body, explained.

There was a speculative gleam behind his sober expression.

"Each student enrolled in the college rates all of his instructors, both lecture and laboratory teachers," Kendall explained. The students are doing the scoring during a few moments of each classroom period this week.

Faculty members are being sized up on 14 points, including personal appearance, presentation of subject material, distressing mannerisms, ability to hold student attention and fairness in grading.

The results of the tests will be submitted to the college Institute of Statistics for tabulation, Kendall said. Later, Harrelson and a student committee will review the results and forward them to the heads of the college's departments.

Legislature Condemns Tuition Raise Proposal

By Herb Nachman

The Student legislature last night passed a second resolution condemning the proposed tuition raise and "imploring" the General Assembly to, "consider the students as individuals and not as monetary units in consideration of the proposed tuition increase."

Introduced by Ed Tenney, the resolution pointed out that the state constitution calls for tuition rates to be as near free as possible, that any tuition increase would probably force many students to leave school and that, "our forefathers have been paying our tuition in the form of taxes since the establishment of the University in 1783."

The legislature passed seven other measures last night. They are:

A bill to pay back dues to the National Students association; a resolution favoring the placing of coke machines in men's dorms; a bill concerning the form for introducing constitutional amendments; a bill concerning the insertion of the Town Men's association's amendment in the constitution; and three amendments to the election laws.

The election law amendments include:

1. The election board will be responsible for printing ballots.

2. The election board will instruct election monitors.

3. Certain changes in polling places.

The legislature approved President Jess Dedmond's appointment of Gus Johnson as graduate member of the Men's Honor council and approved three delegates to the National Student's association for the regional meeting here this weekend.

Legislator Page Dees (SP), chairman of the coed affairs committee, resigned from the assembly last night.

A total of four new bills were introduced and sent to committee. Three bills which came out of committee last night were sent back for reconsideration.

Collegiate

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 17—(UP)—The goldfish-swallowers of the Roaring Twenties had some competition today from the oyster-eaters of the University of Michigan.

And the oyster-eaters had some competition from a tiny feminine member of the University of Michigan Daily's sports staff.

It began Tuesday night when freshman Donald Brown downed four dozen raw oysters in 30 minutes because he "decided to defy science."

Last night, sophomore engineer Chales Porter left his mark lying in the dust with a near-unbeatable mark of 76 oyters in 10 minutes. An awe-stricken Brown kept count.

Porter, a strappling six-footer, duplicated Brown's feat of eating a hearty meal after the ordeal.

"I still love oysters," he said.

About the same time, Beverly Bussey, five-foot three inches, 21 and pretty, set out to break the mark of a University of California student who ate 13 hamburgers in a half hour.

She failed, downing only 12 and 1-2 in a 35-minute span and concluded: "The next time I'll keep my mouth shut."

All were reported in good condition.

Said Dr. Warren E. Forsythe, head of the University Health service: "It's disgusting and silly. You can go and get a hog that can eat more than that."

I'll be glad when these students grow up," echoed his colleague, Dr. Margaret Bell.

Scott Charges Democrats Welsh

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—(UP)—Hugh Scott, Jr., chairman of the Republican National committee tonight accused the Truman administration of welshing on its campaign pledges.

He listed civil rights, taxes and the Taft-Hartley labor law in a speech prepared for delivery to the New York Republican clubs.

Medina Rebukes Defense Lawyer

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—(UP)—Federal Judge Harold R. Medina heatedly rebuked one of the defense attorneys as incorrigible and conceeited today as the trial of 11 indicted U. S. Communist leaders neared the end of its fifth week.

Medina gave a dressing-down to fiery, little Harry Sacher during the defense cross-examination of federal jury clerk Joseph F. McKenzie in an attempt to show that the jury-picking system here is discriminaatory.

Durham-Chapel Hill

Another Boulevard Proposal Presented; New Route Asked

DURHAM, Feb. 17—Another proposal was made today for an entirely new entrance into Durham for the proposed Chapel Hill-Durham boulevard as a suggestion made earlier this week met a barrage of objections at a city council hearing this morning.

John S. Hill submitted a plan which called for the new approach to enter Durham by way of Erwin road.

The approach for the proposed boulevard has met opposition from all sides, but the strongest complaint came this morning when Hill told council members that he would go to Washington in behalf of the new approach.

He argued that the distribution traffic upon three highways would, as proposed in a plan drawn up by state highway engineer R. Getty Browning, be impossible and that it was not advisable to bring traffic too close to Duke university campus.

After residents had made their objections, Frank Pierson, executive secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said that he didn't care where the proposed road entered Durham, but added that "we want it connecting with the city with not too much delay."

Planetarium To Feature Rotunda, Star Exhibits

(Eds note: This is the last in a series of articles on the Morehead Planetarium and Art Gallery which is expected to be open for business before commencement this spring. The article concerns a planned tour through the building excluding the planetarium room itself which was described in yesterday's installment.

By Herb Nachman

A tour through the Morehead building is no five or ten minute affair.

As you enter through the front of the building facing Hill hall, your guide will tell you that you are now in the Genevieve Morehead Memorial Art rotunda.

In this room is located the personal art collection of the wife of John Motley Morehead.

There are 16 marble columns around the circular room. On your left, between the third and fourth columns, is a magnificent clock. "This clock contains chimes from seven different European cathedrals, it ticks every two minutes," your guide explains. "Each day a different chime is heard. For instance, on Tuesday, the clock plays chimes from the cathedral in Strasbourg."

On the right and between the 13th and 14th columns is a huge barometer, one of the largest in the world. Between each of the columns is a masterpiece of art which made up Genevieve Morehead's famous collection.

New Jersey Students Play Hookey To Help Teachers Get Salary Increase

ELIZABETH, N. J., Feb. 16—(UP)—Some 1,000 high school students played hookey this afternoon to help their teachers get a pay raise.

The students staged demonstrations at three high schools and the city hall in an effort to make the Board of School Estimate grant the teachers a $300 a year pay increase. The board has rejected the teachers' request for a raise.

The demonstration began during the lunch hour and spread to other high schools, as the students marched along shouting "We want the raise."

At city hall the students were met by School Superintendent J. Harry Adams, who told them to go home. He said no disciplinary action is contemplated.

"There was an atmosphere of good nature about the entire affair," he said. "Their demonstration was misguided but probably well meant, and the last thing in the world the teachers want."

Four New Skits

Competitive Sorority Program Set for Rendezvous Tonight

Plans have been completed for tonight's Rendezvous radio program and competitive sorority floor show, Lib Stoney said yesterday. The series of sorority skits will begin at 8 o'clock, and the radio portion of the show will be at 9:45.

Representatives from the four participating sororities on the program will be Lucielle Arnotte, Alpha Gamma Delta; Phyllis Bradshaw, Delta Delta Delta; Connie Roper, Alpha Delta Pi; and Ann Cooper Knight, Chi Omega. The Town Talk trio will present several vocals on the program.

The sorority skits will be announced and explained by Lib, and Mark Barker will be master of ceremonies for the WDUK broadcast.

Bill Shuford will take Dean Fred Weaver's place as a judge, since Weaver will be in Montreat for the week-end. The other two judges are Janes Grills, of the radio department, and Mrs. Norman Cordon. A silver plater, with appropriate engraving, will be awarded to the sorority whose skit is judged the most entertaining.

Ideas for the four skits include "After Hours in a Sorority House," "Carolina Visits New Orleans," "A Coed's Trip with George Washington on his Birthday," and "The Coeds' Opinions of Carolina Gentlemen."

A new addition to the Rendezvous room this week is a scalloped green canopy over the entrance to give it a night club atmosphere

Worthwhile Sacrifice?

At least one good thing will come out of the now almost certain tuition raise. Controller William D. Carmichael, Jr., said yesterday that virtually all of the money realized from tuition will be used to increase faculty salaries. It is well past time that salaries were increased. For years other colleges have been hiring the best men away from the University. It has boiled down to a point now where the reputation of the UNC faculty is based upon men who have come here after being retired as too old to teach in other universities and upon some top-notch men in the graduate schools. The bulk of undergraduate instruction is done by hacks who can not command better pay elsewhere and by graduate students teaching part-time here in preparation for going to other schools. If the tuition raise can help this situation, then it may be worth its price.

There were three things the University wanted from the legislature this year. In the order of their importance they were: funds for permanent improvements, funds to maintain the University at its present operational level, and no raise in tuition. In view of the enormous sums being asked by other branches of the state, it seemed highly unlikely that all three aims could be realized, and consequently the item of tuition was sacrificed without a fight for the sake of the two more important appropriations. Under the circumstances this was probably the wisest course of action.

However, with the termination of high enrollment by veterans whose tuition and subsistance are paid by the government, the University is fast approaching a recurrence of the situation in which it found itself between the depression years of 1932-33 and the beginning of World War II. During that time when money was scarce, few people in North Carolina could afford the cost of higher education. In order to attract enough students to keep its doors open the University had to establish loan funds upon which students could draw and have passed in the legislature a bill permitting students who could not pay tuition to remain in school upon promise to pay at a later date. During this period at least half the students enrolled borrowed money from the University in order to remain in school.

The present trend of the University is toward the same situation. It is foreseeable that in the not too distant future the University will have an excellent educational plant. With increase in salaries it may even build up an outstanding teaching staff. With these advantages it will always be able to find students who can afford and are willing to pay to come here. But what about the people of North Carolina?

Tuition is not the only cost that is rising at the University. As maintenance costs rise, dormitory room rents have risen and will climb again. Laundry service will cost more, and although it is reported that food prices have broken, there is yet no evidence of the fact in Chapel Hill. At present it is estimated that half of North Carolina students at the University come from families with yearly incomes of less than $3,000. By next year it will cost at least $1,000 a year for a student to attend the University.

Controller Carmichael in discussing the tuition raise yesterday reflected what is apparently a general sentiment when he said that a student who really wanted an education would work for it. No doubt he is right; yet on the same day Harold Weaver, cashier of the student loan fund, who worked his way through the University, said that he would not do it again. He advised that students borrow money rather than attempt to work their way, because, he said, working defeats their purpose for coming to school. It is impossible for a student to get the most out of college and to support himself at the same time.

Soon the University will have a wonderful plant. It will have an excellent faculty. It will also have students—those who can afford to pay the price. But somewhere, somehow, the fundamental purpose of the University has been lost sight of. The University of North Carolina was established to supply education to the people of the state—to all the people of the state. Unless the men who compose the state legislature rediscover that purpose soon, it will be forever too late.

Flag-Happy Congressmen

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

New members of the 81st Congress are just learning about a privilege that accrues to them by virtue of triumph at the polls, with the result that Gus Cook of the capitol architect's office is becoming flag-happy.

A Congressman has the right to have his own, individual American flag flown over the Capitol. He can also insist that flags belonging to constituent groups, such as American Legion posts and boy scout troops, be flown there.

It is customary to hoist the flag to the top of the flagpole and leave it there for 10 or 15 minutes. The Capitol architect then signs a scroll stating it has been so flown, which the proud owner can have framed.

Casually glancing over his outgoing mail, Representative Jack Z. Anderson, of California, was startled to see the outside of one envelope addressed: "Dear Rev. McHood."

Circling the "dear" with a red pencil, Mr. Anderson returned the envelope to his stenographer with the notation: "What is there between you and the Reverend?"

* * *

This is the inside story of how a political conniver failed in his scheming to be appointed chairman of the bar committee at the National Press club.

Mr. Robert O. Litchfield had overwhelming ambitions to become the boss of the bar under the new administration because of the immense powers that go with the post. The bar chairman can flag any member he deems over-stimulated, meaning that he gets a great deal of deference in certain circles.

The recumbent—I mean incumbent—chairman, Mr. Jerry Greene, craved to be reappointed, but Mr. Litchfield conceived a plan to beat his time. He had some cigars made up, with his name on the wrapper, and plied them upon John C. O'Brien, our new president.

Prexy O'Brien seemed to be wavering. But a few minutes after receiving the cigars he had to go in and preside at a club luncheon where Secretary of Defense Forrestal was the speaker.

After the luncheon, at which he revealed the sensational news that he had always been a Democrat, Secretary Forrestal asked if anyone happened to have a cigar. Prexy O'Brien handed him one of the Litchfield offerings.

Mr. Forrestal took a couple of puffs, made a horrid face, and threw the thing away.

That settled it. Chairman Greene was reappointed.

Doctors Needlessly Apoplectic

By Dick Simpson

The majority of Americans today are without adequate medical care, because their incomes are too small to allow them to buy it. Over 300,000 people die every year in this country who could be saved with present medical knowledge and skills. Countless others endure sickness and disease which could easily be cured, were it not for the prohibitive cost of good medical treatment and hospitalization.

To put medical care within the reach of the average citizen, President Truman has called for a system of national health insurance, covering the bulk of our people. This program will be financed by a tax on payrolls, as is old age and survivors' insurance under the existing social security law. Under it, all will contribute, and all will receive benefits in time of sickness. The federal government will not assume control over medicine; it merely will pay doctors' and hospital bills out of the common fund.

Good health for all our people would appear to be a desirable goal, but the President's plan has met fierce opposition by the American Medical Association, to which most doctors belong. The attacks of the A. M. A. on national health insurance have been vigorous and bitter, but one searches them in vain for solid reasoning. Faced with a distressing lack of factual backing for its position, the Association has relied on the noisy and repeated use of terms like "socialism" and "political control," applied to the President's program. In addition, it has claimed that existing private insurance plans (Blue Cross and Blue Shield) provide adequate coverage, and that a federal program is unnecessary.

These arguments will not hold water. In the first place, under national insurance the government, as has been pointed out, will not control medicine. Doctors will not become government employees. They will be perfectly free to participate or not in the federal program, and to choose and reject patients. Patients will choose their own doctors as always. In the second place, the private insurance plans now operating are inadequate, because the premiums they require are much too expensive for the poor man's pocketbook. National insurance, paid for with payroll taxes, will not put so staggering a burden on the lower income workers, and will enable them to be insured without disproportionate sacrifice.

It is hard to understand the doctors' appoplectic opposition to national health insurance. Under it they retain full freedom of action. With the government footing medical bills, there will be no more charity cases, no more unpaid bills. Not only will the people who most need medical care be able at last to get it; many doctors will probably make more money than they now do. It is fervently to be hoped

By Tockie Hodgson

Many a manly fellow of my acquaintence has commented to me on the extreme difficulty of ridding oneself of one's import Sunday morning after a hard dance weekend.

Pish tosh! Where there's a will, there's a way. Lend your ears a moment while old Dr. Hodgson enlightens you on the "Forget 'Em" maneuver— Step No. 4 of a rather colloquial series of courtship, the whole of which is too well-known for me to go into here.

First, we see the girl seated upon a sofa, and surrounded with rumpled funny papers. My God! Is this the doe-eyed cutiepie you imported from St. Mary's? No, my friend, it is a blear-eyed monster with stringy hair, crooked-seamed stockings, a runny nose, and an evident desire to bore you to death before she gets back to where she came from.

Look at the old hag. Having spent all your money and killed a couple of gallons of bourbon, she sits there without saying a word, giving a talented imitation of a Mongolian idiot with an advanced case of sleeping sickness.

Well how are we to get rid of the bag? I shall elucidate:

(1) If you can procure any liquor, get drunk. This won't exactly get rid of her, but after a pint or so, ANY girl looks good. Even your import.

(2) Light up a 5-cent cigar, and blow smoke in her face. After a few minutes of this, she should make a swift dash to the Little Girl's Room, where, chances are, she will remain indefinitely.

(3) Serve your import a plate of raw oysters; results: ditto as above.

(4) You are filling your cigarette lighter. You spill some fluid upon her head. Casually, you light a match and drop it—.

(5) You arrange to receive a fake phone call. When you return from the telephone, your face is wreathed in a tender smile. Sweetly, you inquire whether import would like to meet your wife and baby boy who are at present hastening to your side.

(6) Call up any one of a dozen football players and inform him that there is a "sure thing" over at your fraternity house. Then, leave everything to him. He knows what to do.

(7) Start a baseball game, and inform import that she is to play second base. Most girls don't like to play baseball.

(8) Go upstairs and hit the sack.

(9) Take her to dinner at the Marathon.

(10) Super Special—If you have tried all the above ruses d'amour, and import is still around, marry her. That's probably what she counted on your doing in the first place.

Alas, No More Escape

Pahdon Me, But Poker Is a Lady

By William S. Johnson, Jr.

A recent house to house poll of American card-playing habits revealed that poker is fast replacing contract bridge as the nation's favorite card game. Many of the old timers and not a few of the novices at the time-honored art of hitting an inside straight or pulling a full house out of a two-card draw are viewing this situation with alarm.

This revelation, enlightening as it is, exposes a serious threat to the sanctity of one of the few remaining all-male domains—that of the smoke-filled room, the drawn shutter, and beer drunk from the bottle.

Time was when the Saturday night poker club stood as a symbol of escape—a shining beacon piercing the dismal fog of routine existence. It was there that Just Plain Bill Jones discarded the conventional titles of respect and assumed the even more revered names of Bobtail Bill or Wild Card Jones. It was there that the cry of "first Jack deals!" meant complete oblivion to the trials and tribulations of the troubled world.

But, alas, no more! The dreaded plague of popularity has invaded the consecrated shrine and brought with it the fetters of social sanction. The society pages of our newspapers will announce the Wednesday afternoon meeting of the Elderly Lady's Stud Poker Club and the guardians of social etiquette will countenance the use of such phrases as "spit in the ocean" and "feeble Phoebe." The dictates of Hoyle will give way to poker mathematics and the fact that there are 5,108 possible flushes in a 52-card deck will become common knowledge.

What then will be the fate of Bill Jones and his friends of the Saturday night session? No longer will they thrill to the challenge of "Put up or shut up." or "Get in the pot if you think I'm bluffing!" These terms will soon belong to the lost generation of split-whiskered Kings and one-eyed Jacks—noble friends who will pass into the darkness of clouded memories unheralded except by the few who knew them best.

Let's face it, men. The game you loved so well and treasured as your own has left behind it the secluded places of its birth. Seven card stud and deuces wild have gone the way of the brass rail and the mustache cup. The game that grew with the help of a few must now be given to the many. It must find its place in the sun-lit parlors of the nation's homes.

The game we knew in its youth has now become a lady.

Ignorance Leads to Bliss

Editor:

I can remain silent no longer. I would be a cad to cont to withhold the knowledge which I am about to reveal. I true, how tragically true. And if there is one thing I not, it's a cad, all my enemies to the contrary notwithstand

It is a crying shame, a colossal injustice of the worst the way the 7,000 odd students at the University are taken for a ride. They come from Murphy to Manteo, Pakistan to Hindustan, and from other places too, and spe four of the best years of their lives boring tiny holes their brains. And what does it get them? I'll tell you wh it gets them. In the first place, they spend a lot of m buying augurs to bore the holes with; in the second pl they get a headache; in the third place, they don't get what they came here for in the first place.

That leads us to a very important question. What are these characters here for anyway? That's an easy one. All you've got to do is ask one of them and he spits the answer out before you finish with the question. Maybe he came to get an education, or to prepare himself for a better job (to get more money, of course), or any one of a thousand reas but, if you ask him why he wants more money or educat or what have you, the answer is almost invariably "to fi greater happiness."

Now any fool knows, well almost any, that you don't get happiness by increasing your knowledge. (I read an artic in Collier's recently that will back me up to the hilt on this). Here are some of the advantages which go along with being a high grade moron or an undeveloped genius: (1) He sleeps well (almost never bothered by insomnia; (2) Never worries; (3) Attracts the opposite sex more, and marries younger, than the genius or semi-genius; (4) Is never bothered by mental disorders; and most important of all, (5) Lives a reasonably carefree, HAPPY existence.

In conclusion, a bit of advice to the poor, misguided souls who came to Carolina to find happiness: Go back home and enjoy the simple things. Forget about happiness and you're more likely to find it.

I anticipate an immediate decline in the enrollment.

Mermen Face Emory; Wrestlers Meet Indians Here

Carolina Favored In Swimming Test With Georgia Club

By Larry Fox

Had today's meet with Emory been scheduled several weeks ago, the Carolina swimmers would undoubtedly have been ruled heavy favorites, but illnesses have sidelined several of the top local mermen and so the Tar Heels will have only a slight edge when competition begins at 4 o'clock in Bowman Gray pool, following the 2 o'clock freshman meet with Sewannee Prep.

Several new faces will be seen in the first two lanes for Carolina this afternoon as Coach Ralph Casey attempts to repair his damaged lineup.

Hardest hit of the events is the backstroke where Norm Sper and John Bippart have both succumbed to the same disease—glandular fever. Bippart has already been ruled out for the season, but the final decision has not yet been made on Sper.

Distances Hit

The distances have had the same sort of luck. Jim Thomas has not been in the water since the Ohio State meet and will not be able to compete today. He is suffering from an undiagnosed respiratory ailment. Sam McCauley, who teams with Thomas in the 440, has a six-hour accounting quiz and will be unable to see action.

Most of the burden of making up for the missing men this afternoon will be delegated to Jim Clements, Ronnie Basescu, and Bob Hutton, all of whom have seen limited action thus far this season and who will double today.

Clements will lead off the 300-yard medley relay team and also swim in the 150-yard backstroke with Bob Page, another substitute. Hutton and Basescu are entered in both the 220 and 440-yard freestyle events, replacing Thomas and McCauley. Hutton has generally been used in the 220 event.

No Emory Diver

The Tar Heels will be assured of at least eight points, however, for Emory has no diver and thus will have to forfeit first and second place to Carolina There will, however, be an exhibition given by members of the local springboard corps.

Otherwise Carolina will present the same lineup that swept to five straight wins before bowing to Ohio State two weeks ago.

Few of these problems will face freshman mentor Bob Ousley when the Tar Babies open up against Sewannee at 2 o'clock although the yearling lineup is also in an indeterminate state and will probably be composed in cordance with the progress of the meet.

The local freshmen will return to high school events today and will probably be favored to outscore the visitors from Tennessee.

Sewannee is expected to be especially strong in the breaststroke and sprints, while much of the Carolina strength is concentrated in the 200-yard freestyle, the individual medley, and the 200-yard freestyle relay.

It's a fact: None of the present members of the Tar Heel varsity cage squad will be lost by graduation this year.

Lead Carolina Swimmers in Meet Here Today

WHEN COCH RALPH CASEY'S Carolina swimmers engage the Emory University mermen here today, three of the mainstays for the Blue and White will be these three boys. Left to right, they are Steve Osborne, Dick Twining, and Norm Sper. All have played major rolls in Carolina's swimming success this season.

Mural Boxing, Basketball Loops To Crown Champs Next Week

The past week proved to be a profitable one for the Intramural department as Coach Walter Rabb and his hard-working assistants saw their involved student athletic program clear up into a compact slate that will terminate both the boxing and basketball loops next week.

With both of the present activities running smoothly and creating a paramount of interest, the mural men are now looking forward to the success of the next mural sport, soccer. Entries for this activity will be accepted Monday and the regular play is slated to begin March 1.

Yesterday's results in the cage playoffs determined the other five in the finals for the Dormitory playoffs while the one Fraternity contest provided the fourth member of the quartet that are still vying for the Frat crown.

The ever potent Grad quintet trounced Med School 2 in a semi-final clash yesterday and thus advanced into the finals of the Dorm play. The Grads will meet the "darkhorse" of the league, the Unknowns, for the laurels Monday. In yesterday's tilt, Bob Edwards and Kenny Black combined to notch 25 of the Graduate total to lead their mates into the all-important tussle Monday.

In the Frat competition, Sigma Chi 2 gained the right to meet Beta 1 in the semi-finals Monday when they checked another strong aspirant to the crown, DKE 2, by the score of 35-30. Behind by 17-9 at the half, the Sig Chis began to hit in the latter half to snare the victory. Fred Bauer's 10 points paced the winners while Kay Lewis chipped in with nine.

In the upper bracket of the Frat playoffs powerful Chi Psi 1 tangles with Chi Phi 3 in a vital semi-final match that will also be staged Monday afternoon. These afore-mentioned fives are the lone unbeaten remnants of the Frat leagues that started out with over 70 hopeful quintets.

The boxing matches held yesterday produced two champs in the Dorm division. In the 125 lb. class H. Morrison of Town outpointed L. Watson representing Emerson to take the crown in that weight while R. Schuman of Stacy won the 125 lb class championship in a less strenuous fashion as his opponent, J. Hicks of Mud Dobbers was compelled to forfeit.

Ducats Going Fast

Today is the last day students will be able to obtain tickets to Saturday night's basketbal game with State with their passbooks, according to the Woollen gym ticket office.

Anyone with a student book, regardless of its number, and an ID card, may acquire a ducat at the ticket office window before 5 o'clock this afternoon. There are only a limited number of tickets left for the game.

Tomorrow morning the remaining tickets will go sale to the general public.

Ward Wins Again

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Feb. 17—Harvie Ward, University of North Carolina golf star slammed his way to a one-up victory over Kermit Hutchinson, Charleston, W. Va., in the quarter-finals of the Golf Champions tourney held here this afternoon.

The victory was the third straight for the Tarboro par-buster who will tee off against Spencer Overton, former Maryland open champ in today's 36-hole semi-final match.

The tournament comes to a close on Saturday afternoon when the two semi-final victors meet in the tourney finals.

Track Team Works Hard for Contest With Marylanders

The first of the ten Carolina track entries in the University of Maryland Invitational games Saturday night are scheduled to leave Chapel Hill this afternoon for the scene of their weekend action. The remainder of the squad will go up by train on Saturday morning.

According to Coach Joe Hilton, who will accompany the team to Maryland, Carolina will compete in eight of the events on the card. Coach Hilton said that he planned to do very little "doubling up" to insure the Carolina runners of being in top condition for next week's all-important Southern conference meet.

Maryland's team won their meet in the university's armory at College Park last year. Navy edged out the Tar Heels by a few points. The Tar Heels were not as well represennted last year as they will be Saturday.

Carolina will probably be very strong in the hurdle and high jump events this weekend. Dick Taylor, Bob Morrow and Jack Moody have been entered in the 60-yard high hurdles while Taylor, Morrow and Bill Albans are entered in the 60-yard lows. Maryland's Mario Salvanelli and the Mohler twins from the university of Virginia are other top knotch hurdlers.

In the high jump Carolina will have the 1948 indoor and outdoor conference champions in Jack Moody and Billy Joyner respectively.

Grapplers Making Final Appearance Of Home Schedule

Fresh from Wednesday night's 19-13 win over The Citadel, Coach Chuck Quinlan's varsity grapplers will meet the big bad boys from Washington and Lee here tonight in an effort to gain revenge for the severe thumping meted out by the Generals in Lexington last year.

It will be the final appearance of the Tar Heels on the home mat. In five meets so far, the Tar Heels have lost to N. C. State, tied Virginia Tech, and defeated Davidson, V. M. I. and The Citadel. However, the Tar Heels will be facing the defending Conference champions tonight and are the definite underdogs in the meet.

Three of the Carolina matmen still remain undefeated. Co-captain and 145-pounder Carrol Fisher has the most outstanding record of the three, having won five matches on as many falls. Phil Kemp, baby-faced 155-pounder has won all five of his, but only two on falls. Oscar Gupton, who earned his first pin of the year Wednesday night, has a record of three decisions and one fall.

The Tar Heels, admittedly weak in the lighter weights, will be depending on the middle brackets for any possible upset victory. However, the Generals, as the only school in the Conference to offer wrestling scholarships, are strong in all weights and should win at least five of the eight weight divisions.

Four of the eight starters for the Generals are defending Conference champions, and a fifth was runner-up last year.

Basketball Drills Resumed at Gym

Following a one-day absence from practice in payment for their fine performance against Wake Forest this week, Carolina's basketball forces resumed their regular workouts yesterday at Woollen gymnasium.

The Tar Heels displayed plenty of hustle and spirit in their drills, with thoughts of a revenge victory over N. C. State this weekend being the motivating force behind the vigor. State invades Chapel Hill Saturday night for a crucial battle in Woollen gym at 8 o'clock.

The Wolfpack defeated Coach Tom Scott's cagers by a 67-36 score in the first meeting between the two teams in Raleigh. However, since that time the locals have shown considerable improvement and are primed for an upset.

With the invention of golf, the cow was let out of the pasture, and the bull was let in.

Rocky Mount's Charlie Thorne Boosts Cage Stock at Carolina

By Wuff Newell

In the eyes of some people Rocky Mount is noted for its tobacco markets, but to Carolina basketball fans tobacco is merely one of its by-products. For the little Nash-Edgecombe city is the home of two of Carolina's most famous cage brothers—Taylor and Charlie Thorne.

Last year Taylor finished his fourth year as one of the Tar Heels greatest players, but this did not bring to a close the Thorne family's hardwood career.

Charlie Thorne, younger brother and "spittin' image" of the great "Tee" is now ringing up points for the hardwood agregation. Although he began the season as a reserve, when Rip Ryan injured his ankle, Charlie was moved up to the starting line-up. Given a chance to show off his famous set shots, he proved that he was worthy of a first string berth by scoring 13 points against Wake Forest.

Charlie began his basketball playing at Rocky Mount high school. He was star guard and sparkplug of the team which was a member of the Class AA Eastern conference.

Last year on the jayvee cage team he played a fast and agressive brand of ball.

Like his brother he is an accurate passer, and, despite his size, he is a good backboard player. He is particularly adept at defense, and his set shots are a constant source of trouble to all opponents.

In addition to his set shots he has deadly overhead shots, but he has failed to put it to use more than a couple of times this season. It is hoped, however, that since it clicked against Wake Forest, he will try it more often.

Although he is one of the scrappiest members of the Tom Scott five, Charlie is one of the most underrated. He plays a snappy brand of ball and never slacks up while he is on the court. In the State massacre in Raleigh, he was a shining light in the Tar Heel lineup and was one of the few white-clad players who showed any real fighting spirit.

This is his first year on the varsity, but already he is living up to the Thorne brand of basketball, and some observers even think that he may develop into a better player than Tee.

Chapel Hill Battles Methodist Club Here

Coach Bill Grice's high-flying Chapel Hill high cagers will be bidding for their 16th triumph of the season without defeat tonight when they meet a strong Methodist Orphanage team from Raleigh in the high school tin can at 8 o'clock.

Chapel Hill already holds one victory over the Methodists. But stiffer competition is expected tonight.

Graham Says N.C. Will Support Scott

RALEIGH, Feb. 17—(UP)—Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the Greater University of North Carolina, predicted last night that North Carolinians will rally behind Gov. Kerr Scott's "Go-Forward" program.

Graham spoke before a student audience on the North Carolina State college campus.

"Scott's program is expression of the fact that North Carolina is one great family in need of roads . . . public health and welfare, education for all the people, agricultural and industrial development and buildings for the sick and insane," he said.

"The people would support Scott's integrated and balanced program," Graham added, "as they ralled with Aycock and Morrison and the other great leaders . . . for higher climbs upward of a great state with more creative powers and a richer and happier life for all the people."

The university president also cited the need for new buildings in the colleges and universities which he said had grown more in 10 years than in the previous 50 years and for "decent wages and salaries" for teachers and other public employes.

SOMEWHERE UNDER that thick mop of hair is "High Time Jester Own," a sky ferrier who was awarded top honors at the 18th annual show of the Associated Terrier clubs, in New York. Little Ariane Dewey, 11, of Far Hills, N. J., is looking at the champ with an eye to braiding his hair in pigtails.

Rotarians Hear Relief Report

Carl Smith, local businessman, gave a report on the Rotary club distribution of food to destitute European families at the Wednesday evening meeting of the Chapel Hill Rotary club in the Carolina Inn.

"Letters received from the European families who have received food and clothing show that hunger and starvation is still widespread in Europe," Smith said.

During the past year, Smith said the Rotary club had sent large quantities of food and clothing to aid foreign people. The club paid for much of the supplies, but food and a large amount of clothing were also contributed by Chapel Hill citizens.

Midshipmen Set Ball Next Week In Naval Armory

The second annual midshipman's ball to be held at the University since the war will be staged by the Naval ROTC unit on Saturday, Feb. 26, from 9 until 12 o'clock in the Naval armory on South Columbia street, Miles Smith, chairman of the welfare and recreational committee, announced yesterday.

The dance will be strictly formal and is being sponsored for the benefit of the Naval ROTC students, Smith said.

Heading the receiving line will be Capt. and Mrs. D. W. Loomis and other officers of the unit and their wives.

No special program of entertainment has been planned but there will be refreshments during the intermission, Smith said. Music for the affair will be furnished by Chic Burroughs and his orchestra.

Positions Open For Women Grads

The office of the dean of women is constantly receiving notices of opportunities open to women students for graduate study in various universities.

Students who recently received A.B. or B.S. degrees or who will receive one of these degrees by June, 1949, may be able to do graduate work while holding graduate assistantships as counselors in women's dormitories in certain American universities.

Any students interested in obtaining information about these opportunities are requested to come to the office of the dean of women at 104C, South building.

Danforth's Play Ends 4-Day Run

A graduate student with the Carolina Playmakers, Miss Mildred E. Danforth of Berwick, Maine, is the author of a three-act play which has just finished a four-night run in Garden City, New York.

Titled "Reluctant Traveler," the play was produced by the Playwrights' Educational theater at Adelphi College in Garden City, Long Island. The play is a comedy which takes place in a New England boarding house and centers around a young man who has been falsely accused of being a Communist.

Miss Danforth sent her play to Miss Mary Lou Plugge, director of the theater, after noticing an article in the New York Times praising the work Adelphi is doing to give new playwrights opportunity.

Hedley Gordon Graham, director of the play, has worked 27 years in the theater and spent several years with the theater guild.

pressure for utilization for other two fronts, maintenance and purposes, Graham continued.

He said the University feels primarily responsible on these building funds. He added that the University would seek to hold the maximum tuition rates down to $150.

Graham reported that Governor Scott said he was in favor of holding tuition down to $150.

wood complete the picture of the rotunda.

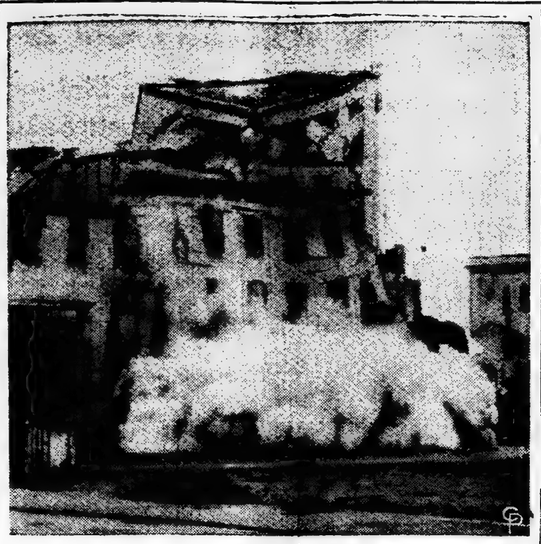
Upstairs, above the rotunda is a faculty and women's lounge. The guide says these rooms are used for meeting, lectures, teas, etc.

On the top floor level above the rotunda is the state dining room which is used for visiting dignitaries only. A roof terrace flanks each side of the room. The guide tells you of the expensive plates and silver ware and of the fine banquets served here.

The last phase of the tour takes you down to the levels below the rotunda and the planetarium room. On the first level there are three exhibit rooms.

On the far north side is the "solar system" room. This includes the sun, moon, seasons, planets and all matters related to the solar system.

Across the hall and the middle of the three main astronomical exhibit rooms is the Copernican room. Suspended from the ceiling in the middle of the room is the sun. Revolving around it on tracks are the planets which turn in their orbits as in nature. Their moons revolve around them.



Your guide says that the Copernican room shows motion of planets of the universe as if the observer was detached from the earth and at some arbitrary point in space. "The planetarium room gives the impression that you are an observer someplace on the surface of the earth," he adds.

Last of the three exhibit rooms concerns the stars, nebuli, milky way and other matters not pertaining to the star system covered in the first two rooms.

This part of the building is an astronomical shrine. There are also exhibit cases set back in the sides of the hallways. "These exhibits are a course in astronomy themselves," your guide points out.

Workshops, storage closets, offices and a roomfull of air-conditioning and ventilating machines complete the other outstanding features of the building.

This ends your tour of the Morehead Planetarium and Art Gallery. It will hold wonders for the curious and will be an unlimited laboratory for the scientist.

Education Heads Now in New York

Several members of the University's School of Education staff are in New York this week attending various conferences and meetings.

Dr. J. Minor Gwynn is attending both the Conference on Community Resources at Teachers college, Columbia university, associated with a group studying radio and television as educational methods, and also sessions of the Association for Supervision and Curriculm Development.

Dr. Dorothy McCuskey, who has made specific contributions in the field of curriculum work, is also attending the Association's meeting.

Dr. H. Harold Perry is attending special conferences at Teachers college and will stop in Washington to secure participants for the Elementary Education conference to be held at the University in June.

Dr. Charles M. Clarke, director of student teaching, is attending the Conference on Curriculum Development and is participating in special meetings concerned with problems of student teaching.

New Directory Gives All Data On Local Groups

A directory of all Chapel Hill organizations and officers and a calendar showing the time and meeting place of each one has just been issued by the Chapel Hill Community council and is being distributed to all members of the council. Others interested citizens may obtain them at the town manager's office.

The calendar and directory, regarded as one of the most useful projects undertaken by the Community council, were prepared by Mrs. Harold Walters, and the cost of publication was underwritten by the Merchants Association of which Vic Huggins is president.

The next quarterly meeting of the Community council has been set for March 14 when the town's planning board, headed by Collier Cobb, will report on its projects for one year. Mrs. U. T. Holmes, president of the council, announced yesterday.

Mrs. Holmes, with the approval of the executive committee, appointed a special committee to make a study of the housing condition in Chapel Hill with the view to offering remedies for alleviating the crowded conditions.

At the request of Hubert Robinson, who reported that the road leading from the town limits to the Orange county training school is badly in need of paving, a special committee composed of Mayor R. W. Madry and Alderman E. S. Lanier was asked to make an effort to get the road paved.

Herdon Returns To Barber Staff

T. G. Herndon, resident of Durham, has recently joined the staff of the Graham Memorial barber shop.

An employee of the local shop in 1941 and '42, Herdon has spent the past seven years doing barber work in Durham. There are now three barbers employed in the shop, which is sponsored by the student union.

A further addition to its service includes a shoe-shine boy, who will be available during the hours when the shop is open.

It is a well-known fact that polar bears are white, but members of the Byrd expedition have been black ones at the South pole.

UVA, YRC, Slam Scott's Proposal

Gov. Kerr Scott's proposal to raise tuition at the University has met with decided disapproval by the Young Republicans club and the University Veterans association.

Scott's proposal was condemned by the Young Republicans club as a "betrayal of the youth of North Carolina" in a spirited session held Thursday night.

A resolution labelling the proposal as "reactionary" and a violation of the "clear intent of the State constitution" was adopted unanimously.

Gene Newton, president of the UVA sent a letter to Scott which said that "the veterans of this state who made sacrifices for it did not intend to preserve and protect our institutions for the benefit of the wealthy only."

In discussing Scott's proposal to raise tuition $69, Newton's letter pointed out that the Congress of the United States had established an educational program under the G.I. bill to "help those who needed help." Considering this, Newton said the club could find nothing to indicate Scott's good faith with the principles of progressive education.

Newton's letter said that the club was particularly disturbed by Scott's recent statement at Davidson college. At that time Scott said he advocated tuitional changes in order to take the state university out of competition with denominational schools. "A statement of this nature, coming from the Governor of the state, can only serve to encourage those who seek to impede the over-all progress and growth of their public educational system."

Tuition should be going down instead of going up, the letter continued.

"We sincerely believe that the situation and the times demand that tuitional fees at the three branches of the University be abolished completely for North Carolina students," the letter concluded.

Coed Solons Name McNutt Training Head

Orientation Post Given to Greer

Patsy McNutt, senior from Greensboro, was elected chairman of the Leadership Training Program for coeds in the meeting of the coed senate Tuesday night.

Patsy has served as a student adviser, parliamentarian of the senate, a member of the Dialectic senate, State Student legislature representative, Y cabinet, CRIL, Student legislature, Student party steering committee, Graham Memorial student activities committee, Junior council, Sound and Fury, Canterbury club, and is activities chairman for Alpha Gamma Delta.

Charleen Greer, junior from Tulsa, Okla., was elected to serve as a member to the special division of the Orientation committee which selects student advisers for the coming year. She is a member of the University club, executive council of Pi Beta Phi, chairman of the speaker committee in coed senate, and was elected Homecoming Queen last fall.

Virginia Boards Held in Contempt

GLOUCESTER, Va., Feb. 18— (UP)—Two county school boards moved today to get in line with a Federal court decision demanding that they equalize educational opportunities for Negro and white students.

The Gloucester county school board passed a resolution for a $750,000 bond issue for two new high schools. And in Richmond, Surry county's school board filed a report claiming it complied with the order.

Federal Judge Sterling Hutcheson declared both boards in contempt of court after Negro patrons complained that Negro children were facing discrimination. Hutcheson delayed sentence until April.

Stanley Gray, chairman of the Gloucester board, said the two new schools would be used for white and Negro students, and would have equal facilities.

Violin-Piano Concert Is Scheduled Monday

Antonio Brosa, violinist, and Kathleen Long, pianist, will present a concert in Hall hall on Monday, Feb. 28, at 8:30 in the evening.

Brosa was born in Canonja, Spain, and made his first public appearance at the age of ten in Barcelona, the success of which with other appearances which followed, obtained for him a grant from the municipality of that city to extend his studies in Brussels. Following this he went to England where he created a reputation as a brilliant soloist.

It was in England, in 1925, that he founded the world famous Brosa String quartet, which toured with outstanding success in Europe and the United States, where it was first introduced to American audiences by Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge at her music festival in Chicago, 1930.

Kathleen Long was born in London, England, and played in public at the age of eight, but her serious studies began when she won an open scholarship at the Royal college of music at the age of 19, and has since played in France, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Canada, and the United States.

One of the most popular English broadcasting artists, she has played many hundreds of times from London and on numerous occasions from Hilversum, Radio Paris and from Canada.

Admission will be by complimentary ticket in cooperation with the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge foundation.

Women's Forum Will Hear Wood At Session Here

Dr. James Madison Wood, retired president of Stephens college, Columbia, Mo., will be the keynote speaker for the Women's Intercollegiate Government Forum to be held here next weekend sponsored by the Coed senate.

Dr. Wood's address will open the forum at 2:30 Friday afternoon in Hill hall. The meeting will be compulsory for women students.

Friday's program includes the keynote speech, an opening business session and an informal supper party at the Legion hut. Saturday morning workshops will be conducted on the various problems of women's student government, followed by a plenary session with reports from the workshops. Miss Katherine Carmichael, Dean of women will speak at the plenary session. Fred Weaver, will be the principal speaker at the closing banquet Saturday night, to be held in the Carolina inn ballroom.

Representatives from colleges and universities in North Carolina and neighboring states will participate in the forum. Plans have been made by a special forum committee under the chairmanship of Edie Knight.

House Asks Scott To Talk on Liquor

RALEIGH, Feb. 18 — (UP) — The North Carolina House today formally asked Gov. Kerr Scott to speak to the general assembly at noon next Wednesday, presumably on the liquor question.

The resolution asking Scott to speak was handed in by Rep. L. A. Martin of Davidson county, dry leader and author of a bill calling for a statewide liquor referendum.

Vielle-Trio

The Vielle-Trio, scheduled to appear formally in Hill hall tomorrow night, has agreed to present an informal, extra program this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the choral room of Hill hall.

The music department and Graham memorial, co-sponsors of the Trio, extend an invitation to all students, faculty and townspeople to "attend at this time and meet with these world famous artists."

Bergman in Star Role

Joan of Arc Set Next Week At Village for 4-Day Stand

The most publicized movie to come out of Hollywood in recent years, Joan of Arc starring Ingrid Bergman, will come to Chapel Hill next week for a four-day stand at the Village theatre.

Ingrid Bergman plays the part of Joan, the peasant girl who paves the way for the coronation of the Dauphin. She is supported in the film by an outstanding group of stars and supporting players.

Jose Ferrer, star of such Broadway productions as "Cyrano de Bergerac" aand "Charlie's Aunt," plays the role of the Dauphin in his screen debut. John Emery is seen as Jean, duke of Alencon. Jean Lockhart plays Georges de la Tremouille, the king's counselor who failed to avert the betrayal of Joan to the English, and Francis L. Sullivan protrays Pierre Cauchon, the count who presided at the trial of Joan.

Sheppard Strudwick, former Carolina student from Hillsboro, performs as Father Massieu Ward Bond plays la Hire, J. Carrol Naish the count of Luxembourg, and Cecil Kellaway, the inquisitor of Rouen.

Performances of Joan of Arc will begin Monday and continue through Thursday. Shows will begin at 1 o'clock, 3:30, 6 o'clock, and 8:30. Some of the advertisements carried in The Daily Tar Heel were incorrect due to printer's errors: correct prices are 74 cents in the afternoon, $1.25 in the evening, and 50 cents for children all day.

Regional NSA Convention Opens On Campus Today

Debaters Defeat Georgia Squad

The University's Varsity debate team Thursday night defeated the University of Georgia squad by the unanimous decision of six judges. The teams met in debate on the topic, "Federal Aid to Education."

This win brings the squad's record to eight wins in nine debates for the negative and eight wins in 10 debates for the affirmative duo.

Herb Mitchell and Paul Roth took the negative against Georgia, while Herb Yates and Dave Pittman defended the affirmative side.

The Varsity debate with Elon college has been scheduled for next Wednesday, Earl Fitzgerald reported from Elon last night. The freshman nondecision debate was held as planned. Fitzgerald said a letter was written to Elon two weeks ago which requested postponement of the debate from Thursday to yesterday. The letter was never mailed due to an oversight and consequently no debate was planned.

This is the first clash with the Georgia team since the University traveled to the Bulldogs last year. At that time the results were split, with both negative teams winning a decision.

Holding down the Georgia side of the meet were Fran Thomason and Bev Asbury for the affirmative, and Ann Masenburg and Walton Hardin for the negative.

The three judges for the Carolina affirmative-Georgia negative clash were Dean Geraldine Foster, Edward Freed and Donald Whitehead. Judging the Carolina negative-Georgia affirmative were Dean E. L. Mackie, Dr. A. G. Engstrom and C. E. McIntosh. All six judges were faculty members.

Heinmiller Talks To Physics Club

Charlie Heinmiller, graduate student in the Physics department, spoke to the undergraduate Physics club at an informal meeting Tuesday evening on the research laboratories of General Motors.

Heinmiller, who has been affiliated with the GM laboratories, described procedures and personnel relationships of the company and pointed out what sort of position a physicist or chemist graduating from the University might expect to fill in industry.

The club elected the following officers for the spring quarter: Archer Futch, president; Matthew White, Vice President; Tommy Cowell, secretary; and Hubert Leonard, treasurer.

Co-Chairmen Of ARC Drive Are Selected

Campaign Is Set For March 1-4

Bill Pritchard was designated campus chairman for the Red Cross drive to open March 1 and run through March 4, Assistant Dean of Students Bill Friday announced yesterday.

Pritchard has chosen as co-chairman of the drive Dick Gordon. Pritchard, past president of the Monogram club, vice-president of the Carolina Athletic association and holder of varsity letters in swimming and football, chose Gordon for his "managerial abilities and familiarity with this type of work, evidenced by his accomplishments as chairman of the WSSF drive."

At a meeting in Friday's office in South building, Monday at 4 o'clock, tentative plans will be discussed with drive assistants chosen by Pritchard.

A meeting of all solicitors will be held Tuesday at 4 o'clock in Gerrard hall, Friday said.

Those assistants requested to attend the Monday meeting are, Sue Stokes, president of the Womens' Interdormitory council; Pete Gerns, president, Mens' Interdormitory council; Ferne Hughes, president, Pan Hellenic council.

William Roth, president, Alpha Phi Omega; Nelson Taylor, president, Town Mens' association; Carolyn Guthrie, president, Town Girls' association and Neal Howard, representing the Interfraternity council.

Solicitors chosen to work under those named above are requested to attend the Tuesday meeting in Gerrard hall, with the above-named people, Friday said.

Raid Cripples Winston Cache

WINSTON-SALEM, Feb. 18— (UP)—Police today believed a raid on a whisky cache in a barn near here crippled one of the area's largest liquor operations.

Officers said 118 cases of whisky and five loose bottles were taken from a tobacco barn on the property of Abner Shutt.

JESS DEDMOND, chairman of the Virginia-Carolina region of the National Students association, will preside over the regional meet being held here this weekend.

Gus Johnston Given Seat On Council

Named to Fill Graduate Post

Gus Johnston, graduate student from Catawissa, Pa., has been appointed by the tri-partisan board to serve on the Men's Honor council, Attorney General Dortch Warriner announced yesterday for President Jess Dedmond.

Johnston is Delegata of the Grail and a former president of the Monogram club. A varsity soccer player, he served as co-captain of the team. He is a member of the University Dance committee and of Sigma Chi fraternity.

His appointment was approved at Thursday night's meeting of the Student legislature.

Tri Delts Make Funds Available

The national headquarters of Delta Delta Delta has announced that a number of scholarships from the Tri Delta general scholarship fund are again available to women students at the University. In most cases, the amount awarded to any one campus will not exceed $200.

Applicants may or may not be sorority members, but they should be well-qualified students working towards degrees. The Delta Delta Delta Committee on Awards will be the sole judge of the respective merits of the applicants. The successful candidates will be notified May 15, 1949, and the awards will be sent to them at the time of enrollment in the next term of school.

Application blanks may be obtained from Twig Branch in the office of the Dean of Women.

Registration Begins at 2; Meet Tonight

Representation From 15 Schools

The second Virginia-Carolina regional convention of the National Students association will open here this afternoon at 2 o'clock with registration of representatives in Di hall, Regional Chairman Jess Dedmond announced yesterday.

Delegates from about 15 schools will assemble in time for the opening discussions at 7:30 tonight in the Dialectic senate hall to elect officers and revive interest in the organization.

Dedmond and secretary-treasurer of the region, Jim Godwin will preside at the convention of colleges and universities from both Carolinas and the Virginias.

Representatives from this University, Lynchburg college, Randolph Macon Woman's college, Sweet Brier college and Virginia State college will be present, along with about 10 other schools unofficially represented, Dedmond said.

This is the only regional convention since the first meeting of the NSA in Madison, Wis., last August, he said. Before the official launching of the association at that time, a regional assembly was held in Virginia last year.

Helen Gene Rogers of Mundelein college, Illinois, will be featured at the one-day convention. She will represent national headquarters of the association in Madison.

Ben Jones, a member of the local NSA committee will lead discussion of the tri-nation NSA tours. In conjunction with the discussion will be a film record of the tour to be shown following the discussion, Dedmond said.

THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Rats on Big 'Binge'

Anti-Rodent Drive Fails In Graham

By Leonard Dudley

Shades of the pied piper! The rats have just about taken over the basement of Graham dormitory, John Rosser reported yesterday. "We know that there is an acute housing shortage around the 'Hill'," Rosser said, "But we didn't think it was so bad that we'd have to share our quarters with rats."

The worst part of the whole thing is that the management of Lenoir hall had stored some food in the basement and this encouraged the rats of other dorms to converge on Graham, Rosser said. "They have been making merry now for about two weeks," he reported.

When the presence of the rats was discovered a report was made to the health authorities who informed the building authorities who in turn sent the exterminators down to correct the situation, Rosser said.

According to Rosser and some of the other residents the exterminators succeeded only in making a bad situation worse. "They left some poison around for the rats," Rosser said, "But they forgot to leave any gas masks for us! You can imagine what it has been like, living with a few dead rats in the place."

L. B. Rodgerson, manager of the University dining halls, said that the only foods stored in Graham dorm was some canned goods and a hundred cases of napkins. "I was down there yesterday to inspect the place," Rodgerson said, "But I didn't see any rats. I saw about a dozen small mice. There was no odor in the place that I could detect."

Rodgerson said that most of the food stored in the basement of the dorm had now been moved to make room for some furniture.

"Things are looking up," Rosser said, sniffing the air cautiously, "and we are looking forward to spring and the return of the flowers."

We Agree with Umstead

Although he was in a small minority, State Representative John W. Umstead of Chapel Hill was on sound ground yesterday when he opposed a measure which would do away with inspection of motor vehicles in North Carolina.

Most North Carolinians complained about the time and trouble spent in having their cars inspected, but few would find fault with the purpose of the project. North Carolina has been a haven for jalopies forced off the roads of states with more stringent laws, and the state's record of accidents has been proportionately high.

The initial phase of any program is the hardest part of it to carry out efficiently. With its first year of experience behind, the inspection system would undoubtedly operate more smoothly in the future. At any rate, a little time and trouble is a small price for car owners to pay for increased safety on the highways.

One-third Can't Afford It

The following comment in the Daily Texan, student newspaper of the University of Texas, is interesting in light of the present move to increase the price of tuition in the Greater University.

"The boy who can raise $500 annually should not consider himself too poor to attend any state university." Yale administrators believe, provided he's rich enough in gray matter.

"The topic of increased cost of college education to students came up recently at a meeting of eastern college representatives. It was reported that one-third of those who would like a higher education are prevented from obtaining one by lack of funds."

And Bonuses Again

The proposal to set up more bonuses for veterans of World wars I and II has come up again in Congress. When will the veterans groups that push bonuses admit that, veterans being taxpayers, the payment of bonuses is merely taking money from one pocket to put into the other.

Fax about Wax

Beneke Band Drops Strings

By Nelson Taylor

Klassification Key
Fine ***
Fair ***
Futile **
Foul *

Vocals

Vic Damone
 Isn't It Romantic
 Say Something Sweet to Your Sweetheart

"Isn't" is a danceable tune sung well by Vic with Patti Page's fine assistance. The last part of it is an attempt at comedy which doesn't click. "Sweetheart" is a semi-novelty with Patti's singing being ruined by comments by Vic. The arrangement on both of these sides is good.

Tex Beneke
 Mississippi Flyer
 Look Up

Notice anything different about these two by Beneke? He has dropped his strings. That helps, but not enough. It is still the same old stuff with a little variation on anything that you have heard by him before. "Flyer" is a vocal bounce, and "Up" is about the same thing with a little slower tempo.

Billy Eckstine
 Bewildered
 No Orchids for My Lady

I am no lover of the style of Eckstine so maybe I am a little prejudiced when I listen to his stuff, but to me it is not top grade. His tone is too much on the false side to be pleasing. "Bewildered" is not bad, but I think that the tune makes Eckstine rather than Eckstine's making the tune. "Orchids" seems about twice as long as it actually is as Eckstine drags through it in dreary fashion.

Peggy Lee
 If You Could See Me Now
 Blum Blum

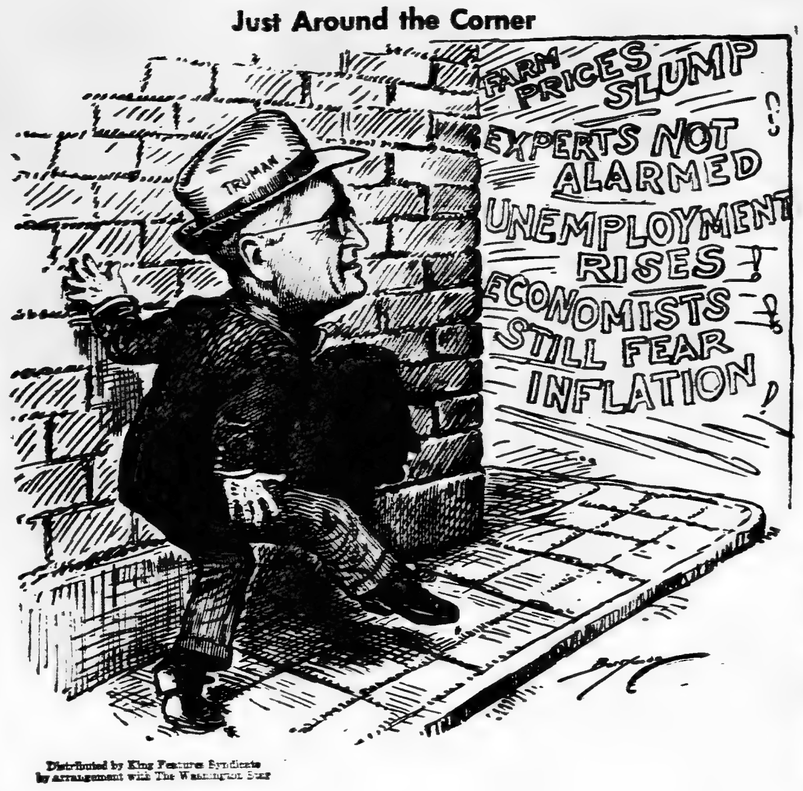
"See Me" is a blues by Peggy and on these she is always fine. Her fine sex tone gets on the track here, and hubby Dave Barbour supplies some fine backing. "Blum" is a plum of comedy during which Peggy tries to figure out whether she is a bull frog, or an ice cream cone, or something of a variety of natures. You figure it out.



Julia Lee and Her Boy Friends
 I Didn't Like It the First Time
 Let's Sit Down and Drink it Over

Remember when listening to "First Time" that Julia is talking about spinach or you might get some mistaken ideas. If this record isn't banned in Boston, I'll be greatly surprised. It is one of the best renditions of a dubious song that I have ever heard.

* More Beer
 Let a Smile be Your Umbrella

This is undobutedly one of the worst platters that I have ever heard wished upon the American public. The Andrews sisters should live so long! I don't know who told these gals they could sing, but they are doing their best on both of these sides to prove that guy a liar. "Beer" is a polka ditty which is foul, and the reverse is just slightly better.

Glee Club Headlines Week

By Vestal C. Taylor

Headlining Campus entertainment for the coming week is the Glee club concert to be given next Thursday night at 8:30 in Hill hall. The program features a wide range of selections including secular and religious pieces. Solos and favorites as "Down in the Valley" and "Stillarent" [illegible] will be heard, along with a newcomer "General Booth Enters Into Heaven." Incidentally the composer of the latter, Philip James, is expected to be on hand for the performance. Those attending the concert will note the Salvation Army effect furnished by an instrumental accompaniment of five pieces. The program is arranged and will be conducted by Phil Young.

Following the campus appearance, the club will travel to High Point for a one night stand Monday, February 20. Present plans call for two tours on the spring quarter [illegible] but the state Defense [illegible] have not been released as yet, but those students who [illegible] interested in singing, but unable to attend the concert here, should watch the papers and inform the home folks of the road schedule and urge them to attend when the group is in their vicinity. The performances are expected to be of the usual excellence that characterizes any Glee club presentation.

Liz Stirney shows no signs of faltering in her determination to give the students the best in entertainment through the medium of the Rendezvous room.

For the coming weekend she has scheduled the Harmony Five to appear on the Friday night show, rendering numbers arranged by the well known arranger - composer Frank Matthews. Sharing the spotlight with the quintet will be Barbara Edwards and Ralph Mulford as a comedy team presenting a program composed entirely of skits. Barbara is soon to be seen in "Beggar's Opera."

For the following Friday a trailer from "Beggar's Opera" is promised the customers. Featured will be "Cookie" Covington as a comedy singer, and Barbara Edwards will make her second appearance in as many weeks. The performance will be directed by "Bill O." director Dave Samples. Dave will bear watching for his own talent. He is a comedian of truly professional timbre.

Things to watch for at the Rendezvous: Dusty Moore and George Lewine as a dance team; a troupe from Salem College under the direction of Betty Lou Bell; the charming young singer appearing on the Rendezvous broadcast recently; another troupe from WC under the direction of none other than that dean of women and Hiss and Horn the musical comedy group from Duke in a special appearance.

A show being formed and worth watching for and supporting is the Pan Hellenic Burly-Q scheduled for later in the quarter at the Rendezvous but details must wait 'til later. It suffices now to say that the cause is worthy.

Regular Rendezvous goers are hoping for a return performance by Tommy Thomas and Dick Johnson, song and dance men extraordinary. These boys seem to be headed for the big time. They were recently in New York for a video audition and are reported to have come through with flying colors.

"Beggar's Opera" is beginning to take shape—this is apparent even to a rank outsider. Lines are memorized and each actor moves into his part with feeling and conviction. Dave Samples knows what he is seeking in his interpretation of the play and is evidently able to impart his knowledge to the players. With continued good luck, Samples should give us the best musical offered so far this season.

The Name Was Mutual

Canadian Prime Minister Louis St Laurent [illegible] just departed [illegible] a gentleman of parts, too. It takes more than a strange woman in a bedroom to rattle him.

Mr. St. Laurent (pronounced "Sillarant") demonstrated this a while back on returning to the land of the maple leaf from England (pronounced "Ingland"). His missus came from the capital at Ottawa to Montreal to meet him.

Mrs. St. Laurent took a suite in the Windsor hotel. The Prime Minister arrived at the hostelry amid much pomp, bustle, and confusion.

The management was so anxious to have everything just so for Canada's head man it got into a state of dithers. A nervous assistant manager approached the Prime Minister all aflutter and stammered:

"Mrs. St. Laurent is waiting [illegible] parlor suite."

The P. M. barged into the suite, opening wide of love. A strange and startled lady greeted him.

"I beg your pardon," said Mr. St. Laurent. "I was looking for Mrs. St. Laurent."

"I am Mrs. St. Laurent," [illegible] the lady.

"A common name in these parts," [illegible] the Prime Minister [illegible]. "The mistake is natural. They just escorted me to the wrong Mrs. St. Laurent."

I have been having trouble with a gentleman of my acquaintance over the pronunciation of St. Laurent. He argues it shouldn't spell St. Laurent "Sillarant."

This party seems to me to be the last in the world with a license to criticize. He came to [illegible] pronounced "Velk."

I was telling you the other day how Senator Charles W. Tobey of New Hampshire, in an oration of profound oratory, had quoted the line "Linked sweetness long drawn out" attributing it to the wrong poet.

Mr. Tobey subsequently denied the retract but has retracted. It would seem to be worse than the original offense. Apologies to the Bard of Avon.

Yesterday I attributed a quotation, "Linked sweetness long drawn out," to the immortal Bard of Avon. Mr. James W. Murphy, the official reporter of debates, has called my attention to the fact that credit should have been given to John Milton.

"Therefore, with apologies to William Shakespeare, I ask that the correction be made."

What's he apologizing to Shakespeare for? Milton's the guy who should be hurt.

Adelaide Addle's Advice

Girls Should Not Use 'Fight and Forgive' Tactics in Love

By Adelaide Addle

Dear Dr. Addle:

Over Christmas vacation I met a very nice girl who goes to WC. Naturally I looked her up when I got back to school, and we found that we had much in common; in fact, we were seeing each other as often as I could get over to Greensboro.

Since the trip takes quite a bit of time, and I am not a particularly good student and must devote much time to classwork, it meant that we only saw each other weekends.

Two weeks ago we had a date for Saturday. I was to pick her up for supper. There was a misunderstanding. She was not in the dorm when I arrived, and she did not come in for over an hour. By that time I was mad. When she did arrive, it turned out she had [illegible] eaten.

Instead of saying we should go out while I ate, or she'd get a sandwich, she got mad when I professed to be hungry. The result is that we had a rather bitter evening. When I phoned her last week, she said she was busy this week.

Is she worth bothering with? Should I forget my pride? Should I let her make the first move if there is to be one?

Peeved

Dear Peeved:

You were definitely wronged, but trying to understand women is a futile endeavor. If she had been smart she would have realized that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, and not the fight and forgive approach.

Phone her and see whether she wants to go out with you again, and if so, go fortified with a good steak dinner. Remember, if you are malnourished you will get no place with any girl. If she says no, forget her. Any woman who tries to starve her man isn't worth the price of a good cup of coffee.

* * * *

Dear Miss Addle:

I have been trying to pop the question to my girl for several weeks, but I'm too shy. Every time I work up courage she changes the subject. What is a good method to overcome this dilemma?

Bashful Beau

Dear Bashful Beau:

You must not let shyness interfere. The girl probably does not understand your intentions, and that is why she changes the subject. Be aggressive. Sweep her into your arms, kiss her, hold her tightly and be master of the situation. Then say, "My love," or perhaps, "My wife," or some such positive thing; she will probably understand what you mean. Send for my free booklet, "How to Overcome Shyness: A Lesson in Primitive Passion."

* * * *

Dear Aunt Adelaide:

Do you believe in love at first sight? He is a [illegible] and handsome and intelligent, and he said hello to me and smiled.

A Girl in Spencer

Dear Girl in Spencer:

From your description, yes, if it was a smile not a leer. They are few and far between. Be cautious, confident, and conquering.

Write Away

Never So Insulted

Editor:

I have been called many names, quite insulting, but as insulting as the one that appeared at the end of [illegible] to you, which was printed in Wednesday's DTH.

I am an AMERICAN with much dislike toward R[illegible] all she stands for, which is quite the reverse of [illegible] RoberTson.

William D. Rober[illegible]

Please pardon the error of the extra t. No offense intended.

Where Is the Voice

Editor:

I feel that I should be the last person to write [illegible]. Little voices tell me "Quiet, don't rock the boat. It's [illegible] fault" but my conscience refuses to listen so I must [illegible] want a salary raise at the expense of the students.

It isn't that I couldn't use it. Such savings as I [illegible] prior to 1946 went into the purchase of a $650 [illegible] bearing the price tag $10,500. Every cent [illegible] be arranged by private loan went into that transaction. [illegible] pay the principal but to make the down payment. I furnished with the self-same furniture maintained at [illegible] sale in 1939. I have no car and no prospect of obtaining [illegible] of a car. My bike carrying one or other of my [illegible] or from school should by now be legend in Chapel [illegible].

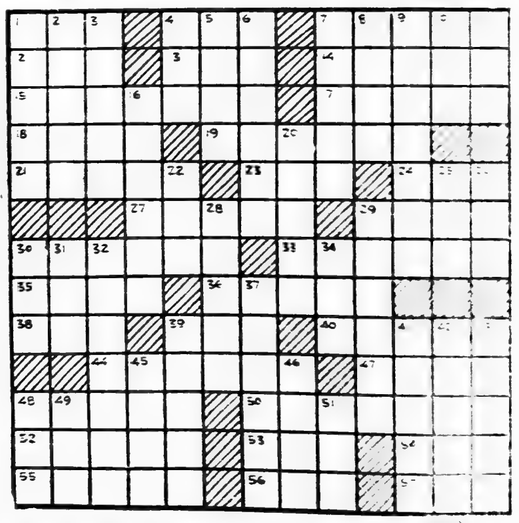
But as I look beyond the present to my past, I was [illegible] starting school at a state university with $600.00. That was [illegible] 1938. By sweeping floors, waiting table, etc. that $600 [illegible] the ticket to college training leading to a Ph.D. in 1942. I [illegible] know if this could be done at existent tuition rates. I am [illegible] could not be done under the proposed scale.

How utterly naive to say that loan funds would [illegible] etc. can replace the loss sustained by the [illegible] dent by this plan to increase student fees. Has [illegible] collected data regarding students ability to pay? If so [illegible] have data on the number of prospective students already [illegible] the gates of our or any other university for lack of [illegible].

As these decisions are being made let me ask: "Where is the voice of those most directly affected?" I heard a [illegible] two weeks ago but I heard no echo. Are we to gather [illegible] lack of concern that the student body is willing to sanction the establishment of a further monetary prerequisite to scholarship at Chapel Hill?

Joseph W. Straley

Dangerous Principle



Editor:

Your editorial on February 18 pointed out very well [illegible] Governor Scott's request for a tuition raise ignores the constitutional promise of free education for the young people of North Carolina. Even more alarming is the Governor's disregard for the apparently not-so-well established principle of separation of church and state. His reason for requesting a tuition raise is to prevent the University's competing with denominational colleges. This, in effect, means that state policy is admitted to be promoting religious schools at the expense of free secular education.

Unless the citizens of North Carolina make an effective protest against Scott's proposal, they will not only be deprived of their constitutional right of free education, but they will be acquiescing in the establishment of a dangerous principle. Even indirect governmental encouragement of religious institutions threatens the separation of church and state which Americans before and since Jefferson have regarded as an essential bulwark of our civil liberties. Religious liberty means the freedom of religious groups to establish and finance their own institutions. When [illegible] ment representing all of the people, encroachment [illegible] institutions the civil and religious liberties of all are threatened.

To put the matter in terms of dollars and [illegible] of education will be contingent upon financial support of church schools. If this support declines, church school tuition rises, school tuition rises, and the citizen who has already paid [illegible] to support his University finds he must pay also for the financial weakness of church schools. Thus the state requires [illegible] to support church schools either directly or indirectly.

Mermen Top Emory; Wrestlers Lose; Cagers Play State

Twining Topples University Mark For Breaststroke

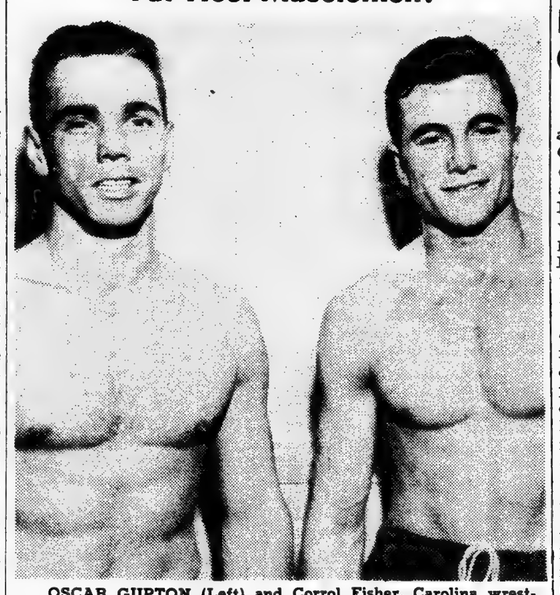
By Larry Fox

The oldest standing University swimming record was broken here yesterday by Tar Heel Captain Dick Twining as the Carolina swimming outfit easily outstroked the Emory university mermen, 46-20.

Twining's winning effort was in the 200-yard breaststroke in which the locals clinched the meet. The butterfly mark was set by Bill Kelly, now performing for N. C. State, back in 1945 and the time of 2:25.9 stood for five years, longer than any other University standard. Twining lowered the record to 2:24.0.

Emory amassed 15 of its points in the only two events in which it took first place—the 150-yard backstroke and the 400-yard freestyle relay.

Bill VanPelt and Ray Cunningham captured both first and second in the backstroke, respectively, for eight points while the relay team of VanPelt, Cunningham, Tiny Pennington, and Ed Anderson scored on a Carolina disqualification.



Bob Hutton, called upon in the 220 and 440, was the only double victor of the afternoon. His partner in the two events, Ronnie Basescu, was right behind both times as Hutton stroked to 2:21.7 and 5:26 triumphs.

In fact that was the general pattern of the meet. Emory could garner better than a third in only two events.

Due to the fact that Emory's diver was unable to compete, no springboard competition was held.

Tar Heel Musclemen!

Tracksters Perform Tonight In Maryland Indoor Games

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Feb. 18—Approximately 200 college track stars are expected to compete in the University of Maryland Invitational indoor game in the Maryland National Guard armory on campus here tomorrow night.

The host Maryland team, winner of the meet last year, is picked for a 1949 repeat performance. Both Navy, '48 runner-up, and the University of North Carolina, third last year, could give the Terps trouble.

An all-star lineup of performers will give the meet tomorrow an atmosphere that usually attends the "big" meets.

Probably the most outstanding list of the entries is in the hurdles where a large number of fine men is entered. In the 70-yard high hurdles some of the top men are: Mario Salvanelli of Maryland, the Mohler twins of the University of Virginia, Bill Meanix of the Naval academy, Dick Taylor and Bob Morrow of North Carolina aand Billy Mitchell of Georgetown.

The 60-yard dash the list of entries includes Bill Alexion and George McGowan of Maryland, Sterling Wingo of Virginia Tech, Brandon Davis of Duke, Bill Birkel of Navy and North Carolina's new find, Bill Albans.

In the one-mile relay, Maryland seems to have the top quartet of the entries. The Terp foursome of Salvanelli, McGowan, Paul Ostyre and Ed Matthews won the Southern conference relay at the Washington Evening Star meet in the nearby nation's capital recently and was clocked at 3:23 in winning at the Millrose games.

A half-mile field ot distinction has also been entered in the meet. Maryland has two top men in Bob Palmer and Howard Umbarger and Carolina has steady Julian MacKenzie as their lone entry.

Other outstanding entries are in both the high jump and the shot put. North Carolina's duet of '48 champs, Jack Moody (indoor) and Billy Joyner (outdoor), expected to pace the high jumpers. Carolina's Bob Seligman and Duke's Jim O'Leary are expected to fight it out for first place in the shot.

North Carolina's Sam Magill in the two-mile and Maryland's Paul Ostrye in the 660-yard run are both favored to capture their respective events. Magill won here last year in the 20-lap grind.

Wildcats Take 17th, Downing M. O., 43-36

Chapel Hill high school won their 17th straight game of the season last night when they defeated Methodist Orphanage, 43-36, at the high schol Tin Can.

Visitor Jay Jefferies led the scoring parade with 18 points while Ivalee Hill was high for the home team with 14.

Deacs, Devils Meet

DURHAM, Feb. 18.—Duke's Blue Devils, with their backs to the wall, will be fighting desperately tonight to earn a bid to the annual Southern conference tournament when they tangle with Wake Forest's Deacons in Duke Indoor stadium here.

Washington & Lee Pins 26-6 Defeat On Local Matmen

By Buddy Vaden

The Generals of Washington and Lee, defending Southern Conference wrestling champions, came to Chapel Hill last night and amassed 26 points to the Tar Heels' six. But they didn't win without a fight. The Carolinians put up a good fight against the Indiana imports and the match was closer than the score would indicate.

Phil Kemp and Co-Captain Oscar Gupton saved the Tar Heels from being held scoreless with decisions in the 155 and 165-pound classes. Kemp won a 4-1 decision over Irvin Wicknick, last year's runner-up to the Conference champion. Gupton put on a brilliant exhibition of smart wrestling in his 9-2 win over Bill Metzel.

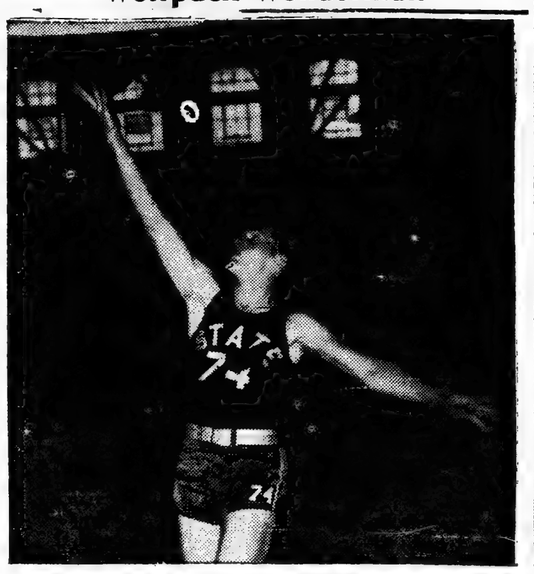
Carrol Fisher, undefeated up until last night, couldn't have lost to a better man. His opponent, Ken Finley, was last year's Conference 145-pound champ, Indiana Scholastic champion, and went through last season undefeated and is still undefeated this season.

The Tar Heels, weak in the first three weights, lost two of them on falls and one on a 9-2 decision. Lightweight Kenny Hoffman put up a good fight against Doug Smith, but Smith proved too much for the inexperienced Hoffman. In the next two matches Tar Heels Charlie Harless and Ed Turnley lost to defending champions Ted Lonergan and Joe Sconce.

Mitzie Stoioff, after giving Ken Lindell (another defending champ) a good fight for two and one-half periods, was forced to forfeit the match when his arm was injured in the third round.

In the finale Joe Augustine, who looked like a featherweight against his 300-pound opponent Jerry Jack, was the victim of strategy. Jack, who had Augustine spotted by over 100 pounds, found an occasion to plop down on the hapless Joe and pin him in 1:17 of the first period.

In the Freshman preliminary, the Carolina Tar Babies defeated Greensboro High school, 16-13.



The varsity summary:

121—Smith (W&L) decisioned Hoffman, 9-2; 128—Lonergan (W&L) pinned Harless, 2:48 2nd; 136—Scone (W&L) pinned Turnley, 1:10 2nd; 145—Finley (W&L) decisioned Fisher, 6-0; 155—Kemp (UNC) decisioned Wicknick, 4-1; 165—Gupton (UNC) decisioned Metzel, 9:12; 175—Lindell won by forfeit; Unl—Jack sat on Augustine, 1:17 1st.

The freshman summary:

121—Williams (UNC) pinned Maner, 1:12, 2nd; 128—Morphis (G) won by forfeit; 136—Dotson (UNC) decisioned sharpe, 10-2; 145—Farber (UNC) pinned Tippet, 37 sec. 2nd; 155—Glass (G) decisioned Qualls, 3-0; 165—Coxe (UNC) decisioned Shores, 8-1; Unl—Barham pinned Lovick, 55 sec. 3rd.

Wolfpack Wonderman

VIC BUBAS, N. C. State guard, will be one of the top defensive performers on the court tonight when the Tar Heels play host to the Wolfpack. Bubas held conference scoring-leader Coy Carson to five points, his lowest total of the season, in the last meeting between the two foes.

Interscholastic Swimming Meet Attracts 90 High School Stars

Ninety-eight swimmers representing eleven high and prep schools will compete in the Southern Interscholastic swimming meet in Bowman-Gray pool here today. Action gets under way at 4 o'clock.

According to Tar Heel coach Ralph Casey, who is meet manager, Western high of Washington, D. C. and Sewanee Prep of Tennessee are the favorites in today's actions. Washington was third in the meet last year and Sewanee yesterday defeated the Carolina frosh.

Georgia Military Academy, last year's champion, will be entered in the meet, but the Cadets have been riddled by graduation losses and are not expected to be among the top finishers.

Four North Carolina high schools will swim in the meet today. The local Chapel Hill high team and the Raleigh team which they conquered this past week are both entered. Tarboro and Greensboro round out the North Carolina competition.

Seixas Wins

Miami, Feb. 18—Top seeded E. Victor Seixas staged a sensational comeback here today to advance to the semi-finals of the University of Miami tennis championships at the expense of local Tony Vincent.

Seixas came back to win 6-4, 1-6, 7-5, after he had trailed 2-5 in the third and final set. The younger Vincent had outsteadied the Tar Heel ace after dropping the opening set and appeared to have the match well in the bag.

But Seixas rallied behind his big service, breaking his opponents on intermittent games, and proceeded to run out the next five games and the match.

Tomorrow Seixas will face an old and familiar foe in the person of Gardner Larned, formerly of William and Mary and now representing Rollins college.

Tickets for Sale

The athletic ticket office at Woollen gym is now selling tickets to next week's Southern conference indoor games along with a limited supply of Conference basketball tournament tickets and ducats to next Saturday's game at Duke.

Carolina Seeking To Avenge Earlier Debacle; Kappler Out

N. C. State college, proud possessor of a record of 11 wins in 12 Southern conference outings and the defending loop champion, lays its enviable court record on the line tonight in Woollen gymnasium in the presence of a revenge-minded Tar Heel quint and some 7,000 basketball enthusiasts.

Coach Everett Case's strong five from Raleigh literally romped all over the Tar Heels in the first meeting of the two teams—by the score of 67-36. But that game was played before a partisan State crowd on the Wolfpack's home court in Raleigh.

Hugo Kappler, Tar Heel forward, will not play against State tonight, Coach Tom Scott announced late last night.

Kappler is the victim of a painful ankle injury that has plagued him for a week.

With the advantage of being court and the added revenge incentive, the Tar Heels plan to make things rough for the State team tonight. The Wolfpack, by every comparison, rates the edge and is the heavy favorite. Yet if the Tar Heels are able to come up with a brand of ball similar to that turned in already this year against Wake Forest, William and Mary, and Duke, the game will turn out much closer than the odds indicate.

State's starting lineup tonight will consist of Dick Dickey and Sam Ranzino at forwards, Paul Horvath at center, and Vic Bubas and Garrison at gards. Carolina will have Coy Carson and Hugo Kappler, forwards, Nemo Nearman, center; and Charlie Thorne and Dan Nyimicz, gards.

State appears to have the edge in reserve strength with such players on the bench as Jack McComas, Warren Cartier, and Bob Hahn, a six foot, ten inch opperative.

Ward in Finals

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 18—North Carolina's, Harvie Tomorrow Ward will meet the Golf Club Champion's tournament today when he defeated Spencer Overton, 4 and 3, in a 36-hole semi-final match.

Tomorrow Ward will meet Frank Comfort of Massachusetts in a morning and afternoon championship round.

Ward reached the finals to day only after a hard fought-battle with Overton who the Tar Heel co-medalist to the fullest until the closing holes of the match.

Sewanee Swamps Frosh Swimmers

Carolina's freshmen swimmers met a strong young swim team from Sewanee Military academy yesterday afternoon in Bowman Gray pool and when the final relay event was completed, the visiting mermen had topped the frosh, 42 1/2-32 1/2.

The Tar Babies won only two races but established new freshman and pool records in both events. In the 200-yard freestyle Cecil Milton set a new mark of 2:06.3 and the 200-yard relay team of Cohen, Ambler, Milton, and Williamson turned in the new time of 1:41.1.

TMA May Pass On Village Men

President Nelson Taylor of the Town Mens' association yesterday predicted that the proposed amendment to the TMA constitution granting opportunity for membership to residents of Victory Village will be passed by the required two-thirds' vote "with no difficulty at all."

The proposal will come before the association for a vote at its next meeting, Thursday, March 3.

At its meeting yesterday, the members discussed the feasibility of TMA support for construction of a new student union building. "The association feels that the present Graham memorial is no longer large enough to accomodate the student body, and hopes for a combined auditorium and student union building." Taylor said.

John Van Hecke was appointed a committee of one to further investigate the problems involved in such an undertaking.

A motion was carried unanimously that the TMA compile and keep up-to-date a list of rooms and apartments in Chapel Hill which are open for tenancy to students. This list has been designated to cover those rooms in the Chapel Hill area actually vacant, in addition to those tenants who will sometime vacate.

The list will be compiled in collaboration with the YMCA and University housing service.

Parenthood Film Set for Monday

"Motherhood, Life's Most Important Job," is the title of the motion picture to be shown at the fourth session of the pre-parenthood course being presented by the District Health office, Monday at 3 o'clock. This movie is to be shown in connection with a discussion period on the subject "Hygiene and Nutrition of Pregnancy."

The course, under the leadership of Miss Dorothy Lunsford, public health nurse, and Mrs. Edith Brocker, supervising nurse, meets each Monday at the district offices on Old Fraternity row at the same time.

Two Coeds To Be Taken Into Literary Sorority

Alice Sharp, senior from Jacksonville, Fla., and Henrietta Thorp, senior from Rocky Mount, will be initiated into Chi Delta Phi, honorary literary sorority, at special ceremonies Monday night at 7 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 1, Graham Memorial.

The ceremonies will precede the monthly opening of the group, at which Dr. Lyman Cotten of the English department will discuss the works of T. S. Eliot, modern poet. The public is invited to the open meeting, beginning at 8 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge.

Alice, an English major, served as organization editor for this year's Yackety Yack and is now fiction editor of the Carolina Quarterly.

Henrietta is a journalism major, a member of Student council and was society editor of the Daily Tar Heel. Both girls were chosen on the merits of work submitted, as judged by present members of the sorority.

Membership in the group is limited to two per cent of the coed student body, and regular membership contests are held in the spring and fall of each year.

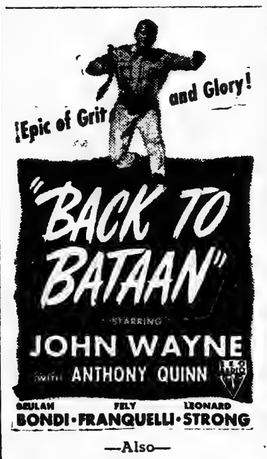
Election of Aquinas Club Officers Set for Tuesday, Breakfast Sunday

Election of officers will be held at the Aquinas club meeting Tuesday, February 22.

At present the officers of the club include: Rudy Tropea, president; Dan McLaughlin, vice-president; Ruth McCann, secretary; and Don Munroe, treasurer.

The officers elected will begin their duties immediately and will continue in office for a term of one year.

John Beshara, publicity director, also announced that the club will hold a Communion breakfast next Sunday.



All Catholics were invited to attend. The breakfast will be held at the Carolina Inn immediately following the 8 o'clock Mass.

Guest speaker for the occasion will be Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr. Tickets for the breakfast are 75 cents and can be purchased from the club members or at the breakfast.

Quarterly Plans Early Deadline

By Emily Sewell

The second issue of the Carolina Quarterly, due to appear early in March, will preview two poems by Charles Eaton, faculty member of the University English department, from his new collection of poems to be published in book form.

The poems, "Trumpet Lilies," and "The Swan," are from a group he has written called, "Poems of the Tropics," which will appear in his forthcoming volume.

Eaton, who served as a vice-consul with the American Consulate in Rio de Janeiro from 1942-46, has previously had a volume of poetry published in 1942. He is a protege of Robert Frost, who has called him, "one of America's most promising young poets."

The poetry section will contain two sonnets by Frank Groseclose, "Relic of Canterbury," on the murder of Thomas a Becket, and "Preparation for a voyage."

Groseclose, a graduate student, has had works published in Factotum and other poetry magazines. He has written music for Sound and Fury productions and has appeared in several Playmaker presentations.

Other poems are: "The Accounting," a poem of winter by Nancy Norman, senior from Danville, Ill.; "Sophistication" by Sandy McEachern, graduate student from St. Pauls; "Interim" by J. A. Viverette, Jr., graduate student from Battleboro; and "The Carpet" by Nathaniel Allman.

YDC Meet Plans Quarter's Work

Members of the Young Democrats club of the University met yesterday and mapped out tentative plans for the rest of this quarter. First on their docket of projects is a panel discussion concerning the proposed raise in tuition to be held next week.

Miles Smith and Max Gardner were appointed by President Sandy Harris to plan the discussion and engage speakers for it. The date has not yet been set.

WSCF to Hold Day of Prayer

The World Student Christian federation day of prayer will be observed by all Protestant student groups in the University at a special service tomorrow evening in the Baptist church.

A fellowship supper will be held in the dining room of the church at 6 o'clock with George Worth conducting the services. At 7 o'clock a special worship program, led by members of each Protestant group, will be presented.

Jack Wichard and Gil Beam did give an exhibition from both the high and low boards. The absence of the diving accounts for the low score.

The closest race of the afternoon involved two Carolina sprinters, Jesse Greenbaum and Steve Osborne, in the 100. Greenbaum shaded his teammate by a stroke in winning in the fine time of 0:23.9.

The test for the locals is next Friday afternoon when they close out the dual meet season at Raleigh against N. C. State.

The summary:

300 medley relay: Won by Carolina (Clements, Cook, Osborne). 3:15.6.
220 freestyle: 1—Hutton (C), 2—Basescu (S), 3—Anderson (E). 2:21.7.
50 freestyle: 1—Drew (C), 2—Greenbaum (C), 3—Pennington (E). 0:23.9.
100 freestyle: Greenbaum (C), Osborne (C), 3—Pennington (E). 0:54.1.
150 backstroke: 1—VanPelt (E), 2—Cunningham (E), 3—Clements (C). 1:46.0.
200 breaststroke: 1—Twining (E), 2—Breeden (C), 3—Dippy (E). (New University record. Old record of 2:25.9 set by Kelly in 1945.)
440 freestyle: 1—Hutton (C), 2—Basescu (C), 3—Hanner (E). 5:2
400 freestyle relay: Won by E (VanPelt, Pennington, Cunn Anderson) on Carolina disqualifi 4:06.4.

NSA Conclave Hears Rogers

Calls Group Voice Of U.S. Students

Chancellor House Welcomes Delegates; Assembly, Discussions Set for Today

By Roy Parker, Jr.

The second Virginia-Carolina regional convention of the National Student's association opened here last night with a meeting of delegates from five member schools and 10 others interested in joining the organization. Helen Gene Rodgers, national secretary of the association, delivered the principal address.

Calling the association, "the voice of American students," Miss Rogers explained its history, organization and aims. She asked for more member schools from the South, asserting, "the South has much to give the educational community," and that the 260 member schools in other sections were, "eager to have members from the south," in order to make the NSA a nation-wide organ of student opinion and endeavor.

Chancellor Robert House welcomed the delegates and explained the workings of student government at the University. Rev. Charles M. Jones, pastor of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church, also addressed the delegates briefly.

A discussion period devoted to student government and organizational problems followed the principal address.

The program for today includes a group breakfast at the Presbyterian Church, an assembly, and various discussion panals. The assembly will see a moving picture on a tri-nation tour taken by a group of NSA delegates. Discussion groups will be divided into an international panal, a student life panal, and an educational problems panal.

Regional officers for the Virginia-Carolina region will be elected at the morning assembly.

Discussing the activities and aims of NSA, national secretary Rogers put emphasis on the fact that the organization was the largest aand most representative group of American students. "Through NSA the students of the country have representation on the American commission of UNESCO and at meetings of such groups as the American Association of Colleges and Universities," she said.

Interdorm Council Striving For Chest

The Interdormitory council is launching a drive to establish a Community Chest on campus, Pete Gerns, president of the council, said yesterday. "We hope to have a campus chest by fall term," he announced.

E. L. Mackie, dean of Awards Distinctions, will speak to the council at its meeting tomorrow at 6:30 o'clock in Roland Parker 3, Graham Memorial. A short business meeting will precede Mackie's address on scholarships.

Grades of dormitory students which were tabulated by the Dean of Students office will be given to student advisors, whose job it is to help improve scholastic standards in dorms.

The dormitories will be rated in a fashion similar to fraternity and sorority scholastic ratings. The scholastic standing of students this past term is on one of the lowest levels in years, Gerns said.

Gerns is chairman of a temporary committee set up to prepare a feasible plan for a Campus Community Chest. The committee will present their plan to the Interdorm council as soon as they have completed their study.

So far townspeople who are familiar with charitable drives and student leaders on many college campuses throughout the country have been contacted.

In discussing the reason why this project has been undertaken, Gerns said students were constantly under pressure to contribute the various drives. He suggested that an organized drive for a Campus Community Chest would probably be more successful than a few small drives.

At tomorrow's meeting presidents of the dormitories will make reports on consensus of opinion in dorms regarding such a drive. Recommendations of individual students in dorms will also be presented.

Gerns said his committee hoped to work with the Interfraternity council, Panhellenic council, Woman's Interdormitory council, and Men's and Girl's Town associations.

Elliot Poetry Will Be Topic Of Dr. Cotton

Speaks Tomorrow To Chi Delta Phi

Dr. Lyman A. Cotten, assistant professor in the University English department, will speak on the poetry of T. S. Eliot tomorrow night at 8 o'clock before an open meeting of Chi Delta Phi in Roland Parker lounge 1, Graham Memorial.

An Eliot scholar, he will present an introduction to the modern British author's poetry. Dr. Cotten, received his AB degree from the University of North Carolina and his Doctorate Degree from Yale university.

He has published reviews in leading literary publications and is the author of an article to be presented in a forthcoming issue of the Carolina Quarterly.

The meeting, which will be open to the public, will follow special initiation ceremonies at 7 o'clock. Alice Sharp, senior from Jacksonville, Fla., and Weddy Thorp, senior from Rocky Mount, will be initiated into Chi Delta Phi.

Civil Service Exams Available

Examinations for Civil Service positions as historian, intelligence specialists, foreign affairs officers, and social science analyst are now being given, it was announced this week by the Civil Service commission in Washington.

The positions to be filled are research positions in a wide variety of specialized fields. They are located in Washington and vicinity, and pay salaries of $3,727, $4,479, $5,232, and $6,235 a year.

Archeologist positions located throughout the country, paying from $3,727 to $5,232 a year, will be filled from the social science analyst examination.

No written test is required of competitors for these positions. To qualify they must have had education and experience appropriate for the position for which they apply.

Detailed information about the examinations and application forms, may be obtained at post offices, regional Civil Service offices, or from the commission in Washington. Applications must be received by the commission's Washington office by March 15.

Students Pass Examinations In Pharmacy

Graham Makes Hightst Score

Fifteen candidates passed examinations held here this week for licenses to practice pharmacy in North Carolina, according to announcement yesterday by H. C. McAllister, secretary-treasurer of the State board.

Leon I. Graham, Roseboro, made the highest average to lead the Board.

The other successful candidates were Evelyn Blanchard, Concord; William C. Brantley, Raleigh; Mrs. Lena Campbell, Durham; Oliver G. Fleming, Rocky Mount; Larry C. Harris, Cliffside; Robert F. Harrison, Sanford; Reeves Hawkins, Durham; Mrs. Maryellen M. Holt, Burlington; Joseph House, Jr., Beaufort; Mrs. Viola R. Howell, Durham; John C. McDonald, Durham; George Morgan, Henderson; Evelyn Shugar, Tarboro, and Joseph C. Southern, High Point.

Members of the Board giving the examinations were J. G. Ballew, Lenoir, president; Roger A. McDuffie, Greensboro; W. A. Gilliam, Winston-Salem; J. C. Brantley, Jr., Henderson, and Secretary McAllister.

The Board also held four business sessions to discuss some of the problems confronting pharmacy in the state. The enlargement of training facilities received much attention.

It was pointed out that the number of pharmacists per thousand population in North Carolina was one of the lowest in the nation and that this gap was becoming wider. This was ascribed largely to the "inadequacy of training space at the only School of Pharmacy in the state which is located at the State University."

Board Grants Many Leaves, Promotions

Two Professors To Join Faculty

Leaves of absences for University faculty members was the largest item in Chancellor R. B. House's report to the Executive committee of the Board of Trustees which approved all accounts in the three pages of recommendations.

Dr. Maurice Whittinghill was awarded leave for the spring quarter for study at Oak Ridge, while Dr. Gerald R. MacCarthy will leave at the same time for a one year tour of duty with the Navy department. He will be engaged in Arctic research in connection with a national defense project, the report stated.

Other leaves were approved for Dr. L. C. MacKinney during spring quarter for study at the University of California; for Assistant Dean Geraldine Foster during fall quarter for study in Europe; for Professor L. O. Kattsoff for six months, beginning January 1, 1950, for study in Europe; and for Professor H. A. Bierck for 1950-1951 for study and research.

Dr. A. E. Radford, department of botany, was promoted to assistant professor, retroactive as of January 1, 1949, and Robert R. Schenkkan, radio instructor, was named assistant professor, also retroactive as of September 1, 1948.

Appointments included an assistant professorship in English for John M. Steadman for September 1, 1949. He will receive his Ph.D. this June from Princeton. Dr. Floyd Stovall will become professor in department of English, beginning September 1, 1949.

Retreat Reports Are Set Tomorrow

Student leaders of the eight commissions under discussion at the Y retreat will speak in Gerrard hall tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock. University students are invited.

Each speaker will give an evaluation report on his group which will include a resume of the discussions and an outline of conclusions drawn by the groups.

Leaders appearing on the program will be Ray Mills, Sue Stokes, Bill Mackie, Al Lowenstein, Tom Donnelly, Sandy McEachern, Dick Murphy and Edie Knight.

The Y retreat is in session this weekend in Montreat. Those attending are expected to return sometime today.

Reverend Wright To Preach Today

The Rt. Rev. Thomas H. Wright, D.D., Bishop of the Diocese of East Carolina, will preach at the 11 o'clock service at the Episcopal church today.

DCBDEDSSC

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 19.—If there's a literary man in South Carolina who wants a really impressive title, let him follow the course of a new bill in the state House of Representatives.

Under it, the state would hire:

A director of the Comic Book Division of the Educational Department of the state of South Carolina.

His office would censor comic books, if a door letterer could fit any door with the title.

Rep. Billy Drennan Hayes of York County introduced the measure to provide for this DCBDEDSSC.

Hayes said his idea is not aimed at curbing the freedom of the press, but at cleaning up juvenile literature.

Estimates of how many brands of comic books are sold in South Carolina run between 300 and 600. There is a fast turnover.

But under the bill, all comic books sold would have to bear the permanently-stamped approval of the Comic Book division. If the book seller didn't agree that his book should have been censored, he could appeal first to the State Board of Education, and then, if he wishes the Court of Common Pleas in the county in which he sells.

Selden Quietly Gathers World Rep

Chapel Hill has a national reputation for her Dr. Frank, her writer's colony, her liberal college, her own Choo-Choo, and her charm as a village. Members of the bustling community modestly recognize these attributes, and go about their business. Few realize that a small, modest man in their midst has quietly gathered an international reputation.

Modest Man Is Theater Expert in the twenty years he has been here.

Every day he receives letters from far-away places like England, Belgium, Australia and New Zealand asking for advice, information and help. He is a member of the Committee of the International Theater Institute, and chairman on Cultural exchange for the National Theater conference. This spring, the North Carolina Press will bring out a volume of one-act plays he edited, called "International Folk Plays," a compilation of plays written by students here from all over the world to study playwriting.

In this country, and all over the world, wherever serious students and devotees of the theater gather, the name of Samuel Selden is known and respected.

He has written six text books on every aspect of theater techniques, including acting, directing, playwriting, scenery and lighting, and modern theater practice.

He has found time in his crowded schedule as teacher and head of the dramatic art department to start another book called "The Art of the Dramatic," an analytical study of what constitutes the dramatic in the theater. Appleton-Century Crofts publishers announced a sale of over 8,000 of his books last year to over 200 universities.

The New York Times of January 23 featured an article by Selden in its drama section. Call "Regional Theater," a subject he is well-qualified to discuss, it noted that "west, north and south of Broadway the tides of theater extend over a country 3,000 miles wide and 1,200 miles deep. In this vast area some 20,000 community groups regularly produce plays for audiences. More than 500 colleges and universities are regularly training actors, directors, designers and technicians to put on the plays."

'Foxes' Tickets Ready Monday; Play Scheduled For March 2-6

Tickets will go on sale tomorrow for the Playmakers fourth major production, Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes," scheduled for March 2-6. John W. Parker, Playmakers business manager and director of the drama, has placed tickets on sale at Swain hall and at Ledbetter-Pickard's downtown.

Season ticket holders are urged to turn in stub number four in exchange for a reserved seat as soon as possible. There will be five nights to chose from, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The fifth night has been added permanently to the Playmakers schedule due to the very large attendance their shows have drawn so far this season.

"The Little Foxes" boasts an unusually talented and experienced cast. Louise Lamont (Regina), Tuscaloosa, Ala., has played professionally on Broadway and has appeared in stock companies and on the radio. Her last part here was as Mama in "I Remember Mama." William MacIlwinen (Horace), Fayetteville, acted with Miss Lamont at the Barter Theater, Abingdon, Va., and wrote music for the forthcoming musical, "Apple Tree Farm."

Lillian Prince (Birdie), Chapel Hill, toured with the New York production of "Dark of the Moon," and has played Queen Elizabeth in "The Lost Colony" for the past two summers. Recently she did Lulu Belle in "State of the Union," and Granny in "Hear the Hammers Ringing." James Geiger (Ben), Miami, Fla., is playing his 40th role with the Playmakers. His 39th was "The School For Scandal." Gordon Argo (Leo), Gardendale, Ala., has been seen in "Egypt Lan'" and "Inherit the Wind."

Hog vs. Man

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 19.—(UP)—A college-boy contest to determine whether a pig can eat more than a man was called off today.

Paul H. (The Hungry) Smith, University of Michigan engineering student from Monroe, Mich., said that he and his fraternity, Alpha Tau Omega, were alarmed by "all the publicity."

"We believe that all the publicity we're getting might be detrimental to the school and to the fraternity," he said. "So we decided not to go through with the contest."

Smith, backed by Alpha Tau Omega, and a pig, sponsored by rival fraternity Sigma Nu, were to meet in front of Parrott's restaurant here today in what was billed by the students as "the greatest experiment in the world of science."

The contest, which was to have been climaxed today had its start earlier this week when freshman Donald Brown ate 48 raw oysters at a sitting, only to be topped the next day by sophomore Chuck Porter, who downed 76.

Dr. Warren E. Forsythe, director of the University health service, said the contests were "disgusting and silly."

"A hog could eat more than that," he said.

Smith took up the challenge and arranged for today's meet between hog and man.

Brandis Will Talk .

World Government Planned As Topic of Monday Meeting

Are Chapel Hill people interested in reviving a United World Federalist chapter? That is the question to be decided in a meeting of a group interested in world government, Walter Spearman said yesterday.

The meeting will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the projection room of the Communications center, Swain hall.

Fred Weaver, who succeeded Henry Brandis as president of the local World Federalist chapter, contacted through the mail nine townspeople who were known to be interested in World government.

A letter sent to them stated that tomorrow's meeting will feature a talk about the world government by Brandis, and a movie on the same subject.

Each of the people receiving a letter were requested to contact specific people in Chapel Hill who were known to be interested in world government. Approximately 50 people were to be notified of the meeting.

Three weeks ago eight people, including townspeople, faculty and a student, met to discuss World government, its aims, prospects and present state, the letter continued.

The meeting scheduled for tomorrow is not concerned with increasing membership of the United World Federalist organization, the letter concluded.

Men's Glee Club Announces Soloists For Thursday Night Concert in Hill

Student soloists for the Thursday concert by the Men's Glee club have been announced.

John Brinegar, Lanier Davis, Sam Greene, and Andrew Griffith will sing the solo quartet in the antiphonal Jubilate Deo by Giovanni Gabrieli. Tal D. Smith will sing the bass solo in John Tasker Howard's whimsical "Joseph Seely and Isaac Osborn," a story of three hats.

The instrumental accompaniment for General William Booth Enters Into Heaven by Philip James will be played by Hubert Henderson, trumpet; Harry Hall, tombone; Conrad Stewart, percussion; and Harold Andrews, percussion.

The Salvation Army-type band will be augmented by two pianos played by John O'Steen and Charles Stevens. William E. Waters will be organist. The incidental tenor solo will be sung by Carl Perry, who will also sing in the Prisoners' Chorus from Fidelio by Beethoven.

Milton Bliss will sing the baritone solo in the Prisoners' Chorus.

The concert will be directed by Paul Young. Tickets are available in Hill hall 109. All seats are reserved.

Noses Out Three

Rendezvous Sorority Contest Won by Chi O's Friday Night

Chi Omega girls nosed out Alpha Gamma Delta, Delta Delta Delta and Alpha Delta Pi grils to win the Friday night competitive sorority floor show which was held in the Graham Memorial Rendezvous room.

The Chi O girls were presented with a silver tray inscribed "most entertaining sorority on the campus" by Miss Jane Grills of the radio department.

A Chi O trio sang a song over the Rendezvous radio show, which followed the floor show competition, and one girl from each of the participating sororities also presented a song on the radio show.

Each of the sorority floor show skits lasted 15 minutes and were judged on entertainment value and costumes. The theme of the Chi O show was Manhattan Merry-Go-Round, and four numbers representing the main theme in different settings.

Chi O girls taking part in the competition were Anne Knight, Barbara Ann Covington, Frankie Johnston, Anne Bumgardner, Marietta Duke, Bootsie Lyons, and Barbara Ann Way. Judges of the sorority shows were Miss Jane Grills and Mrs. Norman Cordon.

Last night's floor show competition was one of the Graham Memorial shows which will continue to be presented throughout the quarter.

Lib Stoney, director of the Rendezvous room, has outlined entertainment programs including both radio shows and floor show competition as part of the Graham Memorial student entertainment program.

The Question of Liquor

You can't please everybody at the same time. In North Carolina there is growing agitation for a referendum on the question of whether it should be legal to sell liquor in the state. Naturally the dries are the ones who want the referendum, in the hope that prohibition may again be put into effect. In Oklahoma the same situation exists, but in reverse. There agitation is growing in favor of repealing prohibition.

Regardless of the pros and cons, if enough people want a vote on the question then a vote should be held. But both sides should know what they are voting for.

The dries look upon the sale of liquor as a moral issue. They say whiskey, its consumption and its effects are evil and therefore the state should not condone its sale.

The wets look upon the sale of liquor as a practical question. They say people who want to drink are going to drink. Why, then, should North Carolina, which is not too rich in taxes as it is, throw away a source of revenue to enrich the bootleggers?

Here are some of the arguments being used against prohibition in Oklahoma:

Is prohibition effective? According to figures furnished by the United States internal revenue department, there are more persons selling alcoholic beverages in Oklahoma than in the wet states of Alabama, Wyoming, West Virginia, Vermont, Utah, Tennessee, South Dakota, South Carolina, North Dakota, New Hampshire, Nevada, Maine, Idaho, Delaware, and Arkansas.

Has prohibition solved the state's crime problem? According to the federal bureau of investigation uniform crime reports for 1947, this is the comparison between Oklahoma and the remaining states for various criminal offenses per 100,000 population:

	Oklahoma	U.S. (Ave.)
Murder	8.39	6.12
Larceny	1230.4	961.8
Burglary	525.2	389.8
Auto Theft	199.3	182.1

Are the highways safer? The Oklahoma safety department says 18 percent of the state's accidents resulted from drunken drivers. The national average is only 12 percent.

Although there are other arguments to be considered on both sides, these figures do not seem to back up the contention of the dries that the evils of liquor can be solved by prohibition.

Apple Peddler Seeks Revenge

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

If I know anything, the entrepreneurs in Ecuador who frightened the bejabers out of the populace with an adaptation of Orson Welles' invasion from Mars, are going to have an even hotter time of it when President Galo Plaza gets around to dealing with them.

The Ecuadorean president was in this country, selling apples on the streets of New York to keep body and soul together, when Welles staged the original scare. It cost Galo Plaza all his working capital.

He dropped his apples in the gutter—and ran for hiding in the lower level of Grand Central Terminal.

El Presidente Plaza swore then that if he ever got his hands on Welles he would break his neck. The meeting, fortunately (or unfortunately, depending upon how you feel about Orson), never took place. The apple-seller, who might otherwise have been withdrawn from circulation, because strangling a radio producer is still illegal, went on to become ambassador from his country to Washington and then president.

He happened to be peddling apples, because his father, the renowned General Plaza, decided Galo was having too much fun in this country. The embryonic statesman had his allowance from home suddenly cut off, and eked out a miserable existence for nearly a year before his parent relented.

I would not care to be those Ecuadorean radio fellows. Galo Plaza has a remarkably long memory.

I see where a couple of enterprising tradesmen were pinched for selling fish in the New York subway.

We have only one subway transit operation here in Washington—the underground jaunting car that plies between the capitol and the senate office building, so our senators won't have to walk. I hope no one starts selling fish down there. It wouldn't mingle so good with the odor of sanctity.

Senator Ernest W. McFarland, who is somewhat past the age of flaming romance, was nevertheless pleased when he received a beautiful, lacy valentine with this gooey sentiment:

"Are you my little pigeon,
"Are you my little dove,
"Are you the little chickadee,
"I'm always thinking of?"

But his complacence was jarred by the inside page of the valentine. It said:

"No, you old crow."

Tarnation Review

New Issue Comes Up Soon

By Billy Carmichael, III

Tarnation, which appears on the campus in a new issue this week with two strikes against it, takes a good, healthy swing in its latest effort and comes up with a magazine that might even avoid Jonathan Marshall's waste paper basket.

The campus-elected funnymen, Messers Wharton and Smith, have finally stumbled upon the formula of the successful humor magist, but still seem a bit like a couple of atom bomb scientists—they don't know exactly what to do with their product at times.

The real success of the current Tarnation lies in the digging up of an ancient art of presenting humorous tales of laughter—the poem. Both with the efforts of Jonathan Francis—no kin to the forementioned Mr. Marshall—and Dave Sharpe, the Tarnation crew has brought forth something that has the rare qualities of being both funny and original—a rare combination in this day and time of steal and be stolen from.

Mr. Sharpe, though, takes the cake and whatever icing may be found there on. He's a very funny man with a very funny hand. He not only deserves reading, but also possibly plagarizing.

Friend Francis bears watching as a close second. His The Two Princesses is attractively presented both in words and petite pictures by one Jack Taylor. It's all about virgins and pseudo-virgins. A little difficult for us simple of mind, but entertaining to say the least.

Wharton and Smith (bop, that is) have stumbled upon another very funny presentation of humor—that being the joke. They have found a couple that obviously can't be original, but then again, can't quite be remembered. Their Somebody Stole My Ghoul appealed to at least one reader, and might serve the same purpose for others to come. As Gertie Stein always mused—a joke is a joke is a joke.

There are pictures in the new Tarnation—one of a Duke Coed that must have gotten mixed in at the printers, but then again, to err is human. Another picture brings to life—as much as the printed page can permit—our old friend and the answer to a better salt and pepper shaker—the Cat Girl. Though Chuck Hauser backs up the picture nicely, one doubts the poor girl needs too much backing to begin with.

The pic spread of the month gives a roto ribbing to neighboring Durham—the City of Exciting Stores. After six shots our heros—a stoplight named Sam, a Buick convertible and a pair of unidentified Tar Heel student stoogies — reach the decision that Exciting Stores are merely Bull City bull. It's all quite laughable.

Tarnation also adds for someone's approval a satircal go at its step sister in publications, the Daily Tar Heel. It reprints for the benefit of late-comers and popcorn munchers some of the more famous of the letters to the editors and does a good job of it. Good satire is good satire.

There are still more things worthy of perusal throughout the 32-page mag incluring a very laughable page on the college man's attempt to keep abreast of the college woman. 'Tis a clever episode of how padded girls put men in padded cells.

Mr. Sharpe returns to the stage for an encore on the situation in extra-curricular activities on the campus and he is well-supported on other pages by a fine feature writing cast of Charlie Burns, Jim Henderson and Gib Furgurson.

The new Tarnation is weakest at the start where the Village Spectator looks to be needing a slightly stronger pair of glasses. Readers do well not to be discouraged at the start. There is steam to be gathered.

CPU Roundtable

Question of Motives

By Bill Robertson

For some time now our newspapers and radios have had much to tell us about a Soviet "peace offensive." All commentators are in agreement that 1) The Soviet government has proposed that there be a discussion by the heads of the Soviet and American governments of outstanding issues on which there is disagreement. 2) The Soviet government has proposed that a joint statement be issued by both governments that neither will engage in war against the other, and 3) the American government has emphatically rejected both of these proposals.

The disagreement, of course, is centered around the motives behind the action of each government. There are people who argue that the latest Soviet proposals, like the proposals for a 1-3 reduction in armaments, are insincere, and that they are meant to disrupt the unity of the North Atlantic alliance now in the process of formation. They argue that the Soviet Union will be judged by its actions rather than its words. Truman refers to Greece and Korea and to Communist-led strikes in France.

Others argue that no harm can be done by taking the Soviet Union up on its offer and that the American response makes the Soviet Union appear in the role of a champion of peace, while America seems to desire a continuation of the "cold war." Also there are people who see the economic situation playing its part. For example, the New York Journal of Commerce has the following to say:

As long as the armament prop remains under business . . . we still find it difficult to believe that a collapse in demand is imminent. (3-10-48)

And in the opinion of many the civil war in Greece is due to American and British support of a despotic regime rather than to Soviet pressure.

In Korea the Soviet Union has withdrawn its troops, while American troops still back an unpopular government, including many who collaborated with the Japanese. And it doesn't take an order from Stalin to make French miners, trying to raise a family on $80 a month, go on strike.

These are a few of the interesting facts and opinions that will be discussed at the meeting of the Carolina Political union this evening at 8 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Governor Scott Is Sticking to An Unsound Stand on Tuition

By Jonathan Marshall

Governor Scott is showing some courage in the present controversy on tuition. He is sticking to his unsound stand, pressure to the contrary notwithstanding.

Apparently the good Governor wishes to put the state permanently in debt with his highway program. He is also trying very hard to deprive North Carolina's youth of the chance to get a college education. But perhaps he feels that in four years, when the next election comes and he leaves office, the people will have forgotten. That's a long time.

It is unfortunate that the executive committee of the board of trustees approved Mr. Scott's plan to raise tuition, but it is not too late to prevent this massacre of education.

If pressure is not applied, and applied soon, many students will be unable to return next year. Other students will have to do much outside work to earn enough money to get their degrees, and the time they devote to study will be reduced proportionately.

We are told that the state university competes with denominational schools. This argument is absurd. The university, State, and W. C. were not founded for this reason, they were founded to provide an education for those who could not afford private schools.

It is nice to say that the tuition raise will bring higher faculty salaries. They are needed. But if one carries this idea to its conclusion, really just faculty salaries, there would be only a handful of students here. Their abilities would bring average salaries of shall we say $10,000 in the outside world to our faculty. Let us raise salaries to that level, and of course tuition should take care of the raise, so we'll raise tuitions to $1,400 a year. Let us not be absurd.

Unless we are willing to allow the American ideal of education for all to be desecrated, we must do something. What can we do? Many things.

Students can ask their parents to write letters to the board of trustees, to the governor, and to their representatives in the state legislature. Students, faculty members, and townspeople can write letters themselves.

The Student legislature should go on record as opposing the tuition raise, and it should send representatives to appear before the trustees, and to go to Raleigh to talk with members of the state legislature. Letters to the various state papers would also help, for the press is a valuable ally.

If we are not successful through these means, it would be possible to organize a march on the capital. This has succeeded in other places, and we have nothing to lose.

Such a march on the capital would have to be orderly and planned; we would have to prove that we are mature and deserve a hearing. If about 2,000 students, or more, marched on the state legislature to request defeat of the proposed tuition hike, the legislature would have to think twice before granting it. The idea is worth serious consideration.

Write Away

Malicious Journalism

Editor:

The Daily Tar Heel certainly sank to the lowest form of malicious and irresponsible journalism when it printed in the February 17th edition of the Write Away column the heading above the letters of Messrs. Shanker and McNair.

The heading clearly indicates that anyone criticizing the Administration is a "Red". This hypothesis also includes anyone desiring peace. The harm caused by such misleading headlines is irreparable and certainly unjustifiable. Condemnation by implication is not symptomatic of the use of intelligence or honest journalism. The right of anyone to express his opinion, which I'm sure the Daily Tar Heel believes, should not be threatened or discouraged by slandering and scurrilous journalism. It should be defended and protected as a living symbol of our precious freedom.

I suggest that the Daily Tar Heel in the future refrain from editoralizing in the captions of the Write Away column.

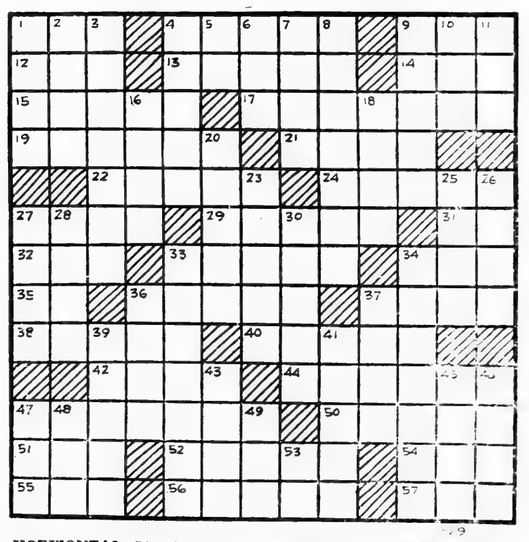
He's Done It Again

Editor:

Apparently you can't keep a good man down, for Bill Robertson has burst into print again. He is still in there pitching in spite of the ferocious persecution which forced him to do exactly what other columnists have to do—namely, put up something worth reading or else shut up. Most incredible of all, his genius still burns as brightly as ever.



That's right—Robertson has done it again. He opened his mouth and both his feet went flying in so fast he almost swallowed himself. The same thing could happen to anybody—to anybody, that is, who says one thing and then says just the opposite. Allow me to summarize a portion of his latest flop d'estime: first, there is no such thing as objective truth; second, as an illustration of this basic principle of Marxist materialism, many children think Santa Claus exists but of course that's a lot of bunk. Bang, crash! That noise you just heard was logic committing suicide. And for good reason: if there is no objective truth, Santa Claus is just as real as the class struggle or a "people's democracy," as real as the Yellow Peril, the Red menace, or "the American way of life," as real as any notion that men get into their amazing heads. In other words, the ideas of Westbrook Pegler or John Rankin are as valid as the ideas of Robertson or Freistadt. Of course, every Communist worth his salt knows that there is but one truth that counts: Marx, Lenin, Stalin.

This little non sequitur is not in itself any more worthy of attention than any other garbled quotation from the Marxist scriptures, except insofar as it copies a propaganda trick that the Communists constantly use: they hammer it into the heads of the weak-minded and the materialistic that there is no truth, then they purge anybody in their grasp who dares to deviate in the slightest from the truth handed down from the lightning-girdled, misty heights of the new Sinai, the Kremlin. This kind of procedure may work sometimes, but it is hardly worth any consideration from those who still believe that no one group can get a monopoly on the truth, who think that truth is complex, that every quarrel has, not only two, but many sides.

It is already hard enough to get at such facts as there are for us to see: we don't need Mr. Robertson to throw any more dust in our eyes.

James S. Patty

(Possibly our local 'peace seekers' are becoming too self conscious about their coloring. The idea in both letters referred to is that the United States is pushing Russia into a war which Russia does not desire. The term "Reds" has become a commonly used synonym for "Russians." Thus the headline "Reds Want 'Peace'" would normally be interpreted to mean "Russia wants 'Peace.'")

Star-Studded State Humbles Local Cagers, 79 To 39

Dickey, Ranzino Lead Visitors; Nyimicz Scores 10 for Locals

By Billy Carmichael, III

Stately State college appeared in Woollen gym last night.

Their appearance was marred only slightly by the local Tar Heel basketball team.

The result of the evening was a 79-39 victory for State.

The Wolfpack lads were in like Indiana from the start. They roared to the front early in the ball game and after that just couldn't keep the whole thing under control. Thirty-one fiend goals rolled into the till before the final gun sounded and everybody went home.

The Tar Heels, meanwhile, were unable to hold the pace. Their outside game, sparked by one set shot shooting on the part of Dan Nyimicz and Charlie Thorne, poured through enough field goals to keep the Tar Heels moving. But inside, Carolina shots were not to be taken, let alone made.

The State defense was potent. Only three Tar Heels succeeded in piercing it for underneath field goals. Nemo Nearman

The Tar Heel basketballers leave today for Columbia, S. C. where tomorrow night they meet the Gamecocks of South Carolina in a Southern conference contest.

Tuesday night the Tar Heels will face Davidson in Charlotte on the way home.

[illegible]ned the trick early in the [illegible] half. It wasn't done again until two Carolina subs did it in the closing minutes of the game.

The Wolfpack was merely hot. The Tar Heels were merely not. [illegible] Kappler, Tar Heel forward who had paced the local [illegible]ge with Coy Carson during the past few games, had trouble enough holding his feet due to a very bad ankle, let alone to play much basketball. He suffered his [illegible] careless evening of the season.

Carson, the usual high point getter, couldn't shake his shadow for the evening, Vic Bubas. He did contribute his share of the set shot points.

After the initial pain of impending defeat had subsided the Statesmen were an interest and a treat to watch. Their ease in handling the ball as if it were a part and their ability to set up shots and then drop them, thrilled the entire 6,700 persons on hand.

Dick Dickey led the Wolfpack with 19 points, but there seemed to be no end to the stream of points that plummetted from Coach Everett Case's bench.

Carolina hit on 15 of 63 shots for a percentage of .238. State clicked 31 of 82 tries for a mark of .378.

For the record, State took the lead after 10 seconds on a one-hander by Dickey and were never again to be headed. They ran the lead to 20-7 after seven minutes and eventually moved into a 43-24 lead at halftime.

The second half was about the same with the visitors advancing to a 61-29 at the midway point in the period after Carolina had scored but two floor goals in the first 13 minutes.

Larned Tops Seixas

MIAMI, Feb. 19—North Carolina's Vic Seixas, top seeded star, fell by the way today in the semi-finals of the University of Miami tennis championships before the steady stroking of Rollins college's Gardner Larned, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

The blistering battle that lasted two hours saw Seixas come from behind trailing 1-4 in the final set to tie the game score at 5-5.

But Larned turned on the heat at this point to break Seixas' service, hold his own, and take set and match.

Tar Heels Second In Maryland Meet

COLLEGE PARK, Md.—Maryland University tonight won the Maryland Invitational Indoor Games with a score of 41 points. The University of North Carolina was second with 30 and 1-2 and Navy was third with 21 and 1-2.

Bill Albans, Carolina's own decathlon work horse, took a first in the 60-yard dash to lead the ten man Tar Heel team entered in the invitational meet. Albans completed the course in 6.4 seconds, a good time in a fast field.

Albans also won the 70-yard lows and set a new meet record in winning the high jump with a jump of 6 feet, 3 and 5-8 inches. Other Tar Heels that placed were Moody, second in the high jump, and Morrow fourth in the 70-yard low hurdles.

Two Carolina timber toppers, Dick Taylor and Bob Morrow, both contenders for the Conference indoor high hurdles title at Chapel Hill next Saturday, finished second and third respectively in the 70-yard high hurdles.

Ward Wins Golf Club Champs Tourney

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 19—Harvie Ward, the University of North Carolina golfing ace, played havoc with par and opponent Frank Comfort here today when he nipped the former by two strokes and the latter 8 and 7 to win the Golf Club Champions tournament.

Ward shot an even par 72 for the morning round of the 36-hole championship and went out to lunch leading his Massachusetts foe by the slim margin of two holes.

But at the start of the second 18, the lad from Tarboro turned on the steam to win the first three holes of the afternoon and go 5 up at the end of the 21st.

From then on, Ward kept the heat on his faltering rival as the makings of a rout began to develop. At the 29th hole it was all over when the Tar Heel went 8 up with only seven holes remaining. He finished out the round two under par.

The consensus was that Ward had been the great star of a great tournament. Local experts heralded him as a threat to all Amateur titles this season.

Boxing, Basketball Winners Will Be Determined Tomorrow

Tomorrow's intramural program promises to be one of great interest with the semi-final cage playoffs and the boxing finals equally sharing the spotlight.

The local basketball fans will have their appetite whetted tomorrow afternoon with the finals of the Dormitory division and a pair of semi-final clashes in the Fraternity league. One of the 5 o'clock games features the battle between the Grads and the Unknowns for the dorm crown while the other contest at the same time will have Chi Psi 1 and Chi Phi 3 slugging it out in a frat semi-final match. An hour earlier, defending champ Sigma Chi 2 meets Beta 1 in the other game, the outcome of which decides one of the finalists for the frat finale.

Boxing enthusiasts will have their last chance to see any student pugilists in action as all the championships will be determined in tomorrow's bouts. Fourteen matches will be held, eight of which will be frat finals and the other six, dorm bouts.

Some of the feature meetings that will close the entire program will be the Heavyweight final in the frat league between Ben Perry of Zeta and St. Anthony's Bill Pritchard. The dorm finals in the heavyweight class will feature two footballers from Emerson, Roscoe Hansen versus Joe Gurtis.

Several oddities in tomorrow's slugfest are three bouts in the fraternity division that finds fighters of the same fraternity squaring off against each other for the championship. Chi Psi dominates the 145 lb class as Dave Ferebee and Steve Kenney will face each other across the ring. In the 155 lb. division two Phi Gams, J. Holcomb and J. Fleming, meet in the final while Sigma Chi is sure to win the 165 lb. title because two of their boys, F. Bunting and J. Langley, are in the finals of that class.

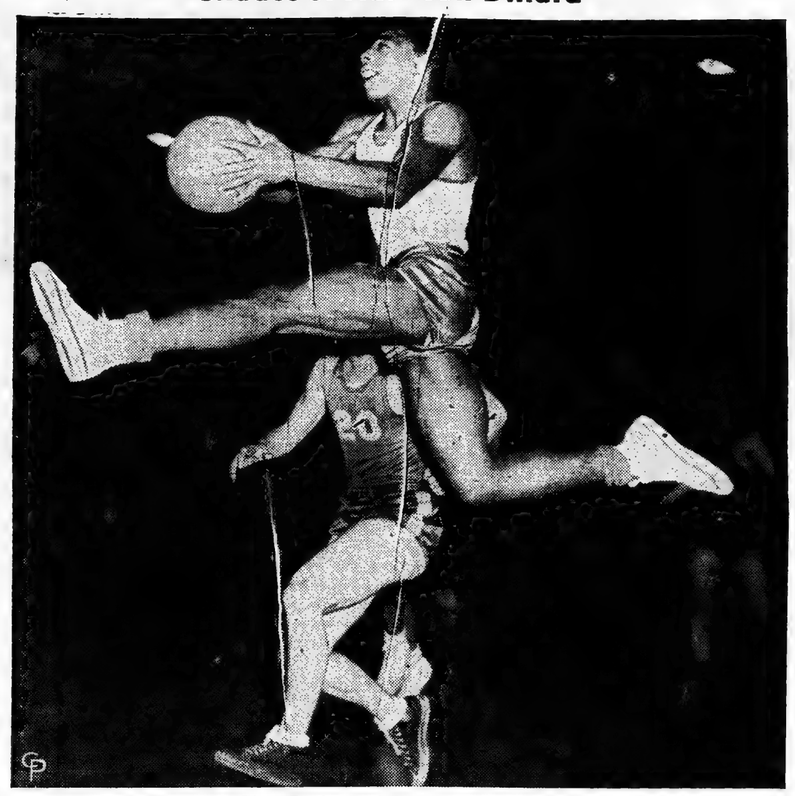
Sale of Tickets Of All Varieties On at Gym Office

They've got all kinds of tickets for sale at Woollen gym these days to all kinds of sporting events.

Currently on sale at the athletic office are ducats to the Southern conference indoor games, the Duke basketball game in Durham next Saturday, the NCAA swimming championships to be held here next month, and even a few season tickets to the Conference basketball tournament.

The track tickets fall into two categories: half-priced tickets for local students and full fare squats of a $1.50 for the general public. There has been a large demand for both these items during the past week, and track fans are cautioned to buy now to assure a ticket and a good location.

There are still a few seats on hand for next weekend's cage contest with Duke in the big Blue Devil indoor stadium. These are going fast at $1.50 per.



First call has been posted on the sale of season tickets to the NCAA swimming championships which will be held at Bowman Gray pool March 24, 25, 26. There will be six afternoon and evening sessions and the price for a season ticket will be $4.

Surprise of ticket news is the report that there are some season ducats to the Conference basketball tourney available for sale to local students. The price tag reads $9.

Sewanee Wins Scholastic Swim As Marks Fall; GMA Is Second

By Joe Cherry

Sewanee Military academy rang up 52 points to pace the ten teams entered and capture the third annual Southern Interscholastic championship in a meet that saw seven records fall by the wayside yesterday afternoon in Bowman Gray pool.

Although the Sewanee tankmen took top team honors, the outstanding performances of the day were turned in by Bruce Fountain of Tarboro, star of the runnerup Georgia Military academy squad. Fountain was unanimously awarded the trophy as the meet's outstanding swimmer for his sterling record-breaking performances in the 50 and 100 yard free style events.

The second-place Georgians amassed a total of 38 points aand were closely followed by Western high school of Washington, D. C., with 36 markers. Staunton Military academy scored 24 points to take fourth place.

The winning Cadets finished in the money in every event, taking three first places, a brace of seconds, and a host of thirds and fourths. The Sewanee relay team set a new record of 1:45.4 in the 200-yard free style relay, while Shannon turned in a 2:08, 200-yard free style to shave two seconds off the old mark for the Cadets.

Wall of St. John's, Washington, D. C., joined the parade of record breakers when he did the 100-yard breast stroke in 1:06.6, to tie the record set in the preliminary races yesterday morning.

The score for the remaining six teams entered in the meet was as follows: St. John 6; Raleigh 6; North Fulton (Ga.) 6; Greensboro 2; Chapel Hill 1; Fulton (Ga.) 1.

The summary:

50 free style: 1—Fountain (GMA), 2—Sundt (S), 3—Wilson (GMA). 0:24. (New record).

100 breast stroke: 1—Wall (St. John's), 2—Godfreyn (GMA), 3—Eaton (W). 1:06.6 (New record).

200 free style: 1—Shannon (S), 2—Tindall (W), 3—Pribor (SMA). 2:08 (New record).

100 back stroke: 1—Baarcke (S), 2—Bird (GMA), 3—Ross (SMA). 1:07.2 (New record).

100 free style: 1—Fountain (GMA), 2—Scott (W), Conklin (S). 0:53.9 (New record).

150 individual: 1—Tinkham (W), 2—Baarcke (S), 3—Pribor (SMA). 1:44.7 (New record).

Diving: 1—Boyd (NFHS), 2—McCord (S), 3—Westlake (W).

150- Medley Relay: 1—Won by Western (Tinkham, Eaton, Scott). 1:25.3.

200 free style relay: Won by Sewanee (Baker, Sundt, Hardison) 1:45.4 (New record).

Vielle-Trio Will Appear In Hill Hall Tonight For Presentation Of Period Music Program

The Vielle-Trio, the only ensemble in the United States specializing in the interpretation of music of the Gothic aand Renaissance, will appear in Hill hall tonight at 8:30, sponsored by Graham Memorial and the University music department.

Du Bose Robertson, will be the featured attraction of the program. Other members of the trio are Franz Siedersbeck and Beatrice Dohme, alto-vielle, aand Werner Landshoff, tenor-vielle. The program is the third in a series of musical entertainments put on by the student union this quarter.

Organized in 1947, the trio was introduced in its present form to musicians and scholars in New York, Washington, and Baltimore. Its first public appearance was before the annual convention of the Music Teachers National association in Boston. It has been acclaimed at the Metropolitan Opera club in New York and Harvard university.

The vielles were the string-instruments of the Middle Ages and were used until about the middle of the 16th century. During the Renaissance they were succeeded by the viols and the viola de gambo, direct predecessors of the modern violin family.

There will be no admission charge for the concert.

Tri Delt, Monogram Club Party Highlight Functions of Sororities

Highlighting the entertainments for and by the coeds last week, the Monogram club gave a combined initiation-party Monday night in the Rendezvous room with the Delta Delta Delta sorority members as guests.

After the first-time-letter-winners were presented their traditional NC, Monogram club members entertained Tri Delts with a skit, including impersonations by head cheerleader Norm Sper and a tap dancing performance by Joe Cospito and Joe Romano.

Among other sorority entertainments of the week was a Valentine party given by the Alpha Gamma Delta's Monday night for the Delta Kappa Epsilon's. Carrying out the Valentine's day theme, two large hearts with Alpha Gamma Delta and Delta Kappa Epsilon outlined in phosphorous, formed the decorations. Favors of hearts were presented to each guest.

Pi Beta Phi active members held pledge night Wednesday when the pledges dressed to represent the names of perfumes. They entertained actives with skits, songs, and poems.

Thursday night, Pi Phi's attended a Sigma Chi dinner party at the fraternity's house from 6 until 8 o'clock.

Tri Delts will give a George Washington party for the Kappa Alpha's Tuesday night.

Sunday evening at the Alpha Gam open house each girl will wear some symbol on her lapel of the state in which she lives. Alpha Gam girls will represent 15 states in all. The states represented will be New York, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, New Jersey, Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, Florida, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Maryland, Alabama, and the District of Columbia.

Chi Omega will have a coffee hour tonight from 7 to 8 o'clock. Last week, the S.A.E. members entertained the Chi O girls at a Tuesday night supper. And Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Harland had supper at the Chi O house Thursday night.

Alpha Delta Pi girls will hold an open house tonight from 7 to 8 o'clock in the ADPi house. ADPi girls are extremely fortunate in having the province president, Miss Laura Whitlark, at their house this week-end.

Miss Whitlark is on a current inspection tour of ADPi chapters and is inspecting the ADPi this week while enjoying the ADPi house hospitality. She will be here all this week-end and is expected to leave the ADPi house the first of the week. ADPi girls are extremely grateful to Miss Whitlark fro her timely visit.

Chi Psi Holds Pledge Banquet Honoring 19

Chi Psi members went all-out for their pledges this week-end, climaxing their activities with a dance at the fraternity house last night. Herb Gupton's band from Raleigh played for the occasion.

The festivities began Friday afternoon with a reception, which was followed by a buffet supper and costume ball. An early morning breakfast was given yesterday.

Last night's dance, under the direction of Budd Grover, featured a Hawaiian theme. The following pledges were honored: Banks Talley, Bennetsville, S. C., president of the pledge class; Tommy Steed, Raleigh, vice-president; Leon Chapman, Union, N. J., secretary; Bill Jones, Raleigh, treasurer; Ronald Jones, Raleigh; Jack Steed, High Point.

Bill Newman, Durham; Jim Williford, Winston-Salem; Frank Eckert, Union, N. J.; Frank Allston, Arlington, Va.; Zane Robbins, Winston-Salem; Charlie Melvin, Greensboro; Steve Kenney, Raleigh; Karl Stuart, Raleigh; Dick Proctor, Whiteville; Blue McDonald, Cathage; Walt Tice, High Point; Bill Edwards, Raleigh; and Gus Wilson, New Bern.

Chapel Hill League Of Women's Voters Reports Activities

Believing that a passive citizen is a deadweight in making a democracy work, a group of Chapel Hill women put their conviction into action in October, 1947, and organized the local unit of the American League of Women Voters, which now has about 40 members.

The purpose of this "education and action organization," according to its president, Mrs. John Gillin, "is to help women understand how government works and take an active part in it."

The League feels that only through doing can a woman really prepare herself to be an effective citizen. While the League listing the offices, duties, salaries, ages all members to work in the parties of their choice," she said in a recent interview.

The local League divides its work between two study groups. League members participating in the local study group are now focusing their attention on the problem of finance in Chapel Hill and Orange county, including the study of tax sources.

They attend meetings of various boards and commission in Orange county and Chapel Hill, such as those of the Board of Aldermen, Planning board, Zoning committee, School board, County commissioners, County School board, and the Chapel Hill Recorder's court.

Members of the group, of which Mrs. James Fesler is chairman, are appearing this month at the 15 county home demonstration groups to give talks on local government.

Last spring the local study group prepared a pamphlet entitled "Your Local Government" on government organization in Chapel Hill and Orange county, listing the o ces, duties, salaries, and method of appointment or election. Over 650 copies of the pamphlet were sold. It was the first study of its kind to be published, according to Mrs. Gillin.

"Also last year the group did a lot of work on the registration connected with the bond issue for a new sewage system which was held here," she said.

Dr. MacIver Will Deliver Weil Lectures

Series Begins On March 1

Robert M. MacIver, professor of political philosophy and sociology at Columbia university, will present this year's series of Weil lectures on American citizenship in Hill hall, March 1, 2 and 3 at 8:30.

Dr. MacIver, a native of Scotland, is well-known as a sociologist in both the United States and Canada. He is the author of "The Web of Government," which has been ranked with John Stuart Mill's "Representative Government" and Aristotle's "Politics;" "Towards An Abiding Peace," and "The More Perfect Union," which was published last year.

"The Perils of American Democracy" will be the theme of his three evening lectures here.

The Weil lectures, endowed by the families of Sol and Henry Weil of Goldsboro, have been an annual event at the University for 35 years. The first series of these public lectures was delivered by President William Howard Taft in 1914. Included among the Weil lecturers in recent years have been Roscoe Pound, Charles A. Beard, Felix Frankfurter, Herbert Agar, and R. H. Tawney.

Dr. MacIver received his A.B. degree from Oxford university and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Edinburgh university. He was awarded the Litt. D. degree at Columbia and Harvard.

Before coming to the United States in 1927, he taught at the University of Toronto, where he was head of the department of political science. He has been a Lieber professor at Columbia since that time.

Some of his earlier books are "The Modern State, Economic Reconstruction," "Leviathan and the People," and "Social Causation."

Hauser Is Triply-Endorsed For Daily Tar Heel Editor

Chuck Hauser, managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel, who received the Student party nomination for the editorship of the DTH last month, was endorsed for the post last week by both the University and Campus parties, Joe Leary and Banks Talley, party chairmen, announced yesterday.

Hauser is the second candidate for the top campus publication post to receive a triple endorsement from campus political parties in as many years. Ed Joyner, present DTH editor, ran under a triple endorsement last spring and was elected to the post over Art Melton, an independent candidate.

Hauser's triple endorsement is the third in recent campus political history. Bill Moffitt, successful candidate for the editorship of the Yackety Yack two years ago, received the first triple endorsement. Moffitt, however, later withdrew from school and was replaced by a board of editors.

CHUCK HAUSER

Hauser has been a member of the Daily Tar Heel staff since the fall of 1946 when he entered the University as a freshman. He was appointed to his present position as managing editor after elections last spring.

He is also treasurer of the Publications board, campus organization which administers the finances of the DTH, Tarnation and the Yackety Yack. He was elected as junior member of the board last April.

After serving as a reporter and night editor for his freshman year, Hauser was appointed DTH news editor during the fall quarter of 1947. He served in that capacity until his appointment last spring.

Last summer, the candidate spent almost three months as a staff member of the United Press bureau in Raleigh. At the present time, he is the UP correspondent for the Chapel Hill area.

In high school, Hauser directed his publications talents towards magazine work. During his sophomore year he was art editor of his school magazine in New Orleans.

He is a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

Picked to Run For Treasurer In Spring Vote

Candidate Is Student Solon

The University party yesterday announced the nomination of Nat Williams, rising senior from Thomasville, Ga., for the position of secretary-treasurer of the student body.

Williams' nomination rounds out the UP slate for the three student body executive nominations to head the party ticket in the spring elections. The candidacies of Dick Gordon and Ted Leonard who will seek the student body presidency and vice-presidency respectively have already been released.

A transfer from the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Williams entered the University in the fall of 1947. He is a member of the Budget committee and the Student legislature where he serves on the Finance committee.

In addition, the candidate is a member of the Students for Democratic Action, the World Federalists, the social committee of the senior class, and the editorial staff of the Daily Tar Heel.

In high school he was president of the student council, president of his senior class and valedictorian. Before entering Annapolis he attended Marion institute prep school for two years where he was captain of the cadet corps. He was a member of the ring committee while at Annapolis.

In the line of business experience, Williams managed a movie theater in Georgia for three years and managed a theater chain this past summer.

He is a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Proposed Tuition Raise To Be Discussed By Phi

The proposed tuition raise for students in the Greater University will be discussed by the Philanthropic assembly meeting in Phi hall, New East, at 7:30 tonight.

By special action in last week's meeting Phi members voted to postpone consideration of the Fair Employment Practices commission in order to give immediate attention to the tuition question.

The tuition raise has already been condemned by the student legislature, the Dialectic senate, the University Veterans association, the Young Republicans club, the Young Progressives, and other campus organizations.

A member of the Ways and Means committee stated that in view of the lack of support on campus for the raise, tonight's discussion will probably be concerned with ways of stopping Governor Scott's proposal.

Madry Announces Government Week To Start Monday

Mayor R. W. Madry yesterday proclaimed the week of Feb. 27 through March 5 as Chapel Hill World Government week.

First, it is universally recognized that the problem of securing a stable world peace is the most vital problem today, and failure to solve that problem may endanger or destroy the democratic way of life, the proclamation stated.

There is constantly increasing sponsorship for the creation of a world federal government as offering the best opportunity for a solution of the problem, the proclamation continued.

The proclamation pointed out that it is of cardinal importance that all Chapel Hill citizens familiarize themselves with such proposals in order that they may form intelligent opinions and reach wise decisions with respect to them.

"I urge all of our citizens, whether of voting age or not, to make a serious and sincere effort during World Government week to devote study and thought to the reasons prompting, the issues involved in, and the practicability of the proposals for world federal government," Madry said.

Madry urged civic, religious, and other organizations to devote their meetings scheduled during the designated week to study and discussion of world federal government proposals.

Atom Laboratory Open to Public Here Tomorrow

A laboratory in connection with atomic research will be open to the public here tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock, University authorities said yesterday.

The installation, sponsored by the division of biology and medicine of the Atomic Energy commission in cooperation with the University, is housed in an army surplus building between Phillips hall and Venable hall.

Officials said that the laboratory will be used for the development of research in radioisotopes. Dr. Arthur Roe, who is currently engaged in the organic phase of research with radioactive materials, explained that radioisotopes "are unstable forms of chemical elements which are manufactured in the Oak Ridge laboratory uranium pile. This pile," he continued, "is a controlled atomic bomb, so that materials put in it become radioactive due to proximity of the uranium."

Preliminary to the formal opening, five University professors will hold a seminar on the use of radioisotopes in research tonight at 8 o'clock at the meeting of Sigma Xi, scientific fraternity, in Phillips hall.

Discussion leaders will be Dr. H. D. Bruner, pharmacology; Dr. George Doak, public health; Dr. G. C. Kyker, biochemistry; Dr. Roe, organic chemistry and Dr. C. D. Van Cleave, anatomy. These men are all currently engaged in various phases of research with radioactive materials.

North Carolina is one of six states with facilities for the training of men at both predoctoral and post-doctoral levels in the peacetime use of atomic energy. Other institutions in this state participating in atomic research and training are Duke, State and Wake Forest.

Freshmen Plan Future Retreat

Freshmen attending the YM-YWCA winter conference at Montreat last week-end enjoyed it so much that they met before leaving the mountains to make plans for a future conference of special interest to freshmen students.

They plan to hold the conference during the spring quarter for freshmen of the University, State college, and the University's Woman's college at Greensboro, Bob Barrus, assistant executive secretary of the YMCA announced yesterday.

Plans about a time and place to hold the conference will be discussed at a freshman fellowship supper Thursday night at 6 o'clock at the Baptist church. A committee will be set up at that time to begin work on the conference.

Men's Glee Club To Give Concert Thursday Night

The Men's Glee club of the University music department will present its annual concert on Thursday at 8:30 in Hill hall auditorium.

Paul Young will direct the 160 voices of the club in a program which will include selections from the 16th century, a group of modern compositions, two choruses from opera, four folksongs, and an extended work by Philip James for chorus and instrumental ensemble.

Thursday's concert will be the first performance of the glee club since the highly successful broadcast over the National Broadcasting company network during last quarter. The local singers presented "one of the best concerts of the series," according to network officials.

Rated among the best college glee clubs in the nation, the singers will follow the campus concert with a series of out-in-state appearances which are planned to bring the best in choral music to North Carolina audiences. The first off-campus appearance will be at High Point on February 28.

The glee club box office is located in Hill hall 109 and is open from 9 to 5 o'clock. Admission to Thursday's concert will be by season ticket or by single admissions which are now on sale. All seats are reserved.

Truman Would Alter Social Security Law

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—(UP)—President Truman asked Congress today for sweeping changes in Social Security laws to provide more and better federal aid for all the nation's needy.

Too Far

Students who returned from the YM-YWCA retreat at Montreat over the weekend had a good story to tell yesterday about the embarrassing position Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael found herself in.

Through a mistake in room registration, Miss Carmichael wound up with a State college man for a roommate.

After everything had been straightened out, Dean of Men Fred Weaver made the classic remark of the weekend:

"That's carrying consolidation a little too far."

Humanities Talk To Be Delivered By Dr. MacMillan

Dougald MacMillan, professor of English, will deliver the faculty lecture in the humanities for the winter quarter on Friday night at 8:30 in Gerrard hall.

Professor MacMillan has chosen for his topic "Speculum Consueteudinis: The English Comedy of Manners." According to one of Professor MacMillan's colleagues, "No one who knows the lecturer or the comedy of manners of the Restoration period will worry about the Latin title."

This is one of a series of lectures begun several years ago as a means of presenting various members of the humanities division faculty to the entire community, students, townspeople, University staff, and visitors. The series has proved successful and has included lectures representing all the foreign language departments, drama, art, music, archeology, English and American literature.

Theater Stormed By Angry Jews

BERLIN, Feb. 21—(UP)—Angry Jews defied warning police shots and high-pressure fire hoses today to storm a theater and prevent a showing of the British motion picture "Oliver Twist" on the ground that the portrayal of "Fagin" is anti-semitic.

Three persons, including an American correspondent, were injured in the melee. It was the second time in less than 24 hours that Jews in Berlin have expressed violent protests over the motion picture. Last night they halted a showing of the picture by yelling, stamping their feet and ripping up seats in the theater.

Aeronautics Chief Plans Two Talks Here This Week

Joseph O'Connell, Jr., chairman of the Civil Aeronautics board, will deliver two informal talks this week at the University, O. Max Gardner, Jr., chairman of the speakers committee of the Law School association, announced yesterday.

The first of the talks will be on Aviation Law and will be held in the first year classroom of Manning hall tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock.

Topics discussed by O'Connell will include an analysis of airlines overseas traffic, the investigation of an air crash, the use of investigation reports and personnel, and a survey of domestic airlines.

On Thursday morning, O'Connell will meet with students taking government and business courses at 10 o'clock in Bingham hall. Both meetings at which he will speak will be open to the public, and townspeople as well as students are invited to attend.

League Meeting Will Open Today

Over 150 people are expected to attend the second annual conference of the North Carolina Building and Loan league today at the Carolina inn.

Speakers at the conference will include Dr. Malcolm McDermott of the Duke university school of law, Norman Strunk, vice-president of the United States Savings and Loan league, and Dr. Clyde A. Milner, president of Guilford college.

Registration will begin this morning at 8 o'clock in the lobby of the Carolina Inn. The opening session of the conference will be held at 10:15 in the radio studio of Swain hall with R. L. Sykes, vice-president of the Building and Loan league, presiding.

A speaking contest will be held at 10:45 and a luncheon will follow at 12:30 in the Carolina Inn. The second session will begin at 2:30 this afternoon and will adjourn at 4 o'clock.

Labor Law Advocates Accused By Senator

Russia Demands Three Witnesses

PARIS, Feb. 21—(UP)—Russia demanded tonight that France hand over as war criminals three witnesses who testified for Victor Kravchenko, author of "I Chose Freedom," in his libel suit against the Communist weekly Les Lettres Francaises.

Soviet Ambassador Alexander Bogomolov made the demand in a not handed to th foreign office.

The Russian note said the three witnesses served in the German army and took part in war crimes during the occupation of the Soviet Ukraine.

Russia invoked United Nations resolutions calling on member countries to hand over alleged war criminals on request.

Responsibility Discussed

Students Return From Montreat

By Caroline Bruner

University students attending the YM-YWCA-sponsored conference at Montreat returned to the campus Sunday night after a week-end of mountain climbing, square dancing, and discussing various aspects of "A Christian's Responsibility."

Housed in Assembly inn, a building made of native rock, students of the University, State college, Davidson, Elon and Guilford colleges and Duke university chose one of eight discussion groups to attend throughout the week-end. The discussion groups concerned three aspects of a Christian's Responsibility,—to himself, to the campus, and to the world.

Student leaders of the groups were Ray Mills, Sue Stokes, Bill Mackie, Al Lowenstein, Tom Donnelly, Sandy McEachern, Dick Murphy, and John Sanders. Resource leaders were the Rev. J. C. Herrin, Miss Betty Carpenter, Dean Fred Weaver, Dean Bill Friday, Dr. Arnold Nash, Dr. Frank Hanft, Miss Nell Morton, and Miss Margaret Nash.

Speakers at the Montreat conference were Dr. George D. Heaton, minister of the Myers Baptist church of Charlotte, and the Rev. Mr. Howard C. Wilkinson, pastor of the Haywood Street Methodist church of Asheville.

During recreational periods, conference attenders hiked to Mount Mitchell, had social get-togethers, and attended at square dance Saturday night. A "caller" and his three-piece band played for the dance and taught students new square dancing steps.

THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Armistice Soon

RHODES, Feb. 21 — (UP) — Israel and Egypt probably will sign an armistice within 72 hours to end for good the fighting in southern Palestine, officials hoped tonight. If they do, Israel-Transjordan talks will be started Friday and Israel-Lebanon talks will follow.

Trouble In Peace

CANTON, China, Feb. 21 — (UP) — Acting President Li Tsung-Jen encountered heavy going today in his efforts to consolidate the disintegrating Nationalist government, and it was believed Premier Sun Fo had rejected his plea to return to Nanking.

Communist Purge

PARIS, Feb. 21. — (UP) — Hatchet men of the French Communist party are carrying out a purge of Red-controlled labor unions because of a serious loss of membership to conservative workers' groups, well-informed sources said today.

Italians Walk

ROME, Feb. 21.—(UP) — More than 1,000,000 Italians walked to work today as a nationwide, 24-hour strike crippled most city and suburban transportation.

Train Wrecks

CHATSWORTH, Ga., Feb. 21 —(UP)—Eight cars of the Louisville and Nashville railroad's Florida-bound "Flamingo" left the rails today but thudded into a soft embankment that held them upright and no one aboard was hurt.

Snow And Sleet

CHICAGO, Feb. 21 — (UP) — Sleet and slushy snow made driving hazardous over a wide area of the Midwest today, while warmer weather raised new flood threats in the same region and sent water spilling over five levees in Kansas.

Mr. Scott 'Goes Forward'

Dear Pa,

How is everything at home? Things are in an uproar down here at Chapel Hill. I figured I'd better tell you about it, even though it might worry you some.

Remember how you got out and stumped our end of the county for Mr. Scott last summer in the primary? You said he was the common man's candidate, that he'd look out for farm folks in his "go-forward" program. Well, Pa, I think Mr. Scott was sincere about going forward because that's what he wants to do with our tuition fees at this state supported university. He wants them moved forward almost double. A lot of the boys don't like the idea, even those that can afford the increase. They say that this place is supposed to be supported by the taxpayers and that they're just putting a $69. poll tax on us. Then there are others who say that their folks are paying plenty of taxes without them paying any more.

Understand, Pa, I'm not trying to run Mr. Scott down. He's going to do a lot of good for our state, I hope. I just thought I'd better tell you about the extra money for next year. Maybe you'd better see if you can find me a job so I can pay it myself. You pay plenty of taxes as it is. Give Ma my love.

Your loving son,
Elbert

Reports Were Incomplete

From reports brought back from the YMCA-YWCA winter Retreat in Montreat last weekend and delivered at a meeting in Gerrard hall yesterday, it is hard to tell whether the conference accomplished much for the general good of the campus other than to get a few people interested in campus problems. The brief summaries indicated that some problems were met with concrete plans for improvements but that some touchy questions were shied away from.

It is hoped that a more complete report to be prepared in written form will give a better picture of the retreat's accomplishments.

Bald, Bland And Benign

Bald, bland, and benign Sam Rayburn, the distinguished speaker of the House of Representatives, does not become irked very often, but, when he does, he irks good. For a few hours the other day he was decidedly irked with Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington.

Mr. Symington had to pour all the oil in his system on the troubled Rayburn to smooth things over. Texas Sammivel felt the Air Force was guilty of a deplorable breach of etiquette.

Custom and protocol decree that Congressional leaders be consulted first before any agency of government does anything which comes within the purview of Congress. But the Air Force slipped up on this. It invited Congress as a whole to attend the big air progress demonstration at Andrews Field last Tuesday without first seeking an okay from Sammy.

Mr. Rayburn ran his fingers through what should have been his hair and declared he wouldn't stand for it. Like an enraged school-master he ranted that he did not expect to conduct the business of the House with the place full of empty seats.

Secretary Symington, who is fighting desperately for his 70-group Air Force, and needs all the Congressional goodwill he can muster, came running to Sam practically bowlegged under an armload of olive branches. He pleaded there had been an innocent lapse, and begged the Speaker to take over the job of issuing the invitations.

Mr. Rayburn, who knew he'd be playing to an empty House anyway if he didn't give in, grudgingly relented.

* * *

House minority leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr., had some comments to offer on the proposed scheme to glamorize Republican members of Congress, as outlined the other day in this spendid pillar of wisdom and intelligence.

"I do not think," observed Mr. Martin, "that the program should include any beauty courses. From what I can see, it isn't being pretty that counts with the ladies. If that were so, we would not captivate many feminine hearts."

At this moment, Rep. Jesse P. Wolcott, of Michigan, passed by. Mr. Wolcott, who is decidedly roly-poly, and has been married 22 years, was startled when Mr. Martin pointed at him and bellowed:

"Take a look! Does he have glamor?"

Mr. Wolcott asked what had occasioned the outburst. On being informed, he pirouetted like a fashion model, saying:

"I cut quite a figure."

Should Students Have to Pay?

By Jonathan Marshall

It was to be expected that the vote would be negative in the recent Phi debate on a resolution favoring a subscription basis for all publication on campus; however, the vote was gratifyingly close.

The most surprising stand was that taken by Bill Duncan, editor of the Yack, who came out in favor of subscriptions. This columnist still feels that a complete subscription basis would be difficult to operate under, but the present subsidy is completely unjust.

Despite an 18-1 vote against an underwrite and subscription method of financing, this columnist still feels that it is the only practical eventual solution to the problem.

First, we must eliminate the DTH from discussion here. The paper could not possibly operate under a different system. It is difficult enough for professional newspapers to make ends meet, and to subject a daily student paper with a part-time staff to the same conditions would be tantamount to suicide for the paper. It would also be impossible to make deliveries on an individual basis, so we will not consider the DTH in this discussion.

Many students do not feel that they should have to pay for publications if they do not want them; this is fair. It is answered that the publications could not survive on a sale and subscription system.

It is also argued that all students should support activities even if they do not participate in them, for student activities are an important part of college life. This seems to have some validity.

The editor of Tarnation told the Phi that his magazine could not exist under either a subscription or an underwrite system. This amounts to saying that there is not enough demand for Tarnation for it to succeed. If this is so, why should the majority of students have to support a publication for a small minority?

The question to be resolved is how can we reach a compromise? Publicati ons, we are told, cannot exist on a subscription basis. In answer it is said that the present set-up is unjust. Yet the publications do serve a function as part of our training, and they are desired by some.

The solution seems to this columnist to lie in an underwrite by the student legislature with the publications required to pay their own way as nearly as possible from sales and advertisements.

An underwrite of 50% of costs would ensure that any publication which is desired by a large group of people would make ends meet. Those who did not want the publication would not have to pay as much as before, and those interested would bear a more proportionate share.

This is not perfect,granted, but it is an improvement. It has the advantage that we still support student activities.

One more argument must be mentioned. How could cost be figured in advance, and how would the publication know the number of sales that it could expect? In reply, one may ask how any budget is planned in advance? A fairly good estimate can be made. If one bad issue is put out, readers will not leave, but if the publication is continually bad, it will fail.

Mama Is Remarrying

By "Wink" Locklair

Tuesday was a sad day in the life of Margaret O'Brien. It seems that Margaret's mother, Mrs. Gladys O'Brien, decided to marry Don Sylvio, an orchestra leader, in Palm Beach, Florida. According to an Associated Press report and front-page in most of the state papers, Margaret was none too happy about it and "turned on the tears."

Well, we can't seem to work up a lump in our throat for the little star. Time was, back in the early '40's, when Margaret was doing such powerful emoting in "Our Vines Have Tender Grapes," "Music for Millions," and "Three Wise Fools," we often found our eyes getting watery as she looked with compelling, child-like understanding into June Allyson's or Edward G. Robinson's face. We were visibly moved by her performances. Always. That is, up until last year. And once again AP was the source of some dreadful information.

Margaret, by 1947, had become eleven years old, old enough, M-G-M thought, to give interviews to newspaper columnists. One day the studio arranged a press conference for her, and all the first-string critics and publicity people turned out for the event. They found Margaret, as you might expect, a "normal, healthy American girl." This was telling us nothing we didn't already know. But a few paragraphs later Sidney Skolsky reported a startling statement from normal, healthy Margaret. When Skolsky asked her how she managed all those tears in her pictures, Margaret told him, "It's no trouble at all. I don't feel anything. When the scene is sad, I just look sad, and before I know it, I'm crying!"

That was all for us. We didn't caare to learn anything more. We had thought all along that Margaret was really serious in her work, or that she had to resort to onion juice for those tears. But just to cry when the scene calls for it was a low blow to us, more than we could take.

Since that interview story appeared, we have not gone to see a single Margaret O'Brien movie, although that infantile paralysis trailer featuring her at the Carolina back in January, gave us, and everybody else in the audience, an excruciating five minutes.

No. We cannot believe those tears Margaret "turned on" when she learned of her mother's marriage. And since there has been no mention in any of these stories about Mr. O'Brien—his death or separation or divorce from Mrs. O'Brien—our thoughts have turned to a series of interesting, if not right embarrassing possibilities which might place little Margaret in an even shakier position. Come clean, kid! Wipe those tears from your eyes and tell us: who is 'yo pappy?

We Must Like Duke!

Editor:

We all want tuition rates to be low so that the youth of all economic groups can come here. Therefore, we must [illegible] on the alumni and other friends of the University to [illegible] making contributions to the University, and instead to [illegible] all the money they can spare to Duke, Wake Forest, Davidson, etc. Such contributions will enable those schools to lower their rates, then we can lower ours. Traditional dislike of Duke must be quickly overcome. Prejudice must not stand in the way of the good of the University.

The above reasoning will become perfectly logical if Governor Scott's absurd ideas of non-competition with denominational schools is put into effect.

Concerning the proposal to raise teacher salaries out of the tuition increase, I take my stand with Joseph Straley expressed in Saturday's Daily Tar Heel. I will gladly do with less if the only way I can get a raise is to take it from the students and to deny the opportunity for an education to the poor people of the State. There is another reason for my opinion which is not at all altruistic. As unemployment in the state increases, a tuition increase may very well cause a decrease in the enrollment, which will threaten the jobs of the faculty.

The proposal to increase salaries by means of a tuition increase, which on the surface will appeal to the self-interest of many teachers, must not be allowed to split the faculty and students. The teachers need students to teach. The students need low tuition rates. We must combine our strengths to avert this undemocratic move. We must demand that the legislature appropriate enough money both to pay decent salaries and to keep the gates of higher education open to as many of the young people of North Carolina as possible. We must demand that the money be obtained from taxes on the textile, furniture, utility and tobacco companies of the State. Their huge profits, wrung from the workers and consumers, must be put back into the service of the people.

Not a New Holy Trinity

Editor:

On Sunday, in this column, James S. Patty took Bill Robertson to task for the alleged non-sequitur of proving the objective existence of the class struggle in America, starting with the proposition "there is no such thing as objective truth." This would indeed be quite a non-sequitur; if Mr. Patty will be so kind as to take another look at Bill Robertson's letter, he will find that Bill Robertson said "There is such a thing as objective truth," and that the "no" was gratuitously supplied by Mr. Patty himself.

As one who has engaged in a fair number of polemics on this page in the short time I have been here, may I venture to give the following advice to Mr. Patty: Give your adversary's letter more than a cursory glance; and argue with what he said, not with what you would like him to have said. One can, without difficulty, make non-sequiturs out of one's logic by inserting "noes" ad libitum; however, I think it is best to refrain from this procedure (though I realize it is common practice in the commercial press) if the discussions in this column are to be more than contests of mud slinging—if they are to be serious debates between students equally searching for the truth, with full respect for one another's sincerity.

It is precisely this search for truth that is the dominant idea in the works of Marx, Lenin and Stalin—in the hope of raising politics from a collection of opinions to the status of a science. No one denies that "truth is complex" (Mr. Patty was, perhaps unknowingly, quoting Engels). No one is trying to present Marx, Lenin, and Stalin as a new Holy Trinity to be accepted on faith. No one questions that a few among the conclusions they reached must be reformulated in the light of new data. We respect Marx as the genius whose methodology and world outlook has given us a most powerful tool in the search for truth.

Unprecedented Accomplishment

'Joan of Arc': Absorbing, Powerful, and Emotionally Touching

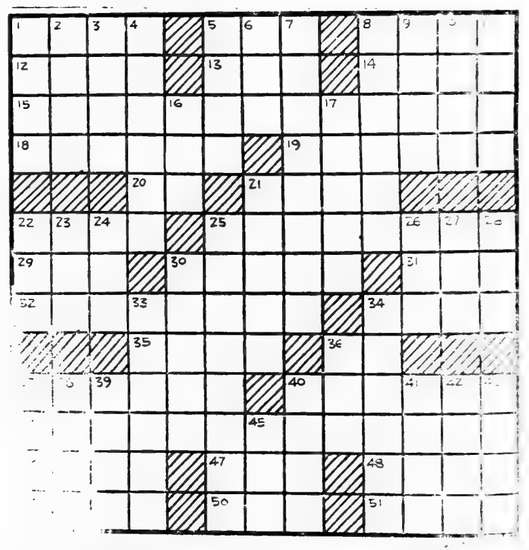
By Anies Daye, Jr.

Motion pictures project themselves onto a plane loftier than they heretofore have attained with "Joan of Arc". For here is an immensely impressive production which succeeds in reliving the timeless story of the Maid of Orleans—her courage, her heroism, and her faith—illuminated by the simplicity and the dramatic comprehension of Ingrid Bergman. In a noted career, she has never approximated such a performance.

For those who see "Joan of Arc" at the Village theater this week, it becomes a pleasure to observe a player impart such breathing vitality of her role from the silver screen. This takes artistry and craftsmanship of high order, but Miss Bergman surmounts the severity of the challenge. She is the perfect Joan.

Moreover, she is the perfect Joan in an emotionally touching and constantly absorbing dramatization of her short and poignant life—martyrdom at the stake at 19 after consummation of the divine mission of leading the armies of France to that point in victory which sends the Dauphin to the throne. For her earthly rewards are abandonment by the king she caused to be crowned and political reprisal leading to execution at the behest of the English enemy in conspiracy with political churchmen. For to her spiritual recompense is reward beyond the deeds and minds of man to contain. It suffices.

One of the rare impacts in this "Joan Of Arc" is the rollback in time which Victor Fleming captures by his direction. In his meticulous attention to detail, so richly brought to canvas by authoritative research, he succeeds in making his audience a directly interested party to the heroic drama. When a director can accomplish this, his right to acclaim and distinction becomes assured.



Necessary to a faithful rendition of Joan are the pageantry of 15th-Century France, the decisive battle in which the siege of Orleans is lifted, the clanking of armor and mace and a whole vast background of pomp and circumstance spread out on the screen. But more essential is a steady and understanding hand sufficiently competent to guide the story of the simple country girl through these magnificent trappings without loss of power and essential threads.

Fleming manages this very well. The story of Joan is told in steadily progressive chapters, blending into the pageantry and the spectacle, but it is Joan's story which remains the dominant theme.

"Joan of Arc" must be considered first in terms of its central character. In the very nature of the subject, it follows that Miss Bergman stands alone. But dramatic strength is decidedly augmented in three of the major supporting performances. Jose Ferrer, as the weakling Dauphin, later Charles VII, makes his film debut here. A long stage experience serves him well; he is excellent. Francis L. Sullivan is Cauchion, Bishop of Beauvais, who condemns Joan to the stake as part of his unholy alliance with the English invader. Suavity and intelligence punctuate his performance. J. Carroll Naish, the renegade Burgundian who sells the Maid to the English is villainy itself. In lesser characterizations are many others including Selena Royle, Irene Rich, Gene Lockhart, and Sheppard Strudwick, a former University of North Carolina student.

If one were to follow in all the details the story of the story and the making of the picture, it would be discovered that there seemed to be a point in which it took command of itself, that there was manifested a certain expression of will that might in truth have come from the Maid herself. Perhaps somewhere in that is the reason that it is a picture decidedly without any sort of precedent or parallel.

These things will be communicated to the audience in terms of audience understanding. Again, this is a picture from which the spectators will derive in proportion to what they bring to it. It can be a two-hour expanse of dramatic action amid technicolor recordings of intensity and sometimes splendor, enhanced with the art of a famous star, or it may be for others a deeper order of experience in which they will for a time become unconscious of the devices of the telling, not knowing whether the picture is black-and-white, or color, nor caring, and sitting transported into that time and place of tragic adventure and final triumph five hundred years ago in fevered France.

Pickles and Prunes

MOST OF THE ALLEGED officials in the Southern conference are always at glory's right hand when comes the time for passing out orchids for work well done, but where are those same lads when the pickles and prunes are harvested? Uh, they stepped out for a sandwich. It's time for them to stand up and take a well-deserved verbal spanking.

The recent Carolina-Wake Forest clash brought many things to a head, one of the most prominent of which was the very inadequate officiating. Past performances on the local court have fallen little short of grand larceny, but in this particular game, things seemed to slip to an official low.

Not only is the officiating of Southern loop games poor, it is also erratic. One night the whistlemen will let anything go by, aand will settle for a jump ball on some of the worst foul deeds. On other nights the fans will go away from the gym referring to one or more frequently both of the officials as "Little Boy Blew" because of the frequent whistle-tooting. On these nights it is well nigh impossible to tie up the ball in close play without hearing a whistle blare in your ears.

Whistle a Tune of Gladness

THIS VARIATION IN STYLE employed by different members of the officiating fraternity tends to keep the players in suspense and subtracts considerably from their game. The boys would doubtlessly be able to turn in much better overall performances were the referees consistent in their method of calling the games. But as things stand the players take the court night after night not knowing whether they have drawn the youngest son of Whistler's Mother or a rabid wrestling enthusiast to tote the whistle during the evening fray. The referees have, on a couple of occasions, sounded like a duet whistling the "Italian Street Song." On other nights it would take alum in their pre-game coffee even to make them pucker—or maybe they left the whistles home in their other pants.

It would pay the Southern conference big-wigs to get together and send the would-be officials to school before they turn them loose on respectable basketball courts. A two-week course and a stiff exam on the fine points of the officiating game would help a lot in clearing up matters.

They're Really Good Guys

THE REFS ARE REALLY good guys, or so everyone says after their temper has chilled somewhat, but what are you gonna do? Let the good guys ruin a great game? It is a foregone conclusion that good officiating goes a long way in making a good game for both spectators and the players, but, sad to say, the axiom is a reversable one, and lousy refs can ruin a game easier than can a migraine headache.

The boys who wear the stripes (and rightly so) at the Southern conference games are the same lads who trot up and down North Carolina prep school courts, whistle in hand, on other nights. As one seasoned spectator observed at a recent game, "I've seen better officiating at high school games."

Movies have proved that the officials slip up quite frequently on under-the basket plays. Giving a man the ball in the Southern conference is like giving him a green light or a police escort to the basket. The movies show that more often than not fouls are called against the defender when the decision lies between charging and blocking

Not All Bad

NOT ALL THE OFFICIATING has been bad this year, but most of the games have looked like dog-fights rather than basketball games, and largely because the refs let the game get out of hand in the early stages. As one state sportswriter would say the guys have "stunk the joint out."

Although no explanation has been given for the under-par jobs done by the officials, one person has come up with a fairly reasonable explanation of why the refs wear striped shirts. Says he: "If they're gonna act like one, they might as well dress like one." All of which is entirely irrelevant, but sadly true.

It would be well if those in authority in the Southern conference would sit up and take notice of some of the gripes voiced by the Dixie basketball clientele. Heaven only knows what, but something can and must be done before another basketball season rolls around. It will make the game a lot better, and well make the fans a lot happier.

JV Crew Sinks W&M, 39-36

Carolina's Jayvee swimmers defeated the Norfolk division of William and Mary natators, 39-36 at Norfolk last Saturday.

Ike Norwood and Ronnie Basescu led the winners with two firsts each. In addition, both boys swam on the winning relay team. Norwood's firsts were in the 50-yard freestyle and the 100-yard freestyle and Basescu's came in the 220-yard freestyle and the 440-yard freestyle.

Charlie Bartlett took a first for Carolina in the 200-yard breaststroke and Mericka, Basescu, Dietzel and Norwood swam on the winning 400-yard relay team.

Carolina took one second and four thirds in rounding out the afternoon's showing.

Coy Carson Leads Conference Win Over Palmettos

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 21—The Tar Heels of the University of North Carolina started slow here last night, picked up speed midway of the first period, played the Gamecocks even for well over half of the game ,and then pulled away to a 62-48 Southern conference win in the closing minutes of last night's game in the university gym.

At the outset of the game, it seemed that the South Carolinians would pull an upset out of the bag as they plopped three quick action baskets through the nets to move into a 6-0 lead after three minutes of play, but Dan Nyimicz came back with a pair of field goals and a free throw to put Carolina back into the battle. Coy Carson made good on a charity toss, and the Tar Heels were off running.

Game Moves Slowly

The game moved very slowly during the first ten minutes and found the Scottmen ahead, 9-6, midway of the stanza. Things picked up at the tail-end of the period, however, as the Palmetto State lads came back fighting and the lead changed hands several times in the ensuing ten minutes.

Nemo Nearman, who played a whale of a game in outscoring South Carolina's Jim Slaughter, forged in for a lay-up, and Nyimicz followed with a last-minute set to put Carolina into a comfortable 24-18 lead as the whistle sounded ending the first half.

See-Saw Battle

The beginning of the final period was much the same as most of the first half, with the lead changing hands on numerous occasions and neither team showing much. The Tar Heels came to sudden life in the last ten minutes, however, moved far ahead to win in a breeze.

The backboard play of Nearman, Nyimicz, and John Tsantes was exceptional throughout the game, and aided materially in the Carolina win. Bad passing hurt the Tar Heels at the first of the game, but they settled down to their usual fine style of play after the opening min-

Unknowns Win Dorm Cage Crown; Town, Zetas, Fijis Pace Boxing

Upsy Daisy

STRETCH PERIOD in a recent Minneapolis-New York pro cage tilt finds Mike Bloom of the Minneapolis Lakers and Bud Palmer of the Knickerbockers all up in the air. The Lakers won, 77-68.

Carolina's winter Intramural program came to a satisfactory conclusion yesterday afternoon in Woollen gym, with the finals of the dormitory division and the semi-finals of the fraternity basketball playoffs taking place, while boxing fans were treated to the final matches in both the frat and the dorm divisions.

The only remaining mural activity is the fraternity basketball finals this afternoon between the Beta and Chi Phi cagers.

The Beta 1 quint advanced to the finals by edging out Sigma Chi, 38-36. Ken Powell and Bill Miles, with 15 and 10 points, respectively, paced the winners. R. A. McDonald had 15 to lead the losers, while K. Lewis was next, with 11.

The strong Chi Phi 3 hoopsters gained the right to meet the Beta outfit for the fraternity crown by handing the Chi Psi 1 team a 58-47 licking in the other frat semifinal scrap. D. Morrison of Chi Phi and Dick Jenrette of Chi Psi tied for scoring honors, pouring 18 points apiece through the hoops. J. White contributed 15 markers to the winners' offense, while Vic Seixas was second best for the Chi Psi five, with 14.

The Unknowns, darkhorses of the dormitory playoffs, won the championship of that division with a convincing 50-32 victory over an ever potent Grad team.

Jack Hobbs was tops for the Unknowns, with 12 points, and Jim Landis was next with nine. However, Jim Edwards of the Graduates captured high scoring honors for the day with a total of 19 tallies.

Six fighters were crowned as champs of the dorm division, and eight canvasmen came out on top in the frat finals.

The dorm champions are as follows: 130-lb.—G. Nassif, Town; 145-lb.—K. Mattox, Town; 155-lb.—C. McLain, Town; 165-lb.—E. Harris, Town; 175-lb.—R. Fowler, Town; Heavyweight—R. Hansen, Emerson. Shuman, 125-lb. class, and Morrison, 135-lb. won their championship matches last Thursday.

The campus basketball and boxing championships will be decided at the annual Sports carnival on March 2.

Second-Place Cats Play Cagers Today

The Davidson Wildcats, current runners-up in the race for Southern conference laurels. will play host to Carolina's fourth-place Tar Heels in the Charlotte armory at 8 tonight.

The Wildcats clung to second place in the loop standings last week despite a sudden surge by William and Mary's Indians. The Indians displaced Carolina in the conference standings by copping a pair of loop tilts during the past week while the Tar Heels split two.

The Tar Heels, fresh from a 62-48 loop win over South Carolina in Columbia last night, will be gunning for a revenge victory after the licking administered to them by the Wildcats in Woollen gym a few weeks ago.

The conference standings:

Bill Darden Calls Opening Meeting Of Lacrosse Club

Preparations for Carolina's first lacrosse team will get into full swing this afternoon when Coach Bill Darden calls the opening meeting for candidates for the squad.

Coach Darden has scheduled the meeting of all aspirants for 3:45 in Room 302 of Woollen gymnasium. Equipment will be issued to those attending and also eligibility blanks will be filled in.

Darden emphasized yesterday that "past experience is not at all necessary" to try out for the team. The sport has never before been tried at Carolina and Darden is anxious for a big turnout today.

Lacrosse, like soccer last year, will be classed as a minor sport at Carolina this seaason but a successful year probably would elevate it to the ranking of a major sport.

Right now, in addition to making plans for the practices, Coach Darden is busy lining up a full schedule of games. He hopes to be able to release the card soon.

Loop Meet Nears

Woollen gymnasium is now undergiong an extensive face-lifting job as preparations are being made for the Southern conference indoor track meet here Saturday.

Approximately 450 athletes are expected to compete in the collegiate, non-collegiate, freshman and scholastic divisions.

Carolina and Maryland are expected to fight it out for the conference championship while Georgia Tech and Tennessee are favored in the non-conference division. Carolina looms as favorite in the freshman division and George Washington high of Alexandria, Virginia is expected to top the scholastic division.

Quinlan's Outfit Fights in Durham In Loop Contest

With one shift in the varsity lineup caused by an injury in last week's match with Washington and Lee, Coach Chuck Quinlan's varsity and freshman wrestling squads will journey to Duke tonight to meet the Blue Devils in their seventh outing of the current season.

Mitzie Stoioff, out with an injured shoulder, will give way to utility man Ray Swigart in the 175-pound class. In two previous matches Swigart has wrestled 165 (against N.C. State) and heavyweight (against The Citadel). He lost his first match on a fall, but showed improvement in winning his heavyweight showing on a decision.

The Carolinians are currently sporting a record of three wins, a tie and two defeats. The losses came at the hands of State and the powerful Generals of Washington and Lee. Wins have been posted over Davidson, The Citadel, and V.M.I. The tie was with V.P.I. in Blacksburg.

Both teams have met Davidson and W&L. Both Carolina and Duke did well against Davidson, winning by almost identical scores. But against the Generals, the Blue Devils came out one better than did Carolina, winning three matches to the Tar Heels' two. However, if Swigart has a good night, the match could be rated a toss-up.

Co-Captain Carrol Fisher was tossed from the undefeated list last week when he dropped a close decision to Washington and

Ticket Sales

For those who wish to see the Southern conference tourney, there still remains a limited supply of tickets for Carolina students at Woollen gymnasium.

Also now available are tickets to Saturday's Duke-Carolina cage battle in Durham. Both student and general public tickets to the annual Southern conference Indoor Games here this weekend are on sale.

The final available ducats are those to the big NCAA swimming meet in Bowman Gray pool.

Final Swim Meet On Tap This Week

Only one more dual meet remains on the Carolina swimming schedule for 1949 and then all attention down in Bowman Gray pool will be centered on various post-season swimming tournaments in which the Tar Heels will compete.

Friday's finale will match Carolina against another fairly strong Southern outfit , State college, over in Raleigh. The Wolfpack has a fine record in Southern conference competition and the meet might be a duplicate of last year's when the Tar Heels brought an end to State's undefeated season with a 55-20 win.

Four championship tourneys are on the schedule for the locals with the Southern conference test opening up the proceedings.

New Book To Pay Henderson Tribute

World-wide tributes are paid to Dr. Archibald Henderson, professor emeritus, who retired last fall after serving on the University faculty 50 years, in a volume to be published next Monday.

Entitled "Archibald Henderson: The New Crichton," the book is a symposium of contributions by 30 eminent writers and publicists of the United States, Great Britain and Europe.

Among the contributors are scientists, critics, editors, journalists, biographers, historians, educators, novelists, dramatists and poets.

The volume is edited by Samuel Stevens Hood, formerly of Raleigh and a former student at the University, now a columnist and reporter on the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Press. It is in beautiful format and is published by the Beechhurst Press, Inc., 296 Broadway, New York.

The editor elected "The New Crichton" as the title of the book because Dr. Henderson has often been referred to as the reincarnation of that 16th century virtuoso in scholarship and literature, James, The Admirable Crichton whose name has become a synonym for versatility.

Head of the mathematics department at the University for 28 years and internationally known as the authorized biographer of George Bernard Shaw, Dr. Henderson was recently described by his colleagues, Dr. Alfred T. Brauer, formerly of the University of Berlin as "the most versatile living scholar and scientist."

Six of Dr. Henderson's former colleagues and fellow townsmen are contributors to the volume. President Frank P. Graham, Profs. George R. Coffman and Samuel Selden, Gerald W. Johnson, former professor, now Baltimore editor; Mrs. Hope Summerell Chamberlain, Robert W. Madry, University publicist and mayor of Chapel Hill, and Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly.

Tryouts Are Set For Tomorrow On One-Act Plays

Tryouts for three original one-act plays by students in playwriting classes will be held tomorrow at 4 o'clock in the Playmakers theater, Sam Selden, dramatic art head, announced yesterday.

The plays are "A Brighter Star" a domestic comedy by Nancy Wallace Henderson, Wilmington; "Snow Falling," a drama by John Ehle, Asheville, and "Castellani Comes Across," a character comedy by Ralph Long, Durham. They will be produced March 9 and 10 in Playmakers theater.

Student directors for these experimentals will be Pat Peteler, Glendale, Cal., Lib Stoney, Winston-Salem, and Suzanne Davis, Chapel Hill. Parts for 10 men and 3 women are open to anyone interested, regardless of any previous dramatic experience. A big man is needed for the leading part of Castellani, a character from Newark, N. J. "The bigger the better," Selden said.

This bill of plays, under the general supervision of Foster Fitz-Simons, will have the unusually long rehearsal period of two weeks, instead of the traditional 10 days. This is part of a new policy by the Playmakers to take the emphasis off elaborate scenery for the originals in order to give the actors and directors more time to present the play in its most polished form. Scenery, costumes and make-up will be used, but not as elaborately as before.

Crescent City Is Ready For Mardi Gras Balls

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 21 — (UP) — Some 700,000 New Orleans and thirsty tourists will open tomorrow a week long blowout that will cost between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000 and make Lenten repentance practically a pleasure.

This is carnival week in New Orleans. The last day of carnival week next Tuesday — is Mardi Gras, a day of general masking. A mask was all that a girl on Bourbon street was wearing last year until a cop told her to go get some clothes on.

The parade of the Krewe of Cynthias starts the week of celebrating tonight. The parade, plus a grand ball and enough champagne to get all the snoots in a carnival mood, probably will cost around $60,000.

ADA Discussion Will Be Tonight In Caldwell Hall

The Chapel Hill chapter of the Americans for Democratic Action will sponsor a panel discussion of state and local political issues at room 105 Caldwell hall, this evening at 8 o'clock, according to an announcement made yesterday by Dr. Charles B. Robson, president of the local group.

Discussion leaders will be Henry Lewis of the Institute of Government, and Gilbert T. Ray, town manager of Chapel Hill. Lewis will describe the activities of the North Carolina General Assembly, now in session in Raleigh, and Ray will discuss some of the problems of the local government. After the formal presentations, the meeting will be open for questions and comments from the floor.

The main purpose of ADA, according to a spokesman of the organization, is to encourage qualified persons to participate in political activity, and to offer a forum for the free and full discussion of any and all political issues. ADA, the spokesman added, is not a political party in any sense of the word; it works within the framework of the Democratic party, and always remains subordinate to the regular Democratic organization.

All persons interested in political issues, whether members of ADA or not, are invited to attend the meeting and to participate in the discussion.

Brenengen Will Not Run As Presidential Candidate

Would Have Run As Independent In Spring Battle

Student council member Wayne Brenengen, whose name has been pushed vigorously throughout the past week as an independent candidate for president of the student body, said yesterday that he would definitely not be able to run.

"I would like to tell everyone who has supported me how much I appreciate it," Brenengen said, "but I cannot possibly run. Please tell everyone thank you for me."

Brenengen supporters made strong bids to gain the University party and Campus party nominations for the presidency for him after Bill Mackie received the Student party backing for the top executive post.

When Dick Gordon and Charlie Long captured the UP and CP nominations, a number of persons immediately pushed Brenengen as an independent. It appeared fairly certain that the well-known campus personage would declare his candidacy within a short while, until his statement yesterday knocked his hat out of the ring for good.

Supporters of Brenengen said yesterday they were extremely sorry he could not run. They insisted he was the most qualified man for the presidency, but said they would agree to his wishes and would not push the issue.

In the meantime, the other three presidential candidates promised a spirited campaign in the month and a half before spring elections, even though things have been relatively quiet on the political front so far.

Committee Would Use Draft To Expand Guard

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—(UP)—A special civilian-military committee recommended today that the Army expand the National Guard and the organized reserves, and use the draft to bring them up to full strength.

In a report to Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall, the committee proposed a 154,300-man increase in the combined authorized strength of these units to boost the guard to 475,000 men and the reserves to 579,000.

Under President Truman's new military budget, the guard would be limited to 350,000 men and the reserve corps to about 550,000.

The committee said that in order to build up the guard and the reserves to the new ceilings, "The provisions of the Selective Service law (should) be made applicable to the reserve components." It did not specify how the draft law should be applied.

The committee told Royall it was aware that the proposed expansion would be expensive. But it said bluntly that "we firmly believe we cannot affird a cheaper program."

The committee noted that its investigation was necessarily limited by existing Army recruitment laws. It emphasized that the expansion program was not to be considered as a substitute for universal military training, the

"On the contrary," it said, "we feel strongly that until we achieve universay military training, the nation will not be fully prepared."

The committee limited itself to a consideration of the reserves. It made no recommendation about the active strength of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

Eliot Is Topic Of Dr. Cotten On Monday

"An introduction to T. S. Eliot" was the topic of Dr. Lyman A. Cotten's address at an open meeting of Chi Delta Phi, honorary literary sorority Monday night in Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial.

Preceding Dr. Cotten's address two new members were initiated into Chi Delta Phi in special ceremonies. They were Weddy Thorp, senior from Rocky Mount, and Alice Sharp, senior from Jacksonville, Fla.

"The best introduction to Eliot is to read his poetry, Dr. Cotten said, "so I should actually call my talk a partial introduction to the 'Waste Land,' probably his most famous and difficult work."

The assistant professor in the English department cautioned, "Clear your minds of preconceptions, prejudices, and expectations, which are any ideas you have concerning what poetry is. Poetry must deal with something in a certain manner, form and technique." He limited his explanations of Eliot's poetry to subject matter and technique.

"First you must consider the title, 'Waste Land.' What does the title suggest to your mind? What do the waste lands of the world mean to man and what have they meant? The idea of waste land and Eliot is his particular awareness," he continued. "We are not justified in asking a poet to confine himself to some spirits. This is asking too much."

Eliot has attained this awareness by three devices according to Dr. Cotten which are: The use of symbols, illusion, and elements of a specific background at a specific time.

Students Hear Demerath Talk

British socialism bears no resemblance whatever to Stalinist communism, and there is a very strong Christian ethical strain in the historical movement which culminated in the Labor party coming to power in 1945," Dr. Nicholas Jay Demerath, professor of sociology told an audience in Gerrard hall Monday night.

In an address sponsored by the YMCA, and generally entitled "British Socialism Today," Dr. Demerath said that the success or failure of Britain's exciting experiment in planning depends upon, among other things, "the Government's ability to enlist the positive cooperation of middle-class people, many of whom voted for Labor in 1945, but who feel now that they should fair better at the hands of socialist planners."

Dr. Demerath outlined the history of the Labor party before and since 1900 and also pointed out that the Conservatives may come back in 1950.

Engstrom Talks To Be on Wolfe

"Thomas Wolfe at Carolina" will be the subject of a lecture scheduled for presentation two times today by Dr. Mary C. Engstrom of the University English department.

The lectures, given each quarter by Dr. Engstrom, will be given in Caldwell X, room 110 at 10 o'clock and again at 2 o'clock in Saunders 213. Any students Dr. Engstrom stated, however, interested are invited to attend. that it would be preferable for those who could to attend the afternoon lecture as space in the Caldwell annex room is limited.

Commissions At Y Retreat Make Reports

Recommendation Given by Leaders

Recommendations for improvement in student government, recreational facilities and many other phases of campus life were put before students yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in Gerrard hall by leaders of eight commissions held at the Y retreat at Montreat last weekend.

Reporting on the commission, which dealt with the effect of religion on man's life, Sue Stokes said, "We pointed out the difference between a religion of life and a philosophy of life, and set up three points as a basis for judging actions as religious: Respect for self, respect for others, and striving toward an ideal."

Bill Mackie reported that the lack of recreational facilities on campus was the main topic of the group discussing the social aspects of a student's responsibility on campus. The group set up an eight-member committee to investigate the possibilities of further weekend recreation.

Sally Woodhull reported for the commission on political aspects of campus life which recommended that a training course be held for incoming officers, that nonpartisan selection of candidates by extended, and stressed the need for an effective functioning group to combat the self-interest groups which enter into campus politics. "We want more people working for the 'something bigger' in student government," she said.

"The aim of our group was to to set up commissions to study specific problems of the atomic Age and find a Christian response," said Tom Donnelly, reporting on the commission on the academic aspects of campus life.

The civil rights commission headed by Sandy McEarnern, recommended that students investigate and help in organizations working on the civil rights problem. The group especially urged cooperation with the Students for Democratic action.

The labor group, according to leader Dick Murphy, formulated a seven-point economic bill of rights. The group recommended the right of labor to band together, that the employee have the right to buy shares in the corporation for which he worked and take part in the policy-making of the corporation. They set up as the ideal aim of industry the promoting of a greater material comfort for the masses.

Dorm Council Wants Change In Procedure

Seeks Election Of Hold-Overs

The Men's Interdormitory council Monday passed a resolution to request the Student legislature to place before the voters at the next general election an amendment to the constitution calling for election of three hold-over members to the Interdormitory council each spring.

This action is necessary to eliminate the handicap of incontinuity under which the council has labored every year since its existence, Pete Gerns, president of the council, said.

Three men who have served on the council will be able to orientate 45 new members which take office each fall, Gerns continued, and assure consistency and continuity in the council's operation.

Dr. Ernest Mackie, dean of student awards and achievements, spoke to the group on scholarship. He stressed the importance of conscientious effort to apply to studies as the primary pillar of a university education.

"Mere getting by," and resulting grades of "D," cannot be condoned, he added. The speaker drew a parallel between a successful man and a "sleeper" as he pointed out that success comes only to those who work for it.

Brandis Speaks On Philosophy

Thirty people heard Henry Brandis, Jr., discuss the basic philosophy, aims, and proposals of the United World Federalists in a meeting held last Monday night of the United World Federalist chapter of Chapel Hill.

Brandis gave details showing the present state of the World Government movement throughout the nation as represented by the UWF. He is at present a member of the National Executive council of the UWF.

The group affirmed by common consent that they would have an active program of the local chapter of UWF. Officers of the organization include Fred Weaver, president; Jo Straley, vice-president; Mrs. English Bagby, secretary; and Henry Brandis, treasurer.

Weaver was authorized by the group to appoint three committees. They include committees on projects, membership and finance, and public affairs.

Tryouts for oratory and extemporaneous speaking will be held at 7:30 tonight in the Grail room, open to everybody. The tryouts are for the South Atlantic Forensic tournament to be held in Hickory on March 3, 4, and 5.

AUTO TRAFFIC on this U. S. highway near Snoqualmie, Wash., is halted as plows remove snow slides that have completely covered all the roads in the area. Airplanes are the only means of travel between the city of Seattle and the eastern part of the state.

Ching Postpones Scheduled Talk Here This Week

The Carolina Forum yesterday announced that the appearance of Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation service, has been indefinitely postponed.

In announcing the postponement, the forum said that Ching had notified them that he would be unable to appear on schedule. Ching said although he had appeared before the Senate committee of Labor and Public Welfare, that he had not appeared before the House committee on Education and Labor.

He said that he must also appear at hearings, which may begin at any time, before the appropriations committees.

Tryouts Planned This Afternoon

Tryouts for three student-written one-act plays will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Playmakers theater. Parts for 10 men and 3 women are open in these originals, scheduled for production March 9 and 10.

Sam Selden, director of the Playmakers, stressed that previous ecting experience, membership in the Carolina Playmakers, or the dramatic art department were not necessary before trying out. "We are a community theater," he said, "and we welcome anyone in Chapel Hill to come and read for a part."

"A Brighter Star," by Nancy Henderson, is a gentle domestic comedy about the troubles a Scotch girl has in adjusting to the land of her GI husband's birth, and also to his mother.

ARC Committee Maps Out Plans For Campus Drive

Presidents and representatives of various campus organizations met yesterday with Bill Pritchard and Dick Gordon, co-chairmen of the local Red Cross campaign, to map out preliminary plans for the 1949 drive, set for March 1 through March 4.

The group decided that no goal will be set this year. Co-chairman Pritchard explained that contributions should be made with the "spirit of giving to a worthwhile cause."

Organization heads present were asked to assign helpers in their respective groups, and a check list system was outlined whereby each contributor would be contacted a minimum amount of times. A meeting of all solicitors was called for 4 o'clock today in Gerrard hall where Dr. Frank P. Graham will address the group.

Mrs. Mable Brittain, executive secretary of the local Red Cross chapter, said that each contributor during the campaign would receive a lapel button, and each person giving $1 or more would receive a membership card.

The co-chairmen outlined their plans, after Pete Gerns, president of the Interdormitory council, asked, "How will we avoid asking people for contributions twice?" Pritchard said that he and Gordon would issue check sheets to all campus solicitors who would, in turn, check off names of people whom they had asked to contribute.

The Orange county Red Cross committee will put on a drive in addition to the fund-raising campaign being directed by the campus committee.

Candidate Is Bill Mackie's Running Mate

Now Serving As SP Floor Leader

The Student party yesterday announced the nomination of Harry Horton, Jr., of Asheville for the vice-presidency of the student body.

Horton will be the running mate of Bill Mackie whose nomination was announced three weeks ago for the student body presidency.

A rising junior and political science major, Horton is the Student party floor leader in the Student legislature where he serves as member of the Elections and Archives committee.

He is a member of the Carolina forum and the Dialectic senate. During the war he served in the U. S. Air Force in the ETO where he was awarded the Air medal. Horton is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

The SP's nomination of Horton practically rounds out the three party slates of top officers. The spring election ballot will carry the names of Mackie and Horton on the SP ticket, Dick Gordon and Ted Leonard on the University party ticket and Charlie Long for the presidential post on the Campus party slate.

As yet, the CP has not released the name of its candidate for vice-president.

Other major nominations released to date include Norm Sper who was nominated for re-election as head cheerleader by the SP. Chuck Hauser who is triply-endorsed for the office of DTH editor, and Nat Williams, UP, for the office of student body secretary-treasurer.

No independent candidates have announced their intention to seek an office so far.

Varied Progam by Glee Club Set for Hill Tomorrow Night

A program ranging from the ecclesiastical music of the 16th century to the dissonance and rhythmic drive of America's young composers will be presented by the Men's Glee club of the music department tomorrow in Hill hall.

Of special interest is a canon selection from the earliest choral music composed in America. "When Jesus Wept," by William Billings, appeared in 1770, the year of Beethoven's birth. Paul Revere did the engraving work for the publication.

Other early music will be Givonni Gabrieli's Jubilate Deo, an antiphonal work, and Diffusa est Gratia by Nanino.

Modern works will include the Phillip James setting of General William Booth Enters Into Heaven. The famous Vachel Lindsay poem has been composed for men's chorus, two pianos, organ, trumpet, trombone, bass drum, tambourine, and tam-tam, with a tenor soloist. William Schuman's very dissonant setting of a text from Geoffrey Chaucer and choruses by John Tasker Howard and Granville Bantock complete the modern group.

The glee club will sing folksongs from Russia, Italy, and Scotland, and the familiar "Down in the Valley," sometimes called "Birmingham Jail," a folk ballad from Kentucky.

The concert will be concluded with the famous Prisoner's Chorus from Beethoven's Fidelio, and the finale to Part II of Berlioz' Damnation of Faust.

All seats for Thursday's concert are reserved. Holders of season tickets are requested to get reserved seats early from the box office in Hill hall. Single admissions are also available.

Famous Costumer

'Smart's Sweat Shop' Keeps Busy

By Sam Hirsch

Irene Smart, costume designer for the Playmakers, smiled and her eyes sparkled. "I'm looking forward to costuming "The Little Foxes" because there are only a few to do!" she said. "There are four women's costumes to worry about this time, and after 19 in "Pinafore," plus all the others we've done since the beginning of this season for "Mama." "Scandal," "Egypt Lan,'" Inherit The Wind," and three one-act plays, that's going to be practically a vacation with pay!"

Smartly dressed, capable "Renee" has been the costume designer for the Playmakers and for "The Lost Colony" since 1942. She worked on the costume staff for Billy Rose's production of "The Seven Lively Arts," and was associated with Paul Dupont, designer and member of the staff of Eaves Costumes in New York.

Mrs. Smart looked around her second floor costume shop, nicknamed "Smart's Sweat Shop" by her assistants Suzanne Davis and Marty Jacobs, and smiled again. "Look at that," she said, proudly. "Did you ever see such an orderly shop? You can go over to a box on any shelf, look at the label to see what's inside, open it up, and actually find what the label said!"

The costume shop has led a gypsy's life in the past, with its location changing almost yearly. In its travels it has been in Bynum, Caldwell, Person, Emerson stadium, a private house on McCauley street, the attic of South building, and finally in an entire floor to itself in the Playmakers scene shop at the rear of the Memorial hall parking lot. No matter what the future brings to "Renee," her five sewing machines and her collection of costumes in hundreds of boxes and trunks and racks, she will always remember the pleasure her present neat, orderly shop gave her.

Pensive Publius

Mental Myopia Reigns

Politics, like a cied, can be a capricious deity. Publius was sitting in Graham Memorial squinting through the thick smoke and listening to the discussion about candidates for posts in campus publications. The position of editor of the "Bull Sheet" came up, and an outstanding man was nominated. Others were nominated and dissection of the candidates was performed. Mental myopia reigned king and party duty was deemed more important than duty to the campus. The more qualified man was rejected sumarily, and publications, long a political football, were kicked out of bounds.

Publius was disgusted. "Why can't we nominate men for publications by a non-partisan board or a tri-partisan board?" he asked. Campus politicians generally do not understand publications or fully appreciate its needs as far as personnel is concerned. Their contribution to publications usually consist of writing boring letters-to-the-editor in the Daily Tar Heel.

Maybe the idea of a board is inadequate, too, thought Publius. Maybe the members of a given publication should be allowed to select from their number the students best qualified to the position and let these students seek the support of the voters directly. In this way the voters would have a chance to pass directly on the qualifications of the nominee and hear the opinions of their fellow workers.

Publius felt that a CP-SP-UP on the ballot beside the name of someone running for office in publications spelled something more than tri-partisan endorsement. It meant that, party cooperation "could possibly solve problems by uniting parties" in an effort to select the best men. Politics is necessary in its place, but student publications should be out of bounds for the politicos. Only by making them so can the quality of our publications be improved.

The Pause That Refreshes

Contrary to all reports leaking out of South building, coeds are not the only people on the campus who drink cokes. Repeated requests for coke machines in the dorms have, however, met with about the same response as the petition to keep the Scuttlebutt under Emerson stadium. Student enthusiasm on this matter is uniform, but their efforts have been spasmodic. This lack of a continued and well defined plan of action to achieve student aims is largely responsible for the indifference shown in South building. To allow this matter to lag is to invite repudiation from the administration, since they have no way of knowing whether it is a passing whim or a genuine need of the students.

The legislature passed a bill last Thursday asking for coke machines in the dorms and appointing a committee to work with the Interdormitory council toward this end. This can be easily the stroke needed to bring the matter sufficiently to the attention of South building. However, to place "The pause that refreshes" within convenient reach a continued and concerted drive must be made.

Socialites Need Comfort

The library lobby and inside stairs are woefully underfurnished an it is high time that such an active social center be brought up to the standards of a great state university. Every night sees the usual crowd forced to do its loud talking and incessant smoking amid conditions which (because of lack of proper facilities, of course) resemble those of a poorly-run flop house.

There really ought to be plenty of benches and chairs, conveniently placed ashtrays, foor model radios, and some ripping good hunting scenes on the drab walls if this area is going to fulfill such an important function. It seems that the library authorities are going to continue to be inconsiderate and deny the reference and reading rooms for social purposes, but they could at least try to make the crowded quarters a little more livable.

It's Braw-ton, Suh, in Dixie

By George Dixon

(COPYRIGHT, 1949, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.)

Freshman Senator J. Melville Broughton, of North Carolina, felt badly slighted at a caucus of Senate Democrats when he failed to hear his name in the roll call read by Senator Brien McMahon, of Connecticut, the chairman.

After the caucus Broughton asked McMahon why he had been ignored. The latter looked over the roster and declared:

"I called your name, but you didn't answer."

"Hum!" snapped the man from Dixie. "I didn't understand your New England accent."

Broughton explained that down in No'th Ca'lina, suh, Broughton ain't pronounced Broughton. It's "Braw-ton."

If Anna Louise Strong is a "Notorious American Intelligence agent," as the Russians so loudly proclaim, it's news to the FBI and central intelligence.

The flat statement can be made that the female question mark, now being booted out of the U. S. S. R. with much hoopla, has never done a lick of intelligence work for this country that our intelligence agencies know about.

The FBI and central intelligence strongly suspect it's a gimmick. They aren't buying it.

This statement, from very high up in American counter-espionage, sums up the attitude of our spy-catchers toward the whole hipper-dipper:

"The FBI has had a lot of experience with people who have been denounced by the Communists."

It's an old Commie stunt, worn threadbare, to denounce a person so he or she may work for Moscow, free of suspicion. It's a variation of the old police dodge of planting a copper in a cell with a suspect to worm a confession.

The "escape" thing is another hoary gimmick. A spy is permitted to "escape" from "Soviet tyranny" in the hope he will be taken to the unsuspecting bosom of the country to which he "flees for sanctuary."

Our intelligence agencies aver they have nothing on the two Russian fliers who have found sanctuary here, but I can tell you this. There isn't a minute they're not under official surveillance.

Editor:

Our honorable Governor Scott has stated that the tuition at the Greater University of North Carolina should be raised in order to put state institutions on a par with private colleges competing for students! It is obvious that our governor is correct in this view. As a student at the University of North Carolina, I wholeheartedly back him in this stand and wish to recommend that he carry his proposal one step further.

The public schools in our state are socialistic to an even greater extent than the University. They have reduced the enrollment in private schools operating on the same educational plane unmercifully in the past one hundred years. It seems only right that the students who now attend the public schools should be charged tuition in order that our public school system can be put on a par with private schools competing for students.

It has also been said by members of our legislature and the trustees of the University that tuition at the University should be raised in order to make it more self-supporting. You, I and the rest of the tax payers do not want to pay any more taxes than is absolutely necessary so we can't help but cheer when someone says, "Raise tuition and lower taxes!" Did you ever realize that if we were to charge tuition in our public schools we could lower our taxes, both state and federal, by an almost unbelievable amount? Orchids to the great philosophical minds of our state lawmakers who wish to make the University self-supporting, and I urge, "Go one step further, gentlemen, make the public school system self-supporting also!"

After all, there are too many people who should be digging ditches attending school!

Support for the Quarterly

By Jonathan Marshall

Last year, when the Carolina Quarterly was started, few people really took it seriously. Many thought it was just another variety mag being started, and others thought that a small clique was merely attempting to boost their collective egos.

The first isue of the Quarterly caused many of the doubters to change their minds. The magazine is definitely a reality, and it is something of which we should all be proud.

This column is not intended merely as a pat on the back for the staff; they have received enough praise without this. It is rather to acquaint the students with an attempt that is being made to prevent the Quarterly from receiving an underwrite from the student legislature.

Last year, the legislature, realizing the potential benefits that the University would receive from a good quarterly magazine here, underwrote the first year to assure success.

Those of us who helped to start the Quarterly did not realize how difficult it would be to make the magazine pay for itself the first year: however, an amazingly successful job has been done in financing the magazine.

If memory serves correctly, the legislative underwrite was for $2.000. Of this sum only about $800 will probably be used. This certainly shows the good faith of the staff.

The magazine is being produced at a minimum cost; in fact, the wonder is that any publication can be published so economically.

In order to be certain of meeting commitments next year, the Quarterly has requested another underwrite. It is again quite possible that only a fraction, if any, of this sum would be used, but the insurance is necessary for success.

The Student Party has given the Quarterly its support, and Chairman Gran Childress has fought for the underwrite. Dick Gordon, UP candidate for Student Body President, on the other hand, is strongly opposing the Quarterly in the Budget Committee.

There can be no doubt that Mr. Gordon has a large following, but there can be doubt as to his motives in opposing the Quarterly. This columnist would like Mr. Gordon to publicly state his opinion on the following questions:

1. Does he agree that the Carolina Quarterly has brought much credit to this campus?

2. Does he agree that since it is the only outlet for creative writing at UNC, the Quarterly performs a valuable function?

3. Does he think that $1,500, which the Quarterly asks for, is a large sum compared to that actually appropriated by the Legislature for other purposes?

4. Does he believe that we should have a literary quarterly here?

5. Why does he oppose the underwrite?

Not only has the Carolina Quarterly brought credit to UNC, it has also given many students a chance to publish their work. The fact that more than 1500 copies of a first issue were sold is proof that there is a demand.

Support is needed now by the Carolina Quarterly. If we give it to the magazine, we will be helping to establish a new publication on a firm footing. Let us hope that it is not too much to ask the legislature to help in restoring the reputation that this University once had in the field of writing.

Rather than the Quarterly having to thank us for an underwrite, we should thank it for the influence and benefit that it is, and that it will be.

Don't Go West, Young Man

By Bill Buchan

Horace Greeley, to put it mildly, has had it. Instead, a meek little man named Bob Hope is destined to take his place in history as the genius who gives advice to young men. Greeley, you may remember, is the man who urged all red-blooded young men to "Go west." Hope took one look at Jane Russell, the West, and I am convinced, the weather, and then produced the famous "Buttons and Bows." (Greeley, they tell me, actually meant west Pennsylvania, which is an admirable point for him.) Hope in the opening words of his advice stated, sadly, "East is east and West is west, and the wrong one I have chose." That's putting it mildly. I didn't see Jane Russell, but I know what he means.

For the information of the general public, California is COLD. Don't let anyone tell you otherwise. It SNOWS out there. It snows and it sleets and it rains and it hails. Don't let anyone tell you otherwise. And as I said, it's cold. The temperature goes down to 30 degrees and at this stage in the game, they think that's unusual, not because it's 30, but because it isn't 27.

Their chamber of commerce, I must admit, has taken the change admirably. The California snow (after they spent five days deciding that it really was SNOW) was the whitest, the prettiest, the fluffiest, the purest and the most perfect for making snow men of any that has ever fallen upon America. They added, just for general information, that the snow crystals were also the most perfect of any that America has ever seen. Their statement, however, didn't help the situation any. California is cold and cold has no relation to anything connected with heat, or the sun or swimming or any of the ideal surroundings of the ideal winter resort, Florida.

Public Congratulations

Editor:

This letter is a public note of congratulations and thanks to student body president Jess Dedmond. Your letter to our governor stands a high mark in the expression of the true sentiments of the students on the issue of the attempts of certain misguided groups who would restrict the right of education to those who are economically able to afford it. I would like to point out to those who are not in possession of the facts that your public expressions did not come as a bolt from the blue. There has been a committee of students working both in Chapel Hill and Raleigh to present the facts of what a tuition raise would mean to many of the less financially able in this state. After it appeared that their pleas were going unheeded President Dedmond set forth in clear and unmistakable terms what he thought of this sad and sorry attempt at money raising by our "go forward" administration in Raleigh.

Again let it be said that Mr. Dedmond has set forth the view of the average student and we are firmly behind him in the fight to see that the Universities doors are not closed to the poor.

All the Factors of the Game

Editor:

When one speaks of co-editors and tri-editors not working, one first must look into the reasons for their not working. In a recent edition of the Daily Tar Heel it was stated the tri-editors of the Yack did not work. True, they did not work, but let us see why. One editor, Mr. Gene Johnstone, had completed the 1947 annual. It is very difficult to get interested in a second year book after you have seen your ideas, supposedly your best ideas, accomplished. Any idea after the accomplishment of your first idea seems inferior. Hence, lack of interest on his part.

Another editor, Miss Ruth Evans, accepted the tri-editorship after she had been elected president of the YWCA. She was more interested in Y work than Yack work, and the Yack is a full time job. Hence, lack of interest on the part of Miss Evans.

The third editor, Mr. Harold Bursley, would have been a good editor if he had taken the book in his hands. He should have thought, "If these other editors do not have the time or the heart in the book, I will take over and do it myself." However, he respected the experience of his partners and thought that he would be overstepping his position. Hence, he followed the trend with a lack of interest.

Tri-editors can work, and so can co-editors work, if the editors are all interested. In order to make it work authority must be delegated and cooperation must be maintained. It is my very firm belief that Mr. Whitsett and Mr. Burns, as co-editors are most capable of giving the campus the very best humor magazine. They know cooperation and they do not lack interest.

Mr. Editor, do not condemn any one until you have looked into all the facts in the case. The UP looked into all the factors of the case and selected Burns and Whitsett.

THE SPORTING PICTURE

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

Favorite of Florida

THE STATE OF FLORIDA, long famed for sun-kissed oranges and equally-well oscillated bathing beauties, has at last found something else to talk about besides the white post-Christmas in California. It seems that some Tar Heel golf player blew into the fair city of St. Augustine last week and before he left, this gentleman had the majority of the golf experts at hand completely bowed as to the whys and wherefores of the links game.

The drift of this substance is a fellow named Harvie Ward, who this week returned home from the Gator state with the Tournament of Golf Club Champions pasted safely in his scrapbook through prizes and medals in tow to open up a good-sized pro shop. To win all these honors, Mr. Ward had simply cleaned up all but one of the field of 60-odd for medalist honors (won only in a playoff) and then driven five straight opponents into the course in the course of five straight days.

The use of the verb "driven" is more practical than one would think for the use that Ward put his woods to throughout the tourney left most of his opponents finding themselves down at the station early the next morning. A typical example of this occurred during the semi-finals match played in weather that made the local Chamber of Commerce dive for their sun lamps.

A Wood That Would

MR. WARD PLUS his opponent and gallery arrived at a certain par 4 hole where a No. 1 wood and No. 2 wood just didn't make the green anyway you added them. That is, except for Harvie. He hit his second shot with a trajectory that had the gophers digging for their lives—it skimmed up onto the green, a mere seven feet from the pin. For the benefit of the uninformed, that's close enough to make the game interesting.

Well, our hero, completely forgetting his manners as a guest, continued this dreading pounding of ball and opponent until there was only one fellow left the tournament committee would allow him to play, a Mr. Frank Comfort. After 28 holes, Mr. Comfort was rather ill at ease. He was eight holes in arears with only seven left on which to settle accounts. That concluded the festivities for the tournament.

So, there was nothing left to do, but present Mr. W. with his awards and take a good look at whom he had beaten to get them. Behind him strewn in his victory path, Harvie had left five of the nation's foremost amateur golfers, all champions in their own right and b[illegible]. A lot of golf experts have begun yelling, "fore," for Harvie.

Sparkplug of a Champion

BUT THIS IS no sudden rise to fame for the Tarboro swingman who upset a lot of tee parties last year when he beat Frank Stranahan in the finals of the North-South amateur at Pinehurst. That was the day the Barbell lad from Toledo tried to muscle in on Mr. Ward's home state territory and found to his amazement that here was one sparkplug of a champion that his father hadn't manufactured.

That was a great day for Ward who went to lunch one up, tea one up, and evenly took the nineteenth hole to boot. The story was that after the match, Stranahan told Ward in the clubhouse, "If your putter hadn't been so hot today, I'd have beaten you 7 and 6."

After which Mr. W. sized up his shot and taking a hot iron from the fire, replied, "Putting, Frank, is unfortunately still part of the game." That put Ward one up all the way around.

The Swings Ahead

HARVIE WENT GALLOPING into the quarter finals of the National amateur tournament two years ago which was probably his first notice that he was possibly going somewhere besides back to the clubhouse each Saturday afternoon. Last year he played in the Masters' tourney in Augusta which is somewhat the place where all good little golfers sooner or later go.

Today, those in the know say that this may be the first of many big years in golf for Ward, while those who only stand and service say, "Gosh, he hits that ball a long way." Titles ahead for conquest this season include a defense of the North-South tiara where the best of the free-fee boys will be in residence. Then it's the Southern conference, the National intercollegiate, the National amateur and dreams of a Walker cup berth.

That's a clubhouse full of drives, approaches, chips and putts, but one can down a slight wager that Harvie will be in swinging for all of them. With all those titles on the line, there should be an award for a Ward. Not with the wedge, Mr. W.! ! !

Cagers Edge Wildcats; Wrestlers Lose

Nyimicz Tallies Winning Basket With Seven Seconds Remaining

By Bill Spiegel

CHARLOTTE, Feb. 22—Dan Nyimicz threw in a hook shot from the right side with seven seconds remaining to put Carolina in the lead and thus the Tar Heels reversed an earlier loss to Davidson by edging the Wildcats by the extremely close score of 53-52.

It was a see-saw battle all the way with first one team and then another gaining a temporary advantage. At one point in the second half the Tar Heels had a seven-point lead, but that was soon erased and the two quintets continued trading buckets until the final seconds of play.

At the ten-minute mark in the second half, Carolina was trailing by two points, 40-42, when Coy Carson paced a drive that gave the Tar Heels their seven-point advantage. Carson, who was high scorer for the visitors with 15 points, tallied seven points in this spurt.

Wildcats Resume Lead

The Wildcats resumed the lead, however, but Charlie Thorne soon tied the count at 35-35. The lead wavered from one team to the other until Davidson managed a 40-38 advantage at which point John Tsantes knotted the count. A field goal by Whit Cobb put Davidson ahead, but two free throws by Carson again tied it up.

With the score all even at 47-all, Buddy Cheek, the game's high point-maker, put the Wildcats ahead. Tsantes and Hugo Kappler combined to give the Tar Heels the advantage and then with 30 seconds to go, Williams put Davidson ahead.

Williams tied the score after a scramble under the boards and then was awarded both a personal and a technical foul. He proceeded to make the first, but failed on the second.

Davidson took the ball out of bounds at mid-court, but Carolina stole the ball and Nyimicz made his winning bucket.

Loss Ball at Finish

The Wildcats took the ball out and were moving it down the court when Tsantes took control of the ball and passed to Howard Deasy as the gun sounded ending the game.

Nyimicz, with 14 points to his credit, was the sparkplug of the Carolina team and kept the Tar Heels in the game in the final half. Scoring mainly on long sets, Nyimicz hit for two sets and the all-important hook in the final ten minutes of the contest.

Tsantes was the power under the boards and notched 12 points for the evening. Carson was high scorer for the team with 15.

Cheek, with 19, was the high man for both teams, but it was something of a one-man struggle as none of his teammates could break into double figures.

This was the second contest in two days for the Tar Heels on their southern trip. They defeated South Carolina, 62-48, in Columbia last night and will return to Chapel Hill sometime tomorrow afternoon.

Kentucky Cagers Consider Bids To Two Tournies

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 22—(UP)—A source close to university officials said today that Kentucky is considering playing in both the NCAA and National Invitational Basketball tournaments.

Athletic department officials refused comment on the widespread reports, but the source said such a move was being discussed. He said Coach Adolph Rupp wanted his four graduating stars—Alex Groza, Ralph Beard, Wallace Jones and Cliff Barker—to have a chance at every available honor.

Only once before has a team played in both tournaments and that was under unusual circumstances. In 1944 Utah was eliminated from the Invitational Tournament but en route home from New York was invited to fill in at the Western NCAA regionals in Kansas City for the Arkansas team which had been involved in a serious automobile crash. Utah went on to win the NCAA, returning to New York for the finals, then beating St. John's the winner of the Invitational meet in a charity playoff game.

Kentucky has lost only one game this season, that to St. Louis university. The Wildcats' best chance of meeting the Billikens again this year is in the Invitational. Heretofore the Wildcats have always sought the NCAA crown.

Beta Cagers To Encounter Chi Phi In Fraternity Finals This Evening

After a day's postponement, the fraternity cage championship game will be played definitely this evening at 8 o'clock on the main floor of Woollen gym. The clash, which was originally scheduled for yesterday afternoon, was requested to be put off a day by both contenders for the crown, Beta and Chi Phi, so both squads could be at full strength for the all-important meeting.

The game itself promises to be a corker and no doubt will arouse a lot of interest even outside the competing fraternitites. Both quintets are undefeated and both can boast a well-balanced team. The Chi Phi representative, their number three team to be more definite, easily topped its league in the regular season and has been very impressive in the playoffs; eliminating Zeta 3 and Chi Psi 1 to reach the final. Pacemakers for the Chi Phi are ambitextrous Dale Morrison and lanky Jim White, who are wholesale contributors to the scoring column.

The Beta five also rates careful consideration. Winners of league VII during the regular play, they defeated Chi Phi 1 in the first playoff contest and added another feather to their cap when they nipped the defending fraternity champs, Sigma Chi, 38-36 in a thriller Monday, thus gaining the right to the final. Standout of the potent Beta hardwooders is gridder Ken Powell who seems to be equally at home on the basketball court. He is

Field of Stars Expected at Indoor Meet

All indications point to one of the most star-studded fields ever to run in the Southern conference indoor track meet being on hand in Woollen gymnasium here Saturday.

From all corners of the South, sprinters, hurdlers, distance men, pole vaulters, high jumpers, broad jumpers and shot putters will make their way to the scene of action. The top Southern conference teams will be on hand as well as some of the top non-conference squads.

The host Carolina team will also be well represented and will be one of the favorites to cop the team title in conference competition. Several records in each of the conference, non-conference, freshman and scholastic divisions are in danger of being broken.

Tickets for the meet are on sale at Woollen gymnasium now. Student passbooks will not be good as this is not a University contest, but student tickets are obtainable at 75 cents each. General admission tickets are $1.50.

Lacrosse Begins First Year At Carolina Under Darden

By Wuff Newell

The latest innovation in Carolina sports occurred yesterday afternoon at a meeting of all men interested in lacrosse.

Although the University has been interested in having a lacrosse team for a number of years, it was not until this winter that anything definite was done about it.

Bill Darden, graduate student who is working on a Ph. D in European history, realized that there were possibilities for a lacrosse team and began doing something about it. For several weeks now all persons interested in being on the team have been checking out equipment and getting in some pre-season practice. Yesterday all those eligible to participate in the sport were issued equipment and practice began in earnest.

Darden, who will coach the team, played lacrosse at St. John's in 1937 and 1938 and later coached the jayvee team there. He came to Carolina from the Marine Corps in 1945.

"Lacross is just like horseracing," he said, "Once it's in your blood, you just can't get it out."

Darden said that just as some boys grow up with a baseball in their hands, he grew up with a lacrosse stick in his.

"Lacrosse is the oldest game in North America," he added. "It was played by the Indians for recreation and in preparation for war. Parts of many popular sports of today were taken from lacrosse."

Kemp, Fischer Get Only Wins For Tar Heels

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

DURHAM, Feb. 22—Although the Carolina varsity was greatly outclassed by the Duke matmen here today, the visiting freshmen from Chapel Hill managed to triumph in their half of the twin bill by taking a one-point decesion from the Blue Imp grapplers.

Only two Tar Heels were able to win their matches by decision and the two remaining Carolina varsity points came in the final event when heavyweight Joe Augustine drew with Eslick.

Once again the middle weights came through for Coach Chuck Quinlan and this time Phil Kemp and Co-captain Carroll Fischer were the point-makers; both on decisions.

Two undefeated 165-pounders met today and Carolina's Oscar Gupton came out the loser by decision against Duke's John McMaster.

The Blue Devils piled up most of their total on three pins and a default with McMaster providing the only decision of the match for Duke.

Mike Kusturiss opened proceedings by pinning Carolina's Kenny Hoffman in 2:17 of the second round of their 121-pound encounter.

The 128-pound match went to Duke by default and Joe Orzano of Duke continued the shutout by pinning Ed Turnley in 1:41 of the first round.

Fischer and Kemp came back to put the Tar Heels temporarly in the ball game, but as against Washington and Lee the early lead stood up and cost the visitors the decision.

This was the final match of the campaign for Duke, which

Dormitory Students Robbed Of Clothes During Weekend

Old West Males Lose Belongings Valued At $300

John Wall, Bob Wilmoth, Tommy Reich, and Fred Patterson, all third floor Old West residents, reported yesterday that clothing valued at over $300 had been stolen from their dorm rooms over the weekend.

The thieves, or thief, confined themselves exclusively to clothes and a total of 12 pairs of pants, two coats, one suit, and two sweaters which were lifted from the dorm rooms sometime between Saturday noon and Sunday evening.

Wilmoth was hit the hardest in the clothes robbery. He reported a loss of $112 in pants, suits, and sweaters. Reich lost $97 worth of clothes. Wall came next with a $90 loss, and Patterson was minus $50 in clothes.

The weekend raid on Old West was the third theft attempt in the last two weeks by thieves in both men and women's dorms.

Last Thursday, a strange woman was found in Spencer dorm looking in a wardrobe belonging to one of the girls, and two weeks ago, thefts were reported in Miller hall.

Police officer W. D. Blake, who has been assigned to the Old West robbery, said he had begun an investigation and hoped to have results soon. He said all available policemen had been assigned to watch cars Saturday night during the State game.

A special dorm council meeting was called in Old West Monday night, and president Charlie Hayes cautioned all residents to lock their doors. Also, he requested all students having pass keys to turn them in to South building in order to avoid suspicion.

Veterans Warned Of GI Insurance Expiration Date

Veterans GI insurance, particularly the insurance of veterans who went into service during the early stages of the war, is approaching expiration dates for a large number of veterans, the Veterans administration warned yesterday.

All veterans whose insurance is expiring must take action if they wish to keep their National Service life insurance. Expiring policies may be renewed for a new five-year term or converted to a permanent plan.

Original term insurance taken out while in service before the end of 1945 expires eight years after it was issued. But many veterans took out their insurance early in 1941, and their policies are expiring now.

The Veterans administration will notify veterans two months before their contracts expire. However, if veterans do not apply for renewal or conversion before their original policy expires, they will be required to take a physical examination to regain their insurance coverage at a later date.

NSA Booklets Are Available Now

MADISON, Wisc., Feb. 22—Complete information about all opportunities for students to spend their summers abroad has been compiled by the National Student association (NSA) in a booklet entitled Study, Travel, Work Abroad, Summer 1949 which is now ready for distribution.

The booklet, similar to last year's NSA study which received wide aclaim, outlines the summer study programs of 32 countries, and tells of organizations which are planning tours and work-camps abroad. Also included is a section on seminars, and one on travel opportunities.

Other information of interest to students planning to spend their summer vacation outside the United States includes information on air and steamship transportation, passports, visas, the GI bill, the Fulbright program, and government scholarships.

Price of the booklet is 15 cents to students at NSA member colleges, 25 cents to all others. Bulk rates are available to member colleges.

Copies may be obtained by sending cash or money orders to NSA's national offices, 304 S. Park street, Madison 5, Wisc.

National Student association is a representative non-partisan non-sectarian intercollegiate organization designed to serve American student needs, and is now composed of more than 80,000 students in 281 colleges and universities in the United States.

Red Literature Sent to Union By Communist

Mill Employes Hear from Scales

DURHAM, Feb. 23—(UP)—CIO officials today charged the Communist party with sending literature attacking management to union members.

"This thing burns me up," one spokesman said.

The literature came through the mails, the union men said, to members of the Textile Workers Union of America (CIO) local 246, at the Erwin cotton mills.

It stated that the Communists plan "to fight for you to show you why the blood and bone is being ground out of you to make more and more money for Erwin."

Robert Murray, business manager of the Durham joint board of TWUA, said he wanted to make it clear the literature came from the Communist party and was not in any way connected with his union.

"We don't appreciate them sending out this literature to our union members," he added.

Two circulars had reached workers, Murray said. The first was over the name of Junius Scales, former student at the University of North Carolina, and listed him as chairman of the Communist party in North Carolina.

The second was labeled as the first issue of "Textile Workers' Voice." Both were mailed from Winston-Salem, Murray said.

The circulars charged the mill with increased work loads, speed-up methods and short work weeks. They also attacked Emil Rieve, president of the TWUA, and the union's national leadership for "patting President Truman on the back and redbaiting," Murray said.

Dees Blasts Coed Senate, Hurls Inefficiency Charge

Charging "gross inefficiency" in the handling of coed affairs in the Coed senate, Page Dees, former member of the Student legislature, said yesterday she was forced to resign from the assembly last Thursday because of "the disinterest and lack of co-operation that is prevalent among coed government leaders.

"When I was elected to office," Miss Dees continued, "I promised the voters a fair and honest deal in student government. This is impossible, however, under present circumstances."

As chairman of the legislature Coed Affairs committee, the former Student party member was responsible for obtaining and submitting the Senate budget for the coming year to the legislature.

"I asked for the budget and was promised it continuously for three weeks, Miss Dees said, "however, it was not delivered to me, despite numerous requests, until some four hours before I was due to give a report on it. In attempting to secure the budget, I discovered that to my knowledge, the coed senate has no copies of its bills, resolutions, by-laws, or constitution. I finally secured some of the necessary information from the Dean of Women's office."

"In looking over the budget, I discovered that block fees paid by the coed body are used for individual organizations which do not benefit the entire group."

"For example," she continued, "part of the coed block fees are contributed to the upkeep of the Carolina Independent Coed association. Obviously, all coeds are not members of that group. Neither are all coeds members of the Town Girls asscciation or the Pan Hellenic council, which also receive allotments from the budget. Corresponding men's groups do not receive such support from the men's block fees, but are maintained independently. I am not opposed to some allotments if they are spent in proper fashion but I do not feel that these are being spent in an equitable way.

"I feel, as do a great many other coeds, that the procedures through which the senate allots funds to the various organizations should be passed and checked frequently by the Student legislature, in accordance with amendment one of the student constitution. The Coed senate has not followed this amendment and has manifested no intention of doing so, although the amendment was passed in a student referendum vote last spring.

"Carolina coeds," Miss Dees added, "have had the facts of the way their money is spent withheld from them too long. It is necessary, in order for the coed student government to operate efficiently, that the entire present system of alloting coed funds be revised and unnecessary and ridiculous expenditures be eliminated. Our coed leaders are responsible to all coeds and they should be certain that the operation of the senate and its funds are handled adequately."

Glee Club Bill Ready For Legislature Today

A bill to appropriate $1,500 for a combined Men's and Women's Glee club concert during the Notre Dame weekend in New York is scheduled to be presented to the Student legislature tonight, student government officials said yesterday.

Andy Cornish, chairman of the Finance committee, will also submit bills to grant $1,160.60 to Graham Memorial for payment of a debt incurred by the student entertainment committee, and to prevent organization receiving money from Student legislature to lend or borrow funds without consent of the legislature.

Funds for the Glee club appropriation, the bill states, will be drawn from the unappropriated balance after May 15, 1949, and will be used to rent Carnegie hall or Town hall and to pay management of the concert and other expenses.

The Glee club report to the finance committee stated that an appearance during the Notre Dame weekend would greatly benefit student participating in the affair and would contribute to the prestige of the University. However, the Glee club report continued, a trip to New York would be impossible without a financial supplement by the legislature.

Proposed legislation on the prevention of organizations borrowing or lending money without the consent of the legislature states, "No organization receiving funds from the Student legislature with the exception of the Publications board shall lend or borrow money without the consent of the student legislature."
